(A: I'll go into this in more detail, but a bit briefly here. What they're warning about is that the shots that they were giving, for flu for instance, and this is verified, Canada did it too a few years ago when they suddenly came out in the Canadian health authority warning folk NOT to take the flu shot, halfway through the flu season mind you, the shot season. Because they found that folk who got the flu shot, when they hit the actual flu [in nature], they had a massive response, an immunological response to it, over exaggerated response to the actual flu itself when it hit them. It opened them up to having, to actually catching the flu that was prevalent that year. Way more prevalent, they had a 36% higher risk of contracting it I think it was than folk who had no vaccination.)

(A: But it's even worse than that, because they've got virus interference. Initially if you've got, say, a jab for the flu, they'll always report that, oh, it's wonderful, initially you'll get a good antibody response to it, you'll show you've got antibodies. But the thing is, once you hit the actual virus, in the wild as they call it, in the studies, you get a massive over responsive cytokine storm, and that's what can end up killing you. This has been well known for years actually, years and years, when you go into the actual laboratory studies that are published in their own publications. But this is the military doing this one, right. It says…)

The study found that virus interference varied among vaccinated individuals for individual respiratory viruses, and found that for coronaviruses in particular, in this study, those who had been vaccinated with the flu vaccine had a 36 percent higher risk of contracting them.

(A: Now, I read this quite a few times over the last month or more because it's awfully important to understand what they're saying here. Hmph. If you're getting a flu shot, it can open you up to be susceptible to the coronaviruses in particular, other kinds. Now, keep that in your mind as I go on with this because it says…)

The study compared the vaccination status of more than two thousand people with non-influenza respiratory viruses (A: Now, there's many other non-influenza respiratory viruses remember...) to more than three thousand people with pan-negative results. The vaccination status of more than three thousand cases of influenza were compared to three different control groups, and appropriate adjustments were made.

The study points out that recently published studies have “described the phenomenon of vaccine-associated virus interference; that is, vaccinated individuals may be at increased risk for other respiratory viruses because they do not receive the non-specific immunity associated with natural infection.”

The study goes on to emphasize that "There has been limited evidence that the influenza vaccine may actually be associated with the virus interference process. Other studies have found no association between influenza vaccination and increased respiratory virus risk."

(A: But what they're looking at here, the study says…)

Wolff's study found that "Vaccine derived virus interference was significantly associated with coronavirus and human metapneumovirus…

Now, think about that, to what I said earlier. The largest casualty rate for death has been in the old folks' homes. Where it's pretty well mandatory to take the flu shots. This is just a way of looking at something, and I'm sure, I'm sure the studies are already on the go for all this kind of stuff. It has to be. But I very much doubt if it will ever be admitted to because it would be such an incredible outcry if this is the case, folks, isn't it? Don't you think so? Think about that. There's no way that it could ever come out, the lawsuits would be so... the countries would collapse. And the ones at the top that are pushing all this stuff would certainly be... IF that's the case, now we're talking about the ifs here, right, just to be legal here, the if's of it all. But think about that, eh. Think about it. Here's another one…

ncbi.nlm.nih.gov

(A: It's another article.)

The tissue damage caused by virus infection has been traditionally explained by the ability of viruses to multiply in cells and thereby injure or destroy them. Recent evidence suggests, however, that lesions may also be caused by the host's immune response to viral antigens and that the immune system itself may be perturbed by some viruses.

This memorandum reviews recent developments in viral immunopathology, with special reference to animal model systems, and indicates the possible relevance of the new concepts and techniques for certain diseases of man. Certain viruses, notably the leukaemia viruses and some of those causing persistent infections, depress the host's ability to mount an antibody response to antigens, while other viruses may enhance the antibody response. Cell-mediated immunity may also be depressed. Another immunopathological manifestation of virus infection is immune-complex disease. When viruses or their antigens persist in the circulation they combine with specific antibody, and the resulting complexes lodge in various sites, especially the kidney.

Further combination with complement leads to the release of tissue-damaging substances. A third condition associated with virus infection is antibody-mediated immunologic injury. Both oncogenic and non-oncogenic viruses frequently induce new antigens on the surface of the cells they invade. When antibody attaches to these antigens in the presence of complement, the cells are destroyed.

It's got a full text here for the whole thing for folk who, I like to go through all this stuff, it's quite interesting. That's from the PMC, National Institute of Health. It's an interesting study actually where you go into the deeper one and you can download the PDF for it as well.

Another thing too is they've all got their hands out in hoping to get billions and become rich billionaires, individually some of these characters in the laboratories for the vaccine companies.

Coronavirus 'disappearing' so fast Oxford vaccine (A: That's where they're trying to make it, in Oxford.) has 'only 50% chance of working'

news.sky.com / 25 May 2020

Professor Adrian Hill describes the efforts to create a vaccine as a "race against the virus disappearing, and against time".

(A: Because, the curve is over, you see.)

The University of Oxford's Jenner Institute and the Oxford Vaccine Group began developing a COVID-19 vaccine in January using a virus taken from chimpanzees.

But with the number of UK coronavirus cases dropping every day, there may not be enough people to test it on, according to the institute's director Professor Adrian Hill.

He told The Sunday Telegraph: "It's a race against the virus disappearing, and against time. We said earlier in the year that there was an 80% chance of developing an effective vaccine by September.

(A: That's amazing because it would be the first time in history that would happen.)

"But at the moment, there's a 50% chance that we get no result at all. We're in the bizarre position of wanting COVID to stay, at least for a little while."

So, there ya go, you know. I mentioned last week too the flu vaccine grown in dog kidney cells...

Flu vaccine grown in dog kidney cells another failure

A cell-based flu vaccine, Flucelvax, grown in dog kidney cells became available during the 2017 to 2018 flu season (A: Right.)

(A: Which again, is awfully important, it became available during the 2017/18 season. That's the same year that the military noticed that folk were coming down and getting opened up to, it was actually making them more prone to other non-flu viruses, and it was making them more prone to coronaviruses, different types of coronaviruses I should say.)

(A: Those ones were grown on a dog, eh? Don't forget I mentioned last week too that on their dog kidney cells, they always [Alan chuckles.] the company, the manufacturers will say, well there's debris, there's actual debris, excess debris, meaning from other things that they're growing from on the kidney cells. And dogs have coronaviruses, different kinds in their body, you see. They can be harmless; they might be dangerous if they're put into humans. But they have them in their bodies. They're animals. Zoonotic diseases, you see, transfer from humans to animals and vice versa. That's what it means.)

(A: So, before they used to make most of the vaccines using hens eggs. But when you're starting to put them on tissue of animals, then you're starting to pick up other, they call them, meaning often, carrier viruses, or, you know, often harmless carrier viruses. That's what they called it even with the polio vaccine, and we know, we ended up getting chimp cancer cells in the simian virus 40 put into the vaccine. [Alan chuckles.] But anyway, that's another story.)

(A: This one here goes on to talk about the dog kidney cells that they were testing, and it says it was another failure.)

As the effectiveness of conventional flu shots continues to leave much to be desired, the new Flucelvax vaccine was touted as a new-and-improved version that would protect more people once flu season hit.

In reality, a study by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) revealed the shot worked only a little bit better than the conventional flu shot in protecting seniors — which isn't saying much. While flu vaccines overall had only 24 percent effectiveness in preventing flu-related hospitalizations …

(A: It goes on and on and on for those who again want to read how it's done. But really it says…)

They identified a mutation in the flu vaccine strain that produced antibodies that didn't work well to neutralize the H3N2 viruses circulating that year. "These studies highlight the challenges associated with producing influenza vaccine antigens in eggs…

And on and on. However, the fact is, as they say, it made folk more prone to catching a coronavirus type. And that's probably the year too, one of the years that they had to recall and stop folks from taking the shots halfway through the season. And I want to touch on, this is important, it goes with what I mentioned about the elderly folk in nursing homes, and they have to take the shots. A lot of the staff do too, remember. That's important as well, folks. They're pretty well mandatory for the staff to get the shots as well. In the hospitals too. This article here kind of backs it up. This here is from Elsevier, the Journal of Translational Autoimmunity. It's one of the big ones. Not a conspiracy site, but it's a scientific site that deals with the vaccines and so on. This is important and I'll put the link up to for those that want to go through it and wade through it.

Pathogenic priming likely contributes to serious and critical illness and mortality in COVID-19 via autoimmunity

pubmed.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov / 9 April 2020

Homology between human and viral proteins is an established factor in viral- or vaccine-induced autoimmunity.

(A: Okay. Vaccine -induced autoimmunity.)

Failure of SARS (A: SARS, coronavirus…) and MERS vaccines in animal trials involved pathogenesis consistent with an immunological priming that could involve autoimmunity in lung tissues (A: …right…) due to previous exposure to the SARS and MERS spike protein.

Exposure pathogenesis to SARS-CoV-2 in COVID-19 likely will lead to similar outcomes.

Immunogenic peptides in viruses or bacteria that match human proteins are good candidates for pathogenic priming peptides (similar to the more diffuse idea of "immune enhancement").

Here I provide an assessment of potential for human pathogenesis via autoimmunity via exposure, via infection or injection. SAR-CoV-2 spike proteins, and all other SARS-CoV-2 proteins, immunogenic epitopes in each SARS-CoV-2 protein were compared to human proteins in search of high local homologous matching.

Only one immunogenic epitope in a SARS-CoV-2 had no homology to human proteins. If all of the parts of the epitopes that are homologous (A: …try to bear with me…) to human proteins are excluded from consideration due to risk of pathogenic priming, the remaining immunogenic parts of the epitopes may be still immunogenic and remain as potentially viable candidates for vaccine development.

Mapping of the genes encoding human protein matches to pathways point to targets that could explain the observed presentation of symptoms in COVID-19 disease. It also strongly points to a large number of opportunities for expected disturbances in the immune system itself, targeting elements of MHC Class I and Class II antigen presentation…

(A: And it goes on to say, if I can get to it here, awfully important…)

Autopsies of Chinese citizens who have died from COVID-19 following SARS-CoV-19 infection show evidence of interstitial changes, suggesting the development of pulmonary fibrosis. This suggests, at least partly, an autoimmunology basis of the pathogenesis of COVID-19. A number of causal bases of autoimmunity from exposure to viral epitopes is well established…

(A: And it goes on and on and on. Just bear with me as I say. What they are finding, you see, what they're finding when you dig into it, and this article eventually gets to the meat of the problem you might say. They are describing the symptoms of people in China, postmortem, autopsy, the effects that this virus has had on their system, and their immune system too. It says...)

The public health consequences from some viruses can include impaired immunity, encephalitis, and long-term neurological diseases such as demyelinating disorders and relapsing events such as those seen in multiple sclerosis (MS).

Both genetic and environmental factors are thought to contribute both to the severity of viral infections, and in determining who will develop autoimmune conditions.

(A: Now, autoimmune conditions are where you have problems after shots. You can come down with arthritis. You can come down with all kinds of problems. Incredible allergy systems, stuff like that, that you never had before, allergies of all kinds. Rashes. Hyper sensitization to different things and so on. Are effects of something attacking, that's affected your immune system until your immune system is then attacking your own body. Like your joints or your tendons, or your spine or wherever it happens to go to. That's what happens. And this is understood in a lot of these big companies at the top, by the way, that give you the vaccines. That's always downplayed, they don't want the public to know, even though they have their own statistics of how many folk will probably get it and so on and so on. Anyway listen, this goes on to say...)

Mortality in SARS-CoV-2 infection from COVID-19 is highly age-dependent, with older patients having the highest probability of death. The etiology of the age-specific mortality seen in COVID-19 is largely unknown. SARS-CoV and SARS-CoV-2 coronaviruses targets the epithelial cells of the respiratory tract, (A: …right…) resulting in diffuse alveolar damage.

(A: That's why putting them on the ventilators often just blows them, the tiny little air sacs just bust, boof, they’re already swollen and inflamed and very fragile. Even when they're healthy they're fragile.)

Other tissues are obviously also potential targets for viral immunopathology, including mucosal cells of the intestine,

(A: A lot of viruses, [Alan chuckles.] even the synthetic viruses from vaccines often end up, they've done this, autopsies on autistic children for instance, and they often find, they can actually tell that, they find the synthetic viruses that are made in labs basically for vaccines, have made their home in the intestines in some of these kids. There's official reports on them, this isn't made up stuff, you know. So anyway, it says, they're talking about what they often do to you including…)

including mucosal cells of the intestine, epithelial cells of the kidneys, brain cells (neurons), and cellular components of the immune system. In severe cases of SARS, and likely in SARS-CoV-2, this viral targeting leads acutely to pneumonia. Exposure to other viral and ambient antigens are known causal factors in chronic autoimmune diseases of the airways including asthma. (A: So, you can end up with that too.)

The role of autoimmunity in enhancing the severity of secondary exposures following prior infection or vaccinations (A: Listen to this….) has been given little consideration.

Among coronaviruses, the spike surface glycoprotein is known to play a role in neuroimmunopathology. However, the SARS-CoV-2 virus has numerous other proteins and polyproteins, each which may serve as an antigen source during infection leading to autoimmunity. The immune system presents those proteins, like all human proteins, as “normal”. T-cells are trained to recognize a normal protein shape in the thymus. Biomimicry between or among proteins from pathogens (infection or injection) can conflate the signaling by creating a population of memory B-cells, especially if the reaction switches from a Th-1 toward a Th-2 response.

In SARS, a type of “priming” of the immune system was observed during animal studies of SARS spike protein-based vaccines leading to increased morbidity and mortality in vaccinated animals (A: This is awfully important, this bit, right. I’ll say it again…)

In SARS, a type of “priming” of the immune system was observed during animal studies of SARS spike protein-based vaccines leading to increased morbidity and mortality in vaccinated animals who were subsequently exposed to wild SARS virus.

(A: So, they gave them the vaccination first, right. Then they wanted to see by exposing them to the actual wild SARS virus if they would develop antibodies. That's what they would do. But the problem, when they gave them, after the shot, when they've given them the wild, actual wild virus, after the vaccination, they had a massive autoimmune problem that started. That's where you had the complete immunopathology effect, with eosinophil infiltrates into the lungs, and you find bleeding in the lungs and all the rest of it.)

Similarly, found that ferrets previously vaccinated against SARS-CoV also developed a strong inflammatory response in liver tissue (hepatitis). Both studies suspected a “cellular immune response”.

(A: What happens, it goes on to say, you get an immune enhancement, it's not just immunity, but you get enhancement, this over enhancement and you have the cytokine storm setting in. So the vaccine has primed your system almost like a hyper priming so that when it hits the actual virus it was intended to stop, or even some other types of viruses by the way, it goes into beyond overdrive and it's your body's response eventually that comes back and kills you. That's in this actual article. And quite... This is a study, this is a massive studying from laboratories, right. It's not someone just playing about in their kitchen with some jars and tweezers and a pair of scissors. This is laboratory testing for vaccine companies. It says that…)

These types of unfortunate outcomes are sometimes referred to as “immune enhancement”; however, this nearly euphemistic phrase (A: This…. It’s great, they use terminology, because folk could read the thing and think, oh it’s an immune enhancement. It’s to cover what they’re really saying. It says…)

These types of unfortunate outcomes are sometimes referred to as “immune enhancement”; however, this nearly euphemistic phrase fails to convey the increased risk of illness and death due to prior exposure to the SARS spike protein. For this reason, I refer to the concept as “pathogen priming”; (A: Because it's really a pathogen priming.) the peptides with pathogenic potential therefore are referred to as “putative pathogenic priming peptides”.

In this study, I present the likely human epitopic targets of biomimicry-induced autoimmunological components of morbidity and mortality caused by SARS-CoV-2 infection. This is achieved via bioinformatics analysis of the homology between highly immunogenic SARS-CoV-2…

(A: It goes on and on and on. But you can see when they're talking about your immune system, it might initially after a shot show that you've got some antibodies to the thing. However, once they hit the real thing, the real virus in the wild, your system goes into overdrive and rather than protect you, your immune system is going to end up killing you. That's always been known here. But it's good to get more and more verifications of it through different studies and so on. It says…)

The fact that pathogenic priming may be occurring involving autoimmunity against multiple proteins following CoV vaccination is consistent with other observations observed during autoimmunity, including the release of proinflammatory cytokines and cytokine storm. Similar to the SARS-CoV animal studies, found that mice vaccinated against MERS-CoV (Middle East Respiratory Syndrome) development exaggerated pulmonary immunopathology when challenged with the MERS virus following vaccination.

They reported that lung mononuclear infiltrates were observed in all groups after virus challenge, and that increased infiltrates that contained eosinophils and the eosinophil promoting IL-5 and IL-13 cytokines were observed only in the vaccinated animals.

(A: And by the way, that's a standard thing. You'll find eosinophils in the lung, in the wash as they call it when they're, when they find it. Eosinophils are one of your blood cells, a type that will go to war with anything that shouldn't be there in your lung system, the respiratory system pretty well. And you'll find it crossing through the barrier, again, through the tissue, and you can actually find it on certain swab tests and so on.)

(A: I had that when I came down with a massive reaction against multiple booster shot vaccines back in the 90s, that gave me the complete onset of rheumatic fever, high fever and the whole thing. It went for my joints. Again, my immune system started immediately attacking my joints. It was quite an awful time, and it never really repaired from that at all. Then you end up getting put on, to combat it, heavy-duty Cortisone at the time, which opens you wide up to bacterial infection setting in, and I had naturally pneumonia from that too. Then of course to combat the pains in the joints they give you certain non-inflammatory drugs as well, anti-inflammatory drugs, and they burn a hole in your stomach. So, then you go on pills for the stomach. I mean, it just goes in a complete circle, all because I had those booster shots at the time.)

(A: And it was horrible, I mean horrible. I was crippled for a while. And part of my spine got destroyed as well. There's no doubt about it. But that came from booster shots. Again, that's what happens. They found eosinophils, I mean, the doctor got that, I wanted to see the study and the blood test, and I saw right away once I saw the eosinophil reaction there, I said that's it, that's what caused it all.)

(A: And here you have articles like this, studies pretty well verifying the same kind of reactions, and what you'll find… You know, I wasn't dead to do an autopsy naturally, but I was almost at that stage. So, there you go.)

Pathogenic priming may be more or less severe in vaccine or infection induced immune responses to some proteins than for others due to original antigenic sin (A: …sin they call it, right.); the immunologic reaction against self-antigens may be made less severe as fast-evolving viruses evolve away from the original vaccine type. Thus, the screening of immunogenic epitopes for pathogenic priming potential via homology may be augmented by studies of autoantibodies that cross-react with epitopes included in vaccines.

So there you go. It's... hhhch. In the quest to try to get antibodies produced, because of the techniques that they're using, and even animals that they're using for it and so on, you end up with other, they call it debris getting into you, foreign matter getting in. It isn't just what they want for the vaccine, it's this other stuff OFF the animal kidney tissue and so on that they put in there, with other coronaviruses, that end up altering it. Then when your body is faced with an actual wild coronavirus your body goes into hyper overdrive, all guns blazing, and literally everything's rushed to those lungs of yours and you need treatment right away to save your life, or you're pretty well doomed.

Well, think about that, and think about the articles I read previously, about the 2017, is one example, a vaccine that had to get recalled halfway through the season when they found out that folk were having the same kind of, when they actually, it was opening them up to coronavirus infection, make them more prone to it. And that wasn't the first time either. Because that happened a few years before that, and health Canada had to come out there and try and advise folk to stop taking it at that particular time.

But this article here that I read is from the Journal of Translational Autoimmunity and that's from the Elsevier Journal. It's also part of I think it's the British health system there, or the Lancet type, but they're involved with the Elsevier Journal. This one here is also by James Lyons-Weller, Institute of Pure and Applied Knowledge, at USA. Anyway, there's some of this stuff.

As I say, you've got to, I tell you, it's a sad thing. I don't think most doctors really ever admit to getting much training at all, it's almost like a byproduct at the very end of the training when they get maybe a few hours on vaccines, and that's IT. And they take everything on faith too, from then on. It's just… I mean, why should they put them, why would you think people would be lying to you? [Alan chuckles.] You take it for granted that everything is real, well tested, and all the rest of it. They're no different than anybody else, until they start to see some of the patients come back with obviously problems from what's happened. Then it's a matter of bread and butter for them, versus causing a stink, you know.

I've got another article too on the bracelets, but I won’t go into this one here. You get pretty well fed up with it all, there’s that much on it, isn’t there? Think about that when, you know, you're going to have a pathological response to shots for a lot of people. And who's mainly got the shot? Or, who has to take it? It's just a matter of investigation and I think a lot of investigation should be done about that, as to the health staff.

I noticed another article too I'll put up, I got it last week and I thought, my goodness, it's a picture of so many folk in the British health system, in England I should say, who died. I noticed at the time most of them were of nonwhite ethnicities. That they were Asian and African, and different people, and India. A few white people, very overweight. But out of about maybe 110 of them most of them, the vast majority were different ethnic groups.

Black people in England are 3.4 times more likely to test positive for Covid-19 than people from white British backgrounds, study shows - dailymail.co.uk / 29 May 2020

And then, I thought at the time, once again these are folk working in the hospitals. But also, the study said that these particular groups seem to be more prone to it. And they had already ruled out any, they tried, they went into, well, maybe it's socioeconomic and all this. No, no. Because the people who they were looking at, some of them were doctors that had much better incomes than a lot of the people outside the hospital staffs. So it wasn't that. It wasn’t in hygiene. It wasn't good food. It wasn't lack of good food I should say, or lack of good nourishment and so on.

It seemed to be more of a may be the ethnic makeup, something genetic that was making them more prone to it. We know too that the ACE2 receptor sites are more profuse in some of these people. So, I think that's maybe got something to do with that one too. So, there's other factors involved too with it, and that's being looked into in certain articles, a Daily Mail online. They're actually looking, some organizations or laboratories are looking into that to try to get some common denominators to find out why certain folk are getting hit harder than other people.

All this will MAYBE come out years later, you know. But as I say, but if it's anything at all to do with autoimmune problems from vaccinations, that will be, they can't come out and tell you that. Not after all of this. IF that's got something to do with that. I don't know, we don't know yet. As I say, there's a lot of first studies kind of pointing to it. But I can't see anybody come out and admitting to that, you know. N-n. But it's a thought, isn't it, eh?

Now, what I've got to go into here is this whole idea, and I mentioned it last week, that this magic, you know, everything's magic that comes from Fauci and the rest of them. You've got your talismans to venture outside, your masks there, your hand sanitizer, and you can wave in front of you if you want to. Just like you'd wave one of these things in the church, you know, with the smoke coming out of it. Because all this stuff really is voodoo, for what's happening. The lockdown of healthy people is literally, as I say, guaranteed to make a spike in fall, late fall. So therefore, if they want that to spike, I'd say, in the fall.

Then you get this whole idea with social distancing. And people are paranoid. Anybody who watches TV, I'm sure you've all noticed it, that they've said the women are freaking out, they will yell out, get 6 feet away, get 6 feet away. 5 feet is just not far enough, it's got to be 6 feet away and all this stuff. They really believe all this. That's the war of terror, the daily terror box is the whole thing. Orwell talked about it. But here's where it came from, if you don't know, right. Who started this social distancing? You never got this idea of social distancing, hm? But the idea came up in about 2006 from where? From a schoolgirl, eh. This is the usual rags to riches nonsense they always give you. A schoolgirl, eh. Laura M Glass, her name was, Glass. And this idea of social distancing was put out with the help of her dad, Robert J Glass who worked for the military industrial complex. [Alan chuckles.] He worked at Sandia National Laboratories, Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Targeted Social Distancing Designs for Pandemic Influenza

wwwnc.cdc.gov / Nov 2006

Robert J. Glass, Laura M. Glass

Author affiliations: *Sandia National Laboratories, Albuquerque, New Mexico, USA

Targeted social distancing to mitigate pandemic influenza can be designed through simulation of influenza's spread within local community social contact networks. We demonstrate this design for a stylized community representative of a small town in the United States.

(A: So, it's a computer program. Hm. And the girl, they're all trying to do little make-believe things for school. But daddy helped. Daddy helped, eh.)

The critical importance of children and teenagers in transmission of influenza is first identified and targeted. For influenza as infectious as 1957–58 Asian flu (˜50% infected), closing schools and keeping children and teenagers at home reduced the attack rate by >90%. For more infectious strains, or transmission that is less focused

(A: …blah blah blah blah blah. So…)

At the start of an influenza pandemic, effective vaccine and antiviral drugs may not be available to the general population. If the accompanying illness and death rates of the virus strain are high, how might a community respond to protect itself? Closing roads, restricting travel, and community-level quarantine will enter discussions. However, within a community, influenza spreads from person to person through the social contact network. Therefore, understanding and strategically controlling this network during a period of pandemic is critical.

So, they go through the whole agenda that we’re going through today. This is made up; I think it was 2006. You never had this nonsense before it. Once the computer was taken in to start ruling our lives, it’s like Ferguson with his, well millions are going to die, you know and all that stuff. The same nonsense. And the computer models they use at the IPCC, for the group for climate change at the United Nations, all computer modeling, which always give you scary, scary scenarios, and scary outcomes. So, here's what they came up with, and this is what they sold it to the government, I think it was the Pentagon even approach them, supposedly, because they knew the daddy, eh. And it really fitted the bill. If you wanted to bring the country down to a standstill, you'd implement this whole agenda. This is what we're living through. It's got nothing to do with what you think it is got to do with. It was literally a computer program. Right. And there's an easier article here that came out about it, about how it was even designed.

aier.org / 15 May 2020

(A: IDEA! Idea, right. It says…)

Now begins the grand effort, on display in thousands of articles and news broadcasts daily, somehow to normalize the lockdown and all its destruction of the last two months. We didn't lock down almost the entire country in 1968/69, 1957, or 1949-1952, or even during 1918. But in a terrifying few days in March 2020, it happened to all of us, causing an avalanche of social, cultural, and economic destruction that will ring through the ages.

There was nothing normal about it all. We'll be trying to figure out what happened to us for decades hence.

How did a temporary plan to preserve hospital capacity turn into two-to-three months of near-universal house arrest that ended up causing worker furloughs at 256 hospitals (A: They actually laid them off!), a stoppage of international travel, a 40% job loss among people earning less than $40K per year, devastation of every economic sector, mass confusion and demoralization, a complete ignoring of all fundamental rights and liberties, not to mention the mass confiscation of private property with forced closures of millions of businesses?

Whatever the answer, it's got to be a bizarre tale. What's truly surprising is just how recent the theory behind lockdown and forced distancing actually is. So far as anyone can tell, the intellectual machinery that made this mess was invented 14 years ago, and not by epidemiologists but by computer-simulation modelers. It was adopted not by experienced doctors – they warned ferociously against it – but by politicians.

(A: And who's getting all the contracts out of it, by the politicians, the big corporations that manage your lockdown and track and trace you and all that kind of stuff. M-hm.)

Let’s start with the phrase social distancing, which has mutated into forced human separation. The first I had heard it was in the 2011 movie Contagion. The first time it appeared in the New York Times was February 12, 2006. (A: The link to that is here too by the way.)

If the avian flu goes pandemic while Tamiflu and vaccines are still in short supply, experts say, the only protection most Americans will have is “social distancing,” which is the new politically correct way of saying “quarantine.”

But distancing also encompasses less drastic measures, like wearing face masks, staying out of elevators — and the [elbow] bump. Such stratagems, those experts say, will rewrite the ways we interact, at least during the weeks when the waves of influenza are washing over us.

Maybe you don’t remember that the avian flu of 2006 didn’t amount to much.

(A: It’s true, oh, it was going to kill us all too.)

It’s true, despite all the extreme warnings about its lethality, H5N1 didn’t turn into much at all.

(A: It was hardly noticed in fact.)

What it did do, however, was send the existing president, George W. Bush, to the library to read about the 1918 flu and its catastrophic results. He asked for some experts to submit some plans to him about what to do when the real thing comes along.

The New York Times (April 22, 2020) tells the story from there: (A: With a link on it too.)

Fourteen years ago, two federal government doctors, Richard Hatchett and Carter Mecher, met with a colleague at a burger joint in suburban Washington for a final review of a proposal they knew would be treated like a piñata: telling Americans to stay home from work and school the next time the country was hit by a deadly pandemic.

When they presented their plan not long after, it was met with skepticism and a degree of ridicule by senior officials, who like others in the United States had grown accustomed to relying on the pharmaceutical industry, with its ever-growing array of new treatments, to confront evolving health challenges.

Drs. Hatchett and Mecher were proposing instead that Americans in some places might have to turn back to an approach, self-isolation, first widely employed in the Middle Ages.

(A: So, this is the story of...)

How that idea became the heart of the national playbook for responding to a pandemic.

Dr. Mecher, a Department of Veterans Affairs physician, and Dr. Hatchett, an oncologist turned White House adviser, to overcome intense initial opposition.

It brought their work together with that of a Defense Department team assigned to a similar task.

And it had some unexpected detours, including a deep dive into the history of the 1918 Spanish flu and … kicked off by a high school research project pursued by the daughter of a scientist at the Sandia National Laboratories.

(A: You can actually see, you can smell the collusion of it all, you know, and the money that you could see anyway.)

The concept of social distancing is now intimately familiar to almost everyone. But as it first made its way through the federal bureaucracy in 2006 and 2007, it was viewed as impractical, unnecessary and politically infeasible.

Notice that in the course of this planning, neither legal nor economic experts were brought in to consult and advise. Instead it fell to Mecher (formerly of Chicago and an intensive care doctor with no previous expertise in pandemics) and the oncologist Hatchett.

(A: But the girl…)

… the high-school daughter of 14? Her name is Laura M. Glass, and she recently declined to be interviewed when the Albuquerque Journal did a deep dive of this history.

Laura, with some guidance from her dad, (A: [Alan chuckles.] Sure, some.) devised a computer simulation that showed how people – family members, co-workers, students in schools, people in social situations – interact.

(A: So they made up how many folk they would meet in a day and yada, yada for the computer programming yada, yada. And I guess through the daddy's friends and stuff they eventually got a visit from the Pentagon, who, I'm sure mulled it over and said this is a great way to shut down the country – that's what I'm adding, this is my own ideas here – and the money they could make off it and all the rest of it. I'm pretty sure of that. Anyway, it says…)

That paper is Targeted Social Distancing Designs for Pandemic Influenza (2006). They conclude with a chilling call for what amounts to a totalitarian lockdown, (A: …which we are in right now.) all stated very matter-of-factly.

Implementation of social distancing strategies is challenging. They likely must be imposed for the duration of the local epidemic and possibly until a strain-specific vaccine is developed and distributed.

(A: So, it's amazing, that has to become law, this IDEA, hm, this idea from a schoolgirl, right, whose dad has worked for the military industrial complex. [Alan chuckles.] And that's what Fauci said too, from the beginning. He says, well you know, you won't get out of lock down until we get a vaccine. Right out of the playbook, eh?)

If compliance with the strategy is high over this period, an epidemic within a community can be averted. However, if neighboring communities do not also use these interventions, infected neighbors will continue to introduce influenza and prolong the local epidemic, albeit at a depressed level more easily accommodated by healthcare systems.

In other words, it was a high-school science experiment that eventually became law of the land, and through a circuitous route propelled not by science but politics.

(A: I would say, and folk in-the-know who probably saw big, big, big, big bucks. Especially when the Pentagon got involved in it and went to talk to them.)

So, there you go. I mean, and by the way I'll put another link up as well to Britain who said, we'll probably just bring it down to 3 feet apart now, it's just the same, there will be no real noticeable difference. So that was all BOGUS to start with, folks! You can't have it being the law of the land, oh my God, they'll all die if you go under 6 feet, it's so contagious! Well, three feet's okay, you know, there'll be no real difference. So why not have it three feet from the beginning then? or 2 feet, or 1 foot or just stand on top of each other's heads? What does it matter? Do you realize how bogus all this is, folks? Are you starting to get the picture here? Quite amazing, eh.

Now, George Soros is offering to rectify the money problem. He's awfully good at rectifying, or actually wrecking, that first part of rectify, is rec-, you know. He's good at destroying countries with his scams as he plunders nations. That's how he got his cash and so on. Generally, the nations that help them out when he fled there, like Britain, and then he boasts about it too once he crashes the economy and they have to borrow money from his friends who of course lend to Britain. [Alan laughing.] It's quite a scam. And he gets away with it. But he's a very important guy who's obviously way up the tree and on the big world intelligence system that runs it all on behalf of the truly top globalists. But he says here…

George Soros says Europe should tap up an obscure bond used during the Napoleonic Wars to save itself from a coronavirus depression - markets.businessinsider.com / 22 May 2020

Well, we’ve all got depression from coronavirus, I think. So, he's got the answer, and because he's in to hedge funds and all that, he introduces this bond that was issued after the Napoleonic wars, that's actually during it too, to fund the armies against Napoleon. We know the history of that and how [Alan chuckles.] the Bank of England got lost, put it that way, and taken over. But he says, rather than, we just issue a new type of bond, you see, that the government will have to pay out for the people who buy the bonds. But the government never has to pay the actual amount owing, you see, just an interest on it. Forever. That's it, forever. Isn't that kind of familiar, that perpetual debt idea, you know?

Of course, he gives a very low interest rates, which of course will never ever be implemented or stuck to once it goes into place. He and a few of his friends I'm sure that came up with this can all make fortunes forever. And their children and grandchildren no doubt too. Because you never pay the amount borrowed back, the government doesn't, it just pays interest out on it, you see. It says, but that's forever, you pay that interest in perpetuity. Well, we've kind of heard this before, doesn't it have echoes of something?

So perpetual debt forever and ever. That of course is slavery. Those who actually end up owning the bonds own the country. But they already own the country anyway, the big guys who manage the con game of money. But that's what he's suggesting that they all do. You know, here's an answer to it all. Of course, you have to jack up the taxes, you see, because you see the taxpayer always pays for the vultures [Alan chuckles.] to get rich. So that's an old, it's as old as ancient Sumer pretty well, this idea. Because then they have to tax the taxpayers more, new taxes to pay the interest on this owing for the bonds and so on. What a scam! Like this is semi-new here? Who is kidding who here? But there you go, that's how the nonsense goes. The whole money system is a racket anyway.

Another article too, I mentioned already, was the government advisors, this is in the UK…

Easing to the two-meter social distancing rule (A: Right, so easing the 6 feet odd, you know…) will have 'no impact' on risk of spreading coronavirus, says ministers (A: Meaning the politicians.) as pubs with gardens are set to be first to open

Dailymail.co.uk / 29 May 2020

Prof Robert Dingwall said it could allow four times as many people into a space

(A: They're awfully good at counting, eh. I mean, this is why they're professors, you understand. You could get four times as many people into the same space you see, by doing this. You see, isn't that… This guy is a genius.)

But there you go. Before it was LETHAL, it was lethal if you were, and they terrified mainly women actually by TV propaganda, and like repetitive terror, terror, terror every day for months now. The women were freaking out if people were breaking the 6-foot rule, you know, by a few inches. Well, now we find out well, you don't, it was all kind of nonsense, you don't really need that anyway. Even though it was nonsense dreamed up by Miss Glass and her daddy who worked with a military contractor, the whole idea of the 6 feet idea, nonsense, absolute rubbish.

So, you can half it now. Half it, it had no significant impact, you see. That's how they work out the nonsense eh. Before it's LAW and folk could get batoned and their heads beaten in if they broke it and spoke up about it. But now it's okay to go half the distance now, you see, oh well, that's all right. Another new normal. It's great how the new normals, you see, because they're based on nothing, except computer models and big incomes for the con people who designed them, these programs. [Alan chuckles.] The computer says... There ya go. And we all have to jump to it. What?

This is not how you govern people, with these computers. You see, conology has always been, they've always used science to get what they want, to take away your rights and freedoms and so on. Well, it's scientific, you know. That's the modern times, since the Enlightenment, it's science. But really, it's not that at all. Now they use THE COMPUTER, it's even, well you can't argue with the computer, it's pure logic. Is it really? You can only feed into it, and it only comes out what's fed into the thing. Y'know? So, there you go.

It's like a stacked deck in a Chinese restaurant where they've already prewritten all the little fortune cookie messages for you. It's all prewritten, you see. [Alan chuckles.] This message says you will come back to this restaurant again because you love it and it brings you good luck. Then the next message says, if you don't come back to the restaurant, you'll have bad luck. You see? Very... It's just another scam, that's what the computers are all about.

So, I'll put these up tonight as well. So that's Mr. Soros, the man who wrecks nations. And as he wrecks them, he boasts. It's nothing personal, as he crashes economies and profits from it, it's just business. He actually said that, eh, in one of his little talks. And no one votes for this guy. The guy who literally funds massive NGO armies and Antifa and different groups and so on. No one votes for this guy. Don't you get the message that the real system is way above politics? It contains guys like Soros, it's a big club at the top, you know.

Now another one I'm going to mention is, and I've already put down how the whole, the origins of the lockdown idea came, again with Miss Glass and her daddy. But you've got to read it, what's running our lives right now is just astonishing. Because the next step, I was just thinking about this today. So here you are, computers and some kid's idea, and of course they must've got millions for this idea, since the Pentagon came in, because they could use an idea to crash economies across the planet. It's like warfare thing, you understand.

And again, the big banks, the big, they want to reevaluate the currency system and the techniques of currency. And even the value of currency, reset it they like to call it. Because we were stagnant from the last crash in 2007/2008 when they reset it then, well, with negative interest rates and so on, you see. So, they all wanted this thing, so they grabbed on this 6 feet distances and all that kind of stuff and put it into computer programs. So, the military were behind it as well. And the military has nothing to do with protecting your country. It's like the CIA, it's the same thing at the top. They have agendas you'll never fathom. And it's not to benefit you. You will be given the tab though, the bill for it all. But I was thinking of that, with the 6 feet nonsense and now you can half it to, you know, maybe 3 feet would be okay.

Drunk Hindu priest (A: I think it’s in India.), 70, beheads man in Indian temple as a human sacrifice to goddess who came to him in a dream and said it would end coronavirus

dailymail.co.uk / 29 May 2020

Sansari Ojha decapitated Saroj Kumar Pradhan, 52, in Cuttack on Wednesday

He had a long-standing feud with Pradhan and had been drinking on the night

The priest surrendered to police the following day and the axe was seized

(A: I was just thinking of that, you see, that this is what they said would appease the goddess, you see, and the coronavirus would disappear, eh. I don't know if he convinced the guy to allow his head to be taken off or not. He said he didn't like the man. But who knows, eh? It says…)

Ojha was heavily drunk at the time and surrendered to police the same day after coming to his senses.

He said Ojha claimed he was ordered by a goddess in his dream to sacrifice a human in order to bring an end to the pandemic.

Well, I was waiting to see if it would work. Eh! I'm sure there's a lot of people, you look at what the World Health Organization and Fauci and the rest of them, and Ferguson, eh, Neil Ferguson, we're going to have millions just in the US alone die here of this thing. And we'd, oh my God, the world would, it would drastically reduce the population, eh. We had to stop our whole existence and have a whole new way of living, but luckily it was all drafted up before the virus hit, the whole idea for a New World Order. And they just have to, just brushed the dust off the plan, you know, and presented it to us.

But I was just thinking, since everything else fell flat and their numbers crashed into dust, and all their computer predictions were completely wrong, you know, and it crashed economies across the planet, I was just thinking, well since they came out with this voodoo nonsense with the computer and all that, all the false numbers, and even social distancing that was invented in 2006 as I've mentioned by that girl and her daddy, and heavily funded I'm sure to get contracts from the military. [Alan chuckles.] Complete bogus nonsense, you understand? Viruses don't give a darn how far you are from somebody. If a breeze comes along, or a door opens in a store, or in your own house, it's going to blow it all around, in circular motions all around the house for goodness sake, eh. Don't you understand that simple fact? But anyway, facts don't matter with the big agenda.

So anyway, I was thinking the World Health Organization, they gave you all the scary numbers and scary scenarios, and total lockdown of the whole planet, and crashing economies and that, maybe they're watching this priest Sansari Ojha, eh, to see if he has any luck with bringing down the pandemic. Mind you, it's time for the pandemic to rollover actually, you know. It usually has about three months, that's standard, then it dies off. Then folk have got, if they've been allowed to mingle, they'll have some kind of herd immunity, that's the normal thing with them.

But they'll be waiting to see if it works and they might start asking for sacrifices at the WHO! You never know. You just never know, eh! Because you can't pooh-pooh other folks' beliefs, you know. Not in this modern world. I can see them all standing there behind Trump, you know, and you have Fauci there, doing his voodoo stuff, and he'll have shares of course in all kinds of things that might just help. Then you'll have Dr. Birx behind him nodding the head, you know, nodding the head, as they announce what they have to do to bring this pandemic to an end. Eh? I mean, you never know. I mean, it's just a step from the computer models with drastic prognosis and outcomes. Vastly over exaggerated. And that took a lot of faith to believe in that nonsense so they can truly take a step and go the next step and copy India for goodness sake, eh? What about it? You never know. We're just dumb peasants at the bottom they tell us, hm.

[Alan chuckles.] And here's the geniuses at the top crashing the whole planet's economy. Now they're telling us, like Kissinger too with the world order and the whole thing, and the United Nations with its new world order announcements, and the Rockefeller center New World Order announcement. All this old plan just, again, blow the dust off it and present it to the public. And we're supposed to believe it all just happens spontaneously out of nothing. And a whole new way of living, a whole new different kind of economy, a whole new sustainability, folks, that they've been prattling on about it for years at the WEF and the Club of Rome. And bingo! They get what they want. With, under different guises, using a different scare tactic, you see.

But there you go, that's what they're doing in India. At least in one little instance of it. And India has really had it terribly hard because they'd never had an abundant food supplies to start with, and they've got a huge population. And a huge lower-class working-class people who are often transient and they move to where the work is seasonally and so on. They were all locked up in areas, they couldn't even go back home. What a terrible disaster there. They've got a long ways to get out of it too. So, it's really rather sad what's happening in different countries as they try...

We haven't seen it all here too. If the ones at the top, the characters at the top have their way, we'll be in rationing before the end of the year. And I mean really strict rationing. They want this. This is what austerity is. This is their austerity program at the United Nations, which all your countries and your politicians signed onto years ago. That's what it is. You're living through an agenda. A script.

And then too…

Global Capitalism, "World Government" and the Corona Crisis

globalresearch.ca / 24 May 2020

(A: That's Chossudovsky, Global Research, repeating the same kind of stuff really. They mention the military-industrial complex, and in the councils of government...)

In the councils of government, we must guard against the acquisition of unwarranted influence, whether sought or unsought, by the military-industrial complex.

The potential for the disastrous rise of misplaced power exists and will persist. (President Dwight D. Eisenhower, January 17, 1961)

(A: Of course the World Health Organization has been raising itself up…)

WHO auspices which is being used as a pretext and a justification to triggering a Worldwide process of economic, social and political restructuring.

(A: That’s what the New World Order is about. That’s what they mean. So, it's quite amazing to watch it all happening.)

I'll put these articles up tonight too and hopefully you people can remember where they come from and who presented them to you. At least some of the people should mention, who repeat them in their own articles and news shows and so on, where they got it. Because I'm doing a lot of work for nothing for other people… who don't even give you the thank you here and there. But I do thank the people who support me over these years. As I say, I don't have the wealthiest class following me, at least that's how it seems. But I have people who help me out here and there. Because it costs a lot of money to do what I do. And I can't do anything else while I'm doing it, you understand.

I knew when I started, I only came out because I knew it was time to come forward with the knowledge and understanding of what was really happening. And managed to change even the so-called patriot movement into a wider understanding, that this wasn't just the US, this was a whole global system and your governments all signed on annually to new agreements to create a new system for the whole planet. I gave all the data and all the rest of it, and the depopulation stuff, yada, yada, ya.

So go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com and as I say you can buy the books and discs, or you can donate to me straightforward. How to do it is @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. List all my official sites there in case any of them go down. Hopefully I can keep ticking along for a little while longer.

Because the big characters at the top really mean war. This is war against the general population. You don't plan this for years on behalf of the rulers of the world, as they have done, just to let it go because people want their rights back. They don't play that way. We're in for really tough times, believe you me, and you're going to see the heavy, heavy fist, and then the iron fist come out from underneath the velvet glove. That's what they want to do right now. They worked for this for years to get us to this stage and they're not going to back off now. No matter how farcical the excuses that are given, and infantile the excuses are, it doesn't matter, an agenda must be accomplished. That's how they see it. That's how they see it.

Now, I'm also going to put up, really, I think it was the new Irish Sentinel. It’s in PDF form. It's got articles in a do with like…

TV as a psycho social weapon.

The people will believe what the media tells them they believe - George Orwell

It goes into the physical way in which the TV affects the brain. I actually did talks on that years ago, when they had the flicker rate, you know, that's what you used to have, the flicker rate at one time. It would turn you into the Alpha state, which is very hypnotic, you know. Very quickly too, within 30 seconds of watching TV, you go into the Alpha state. Whether you, you don't know it, but you go into it all right. They go into the different states, the Beta and Alpha and so on, Theta and Delta. But Alpha is the one for getting ideas across to the general public without them really being aware they're being indoctrinated. It's also why you really enjoy being, watching fantasy. Because you're in the movie, like I say, in danger. In horror movies, you can't look away because you are the person in the movie in a sense and you must survive, know what's happening, so you can't look away. That's how it works. Without the Alpha state it's not so easy, you see.

It [The Irish Sentinel] has some good articles in it, this particular one. It would give a bit of reading for people, that's online here. It has the...

ID2020, the real game plan. - theirishsentinel.com

I'm sure folk will enjoy it, so I'll put the link up for those that want to have a peruse and look through it. It's good to read stuff because when you get dependent on being told, and even having the visual part too, you don't realize you're being distracted even with visual. But if you can hear and remember, it's much better. But reading is even better than that. I personally always, that's how I learned stuff at school too, I could actually see in my mind’s eye, the print in my mind’s eye, word for word, so you definitely remember it much, much better. Also…

The Gates of Hell Unlocked - theirishsentinel.com / May/June 2020

the world has 6.8 billion people, that's headed up to about 9 billion. Now if we do a really great job on the new vaccines, healthcare, reproductive health services, we could lower that by perhaps 10 to 15%.

Do you really want this guy to help you, don't you? Yeah, sure. It's got different articles in it which are worthwhile looking through. One is also with, I'm in there somewhere too, I think, it's of me, at least my site is. I'll put it up anyway, it's the Irish Sentinel and issue one, a PDF, a revised one. Or a renewed one I should say, with issue one.

Because it's time now folk get back into even print because your system is going to be taken away from you. I gave talks years ago of how in the Soviet Union folk literally would type up things on secretive typewriters. Because they could find out even who had the typewriter by the typeset and the whole thing. They had to be very careful and hide them and pass them around, just little articles that folk would print up and pass around, those who are interested in what was happening, to get some resistance up against government policies and so on. You could be put in prison forever or sent off to the Gulags and killed or tortured or whatever, by utopic systems. That's what they do, you know, in socialist systems especially. And all systems are fascist anyway. I don't care how they start off or pretend they aren’t, they end up being fascist very quickly. Yeah, they'd kill them as I say, if you don't go along with things.

So, with the Internet being so incredibly well monitored, all our names, we're all so dissected, no doubt about it. They know everything you think almost on the Internet. You're going to have to start getting alternatives systems. Because they won't just give up. Don't ever believe that. The people who set up the Internet gave you Zuckerberg and all the rest of them, and Google by the way, and Alphabet, it's a massive intelligence operation. That's what it is, to manage the thoughts and moods, and what everybody's doing, and eventually for arresting people who, as time goes on in...

Because you're going into a more totalitarian system, that's what sustainability is all about. The sustainable agenda is a socialistic form of technocracy to run it more efficiently on behalf of those who own the planet, or who have decided, like the Bill Gates, these guys who really think they own the planet, and they have the right to do with the animals, which is all of us, as they wish. So, it's a post Democratic system and you have to just accept that or fight it, in one way or another.

The first thing they always do is to crush all dissent, all speech, communication of the ideas, all the rest of it. That's standard stuff under tyranny. That's what's happening now, for those who haven't figured it out. It IS happening NOW.

I don't care who you are, I don't care if a person thinks they're from Mars with a cure for Covid, I don't mind them saying it. It doesn't bother me. And who should care?

But the fact is, they're banning all kinds of you from saying things that must be said in a free society. You can't be free without speech being free. You can't be free, obviously. So, you're going through the system now and the signs and symptoms of the system of tyranny, that's what you're looking at right now. I hope you understand that.

We've got to do something about it.

You'll all get your chances. You either go along with it and you'll get tighter and tighter chains as you go along with it. It's not going to loosen on you for going along with it, so it will be tighter and tighter. And you comply with the next rule, and the next rule, and the next rule.

Or you simply start to say no, as I say. You can't keep going into tyranny like this.

The system they're bringing in is not living. It's a monitored prison existence of a thousand rules that you must obey, because you're owned. You're owned. You're a number and you're owned.

And that is not living. That's not what we come through centuries and centuries and centuries of history to do is to go to this stage where we are back into slavery again. Remember that, folks.

And it's up to each and every one of you.

So, I'll put these things up tonight remember @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Go into the site, donate, and hopefully I'll be getting the books out shortly that have been ordered because the printers have been closed. I'll get it all done. Hopefully the post is going to start running a bit better.

We'd better start using this bit of freedom.

Because as I say with the lack, with this lack of herd immunity, and you only get it by getting exposed to it, and as I say, most folk have had it and they've got antibodies already and they didn't even know it, right. So, they've done their best to hold back herd immunity, which will guarantee a spike, which they'll probably end up trying to close it in the fall. You see, the longer they can carry this on the harder it is to break out of it. And the more folk will literally adapt to it. They understand this, the psychologists know it, the behaviorists know it. But if they can't hold us under it for this long, it will just, we won't go along with it again, you see. They know that too.

It's a make or break time for freedom.

We've got to demand that the studies are done into the causes of this thing. And the causes of certain folk getting it worse than others. And definitely quite simple, what did the folk in the old folks' homes get that the public outside didn't? Or had perhaps less of, put it that way too, before this particular thing hit? There's got to be, there's definitely something to this, you know. Definitely. And the healthcare workers as well. What do they all have in common? What did the healthcare workers, apart from working together with the elderly, what did the healthcare workers have in common? With the folks in the old folks' homes, what did they have in common?

COVID-19 vaccine volunteer remains 'cautiously optimistic' after severe reaction - msn.com / 26 May 2020

It's not difficult to find out, folks. And it should definitely be either looked into, under any scientific study you've got to look at everything without pooh-poohing it. And even if you do pooh-pooh it, you should still look into it and test it out to see if it's right or wrong or whatever, if there's a connection there or not. Obviously, that's the only way you find out any truth about anything by either ruling it in or ruling it out. It's got to be done.

As I say, the horrific systems of disposing of people because they're old, disposing in these homes, to massive businesses that are out for incredible profits, living... parasitical businesses! I really do believe that the National Health Service in Britain was a great system at one time. But they started selling out, you know, the government started selling off chunks of it to private corporations over the years. Just like Canada did the same thing, in Canada, British Columbia did it, and Ontario did it too, step-by-step. Because the whole objective was always to eventually completely privatize them all, folks, and have us all held to utter ransom and hype. It's an incredibly profitable area, isn't it?

We've got to get back to human life being, having some value. And stop, get rid of all these bioethicists. Get rid of them. Kick them out. Altogether. They have no place to do with human beings and life and death. No place at all.

We've got to do our best to keep folk alive, as we used to always do. And to do our best to give them the best kind of life they can with the healthcare you can possibly provide, the best healthcare. That's what life is about. Not profit. You can't put profits on human life. No way. No. Especially the stinking awful profits that they do from big business and corporations and big Pharma.

Look after yourselves and don't panic completely, 'eh. Think for yourselves too. Try to get a break once in a while, as well, you need a break. You can't live in a constant tension.

But stand up for yourselves. Don't be afraid to stand up for yourselves. And express your opinions because they're trying to turn those that fall into line through panic and fear against the rest. Like a little Civil War on the go, eh. You see that in the stores I'm sure when folks shout, don't stand there, you can't walk that way, the wrong direction. Well can't I reverse? No, you can't. No. I got a reverse gear here. No, you can't do that, smart guy. Stuff like that. They're turning people against other people, and the ones who watch TV are the most freaked out. Everyone is actually seeing it in action.

As I say, they're admitting now the whole six feet farce is nothing but a computerized FARCE! Because they can suddenly half it and at the top say it's okay? Oh, 3 feet is just as good, you know, there'll be no significant difference. Well, no significant difference means there is NO difference. It's all baloney, folks!

For myself Alan Watt from Ontario Canada, it's good night and may your God or your gods go with you.

Hi folks, I'm Alan Watt and this is Cutting Through The Matrix on June 7, 2020. And here we go into the next stalling technique I suppose you'd call it, which falls right in with the Covid idea, the lockdown, the stopping of all commerce, the stopping of normal life basically. Mandated by our governments on behalf of the World Health Organization and this wonderful undemocratic system in which we live. Because we don't vote for the WHO. They're so corrupt and so literally compromised, everybody with it, with shares in big Pharma companies, some of them are even owners of some of them really when you look at it. And they get awfully handsomely rewarded for giving contracts out, taxpayer contracts naturally, we fund everything for the global elite.

What's amazing too, I'll touch on this tonight, is how everything fits together rather neatly, really, in amongst the chaos, the appearance of chaos. Because don't forget that the World Economic Forum said last year that we weren't listening to them. We the peasantry, you know, the world's peasantry. The peasantry that can't go to the WEF. We're not invited basically. And you couldn't afford it anyway. Because the WEF is just part of the superstructure that rules us. You don't see any Antifa protesting them, there's a clue in all of this, you see. There's lots of clues in everything.

A long time ago I noticed that the Canadian government was funding far-left communist groups in Canada, for their clubs where they could sing their protest songs and scheme their little antiwar rallies. Which were all fine at the time, it was pretty well passive compared to today. But we funded them across the country. Most folk don't even know. I thought at the time, you know, when it was the antiwar idea in Britain and Canada and everywhere else across the planet, you had these mass rallies, the antiwar rallies. Because we were sick of being told were all going to get nuked, you see, and the war to end all wars [Alan chuckles.] and all of civilization in the process.

Because of it, that was the heyday mind you, of the military-industrial complex for quick money, big money, from the taxpayer, to save us all. They kept making new kinds of bombs and missiles, and aircraft to carry them as well, as well as individual missiles. It was the heyday. Because no one complained at the time, and we all said, oh my God, they have to protect us against the other guys across there.

And a long, long time ago, growing up I watched these kind of things, well organize protest rallies. But they used to have families there, when they had men, women and children, you know. You would see the family's, hundreds and thousands of families at times with their banners out, very quiet and peaceful, just protesting against this, that and the whole thing. Because no one wanted to get blown up, you see. But when you think of the money that could have been used – I hope people realize, [Alan chuckles.] they never really think about it – the money that COULD be used on programs and business, to get more business, more jobs and all the rest of it, went to the military-industrial complex year after year after year to keep us safe. But what I noticed was that it suddenly stopped. You see. It was a very quick turn, like a turn of a switch.

And I knew, because I had met some of them in Canada, some of the left wings, because they asked me to sing at a few things. I didn't, hadn't a clue that it was that radical at the time, until I met a communist who was from England and who had just been over to the Soviet Union. He came over after concert, a general concert, and started talking to this little group there as though, and I guess he thought I was one of them. He was talking about the next move, to network amongst all radical groups. At the time too, he said he came back from Moscow, and he says, we must now get all the other fringe groups in with us. That meant the gay groups and all the rest of it too. And there were some eyebrows raised at that. But he says, well, we've got to do it, we've got to get everybody that we can on board for protesting for the future.

And I thought, this guy was from London, hm, England. He was someone who could come in and out of Canada, and every other country, with impunity. And don't tell me the authorities didn't know who he was, that he was there organizing the overthrow of governments [Alan chuckles.] and things like that. I thought, it's obvious, this is run by, your governments are part of it. And this guy was part of it. He had no fear. I asked him, I says, aren't you worried about getting caught coming in and out of countries talking about...? No, no, no, he said, I do it all the time.

So you start to see that, no, there's big players here and there's little players, and there's followers. The whole thing of any big uprising depends on followers. Followers never get what they want. And hhhch, I won't even go into the States at the moment. But followers never get what they want. It's always for a better tomorrow. It's always young people too, where everything is black-and-white, that's how you see things, there's no gray areas of life, everything is just right or wrong. And it's easy, it's always easy with youngsters to point out the nasty things in life, it's very comprehensible to them. Oh, that's terrible, that's terrible, and they're cutting down the trees, etc. As I said before, they always show you the same clear-cut stuff from the late 1940s which doesn't happen today. But that doesn't matter. You see, once you radicalize, facts don't matter when they're related to opposing facts. They're fed a steady diet in this at school, from the age of five or even, you know, even younger if they go to kindergarten, of how bad people are. Because that's the agenda.

Don't forget the World Economic Forum comprise the top business people of the planet, the multibillionaires, trillionaires, and CEOs are in charge of a lot of these big corporations on behalf of the, really, the owners. Above everything there's always another group and another group above everything. That's how you find things really work.

Now, we're owned. I always say we're owned. I have no problem saying that we're owned. You very thoughts are owned, they're given to you by somebody else generally. Brzezinski said that, you know, a man who should certainly have known. Because that was his job, was to give you your thoughts, the whole nations in fact. Brzezinski who also went over to Afghanistan, remember, years ago. I put up the video where he's giving a talk to the tribesmen there, the Taliban.

Because the US wanted them to fight against Russia, which ruled over it then, occupied it. And there's Brzezinski, you know, with his fist up in the air, using the revolutionary move, there’s the clenched fist. Wherever you see that you should be really very careful what's behind it all. So here's a guy who represents the Trilateral Commission and the Council on Foreign Relations, you see, a technocrat placed there. He said to the Taliban, your cause is a holy war, a just war, a jihad! That's what he told them.

The next thing you know he's back there deciding in America, once they get the war going against Russia, telling, giving strategy to the CFR and other groups to, as to how we should shape the minds of the next generation that's going to come up, not just within US but across the world. Don't forget the CFR is an international organization. It's only part of the same organization that runs the world, the Royal Institute of International Affairs. They've got a branch called the European Institute for International Affairs; they dropped the Royal part. Every politician in the EU parliament is a member of it, you see, from all countries. They've got one group for the Far Eastern Pacific Rim group.

These are the same groups remember who manipulate behind the scenes all the wars that come and go, the skirmishes, the real wars and so on. They manipulate, they proudly boast about it in their own archives, that Carol Quigley was the historian for, for a while. He was a professor. He believed in it all, he was completely on board with it. He said he disagreed with some of its methods, and he also thought that its importance in shaping history for about 100 years [Alan chuckles.] pretty well, from the late 1880s anyway onwards that he was taking it from. He said, that it was so important, if the public only knew that the whole history had been shaped and fomented, all the different things that had happened, all the big wars and that, to bring a global society in, you see, a proper, a proper managed society.

It wasn't supposed to be Democratic. That's what people... Democracy is a con game to get everybody on board for particular periods of the big agenda. You see? It's not meant to be real. It's used for revolution. And revolution is when you speed up the process of what the elite want. That's the beauty of this con game.

But anyway, Brzezinski said that. He said that the movers and shakers, themselves, you see, the ones behind the scenes that say okay we need a little war over here... Again, it's the Hegelian dialectic. Most folk don't want to change anything in their lives. They really don't. Even the teenagers you see riding right now and looting the stores, they think they, they might think they know what they want, at the time. They might think that. But once they're in their mid-20s and towards 30, they start to just wean off it and say, they get fed up with it. They like, it doesn't matter where they settled themselves in their mind or even their financial strata or whatever, they start to get kind of comfortable and just get into routines.

They also become a bit jaded from, they start to learn there's gray areas in between the black-and-white reasons for everything. You see. Things that they used to criticize their mom or their dad doing, like getting divorced, they might do it themselves you see, and they can rationalize it so they can start rationalizing it for their parents as well. Whereas before when they were younger, they might be furious at both of them or one or the other because the parents would split up. But then they go and do the same themselves. In other words, experience of life, especially in this chaos of this modern life, manufactured chaos, doesn't give them much of a chance to be different, you see, and they settle in their little area, as I say, and they don't want to change too much.

By that time the elites have already radicalize the upcoming generation to take over. Then the ones who used to be, the previous radicalized ones who are now becoming sedentary and happy, or at least content to an extent, or accepting of their lot or whatever, get annoyed by the younger group coming up. That's how the technique is done, you see.

So because you get settled, you get settled in your ways, you can't get the big changes made on behalf of the rulers, you see. So they create what, they call it the thesis. The thesis, here's what we are, here's what we do. So you've got to, and as long as that goes on nothing is going to change. You might have quite a happy society if you left it that way, you see. So you create something that's going to go against what it stands for, so that's your antithesis. Hm. So now you've got a competing argument, or an argument started, and they go at it. Out of that you guide what you really were after the first place, if you're the elite managers, and that's the synthesis, what's comes out of the argument, the agreement. Okay, we'll agree with this and do this and we'll, so you've got your initial change. Communism is based on this, the dialectic. Out of that synthesis, you say, oh, you're happy for a little while. But immediately, they're not. They're starting again, now we've got a new... The synthesis now becomes the new thesis, right. Then you come out with the antithesis, you see. And you keep going with this constant... That's pure Marxism basically and Trotskyism, the way it's designed, for constant, constant change, you see, planned change, and you always decide what the change is going to be. So you start the argument yourself and you take it from there. That's just basic, basic stuff.

So you always have to train a new group of radicalized youngsters, idealistic, and make sure you own all the school systems and so on so that they're brought up watching the furry little animals, you see, that are hunting for a place to live. And there's man, terrible man destroying it, according to every documentary you'll see, that's what it's supposed to be. You see, it's supposed to radicalize the youngsters. They use the same footage, as I say, and techniques across the whole planet.

Because the whole planet is under UNICEF and so on and under basically a global curriculum. Bill Gates is involved. It's called the new virtual education basically that he wants. He hopes they're going to lock us down for longer, by any technique, it doesn't matter if it's riots or whatever, as long as then they can start learning at home basically on the computer. And of course he'll be in charge of the curriculum because he had big input on the present curriculum, the Common Core thing. So make sure you standardize everyone's education, or indoctrination, it depends on what you're giving them, you see.

Education should really always have arguments about pretty well anything, everything, and you don't get that really, do you? You should be able to look at everything from all kinds of points of view, but you're not really given that. You're given a really, you're given the Marxist technique of critical theory, that's what they use in the schools. Where, let's not look at that when William the Conqueror came in, think about the people who were not fitting into society, how would it affect them? That kind of thing, you see, social engineering, to make you radicalized as a youngster.

It's quite easy, you can create... Why do you think cartoons work with youngsters? The Soviets used cartoons to a great extent, not just for children but right into adulthood. People could even cry with the poor, poor character in the cartoon losing their home because of the bad capitalists and stuff like that. They can make, it's so perfect the techniques that were used. Hm. It's a lot cheaper than using Hollywood like we did in the West.

But children don't have much of a chance. And they're the greatest targets for propaganda. They don't know it. The parents don't know it. But they are the best. Because why do you think it's always different and the parents say, I can't relate to my children? Well, you're not meant to relate to them. The rulers of the planet have already changed even the techniques of basic mathematics so that you can't help the children. It's been like that the last 60, 70 years at least. Maybe even further back, from the days of John Dewey.

Because that was the techniques, don't let the parents have any influence over the child. You want the child to say, oh, that's my dad or my mum, if they still have them, so that they'll look upon them as some kind of obsolete artifact that just feeds them and gives them money. That's what Bertrand Russell basically said, you know, I adlibbed it a bit but that's basically what he said, the only function for the parent eventually will be to feed and clothe the child and look after its needs basically, and the state will give them the indoctrination or the education and their values for the new system. Well you are, you see. This is how it's done.

It's not... Basic mathematics, there's no reason they couldn't... Well, here's long division, here's a different way of doing it. Why? Hm? It's so that the parent can't help the child. The child might start to respect the parent, you don't want that bond there. That's why it's done. That's really why it's done, you know. And I'm not just guessing at this. The same with so much more too.

They started to get rid of the older teachers back in about the 70s, and 80s they really sped it up, and then the 90s, whoooof! Until you got more and more young ones, more and more and more young ones, and they wanted primarily women. Because they know with their psychology and their behaviorism and all their studying of the little people, all the little characters which is us, that youngsters, young children have a greater bond with their mum, you see, for years, as opposed to the daddy. So they got younger women in too, younger teachers in.

And, in came the toolkits to indoctrinate. They call them toolkits, for groupthink. You want every child in a group, in the classroom, they call them groups now, every child to come out with the same opinion on every topic, you see, the authorized opinion. And the teacher, if the teacher's good can actually go all through the toolkit, oh, here's a little stubborn boy over here, how do I get that stubborn boy to agree with this particular topic and what we want, what we've decided, like democratically decided, we all put our hands up and say are you with it or without it or against it or whatever? And there you go. And how to even ostracize them from the group, make them feel insecure or kind of bad or something, you see, shame them. Which again, comes right into adult life. Because once you've been taught to be ashamed, you see, like a dunce, they used these dunces in the old days and the group goes ha-ha and points at you like you're a fool. Then that will stay with you all throughout your adult life. And they know that.

Because you're supposed to be shamed now for their entire adult life. You see it getting done now. Shaming. Shaming. All kinds of shaming, you know. Yeah. Psychology, eh? Psychology, psychiatry, behaviorism, all these things working together. And they prepare the children who don't have a chance, they have no chance at all to be an individual who can think critically for themselves anymore. Everything's got to be emotive, yeah, attach an emotion to everything, you see. Either right, wrong or shame or anger whatever it happens to be, make sure you attach it. Then you've got a slave for life who will never know they're slave. Then when you call them out to be, to radicalized them about this, that or the other, they'll go. Just like canon fodder. They haven't got a clue. Haven't got a clue that it’s managed that way.

But isn't it all odd, isn't it odd that here we are, after months of being locked down with pretty well, a pretty mild virus, pretty well ‘eh, which was hyped out of all proportion like a horror movie, you lived through a horror movie only it was daily and it was called news, and all that happened, all the newscasters and all the news organizations were all on board with it immediately. Once the button was pushed, you know, just before March, just about the beginning of March, when they really pushed it, hype, hype, terror, terror, terror, and we had the buildup to it beforehand showing you all the China stuff, my God, they're spraying the whole air/atmosphere with this stuff and there's spray across... hundreds of feet high, ‘eh. Well, if it's hundreds of feet high to kill it off, you know, what was all the 6 feet apart sort of idea? It had nothing to do with anything actually except training you into stupidity, and into nonsocial patterns of behavior.

So the preparation went on, and then suddenly, and then the same media that were lambasting people at the beginning saying, you see what's happening in China, how come you’re not talking about it? You know, have you seen what's happening there? Of course it was when a switch was turned, in one day, and they all went into action on the SAME DAY. Every news outlet, every TV show and so on apparently. I don't have TV, but I get a lot of little clips through the Internet and the links are sent to me and so on.

As I've said before, the media was in the doldrums for years because the Internet pretty well put them out of business, a lot of them. Then they turn from basic news to paid subscriptions, right. Even then it was, they were taking the same information off the net like everybody else. The day of the roving reporter was pretty well gone. They laid off their staff. I don't think the staff really were reporters now or were taught really proper journalistic procedures and techniques and so on. And everybody was compromised, you see. Here's your right-wing papers, and here's your left-wing news outlet, you know, this is how it's done.

As a child I used to know it. How come you've got always, every country has got a Star [newspapers], you know, which is the left. And that's your five-pointed star, the same red star of course they had in the Soviet Union on all their caps and uniforms, you see. But on the light side, you're on the light side, you had Sun, it was always the Sun [newspapers], and you had Mercury and things like that, and Couriers, you know. Everything was so black-and-white, wasn't it? And folk never really quite got it. But people would go into automatically and that would be their newspaper for life, whatever party they belong to.

Even the left-wing paper, and people couldn't figure it out, except, well, they did actually, my grandpa's age had an idea. They pretty well knew that the big moguls in media, you never trusted them because they were the richest characters really in the country a lot of them. You had British lords owned, oh, slews of newspapers, monopolies basically, hundreds of papers across the world. And sure enough, even Quigley talked about the same thing, Carol Quigley, that these media barons will get together when it came to world war time and have their meetings and decide how to terrify the public, he actually put that in his book, how to terrify the public, get them to really hate whatever enemy it's going to be before the enemy has even fired a shot. So that's what they do. It hasn't changed.

But when they went into, like, overdrive, suddenly, about, oh my god the coronavirus, eh, and lockdown, and oh, this is horrible, they're all going to die, they said ‘eh? And the only hope, and Fauci said at the very beginning eh, on behalf of himself and the WHO and the Pharma companies and vaccine companies, there's no hope here at all except for vaccine, you might have to be locked down until we get a vaccine. There was no talk, no whiff of ever getting natural immunity, as we've always got against every other virus that's ever existed you know. No, no trace of that.

A first in history, no trace of your own immune system at all. Even when the people had tested positive for having HAD it, right, they had antibodies in their bloodstream. Even for those they said, well, that might not last very long. Well, if that wouldn't last very long, their own antibodies, why would your vaccination, which is supposed to stimulate your body to create antibodies, why would that make better, of your own antibodies, than your own antibodies? [Alan laughing.] It wouldn't. It's meant to stimulate your body to create antibodies. So if you've already done it, what's wrong with that? Nothing makes sense. When nothing makes sense there's a big con going on in this world of conology.

Getting back to the World Economic Forum, where all the big moguls and big Pharma companies, everybody who's anybody running us all, and public/private enterprises, because every big corporation on the planet has got its hands out to every country they're involved with for handouts, massive gifts from the taxpayer. That's what it's all about. So they said yeah, the people are not listening to sustainability, we'll have to scare them pretty well, how can we force them to be postindustrial, post-consumerism, post free trade, post this, not just post free trade but post service economy?

Back in the 90s I talked about the service economy. It was discussed widely in Britain under the guise of the common market, which became the Economic Union of Europe ‘eh. Oh, it was just a little meeting place where people meet and discuss little trade differences and things like that; that's what they tried to sell the public on in Britain for years. Until the word free trade came in, you see. Free trade. In with the free trade came the gradual abolition of taxes for imports.

Now, all countries used to, in fact, even the States I think used to get pretty well all of its taxes, its main taxes for the federal government for the country from imports. It was import duties you called it. Most countries survive that way. Well, with the gradual introduction of free trade, as they liked to call it, you see, it's free for the big corporations who do the exporting into other countries. But guess what happens when you're not getting money from import duties, from taxes from imports? You've got to make up the money from the taxpayer, the usual slob at the bottom. That's exactly what's been happening ever since. That's the beauty of free trade. It lets the big corporations pay nothing, you see, as they flog their goods across the planet. Although, they actually moved it all to China to be THE manufacturer of the planet pretty well. Then they can export it to all of you without you paying, anybody paying import duties. That's what the whole fracas is about right now, China's starting to put more, limit more, slap more taxes on imports INTO China.

But it's called a service economy. Well, to have a service economy, because not only would we start to eliminate all import duties, you'll have to start to accept so many products from all the members, different members who will put quotas on things. If you make so much, if you're farmers, continue making butter and milk, we’re going to have to dump all of it because we've got to, we've agreed to buy a lot of it from Europe, and France especially. They put staggering amounts of intergenerational families of farmers out of business by these darn bureaucrats, honestly, you know. N-n. I mentioned Heartland, a great movie before with Anthony Hopkins in it. It's well worth watching, based on the fact, not just with one family but many of them. Once you've got bureaucrats running things, nightmare, nightmare time. M-hm.

However, that's what they did. Oh, you're a service economy, you've got to accept... So before you know it, almost all your goods are made by outside companies or countries. They bring it into your country tax-free. You're getting taxed more and more to make up for the fact that there's no import duties coming into the country's anymore. You're in a service economy, you buy this stuff in, you pass it around from the importers to the middleman, different layers of them, down to the store owner. That's your business, it's just passing products made outside your country around.

The debates, they had this in Britain years before you heard of the service economy in the West, the rest of the countries in the West. The top economists at the time even in the 1970s were saying, you know, if you go into this system of service economy, eventually you'll accumulate so much in overwhelming debt you go under. Because the country is losing layer upon layer upon layer of taxation, because you're not making stuff from scratch anymore. From raw ore, for instance, for steel mills, into the steel itself, and the billets, that are then sold off into factories that make things from the billets, that will then make it... These are all levels of taxation that the government would use. Well again, the government loses out there. So guess who gets taxed all the darn more? Well, the slob again at the bottom.

But even so eventually you stagnate. Eventually you have so much stuff coming in from abroad, that you're not making money anymore in any kind of manufacturing, and you have a glut of materials. Especially when you take it off into the places like China at such cheap labor, which the big boys, the same people that brought you free trade, based all their corporations, they moved them all there. In the service economy, I liken it to a dog, a dog that falls into a swimming pool. It paddles for as long as it can, that’s the service economy, until its exhausted and eventually drowns, it can't get out, you know. That's what it is. And that's what's happening now of course. That's exactly what's happening now.

So bingo, the WEF with all the top corporations there, that there's nobody that's anybody doesn't go to it, you see. And we are nobody's, so we can't go to it. But it affects all of us. The big corporations that shape our lives, you see, literally shape our lives, they will attend. They're all on board. They were all on board like 20 years ago at the WEF for this whole agenda that we’re now into now, this part of it. What are we going to do, the people won't stop, you know, they're not bringing down their numbers? It's amazing how at the WEF you would think it's all business. But no, every corporation there is into sustainability programs with the United Nations, hm. Every one of them.

They are all into the destruction of any kind of family unit. They're all for all kinds of new fad families, even though they won't last long. It doesn't matter. They don't want functioning families. They really don't. That's the hardest thing to get your mind around, why would the richest people on the planet and the representatives of the richest people on the planet, that's more like it actually, why would they all be on board with sustainability?... for the planet?... and the population?... austerity for a post to consumerist society?... where you’re just going to have basic...?

Well, the thing is, and I wondered about it too. I says, well you know, when they sold off the electric utilities, that every country had their own infrastructure, this is essential infrastructure, you must have your own energy supplies whether it's gas, electric or whatever, gasoline, you know, petrol in Europe, diesel, etc. You must have basic infrastructure. And hospitals. These are all part of infrastructure. Especially in Europe. The hospitals too. Essential things for our country to sustain itself through any, any possible catastrophe, or a war even.

I mean, Britain was starving from World War I right through the Great Depression and World War II, and through it and after it for a while. They learned, they certainly learned from World War I and they did the same thing in World War II, they didn't have enough food produce on for rationing. They were so dependent on imported stuff. Well, free trade again. And Britain, remember, is the home of free trade. Well, London is, the City of London where it was all designed by the makers and shapers of the world, the old Lord Alfred Milner group. So the whole idea of having your own infrastructure is essential for a functioning sovereign nation to survive and look after its people.

Bit by bit you watch it getting sold off, ‘eh? Especially since the free trade idea with Europe too, that later, eventually it became, let's sell off the water supply to foreign companies. They've got nothing in common with you. Who are you going to complain to when there's not enough water?... or you can't afford it? Your government will say, well we don't run that anymore, that's private businesses and you've got to wait, we've got nothing to do with them.

Or electric, electricity for instance. Or even gas. You've had ongoing wars for quite a few years now against Russia and the east, the old Soviet bloc countries, they were going to pipe gas all through Europe, plenty of gas, right, all the way even under the water in pipelines to Britain. Of course you had all the, you had big battles between the elite who rule Britain – a lot of them don't live in Britain but they rule it anyway – against the elite basically from Russia. Big battles over pipelines.

The Middle East is the same thing. Before they invaded [Alan chuckles.] and we invaded Iraq and so on, they had the maps out there. They came out eventually, the maps printed up in the US, of oil pipelines that were going to go through all the different countries and where they were going to go, and who would own them, hm. The Ukraine is still going on like that. Why do you think the US is in the Ukraine with the scandals going on there with the US politicians and, hhhch-hm, diplomats filling their pockets with all kinds of goodies and so on, and gets gas pipelines in it? These things go on all the time.

We're kind of oblivious, in our own little worlds. Because you're kept in an oblivious little world of make-believe and fantasy and stacks of awful entertainment. Generally it's awful, it's getting worse all the time. You’re not supposed to think any deeper. In fact, you've been trained that it's not your business what your betters, they used to call it, your betters are actually doing above you. What are you interested in that for? It's none of your business! Leave it to people who KNOW what they're doing, you see. That's what you're trained, really.

In fact, even... You know what works? This indoctrination really works when your own peer group, maybe even members of your own family say, what d'you care about that for anyway, you know? And you say, well I think it's important, isn't, it affects us all. They say, uh, don't fill your head with that kind of... And that's how, that shows you they’re gone. Their indoctrination and training, the conquering of their mind because it's a trained mind, is exactly how it was designed to be by the elite.

They had the right kind of so-called education, you see, indoctrination and it's been reinforced all through their lives through bits and bytes, I call it, from the media, that's how they get little bits and bytes of information. I think Jacques Ellul mentioned that people, most folk learn from then on, once they are into adulthood it's just updating them, and it's done by osmosis. It's not that they think deeply about anything. And it's not their fault by the way, it's not that they think deeply about the topics. They don't see why they should think any further than what they're told to believe by the media. Like Brzezinski said, the same thing, ‘eh.

I used to wonder as a child I says, the TV, after any debate about anything or any speech put out by a politician, you would always have two opposing sides of people who would 'specialize in politics' and they would give you their interpretation of what they just heard. They would sort of debate it. And you would say, well I never heard any of them say that, you know. It didn't matter. Because what it was designed to do, with the collusion of the two experts by the way, it took years and years before anybody admitted to any of this kind of stuff. The whole idea was to shape your opinion as a listener into, well that's reasonable, then they would bring you to the conclusion they wanted you to have, you see.

…you never had the better examples when it did come to the idea of the European Union and so-called free trade and all that kind of stuff. When folks didn't, still voted no, they said, we're going to keep bringing it back to the table every six months until you vote correctly. You see? So much for your democracy.

So the elite have had their way for an awful long time. In the education system they make sure you're given the right indoctrination. As I say, Bill Gates, and the man has his fingers in so many pies. It's just astonishing. He just loves us all so much, you know. He doesn't want us to be too many of us, like his daddy, you know, same thing. He's very concerned about that. But he also wants you to be healthy, if you manage to survive, you know, and live. He wants you to be healthy, but he'd rather you didn't, you were unable to breed. I mean, he'd like that, you know, what's wrong with the idea.

I mean, HG Wells said it, he worked for the same organization, Wells, long before him. Wells said it. He says, we used to think that we'd have to really kill them all off. He's talking about the useless people at the bottom, the defunct obsolete type. That's what HG Wells said in A Modern Utopia when he goes through this fictional travel by train and so on into different places in this advanced system. Wells said, we used to think would have to kill them all, but we decided it would be a bit more humane to just sterilize them, so that that generation would just die off, and of course they wouldn't reproduce. That's what he said.

Again, folks have a hard time disliking HG Wells. Wait, he wrote such wonderful stories, you know. He did. He entertained us. So we forgive awful things being planned for us because we like to be entertained at the same time. Eh? Is that logical? Well, you see, folk haven't been taught critical thinking, how to think, really analyze problems, before they're even problems. If you really could you might prevent a lot of the problems. But you're not taught that. And logic as well, you're not taught that at all. This simple, there's so many instances you're given of logic being abused, and they give you analogies and so on. But you had, you know, Rome you had burning while Nero fiddled, you know. In a way it's like saying the same thing, it can all go to hell if you're being entertained well all along the way. Like HG Wells, you know. N-n-n.

We're given happy-happy songs at times. It's not all sad. Well, nonsensical ones, mind you, but it doesn't matter, you know, they're catchy little ditties. Catchy ones. They had that movie it was called Oh What A Lovely War, it was a musical type and movie. It's a satirical display of how it's all used against the ordinary people even for warfare. But in the movie, they go through the wonderful little war songs that are churned out like by a machine almost, just like you had in 1984 where songs and pornography were just churned out by machines. Now of course we have computers that will automatically turn them out. But that's a coincidence.

In Oh What A Lovely War, they show you the basic simplest techniques of how you recruit young guys. In any country, it doesn't matter what country it is. You have the same little basic instincts to protect your nation and your people and all that, and you join up. And, you're all going to be home before Christmas, you know that ‘eh? And they have catchy little songs. Wiz-bang types of shells that would get fight above you and over you and towards you and on you, they had songs for everything, you see. Including being in the trenches and covered in mud. Happy little things like that, you know.

Because the last thing you want is for folk to say, for goodness sake, do you see what's happening at the front there? Our Tommie’s have been in the trenches for three years, and his feet are rotting off with trench foot... and he's living with all these bits and pieces of corpses from previous battles that get embedded in the mud and stuff. They didn't want you thinking about that. They want you to be thinking about, Does Your Chewing Gum Lose Its Flavor On The Bedpost Overnight, and things like that. Silly little ditties, you see. And they churn them out like crazy. Yeah. Yeah, they do. That type of song, I don't know if it was the actual ones, but that type of song, silly little things, you see.

It works awfully well really. Because young guys are young guys. No young guy joins up to die. It's impossible he's going to die! He is in the prime of his life, he's just, he can jump walls for goodness sake and he's happy and all that kind of thing, you know. He's not even going to get old, even if he's 60 years, he's not going to be, it just doesn't happen to folk like him. It doesn't happen. No.

So they join up in every country and they go off. And the basic propaganda, it's the first rule, is they must be given the most simplest propaganda. It's a rule. Everything that happens in life, it's been studied, and they have rules for it all. But it's got to be simple propaganda. If you could just use, those guys there are bad, that would be good enough. You don't go too far beyond that. Because if you go into any complexities, they might start to analyze it and say, for goodness sake, and try to pick it apart. So you don't want that. Make it simple and ridiculous at times, just simple, m-hm, and that's good enough. And they go off and they do whatever they're told to do. Because war is awfully good at culling the population, you see, for those who are in charge of the culling of the population and get the wars going, it's awfully profitable too.

You've got to understand, we're a herd of people and... [Alan chuckles.] I really do like the writings of characters in the past that touch on it, no matter if they're a bit, um, off-the-wall at times or again too, a lot of them are satirical. But Charles Forte said that, we're farmed, I think we're farmed. And we ARE farmed, like any animal. Which means, if you're farmed, there's farmers, hm? And what do farmers do? Well, they keep charge, they are in charge of the stock, that's you, you're part of the stock. They know everything about you. They know who your ma and your pa is. They know what your failings would be, oh, your ma and your pa is prone to this and that and the whole thing, and so is your grandpa and grandma, yada ya. That's how they work it out, you see. That's what you do with animal husbandry.

Every farmer, the farmers generally would know exactly, the exact lineages going way, way back in their generations of the cattle or their sheep and all the rest of it. Just like beekeepers. Beekeepers are famous for that. They go right into eugenics big time. That's why with the beehive, it's the first thing that was built for the Royal Society, this big elite club that decides what reality is for all the rest of us. They built a beehive, a glass one, to watch the perfect, perfect society, ‘eh. With the monarch there running it all at the top. Then the worker bee types at the bottom. But in between that you've got the drones that were kind of a priesthood, that literally selected what you were going to be by what they fed you. Hm? They thought that was wonderful.

It wasn't a novel idea. It goes all the way back even to ancient Egypt. They had the same thoughts then. What makes these peasants here on this part of the Nile a bit taller than the other peasants up the Nile a bit further on? Things like that. Studying, always studying what you own, and that includes the people.

So when you take Prince Philip, Prince Philip is very honest about eugenics in his talks at the different Sierra Club meetings they have, and different world meetings with the different groups that he's a kind of chairman of. Or, he's probably retired now and handed it over to Charlie boy, or one of the other ones. He's quite open about it. He says, well you know, sometimes when we have a problem, we have a problem when you bring, when you see too many deer growing up on the estate, and they start chewing the bark on trees and destroying the trees, and we have to do something about that, you see.

Sure enough, they go off on mass shoots and things. Or you can introduce, in other countries, wolves of course. They've done that in the States, I think in Yellowstone Park at one point. The problem is, the wolves multiply by killing all the deer off and everything else. They killed everything else off. Wolves will kill fox and every other competing animal and eat them as well. But no, the eugenicists have no problems talking about that. He says, yeah, you'll find that even the grass, the grass you see, the grass changes, and somebody will come in and eat particular types of grass, and right down to the dirt, you see. The next thing you know you've got a plague of insects growing then. So they go through this whole scenario of this domino effect, you see.

But what he was referring to, along the way, was, oh, there's too many people, it's the same problems. So these are the characters that send you off to war. And make sure that they profit. Because they're farmers. You got to profit off the animals. You think we're all in it together. Really? Really, hm? Do you really think that? No, they're not in it. They cause it and they run it all, but they make sure that they profit from you. Big time.

And these wars are very, very profitable. For every bit of cloth, for every, um, that's going to encase whatever animal it is, a human animal, that gets killed, I mean, that means a new recruit had to come up and get new equipment and new cloth and all the rest of it, and new belt buckles and gear and kit, you name it. That's very profitable. Awfully profitable. And there's no questions asked in war. Everybody will say, we've got to suffer and ration and just accept it, or we're all going to get killed. Well, in the process [Alan chuckles.] a lot of you are getting killed anyway, you see. But that doesn't matter.

Terror is the greatest thing to get folk to give up all their rights and freedoms. Hitler said it too. But he got it, he saw the same thing, because he studied the Communists that had taken over the Bolsheviks in Russia. You know, big terror, a reign of terror and the people can't think straight, it paralyzes them. It does. It paralyzes them. He said that, they can't think straight when they're terrorized. That's always been known by... Napoleon knew it too, mind you. That's the kind of thing that, that's the sort of technique that's used upon us. So terror is a great thing. You're all going to die, right. It gets you to go along. You're all going to die, of something you can't even see, oh my God! Oh my God 'eh! And they go along with that too. And away it goes. It works every time.

You're trained, why would you suspect you're being conned? Do you realize, you're trained to be naïve for your entire life? Hopefully. That's what they want. Because it's horrific to think what they're doing is something nefarious and nasty against you. Aren't they your own people? Right? Are they? So you believe it. You're all being taught to respect the people, it's like being in the military, you get a whole series of command. From NCOs all the way up too, private, NCOs all the way up. Then you get all the ribbons and things, and you get, they used to call it scrambled egg on your skip of your cap things like that. So you were taught to constantly respect people with more spaghetti or scrambled egg on the skip of their cap, and the beautiful, the GOLD lanyards and stuff like that. It was really amazing how you're trained, you see.

But today they give you all these people, professors with a whole string of letters behind them. That could even be to do with backscratching or something, you have no idea. It doesn't matter, as long as they've got all the letters there. And as long as they are introduced with the proper IMPORTANCE, you see, and you sit back and like, oh my God, this person says we're all going to die unless we just give all our rights immediately. Eh? N-n-n.

Back in the 90s I gave the talk about the high priests, that others have copied since, [Alan chuckles.] recently too. From the ancient days, and India was famous too and across the Middle East, but you don't think it. India was famous too, you could see the old observatories they had built there for studying the stars. Just like Latin America, some parts of there much later on. But India was way ahead of them. Of course you find the standing stones in Britain and the chevrons as well up in northern Scotland. They're all over the place to measure and basically guide or watch the stars, you know. It gave them their seasons and their time and everything else.

But again, good priests, good priests could, and they've used it in different movies, like fictional movies. Good priests could also know when the eclipses would happen. They would warn the people and say, you know, if you don't cough up more of your jewelry here and maybe a few of your dollars, extra, this month, the sun is going to, on this day the sun is just going to go black, and only we can stop it. So they would throw, they'd get all the treasuries thrown at them, you know, folk's treasures and stuff. And sure enough, along would come the eclipse, and the priest would stand up in his fine ropes and stuff and do mumbo-jumbo to dispel it and he'd say, appear, appear. And sure enough, the light would come, the light would come back on. That was awfully important and really, it impressed upon them, it really was a good show. It was a great show. Yep. That's how they used to do it.

Knowledge is power, remember. They really mean that, knowledge is definitely power. Of course it is. So we live through a system where they bring on the people who are supposed to have the knowledge, and the last thing you're going to believe is that there's a big con game going on here. WHY would anybody, because you wouldn't do this, you wouldn't do it. You might tell a little white lie, but it's impossible to tell a MASSIVE lie to shut down a country or nation's economy and way of living! ‘Eh? So it must be true, what they're telling you. Because you couldn't, you could never, you might do a little deceptive thing, but you would never stoop to that. That's the whole trick of it. Hitler mentioned that and Hitler copied it from others that had done it before him. [Alan chuckles.] Because Machiavelli's are always there in every country. And you can bring them in from other countries to advise leaders. That's what these characters do. They've got these ready-made Machiavelli characters, well steeped in the history of technology, how to con the public and use them.

So why would you think they're going to lie to you? Why would you think that ‘eh? There was a guy in Britain when I was really young, and he would come on. He was a comedian, but he was also introduced as a professor. He would come on there and he would use a kind of like-a, like-a impressive technique of persuasion, with the proper, with a like-a vocabulary and make up stuff of nonsense as he went along. Which would sound awfully convincing, the little bits and pieces you could make out amongst all the, of the high fluting terminology he was using. But he was very impressive. He went on for years with this act of his. Awfully good. He was showing you the techniques that were used to impress you [Alan chuckles.] and to make you think, I'm a silly little fool, and he's a really, this is the genius talking to you here. He was showing the techniques that were always used upon you. Quite amazing, ‘eh. Quite amazing. It really is.

And it's true enough, why would an ordinary... In a tribal situation, I've given this example before. In a small tribe, even a fair-sized tribe, say, like a Zulu nation at one time, children would feel safe because the rules are simple and known to everybody, what the rules of the tribe were, you see. So you would always know what to expect and what to see. Anything out of the ordinary and didn't fit in, it would scare you, you see. And children look to the adults for guidance to be safe, and what to touch, what not to touch, what will eat them, what won't eat them and things like that. That's what security is. But that can only work in a tribal situation. Once you give over your children to outside authorities, where there's political and social agendas, it's just different altogether.

Those who rule the world have always planned often a century, a century and a half, maybe two centuries ahead. Actually longer than that in fact. But I'm talking about like the immediate projects and stuff that they're working on at anyone time. Like a big business plan. They know exactly, as I've said before, when one radicalized generation starts to mellow out when they hit their 30s, their late 20s and into 30s and so on, they begin to mellow, they've already trained another radicalized group with further indoctrination to take over… that won't even get on with the previous lot, you see.

This was discussed by Beria who was in charge of the secret police, or the NKVD, in the Soviet Union at one time. He gave a talk to the Comintern, the young communists that went over to get their daily update on what was going on. He said, it used to take us a generation for big changes to happen, he was talking about 70 years. He said, it took a long time to prepare people and indoctrinate, indoctrinate over a span of 70 years, then you could make a big change, on any particular area, you see, or any one that you had chosen to change. But then he says, today, this is about the 1930s, he says, with the proper indoctrination in school, the scientific techniques in school, we can make big changes every four years in a child. Amazing, 'eh?

So that by the time they hit maybe 18 years old, they were four years ahead with indoctrination to other causes or whatever it was going to be, which they were going to get presented with in their lifetime. And by the time they were about 24, they were already indoctrinated to accept something that would happen when they were 24, and then something that would happen when they were 30. All the seeds were planted and trained, and really implanted into their minds, in like a sectioned system in a sense, that would come out at the right times down through their life. They would accept whatever was given them eventually, even 50 years down the road, if they lived that long, the next phase, you see. Put the plants in first and they will come to us, and they'll think they're reasoning through it, yeah, I guess that's okay, I don't mind that, and that's how it's done. And that was back then, you see.

But getting back to the whole idea, why would all those guys at the WEF, the World Economic Forum, why would they be on board with the whole sustainability agenda? …and the gradual depopulation, or even fast the population agenda? …and austerity measures that the United Nations had the big drive quite a few years ago about austerity? Everybody signed on to it, all the countries signed on to austerity programs, your wonderful leaders that you think you elect. And all sides too, left and right, you see. That's always what you find out, the left and right are always on board when it comes to the big agendas.

Like Jefferson said, when you see the same agenda continue through different changes in the house, meaning the Congress, the parties, he said, know you are under tyranny. We've been watching this for years, in that case we've always been under tyranny. Because with the big agendas of sustainability and all these UN programs that they sign onto, on behalf of the big clubs that they belong to, that really rule them and give them their marching orders, then really, it's all planned ahead, isn't it? And they all know it. They are all for depopulation.

You take this, you say, why would they be all for that when they've got these big corporations? Well, the thing is you see, since they all live today, all of them, on public-private partnerships, that Prince Charles was the guy they sent out to initially popularize it some years ago, public-private partnerships. Which means that they are given these massive grants, because they now are really the infrastructure. It's not owned by the taxpayers anymore, even though we never really owned it, you know, they pretended to own it, but it's looked after by these elite ones, you see, who really own it, who are private. We pay for the infrastructure, repairs, even for startups for new roads and things, and they simply take the profits once it's up and running. The same with your water, your gas and everything else. All energy. That's what technocracy was about too by the way, all energy systems and infrastructure in the nation. The technocrats by the way and their descendants are still running the show today.

But as I say, getting back to the whole idea, why would they be all for it? You'd think they...? No, they get enough, you see. The whole idea for the future is that the farmers themselves, you see, have the right to get more and more and more off of us as we gradually die off, become sterile and just die off basically, you see. That's the new system. Open system. You're definitely a slave.

The whole idea of civilization is, they like to say civilization began really when we stopped being hunter gatherers, ‘eh, and became, got slaves and made them into agriculturalists. So the slaves were the peasants and you lived off their backs basically. It's no coincidence that in certain religions even today [Alan chuckles.] they'll tell you when you go into them, Bloomberg mentioned something about it, that farmers were the lowest form of life. That's from a particular religion. So yeah, I mean, that was the basic beginnings of civilization, where you had a guaranteed food supply. As long as the weather was okay, and you didn't get too many pestilences and all that you had a good food supply. And it made a big, big difference, didn't it?

So the same characters are running the show today, the technocrats, and living off of us. And they make it, all they do is write it into law, you see. So they don't say, we're running the slaves openly now. They don't say that. They say, we've got different bureaucratic organizations to help sustain life on the planet, ‘eh, how much you're going to eat, how much you're going to get, or not eat or get or whatever. Have you noticed too, and along the same vein...

So they don't lose, before I get off that, they don't lose money. They're getting more and more all the time through different taxes and handouts. Not just from your nations. You see, one corporation can have a little office even in every different country, or it may be in a little manufacturing place in a bunch of countries. So they get handouts from them ALL. Each corporation does the same thing. Wonderful, isn't it? So the taxpayers fund them all, for all the money that they're losing basically. But as the population goes down and they can't either afford to buy the same products, or you're not going to even offer them to the people, the products to the people, you see. So they're not losing at all. They're all on board with the whole agenda.

They've all been told too that their families will come through for generations to come. I'm not kidding you about that. That's a fact, they're told this stuff. They don't even eat the food that you get by the way. Years ago I did the talks when it came out from papers in Germany, and Japan too, of these big domed places basically where they were growing the food for the wealthy elite, in domes. That was at the same time where this topic, they keep saying it's a conspiracy theory [Alan chuckles.] of geo-engineering. They were doing geo-engineering years ago. They've been teaching this stuff in universities. I've got their own books here from universities, ‘eh. For years back they were talking about it quite openly. But when you mention it, or you're a conspiracy theorist, oh, because the papers aren't talking about it very often. Well, again, facts don't matter.

But yeah, they don't want the stuff coming down on their food supply. They had it in the newspapers some years back, these big domes, really huge greenhouse type affairs, high-tech ones that, with fantastically climate-controlled systems inside them, that never got the rain from outside. The water was from deep wells which were ultra filtrated and so on, except for certain minerals which, if they lacked minerals, they would even add it to it. This all went into the soil that didn't come in contact with the soil down below it, there was like concrete in between. The people that went in treated it like a laboratory with the full gear on and masks and everything and gloves. No insects got into the place. It was just astonishing.

Then I found out during the course of a month or two before the media lost interest in it, that they had one set up in Germany too and other places as well, and the elite got their drawing rights from it. Did you know that? They're not going to eat the same poisons [Alan chuckles.] you're getting with the pesticides and so on. They know what it does. So if you really serve the system well as a politician or a higher-level bureaucrat, etc., you got your special drawing rights so you can, your family can get supplied with the proper stuff every month or whatever it took, of the real stuff. So you had less chances of getting cancers from the herbicides and pesticides and so on.

This is not conspiracy stuff. It's not at all. That's what they do to this present day. They also get different vaccinations from the public. That came out as I say, when Germany in the 2009 fracas came out with the so-called swine flu, when it was starting to paralyze people and things like that, [Alan chuckles.] their little unfortunate side effects, children, etc. they were giving them narcolepsy, you know, they couldn't, they just fell asleep all the time. The politicians in Germany, again I put that up again not too long ago I think. The politicians in Germany refused to take the vaccine which they had mandated that the Germans took, you know, the working-class people, the ordinary people. So they had special vaccines made for themselves.

Remember too, I think it was Bouchard in Canada, there was a bit of speculation there because I know they did the same thing with Canadians. There's difference sites you can get for the injections, you know. It was speculated, I don't know if I should even mention this. But it was speculated that, he came down with what was called a flesh-eating disease in his thigh I think it was. About that time, I know they were giving the shots, these specific shots to Canadians at the time. In a newspaper article that mentioned it, it did say that his daughter and his wife both had the same vaccination, but they only had a minor irritation at the site. You see. There's a lot goes on that the public have no clue about, you know, they really don't. Even the so-called necrotizing fasciitis, I mean, they had the shot for that supposedly. God knows what went with that, maybe it was just too active in certain people, it would actually be more active or virile you might say in certain people's bodies and cause terrible disasters. Who knows?

Everything is so secretive in this great system, this socialist system we live in. By socialist, this is what the elite picked, you see, it suits them better. Democracy, as they said at the Club of Rome, is too time-consuming, people think they've got rights and they object to all kinds of things. That's why in democracies you have this, these panel discussions about, well, they want to put a new highway down through your little village there and 20 of you have to give up your homes to put it through. Well, you get little debates about it, and you keep debating until you get a good payoff and then you can move. But otherwise, you wouldn't even get the payoff and they can actually do with it some kind of eminent domain or something or other where government can actually grab it, if they just keep haggling with them too long, for necessary infrastructure or whatever their going to call it at the time. I know George Bush when he was in, he did the same thing for the States and his pals grabbed land all over the place during that period.

But yeah, you get this whole thing going on as I say with a different set of rules for them. Again, in the 90s, in the 1990s I think it was President Manning, who was running in Canada for politics at the time. It came out during his time at that period, that Canada and Britain and the States, and goodness knows how many other countries, probably Australia and New Zealand too, I bet you, and maybe some of the European ones, they had all changed their laws for politicians and essential bureaucrats and so on, that they would all from then on to the present obviously, but they would get preferential specialized treatment in special military hospitals if they had any problems or diseases or whatever.

I thought to myself, what on earth is coming down the pike, you know, that they would go and do that? Lots of things have happened since which would give a good idea [Alan chuckles.] of what was actually happening. I know some of them still go today and they get the proper removal of nasty particulate matter from their blood streams intravenously by the advanced techniques which are used actually, some of them do that. Even some of the best writers in Canada and the States, on behalf of the elite, they do the biographies for them and so on, even they get privileges like that. One of them wrote about it themselves. They get detoxed that way, truly detoxed. Anyway, lots of things go on that's set up for the farmers and the farmers' helpers, you see. They get more perks and benefits than the rest of the general population.

Now, I want to say as well, that you take what happens from this obviously planned, planned, I mean, whole Covid idea, and I really think it's planned. The economy was shattered. The economy was completely shattered, before 2007/8 hit actually. The elite lost nothing. It's all been announced years since that all the big corporations and big private investors and so on all had their money invested in very safe havens, offshores in different countries before it all hit. They were already for it, you see. That's always the way. Then the public end up with all the incredible [Alan chuckles.] spaghetti mortgages that they had, just tossing them and tossing them and reselling them, like 10 times a day some of them, by the different banks. This feeding frenzy. All knowing where it was going to lead. But accumulating incredible wealth for themselves during the process.

Then it went bust and all the poor souls that had taken on these mortgages lost their homes. Thousands and thousands and thousands of people. Tent cities sprung up and the whole thing. We forget that, don't we? You saw these poor folks, these were the bottom rung working-class types who'd for the first time had got a chance for mortgage, and everything went belly up. Even today they're still sorting out who really would own some of these homes. Because banks were selling mortgages and flipping them, as I say, sometimes 10 times, one mortgage would get flipped 10 times before the closing time, between different banks. A feeding frenzy.

So hhhh, those at the top made a fortune off the crash, you see. Then our cash was all devalued by a good chunk since that crash. Because even Canada was given special drawing rights by the US Federal Reserve. All the big banks in the States were too. They got special drawing rights. Meaning, you're borrowing money at a high interest rate, and you're given so many years to pay it all back, with its compound interest. Well, that's what crashed the value of the dollar in Canada until now, you know, it's 2020, and for the last few years now it's lost probably 40% value in purchasing power, maybe more.

Now with this one, you see, because the WEF, again, they wanted another reset of the economy. That's what they mean by resetting it. Bingo, Covid comes along. You're all locked down. And they print up money, which is just nothing at all, or they just add the zeros on the end of a number in the computers. But you all have to pay it back, you know. But you couldn't pay it back, with a number and a bunch of zeros. But when this is done, this is a reset for the dollar. This is what a lot of it's about, is a resetting of the cash value again. Your currency, no matter what country you're in, will have a much, much lower volume in purchasing power. Then you're into austerity. And you've got to pay off the old one back by the way, all the supposed fake money that was drummed up, you know, by governments, has to be paid back to these... Hhhch, even though it's backed by nothing, and nothing is backed by anything, except conology, which is really the top science. If you really want the top degrees, take a degree in conology. You'll definitely benefit from it. Guaranteed. That's how things really are.

Just when everybody was, when the news was starting to come out and everybody was saying, wait a minute here, these numbers don't tally up, and millions aren't dying at all, etc. etc. And this lockdown, we can't get to work. And you had all these governors in the States and so on turning the police on to people that were breaking their home stay of locked down, oh my God, and barbers were getting locked up and fined for cutting somebody's hair. Then you see, immediately, bang, someone gets killed by the cops, and within a few days charged with murder, one of them, the other one may be pending; we'll have to wait and see. Immediately you've got this, again, this massive, massive coalition of radical left groups, who by the way, want the same thing as the elites want. Sustainability, right. End of all meat production for the common peasants. A vegan lifestyle. A post consumerist type society, where we'll all live in nature I suppose and maybe wear spiderweb clothing or something. But it's going to be wonderful. And again, a zero carbon, you know, economy, whatever's left of the economy. As they go out there and set fire to rubber ties and cars and everything on the street. Have you noticed that?

They broke the curfew immediately. Huh?! Across the world. This spontaneous but well-organized massive rioting, under, using a poor guy's death as an excuse for it. That was just the excuse folks because it was so well-planned, just waiting to get triggered, you see. And the elite let it happen. The same governors in the States, that's a good example, the States, that were sending cops out to arrest people and telling them, who broke their, you know, they're going to put them in prison and everything… they go out and join these folks shoulder to shoulder. No 6-foot distance, all that stuff that was mandated as though it was like some voodoo law that was given, oh, 6 feet apart, and you'd better be or.... ‘Eh? But the same governors, the same governors are out there marching for the cause, you see.

Again, they don't, so they broke all the taboos, you know… don't break the 6-foot rule. Lots of them didn't even bother wearing masks. And they're walking through the smoke of the burning things, but they're all for carbon reduction, ‘eh? They don't want you to have a bonfire or even a coal fire, but it's okay to burn all these cars in the streets, and HOUSES down as well. And everybody's looking at this and saying wait a minute here! It's so well organized. We know that. And we know it's not what they tell you it is. It's not...

The Communist Party has been used for years by those who rule the world, by the richest people on the planet. There's only one group at the top that runs all sides. They use whatever is handy and convenient to use at the time. And efficient to use at the time. They decided long ago, as I said, at the Club of Rome, another elitist group on behalf of the elite who run the planet, about sustainability, well, this democracy has to go. So they'll used to left wing and said, you see, with all these idealistic mantras that will be taught. Because the left wing loves mantras on little things, you know, thou shalt not's. And get the job done. And do away with this idea of rights and democracy.

You see, don't forget, Antifa doesn't believe in the rights of the individual. It's in their manual. I'll put some of this up tonight in fact if you want to download them. They don't believe in that. They believe in the collective society, but run by their own experts, you see, professionals. But no individualism, you know, it's not allowed. I'm sure they’ll allow a few multibillionaires to show a bit of individualism but that will be it. You had that even during the communist era in the Soviet Union.

But yeah, it's much more efficient to have the organization just obey. Do what you're told. They love, look at China, they love China. China is a collectivist society. It hasn't had a history of real, really unique individuals. They're collectivist. They DO see the chairman of the top as THE MAN, that is their leader, you see. When he's unhappy they're unhappy. If he voices objections against something, they'll all voice objections against it too. Immediately. It just ripples right through the society, whoof, you see. You're a good Chinese if you were serving food to foreigners, before the Covid thing, but once the US started to stir up against China, you're getting, the foreigners were getting turned away from the same restaurants because they weren't allowed in. Quite openly, they had signs in the window. They're not, they don't have problems with being racist or anything, you know. They have no guilt complexes, they're not taught that they were bad, you know, all these techniques that were used on the West. They’re quite proud to be who they are and they love their own people, that's good enough for them.

So yeah, it's efficient and they look at that, you see. Rulers and all those who serve the rulers, the sycophants, you know, the psychopathic sycophants that... The psychopath in a structured system, of militarization for instance, with their own rank, you know, it's like steps going up, and if there's one on every other step and all going up the side of the pyramid there. They see the one ahead of them and the ones ahead of them too, but they see the ones above them and they'll... they'll gloat and do everything for them, oh my God you're wonderful, and praise them and so on. But the people behind them, down below, one rung down from them, they scream and holler at them in fury. That's how it works in socialism. It really is. That's how it is, the psychopathic management of socialism. And there is no lack of them.

I mean, never put your faith in humanity as such. If you studied history, you'll lose it all. I mean, really good history, really true history, factual stuff, stuff that hasn't been scrubbed from the books. You start to lose it, don't put your faith in human beings.

There's one story I've got even here, just one of many, but I've seen this happen before too. You see, everybody in the world is tempted by things, you know. In a materialistic society where money is king, you know, and the more money... All you've had for years from the media when they stopped giving you news, until this Covid thing and suddenly everybody's watching the news again. Which they love. They were giving, all you were getting for new was celebrities, what the celebrities are all doing when they're locked up of course, would come out as well afterwards, and stories about, how do they cope in their big estates and things, ‘eh. But that's what they gave you for news for years. That's not news.

You ever wonder why they stopped… When Hollywood was created, they came in to build Hollywood and made a massive business, a very lucrative business. Before that actors and actresses were looked down upon to an extent on the stage, ‘eh. And the female actresses – the Me-Too's, they weren't really going back then – because they were often invited after stage into some posh persons house, and to sing for their supper as they would say, and maybe do something extra too that was required. That's how it really was. So they were looked down upon by society. They weren't paid that much at all. But when Hollywood came in and the managers came in, of making big money, they created this thing called 'stars'. Why do you think they picked the 'star'? Why do you think you see the star everywhere? The star on the caps of the Communists, eh? Why was the red star on the Communists and the white star on the fuselages of the planes of the Americans and on their tanks? Hm? Why do you think that is?

The saying, people follow the stars. They give you these people, they pump them up into being superhuman, until everybody sees them as gods. Oh my God, look at that, oh she's got all, she's got millions, millions of bucks for goodness sake and big mansions and... Materialism, materialism, materialism. And you follow the stars. Then they start giving opinions. They're told what opinions to give to the public. Oh, I think it's good that they shouldn't have children, there's too many of you, you know, and I think maybe abortion is fantastic and yut, dut, dut and dut. And before you know it, well, they say that... Then you follow the stars, their opinion becomes your opinion, you know. M-hm.

It doesn't occur to you, a lot of them, they're all getting paid for this by the way. Even for their opinions that they are given to them. But when they recruited [George] Clooney and [Angelia] Jolie it was into the CFR, the Council on Foreign Relations, amongst, with other ones too, again, here's the stars now. They said that in the CFR's own magazines at the time, Foreign Affairs, they said we're bringing stars in now because they will bring in the followers and they can give opinions out which the young followers will adopt, you see. Everything is managed. Your opinions are given to you.

They didn't give you some ugly creep, you know, they didn't give you the hunchback of Notre Dame in raggedy clothing with an opinion. It might have been better too, the guy, at least the hunchback was well educated, you could tell in the last movie they made. But here you've got these characters that play clowns and everything, you know, and folk you definitely wouldn't want to be giving you opinions. But the youngsters follow it all, ‘eh. Quite, such an easy trick, ‘eh. Stars. Stars, ‘eh. M-hm. I tell ya, you're going to be a star, yep. It's all rats backwards by the way, star. You know, star, oh my god, no.

But anyway, that's what you've got, systems of running opinions and minds of the public. And the public never really catch on. They think they're coming to their own conclusions about pretty well anything and everything. If they had the right indoctrination, like Jacques Ellul said, from birth, from a young, from early schooling, that prime indoctrination technique is given to the children, a casual observer would hardly notice anything unusual, there's a scientific technique to it. Ellul said, if they're not given that initial indoctrination, then subsequent and later indoctrination will not take with them, it won't work with them. That's how it's done. You supplement that with all the children's books that have all the latest PC things written into them, little stories about, well, do this and do that, you know, or whatever it happens to be, and in a smoke-free environment. People, you don't see them freezing in igloos anymore, no. That will come. And they’ll be happy in their igloo, right. But yeah, I mean, a carbon free society. Totally vegan.

I mean, Jolie came out, I think it was Jolie came out a few years ago when they were trying to push this vegan idea, of eating crickets. I think even, there were some people, everything is subsidized by the big corporations at the top, you know, that push these kind of things. They came out with, I think even Bill Gates probably had money in some of them. But it just doesn't take off, you know, we're not that sporting, we just don't play cricket. But here's the sandwiches for crickets and stuff – they got a lot of them in Africa now with the plague of locusts, ‘eh – and tell you how wonderful would be, and how people have eaten it for years, centuries ago and all that. Yep. Ehhh, it's quite amazing as I say. But as I say, they never had the hunchback of Notre Dame with his ragged clothing eating one of these things to sell it to ya, did they?

It's just too easy to manipulate the public and to indoctrinate them. And the techniques are so well understood. So well. As I say, the elite at the top and those who serve them, just below them, the big CEOs and so on, they don't go without. As they can cut back on supplying you with water, it's made up, the difference is made up by the taxpayer in big grants to them, public-private partnerships. As they cut back, as they're going to do eventually with electricity, all energy sources by the way. That's technocracy. Then again, they lose nothing. If they half the population they won't lose anything. Whoever is left will be paying the extra difference, you see. This is how it's all arranged amongst them at the top. So that's why they're not worried about cutting back, cutting back the population by this or that or the other. They're going to get made up by those who are still working and through their arrangements/agreements with the governments. The governments are all on board with the con game, and so are they. Everything is a con game. Of course it is. It's a con game.

As the whole curse of pure materialism became completely embedded in society, we've lost all our humanity, even at the bottom level. At one time the people could help each other out. They HAD to help each other out. The basic tribes in Africa helped each other out, in the tribes themselves. When times are tough, you share. In the UK during their horrible, hhhch, 20th century, horrible, from war, war, war and rationing and rationing all through it, pretty well up until about the 60s really, even into the 70s, the folk really maybe ate a little better in the 1970s. But up until then the rationing in Britain, once it went out the folk still, under wages and price freezes and things, they couldn't afford a lot of stuff.

It was quite common at one time for people to borrow from their neighbors, back and forth. When it was their turn, they'd borrow from you, and vice versa. That's how things were with people. Well, that's going by the wayside with the welfare system. Now you've got bureaucrats who you have to go and get the third degree from. Why do you need this? A means test, you know, why do you need this? How much? What makes you think you need that much? Blah blah blah blah blah. You see? At one time the people helped each other out, that's how it was. When you bring the social systems in run by governments and agencies and bureaucrats, it's another LEVEL of this bureaucracy, is tyrannical. That's what it is. And humanity goes out the window. They have nothing in common with you. They don't see you as people. You're a number. That's what your social insurance number is, is your SIN number, hm? The sin of being born as a peasant.

But meanwhile they've got all these radicals out there thinking, thinking they're fighting some kind of wonderful revolution, a communist lefty revolution to bring in another utopia. That's what they think. As they destroy the infrastructure and HELP the elite get... The lockdown was wearing off. The Covid thing was wearing off. And bingo, in come what they think are the radicals who think they're going to... [Alan chuckles.]   No, they're just slowing down any return to the economy, again. And the cost of repairing it all is going to be phenomenal. Again, massive debt. Who benefits? The ones that brought you the Covid are the ones that are going to benefit. It's a continuation, folks.

And the media, once this is over with, the rioting, the media will go into overdrive again, right back. The same characters who suddenly told the virus to stop spreading temporarily, where they can march side-by-side with the protesters, they'll be putting in the lockdown again. Oh, it's spread, my God, you can't cut that hair anymore, no, nope, 6 feet apart, yada, all that nonsensical stuff that I told you was made up by a schoolgirl for God's sake. Daddy worked for the military-industrial complex and he managed to make a dogma out of it, a computer analysis of how far apart you should be.   Have you walked behind somebody with a cigarette on a calm day? You see that smoke trailing from their breath sometimes 20 feet behind them. 6 feet is nonsensical. It makes no sense. It's nonsense. It's a made-up socially destructive number, that's its function, to stop you. We are social beings. The games that are getting played right now are astronomical. And the folk are becoming neurotic.

I'm going to put up [Alan chuckles.] a comedian's YouTube. Because often the best way to show you something is in comedy, in satire. He starts off with the, oh my God how many folk are going to die with it, this virus. Then he goes into all the folk who have died in car smashes and this, that, and all the different kind of ways of dying. It's just staggering. And of course you collapse at the end when, with the utter neurosis. You're not living in what's called a sane honest system. At all. Deception upon deception is phenomenal.

Why the Lockdown Should Last Longer (Comic) - youtube.com / 3 June 2020

Another clip is by Cuomo in New York, saying, and like a true politician, the same guy that helped to make sure that LOTS of the nursing homes HAD to accept folk who were coming in with Covid, and to kill off all the old folk. I mean, he did mandate it and threatened them all with the law if they didn't accept the cases into the old folks homes. The slimy politician that he is, like they all are, you know. And they know part of the game, you know, they're not stupid, they've been in a long time, and they get little bits and pieces from their superiors way above them of what's running the world.

But he starts to, he plays the media game. Well, you know, even though, he says, it's up to you, that you could have all disobeyed the law and all the rest of it, he says, and go out in the streets. I couldn't stop you, he says, it can only work with your compliance, he says, you know. And he is saying a LEGAL truth, you see. Legalism, legalism. You accept it. You comply with it. Then you blame them for it. That's really saying, you'll blame us for it, but you complied with it. He says, I had no real authority to make you all sit in your homes and stay there and yada, yada ya, or shut your businesses down. But of course he would turn the cops on you, regardless, yeah he did, you know, that way. They're all liars, you understand.

He's no different than any of the rest of them. Politics is a show today. It's a complete vaudeville act really. It is. In every country it's the same thing. It's rather odd too, don't you think it's rather odd that every country is on board with the same agenda, the exact same, EXACT SAME agenda? And they listen to Fauci more than anybody else? Folk can't go to churches to worship God, but they all tune in to listen to Fauci speak every day, ‘eh. Who elected Fauci?

I would say, I personally would say [Alan chuckles.] when you look into his history of what he's been involved with, he’s heavily, heavily, what would you say, he's heavily, hhhhh, IN with the big, big powers that make the big, big money, and the big, big agenda. I mean, Bill Gates has been open about depopulation and sterility and all the rest of it, you know. Sterilization, he's been very open about it, like a lifelong cause, like his dad before him. He's dishing out cash to Fauci's organization, and every other organization, and the WHO and so on. You can't get past this incredible chain, it's a like a chain, ‘eh, we have chain links that are all linked to each other, intricately. And nobody has elected any of these people but they're dictating to all of us, and the whole planet through the WHO. [Alan chuckles.]

WOW! That's quite the feat, isn't it? I tell ya. But as I say, yeah. And again, none of them have come out in any... What government has come out and says to all these rioters, you've got to stop this, you're putting everybody else at risk and in danger. It's gone out the window immediately. ‘Eh? I noticed even during it, the only thing that Fauci said is, you know, he says, we might start easing up in the fall for the lockdown thing. Even though everybody's ignoring him. We might start easing it up in the fall and children might start to go back to school, some of them, maybe.

Well, Bill Gates had that reinventing and reimagining education. Did you see it? What a power to be given into the hands of anybody, like a guy like Gates and his organization. So every thought for every child and every part of the curriculum, and their indoctrination into big agendas would come from Bill Gates. Give me your mind. Give me the children's minds. Oooooo. Yep. There ya go. You don't vote for any of them. And you're used and abused.

They've been quite open about their big agendas. Really. They really have. The Club of Rome definitely has been, hm. Democracy just is too cumbersome, folk have rights to complain. You're going to put a road through my village, no you're not, you know, we're going to debate this and the whole lot. No, they would like to be like China and just say, get out of that village, we're moving you off, and get the road done and that was it. You know, no debate, nothing. They really drool when they look at China. Tyrants, they drool at any kind of collectivist society that obeys their leader. They really do.

The West, you see, we've developed differently. No doubt about it. I think the northern societies, the northern peoples were more independent really. They're the cold climates. Even back in the old Viking days, it wasn't, you didn't have big heavy populations in any country. You really did have to think independently in small groups to survive and go hunting and all the rest of it. You had to do that kind of stuff. You couldn't just be settled in the same place all the time when a terrible winter, or even an Ice Age came in and out. They had small ice ages too. Even in Britain, they know they had quite a few ice ages with people who followed behind the thawing and who would move into Britain. And then Ice Age ages would come back, and they'd move back out. Then they'd come back in once it was gone again. This was the life.

It's vastly different from warmer climates where folks could have, look at the ancient cities in the Middle East where they had pretty well a warm belt around the equator for a long time. Even though the equator was moved at times too. [Alan chuckles.] It did, from different disturbances, the earth shifted its access a bit here and there. We know there was an equator that went through what was actually Siberia at one time.

So anyway, yeah, hhhch, we definitely are vastly different and more independent, or we used to be more independently minded than China. Definitely we did our own thing. I don't think we had the same obeyance, a groveling obeyance to leaders in the West either. But that's what the elite want and the only way they get it...

Now, look at the nonsense that's going on, ‘eh, as they grovel for the saviors to save them all, the bureaucrats and the medical profession to save them all. There was a guy I was reading through, just going through different articles there. You could look at all the, look at everything, it doesn't matter if you're hostile to different things or whatever, look at everything. If you label any group as being a complete totalitarian system, like China, like every individual in it, you're going to miss out on things. You can see the vast consensus folk will have but it's always the occasional individual here and there.

One of them was talking about, it struck me, after looking at all these people smashing windows and looting, and the guy says that this is like Kristallnacht... when the Nazis really, and there were other groups with them by the way that were really Communists as well. But at that time before they got rid of all the different groups, went through all the different commercialized areas and shops, and the Jewish areas, and smashed all the windows and stole stuff. But mainly smashing, that's why they called it Kristallnacht, you know. I thought, you know, that's exactly what you're looking at.

But the people in the States that are doing this are calling themselves anti-fascists, from the 1930s. Even using the same flag and everything else, Anti Fascist movement. As I say, I'll put up their manual tonight too for those that want to look through it. You should look through it and see what their manifesto is. They all have manifesto’s.

Antifa’s Handbook: A Primer On Violent Illiberalism - theamericanconservative.com / 8 Feb 2018

From Karl Marx to the present time, and the Communist Manifesto up to the present time. And they'll use every excuse to get it. And you would think, you would hope, you would have hoped that they would have learned something from the Soviet system where it was so dysfunctional with bureaucracies towards the end. I can remember when a documentary came out that they were so short of basic essentials, even gasoline and diesel and so on, but gasoline for the taxis in Moscow, they were only allowed, each taxi was only allowed to do so much mileage per week, that they'd jack up their cars and turn back the odometer and so on to keep, otherwise they said they would have come to a standstill, they talked to the different taxi men and so on. They had trains at one point that would leave on time, but there would be nothing in them, for freight trains, there was no freight eventually, it was so bad. The appearance of things had to keep going, you see, and that's what they were giving out to the West anyway.

I remember as well the talk by Gorbachev, the president at the time. He said to the Politburo, and I think it was Eric Margolis in fact who used to write for the Toronto Sun and different newspapers, the Sun group, he printed it as well. That Gorbachev said to the Politburo in a speech, he says, that shortly you'll hear that the communism, I'm paraphrasing it, is dead, but don't believe it. He says, we're moving into a new phase and spreading out.

I thought, well that makes more sense because you see, I could never fathom, I could never fathom for instance why the left in America all went along with the phony Cold War idea. Of course they all, the top ones all had investments in the same missile programs and so on and products that would never get used, but it was awfully lucrative. That was part of the reason, no doubt about it.

But at the same time, when you go back as far as Vietnam and even before that, with the McCarthy era, and also with the Reese Commission, Norman Dodd and that whole Reese Commission, where they had to, a commission was sent out to go around to all the foundations. The Rockefeller foundation, the Ford foundation, the Carnegie foundation, all these different foundations, that fund all the nongovernmental organizations, ARMIES of them, which fund the educational and indoctrination systems and so on. They went in and asked them, why are your programs really promoting communism? It was the CEO of the Ford foundation at the time who talked to Norman Dodd. He says, part of our purpose, PART of the purpose, right, was to eventually seamlessly join the Soviet system with the American system, education wise, cultural wise and everything. That's what it was. Through a generation or two, that's how it was to be.

It's all happened, folks. So when Gorbachev was talking about, don't believe it, they're moving out. They already, the US had stacks of communists in it before even World War II. So did Canada. In government. And in bureaucracies. Quite phenomenal. But the general public, it's not the system which they suspect it is at times. And it's awfully lucrative for those in-the-know, those Communists in-the-know. Very lucrative indeed.

As I say, for sustainability and a post consumerist society, as you… Because that's what you had, a consumer society, now you're going postconsumer. Except for the ones who smashed the windows and are robbing the stuff, they're the only ones consuming and still shopping. It's to go into austerity. That's always been the plan for a long, long, long time. For years. That was the plan from those at the top. How do you get the public to go from there to there, you see? Well, we could do war and terrify them. We could, oh, plagues are good, you know. And cutting back the food supply. Which you're going to definitely have. You're going to have famines coming into the West as well.

It's quite amazing, it was bad enough what happened with the Covid thing and that shutting down of meat plants and all that. It just falls in line with the meatless society, eh, the vegan system, eh, the WEF program. Isn't it astonishing when everything just falls along with, in the direction of their big plan? It just, they just, they've got a lot of luck, these people. They do. They've got the best clairvoyants on the planet working for them, they're called Futurists. They plan it all for them.

Then you have Antifa group actually threatening, there's articles out now, I was waiting for them, to see them, and out they came, [Alan chuckles.] while I was waiting for them. They're going to go after the food supplies now and actually, just like, because they've also got, Antifa has also got the Extinction Rebellion group with them, and other groups. But Extinction Rebellion that were going after the different farm animals in Australia and different countries and attacking the farms. And out comes, just the other day there, the Antifa groups, with all their threats. And they don't get stopped. Have you noticed that?, they don't get stopped. It's only townsfolk here and there stopping them. But everybody's been told to lay off them, obviously. Really. Huh? Don't you think that's odd in itself?

Don't you? Don't you say, where are the armies of police? Where are, where's the National Guard actually going forward and stopping and rounding these folk up that are burning and looting and destroying your homes? There’s an aid of Obama, one of his female aides came out and started screaming at these people who had come into her community and were burning the place down. She says, we live here! What are you doing?!

Woman gives powerful speech to looters on streets of NYC - youtube.com / 2 June 2020

And these were your real agitators that are well schooled and trained, in Antifa. This isn't some, they're trying to make it out that it's not organized. What absolute rubbish! [Alan chuckles.] Absolute nonsense. They've been training these characters, their leaders, for years and years and years. A lot of the followers are easily, like any cult group, it's easy to create them, it's not hard at all. It's that young people see things in black-and-white, no gray areas, you see. And you feed them some thing, oh, look at these terrible folk, the capitalists that are running the world, oh my God. And we are the good guys, we are the left-wing, you know, we want a communal society, and we'll pass bread around and sing Kumbaya, and all be equal and all that. Absolute lies. Just like... did you see the multi-billionaires that fled Russia at the end? [Alan laughing.] All equal, eh?

But facts don't matter to the youth, you see. It's easy to radicalize them, how unfair the world is. And you feel that when you're young, easy to get radicalized. The world is just unfair, it's rotten and unfair. You want a target for it all and they give you it, they supply you with the target. It's their fault, you see, their fault. And there's always a bit of truth in the lot of it, but it's always ALL their fault, you see. And the people who are training you, who are going to take you over, don't tell you what the real agenda is. They never tell you what the real agenda is. No, no.

The whole idea with communism was to make things so terrible for the ordinary people they'd rebel against the authorities. They had part of the manifestoes out to their trainees back in the early 1900s, and through the ongoing revolutions after 1917 in other parts of what became the Soviet bloc. Any religious organizations or any charitable organizations sending and bringing food into the peasantry, who were living in dire straits, right, or anything, even fuel to heat themselves, must be stopped. You must make it as miserable as possible. Because if you don't, if they start to help the poor, they're NOT going to rebel. They've got to be in desperate straits, so, you stop the food coming into them, you stop everything coming into them, until they'd do anything to try and stay alive. And join us. And off you go and you start slaughtering people. That's how, that's the technique. That never changes, folks. It never changes.

To start a cult is quite easy. You create a bubble of reality around them. You're now part of US. You found the creed that takes you in without question, no matter what you are. Have you noticed all the rainbow colors out there too? They've got everybody involved in it. This came out as I say back in the times when I saw that communist coming from Russia, who was from London, but who traveled all through the States and Canada every year back and forth from Moscow training the organizations. Openly, ‘eh? But yeah, he said we must bring them ALL in. And now they've got them all in. Everybody who feels out on the fringes, for whatever reason, even when society accepts them, it doesn't matter, bring them in. That adds to your numbers. They're still radical enough, because they're unhappy with themselves but turn it outwards.

So, you create a bubble around them. A cult does the same thing. They love up on the people, oh, welcome, ah, you're so welcome. Until they really feel... Then they start giving you the tenants you've got to believe in. Then you're radicalized and you're ready to go off and fight for them. And maybe even killed for them. That's how it's done. It's quite easy to do. Create a bubble of unreality, you know, inside it, and say that this IS the reality and outside there it's dangerous, these are the bad people, everywhere. It's so easy to do. This is well understood. It comes from manuals and so on. The great joke was always, they make you work for a better tomorrow. You never get it in your lifetime, it's always for a better tomorrow, for someone down the road. [Alan chuckles.] Yep.

That's how it was in the Soviet Union too. I feel so sorry for the folk in Russia, you know. Even today they'll say, well it might have worked a bit better if they didn't have, number one, the Cold War. Number two, if Moscow didn't have this imperialistic push, which it was definitely imperialistic, spreading outwards. And it had its own class system in Moscow, big time. Absolutely. They saw themselves as almost a different species in Moscow, the ones who ruled it all. They were not equal by any means, mentally or financially, that's how they saw it all.

But anyway, we're on a road now to the big one, as I say, as Antifa and the rest of them are going to make the moves towards the food supply, what's left of the food supply. It's going to be hard times for everybody, folks. I hope you understand what's happening. Because this is part of a revolution, and a revolution which is agreed upon with those at the top. It's to suit their purpose obviously. Otherwise, believe you me, they would have nipped this in the bud years ago before it even started now.

They had the power, they have the power now, so if it's been unopposed... And you've got even these con politicians and governors saying, oh we're joining them all as well… and just, Covid is out the window [Alan chuckles.] and they're walking, they're rubbing shoulders with them, using some poor guy that was killed, brutally murdered, as an excuse. And that's the standard thing, they're using him as an excuse. They're disgusting! Disgusting is what I can say for what they're actually doing, you know, for a cause the general public will have no idea what it really is, they never do, and they're never told this by the TV personalities what it's all about, what the goals truly are. It's not pleasant what's coming down.

But yeah, when you see literally the cops, the cops have no backup to stop anything… They're the bad guys right now, right? They're not gonna risk themselves. When their own leaders aren't saying, we'll back you up, that's it. That's the Milligram Experiment off the bat right there, y'know. That's it. If those in authority don't back them up, they're not going to do anything. The same with the National Guard. Or even if you brought the military in. If the president is going to keep quiet about it, no one's going to get used for this. This is obvious. But it's obvious that there's an agreement by those at the top, and all the peons of all sides are all playing their part, going along with it. It's obvious.

There are no sides, left and right, it's just a game, this game of democracy. The appearance of democracy, which stop folk having real rebellions, because you vote the other crew out every so many years. That's the con behind it. You never really had a real functioning system, especially in America, in the States I should say, for a long time. Quigley said it himself in Tragedy and Hope. In the 1960s he wrote the book, or publish the book, and he said, I think for at least 60 years the heads of all governments that are elected, all parties, are a member of this organization that was pretty secretive at the time, the CFR.

Then they came out with the Trilateral Commission, which was a special branch of technocrats after that, in Carter's era, to get things done. Again, they just place them in power. They don't get elected to anything, just put them here and put them there. They even put them from the European Central Bank remember into Italy and Greece when they were collapsing. Just push them in there, instead of being Prime Minister's, you do the job. Unelected. That's what a technocrat is.

Remember too before I get carried away, you could help me tick along by going to cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Remember that folks because if I forget it, no one does it. And I can keep going for a lot longer. Because I've got different websites to keep going and all the rest of it, so you can always throw a few bucks my way, maybe every week or two weeks or every month and help me tick along as well. As I say, it costs money. I could have done an awful lot of things over the years that would bring some cash in, but this was too important. This is important. This is not some kind of hobby here. I'm not getting financed by other sources, outside sources. Even some people in the movement are getting paid by outside nations. [Alan chuckles.] But no, I don't take money from any of these groups or countries, that have different agendas, or agendas on the go. You know, it's not hard to figure out what's what. It really isn't.

I'm a completely independent thinker. Even what I get I try to question as best I can if I've got time for everything. I do question as much things that come along down the pike, and think about them too. That's the only thing they have against us is individualism. I've mentioned it so many times. Keep your individualism. Don't join... You've got to think for yourself. If you start chanting slogans, someone's using you. If you start believing in some wonderful utopia down the road collectivist wise, you're getting used again. Because once you've got a collectivist system in, guess who's the first ones to get sterilized? But you might do it quite happily, because it's for the greater good, isn't it? It's just too... You've lost your head, you've lost your mind. You've lost your future. The greatest crime you've got, amongst so many great crimes, is to have your mind stolen from you before you get a chance to use it.

So as I say hopefully you can help me out. Go into my website @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. You'll see how you can help me out, buy the books and discs or you can donate. Help me tick along here. Because believe you me, you have no idea the cons out there, and I mean a lot of cons. [Alan chuckles.] I won't go into them, but there's things out there that you have no idea what really is going on. I've always said you're given your leaders. That isn't just a flippant remark.

What's coming down the pike is a horror show, it's a real HORROR show. That's going to destroy, it's already destroyed so much of society and people have lost their basic, even small businesses and shops and restaurants and so on, just destroyed. And now you've got what Pike said they'd do, and the ones that he trained too to take over from himself on the revolutionary movement, the world revolutionary movement. He said, we'll unleash the nihilists and the atheists on the people. That's what you're seeing. Nihilists and atheists. And what d'you think anarchy is? They say rage, and even the media mentions rage, rage. Look at the definition of rage. Uncontrolled anger. Uncontrolled is a dangerous anger. It's homicidal. People who have pretty bad mental illnesses blame everybody, everybody, for their whole life long, no matter how old they are, for their problems. Cults can create mental illness quite easily, quite easily.

Then they give you these little, these kind of memes that are pushed out there like, on-the-knee for this and on-the-knee for that and all the rest of it. And it's admitting guilt for something. Utter nonsense. Absolute rubbish. Nobody in my family had any slaves. In fact, folk in our ancestry often would BE the slaves, that would go off as white slaves, deported to different countries. They called them, where do you think redneck comes from? It used to be red shanks at one time, with the small breaches that didn't have the socks coming down from the knee down, and they would get burned as they stooped over for the plantations. They didn't last too long; they couldn't take it. Then the back of their neck would get red too, redneck. Burned by the sun. They were slaves.

Everybody looks for the blame game, you see. Then you're always given the target to hate. Always. Always given that target to hate. And you believe it. I can remember, just like the Bible says too, that they'd radicalize... Because they had done it before obviously, when you see that they talked about children being turned against their parents, and parents against each other, and the children, and so on. All these techniques have been done thousands of years ago even. I mean, it CAN be done, they knew how to do it, and it's always been understood. Quite easily.

It's like Peter too, Peter the monk that was, he radicalize the children for the First Crusade, for the Children's Crusade. Thousands of them went off trying to get to the Middle East, they were caught and turned into slavery and made, turned into prostitutes and so on, and a lot of them were slaughtered. Quite easy to get the youngsters and radicalize them. All for the good of God then, they thought. They would teach the Moslem, be nice to them, and make Christians of them. Of course Peter himself didn't go follow them, he just radicalized them and pointed the way, then ducked out of the way. It's like the Judas goat who leads the rest of the goats behind it to the slaughterhouse. It moves to the right or the left and the rest of them go into the building and get killed. Techniques, techniques, techniques.

So as I say, help me along, buy the books and discs and donate to me @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Now, I'll get into some of the articles that might bolster what I'm talking about, or maybe actually can help explain what's behind them.

Nothing out there is really as I say what it seems to be when you have big movements and a big world agenda. You don't hear the World Economic Forum pooh-poohing this and saying this is terrible, they're allowing these radicals to smash and grab their way through cities and threaten all the people and have them cowering in their homes, and even trying to invade folks homes and set them on fire and so on. Who at the top is speaking out to say stop this? Because it CAN be done. It's being allowed. It's because the leaders and the managers, because Antifa has got managers, folks, well-trained managers. It doesn't matter about the followers; they do what they're told. They won't even catch on a lot of them that the ones that they're following and are their commandants are basically in on the big con. But no. It could all be stopped very easily and very quickly. Absolutely. And it's not being. Why? Who benefits? What agenda benefits?

And you go right into what? Antifa wants the same thing. As I say, they've got the Extinction Rebellion bunch, the vegan society, they're cutting back on all farming of all kinds. And farming is bad. And they've got to bring back all forests across the planet, you see. And we’ll all live in harmony and happiness. And we can all sit and watch the bears eat the meat, and feel sorry for them, right, you know, feel sorry for them.

Anyway, this is the whole agenda here and it's because the elite want this to happen right now. I said before, they go on about Soros and the money he supplied to these NGOs. They're ALL doing it, folks. There are some foundations out there that literally fund dozens of other foundations. This is a massive organization that's always been here. Well, they've been here for about 150 years some of them. M-hm. Suits and ties, people, ‘eh, suits and ties... and limousines, and chauffeur driven limousines, etc. running them all. These aren't people from the bottom here, the working-class people.

But when you see people who are taught to have rage, to let it all loose on, because they're already told… You see, you're not a person anymore, you're not an American or whatever to these people who have been radicalized in their cults anymore. They've been so tampered with in their little bubble, they've become ultra-paranoid. They see you, and they do see you and they are told that you are the enemy. It doesn't matter what, if you're a little guy that washes the windows, you don't even have a window to wash anymore in the store, you know. You're an enemy and they see you that way and they will react in a terrible, terrible fashion towards you.

This is a movements, so even the ones you're seeing, once again, give them 10 years, 15 years, they'll be kind of mellow. They've already got another bunch trained up, to go further and further. That's how it's done. The universities, I've said for years, you've watch them create armies through the universities. And not just them, they've trained them from the age of five at junior school all the way through their education to be radicals. All on board with sustainability, and save the forest, and let's all go back to preindustrial standards of living. Whoa, preindustrial standards, it was a horrific experience for most folk. You didn't live that long, most of the working-class people. They want to bring you back to that?

I hope you're understanding all of this. This is really what's going on here. And they're not going to stop. And no one is trying to stop them, are they? No one. Nope. Again, it comes down to the occasional sheriff. There was one in that, was it Polk County in Florida, came out and there's a clip on the Internet. He said to them, because they were warning them, these groups were putting out their little agendas, we're coming to your town next and we're going to burn you all down and dut and dut.

The sheriff says look, we've got your message and he says, here's ours. He says, everybody in this town is well armed, we've all made sure that. He says, if you come here to put holes through our homes and set them on fire and try to get into our homes, he says, we'll blow you right back out again, we're armed to the teeth. So that's it. That's the only answer. Where folk literally have no backing from their own governments as to what to do here. And you see where it's going to go. Obviously. This is managed, folks. It's all managed. All managed.

The way they've use the racial thing, as always, ‘eh. Astonishing. Look at the countries in Europe and Britain. They're sinking. If islands could sink it would be sinking with the mass migration. It's population is waay way over what it's supposed to be capable of managing. Even Ireland is in the same boat. The same boat. It's got masses of, I think there's another 17,000 waiting to be brought into Ireland, during all this, ‘eh. And none of them are from countries that are at war with anybody. So they can’t be called refugees. And the folks are sinking in debt to the World Bank. And to the European Central Bank. And the IMF. This is all on purpose. All of it.

Sanity would not allow it. Sanity would do something and stop mass migration when you're sinking in an economy that's GONE, but you have to support every one of them. Then the people are shouting at you for being racist. When it's beyond generosity the amount of folk they've been bringing in, for years now. Who, a lot of them have done awfully well for themselves. But the race card is a great one to play every so often. It's much easier.

I think it was reading years ago, it was about, and it's really when every religion had come to an agreement in its teachings, that the easiest emotion to express is hate. It's the easiest one. It's easy to live in hate and anger than to love anybody. Much easier. And that's why it's these techniques that are used upon the people to get them to hate whatever it is, the target's going to be. It's no different than your governments using the militaries, and they always make you hate the targets, the gooks, you know, the ragheads for the Arabs. They always have names for them to dehumanize them. It's always the same.

It doesn't dawn on the folk now that they're all getting used to the same folk that run the military, [Alan chuckles.] who really own the military, at the top. They own the whole system, the infrastructure. The big agri-food businesses that really do own the farmland. They're not going to lose a darn thing. In fact, they'll take over any little farms you burned down, it's part of their agenda to amalgamate them all. That's what you're living through. It's disgusting but that's what's happening.

Well, let's look at some of these little articles here to see what's going on, ‘eh, and we can SCARE ourselves maybe. NO, we won't scare ourselves. Another one...

George Floyd death: US woman's plea to rioters goes viral nzherald.co.nz / 5 June 2020

A New York woman's impassioned plea to rioters has gone viral after it was shared online, with millions watching her tell rioters: "You are here profiting off of our pain."

(Alan: I won't bother then. I said, you know, it's just astonishing though. It's just...)

Desiree Barnes was captured on video speaking to protesters who had been vandalising her neighborhood in New York's East Village (A: These weren’t black people rioting, folks.) as protests against the killing of George Floyd turned into violent clashes across the city.

(A: It was all organized clashes. And look at all the bricks that came, eh? I mean, someone was telling me just today that, or yesterday, that a pallet of bricks turned up in his town in South Carolina. The people complained, because they knew the protesters arranged it, and it was obviously meant to be picked up by rioters and used. So the police did get the pallet moved, and it wasn't far from the police station. But the next morning it was back there again. Who's in all this? There's obviously a big organization, again, authorizing this at the top, allowing it to happen. That cameras apparently never pick them up. Come on, ‘eh! If you dropped a piece of paper in the street you'd be done for, for littering. But they just can’t see who drops off like tons of bricks? That's not a little car. It's not a bicyclist. [Alan chuckles.] So anyway, Desiree Barnes, she says that...)

Barnes, who once worked for Michelle Obama and as a press aide in the White House, castigated the group for the damage they were causing.

"These are *ing people who live in public housing and you just made a *ing melee," Barnes said.

"You took down bus routes. There are people who live in this neighbourhood who have to go back uptown to work, and you are here profiting off of our *ing pain."

(A: It's amazing how folk use that ing thing all the time, isn't it? How they sexualized all the language. That all came from Hollywood too, as a part of an agenda, d'you know that.)

(A: Anyway, if you want to ing do something, make sure you're registered to vote, don't start another god damn fire. This black woman went off on people trashing her New York City neighborhood.)

Barnes also pleaded the group to be "*ing responsible" and "have a *ing plan", adding that they should all register to vote and vent their frustrations at the ballot box.

The folk don't believe in voting, I think that's also on the manifesto for the Antifa group. It's revolution. They want a communistic system. Which is the same thing that the ones who rule the world want, the big CEOs at the top. They want a socialistic system that just obeys, just like China. That's what they want. Can't you figure that out? Can't you see that?

Antifa: The Anti-Fascist Handbook - libcom.org / 2017

The ones that rule your countries could have you off to war tomorrow if they wanted to. They can get things mobilized so fast, millions of troops, the whole thing, the whole military, gone, fftt. If they want to. And you think they're just letting this all happened because they can't decide what to do? Do you really believe that? Iiiiii. N-n-n. That's one anyway I'm doing. As I say, you see the characters on the video as she is giving all the ing, ing lecture to.

WEF Bills Davos 2021 As The 'Great Reset'

ibtimes.com / 3 June 2020

(A: There ya go, that’s the great reset, you see, for the cash system. It was failing anyway since 2007/8. We never recovered. We're still paying off the borrowed money from that, supposedly.)

The World Economic Forum announced Wednesday that its next summit in Davos would go ahead, and billed it as the "Great Reset" to remodel the global economy following the COVID-19 pandemic.

The January 2021 annual gathering of world leaders and business chiefs will take place as planned in the Swiss ski resort, (A: [Alan chuckles.]) with the focus on fixing long-standing problems exposed by the new coronavirus.

While bigwigs gather in the snowy Alps, in a new move

(A: …movie… [Alan chuckles.] in a new movie, it’s all a movie isn’t it, life is a movie now, isn’t it, it’s so managed and produced.)

While bigwigs gather in the snowy Alps, in a new move, the 51st WEF summit will also link virtually to 400 cities around the world for input from a younger generation.

Oh, it's so beautiful, isn't it, you can see where this all going. The reason I said that was because I remember, and I think it was one of the last big globalist meetings that they had, the big ones where they had the protesters. Where the left-wing at that time was protesting globalism and the corporations going off to third world countries to make bigger gains and cheap labor costs and so on with the free-trade systems and so on and the GATT treaty. At one of them they actually showed you that clip of it, where maybe it was the CBC or some TV station, some group, showed you them all outside chanting and screaming at the meeting. I can't remember if it was one in British Columbia or the one in Toronto, or one in the States, because they had them all over the place and one after the other, quickly, may be two a year sometimes.

One of the people in the big meeting, who also was up at the WEF as well, said, you know, who are all these people down there? Oh, they're protesting the globalization efforts, etc. and this system of globalization and centralized global government and so on. He says, I'll go down and talk to them. He went down to talk to them, and he asked them what they were screaming and yelling about. Some of them were all, they were giving chants. People, when you're given a chant, like a slogan, as I say, you're getting used. So they're chanting slogans and that and he says, tell me, why are you here? And he had some of them in front of him and they couldn't articulate what was really on their mind, what was really bothering them about it all. Except giving him the occasional chant, you know, of a slogan. They couldn't.

So what he did, he invited some of them up. He said, we'll bring some of them up and he says, we'll find out who the leaders are from the different organizations, bring them on board. They brought them on board, folks, they gave them salaries. These are your paid opposition for the so-called economic side of things movement. That was the end of the big movements against them. Now you've got the same bunch rioting in the streets on behalf of them to bring the agenda in even further. [Alan laughing.] If you haven't figured that out. Quite something. So anyway, getting back to this article, they're going to have their 2021 annual gathering at their ski resort.

The WEF said the political, economic and social disruptions caused by the crisis (A: …you know, the crisis, it will go down in history as the crisis…) had exposed the inadequacies of health, financial and energy systems, leaving leaders at a crossroads.

(A: No mention of the fact that they just lied to the public about it. Gave them terror, they terrorized the public, this is the whole agenda, terrorize them until they can't think straight, and they give up all their rights and stay at home, and they destroyed the economy, ‘eh. And folk, it's not over yet, folks. As I say, once all the rioting and stuff is calmed down to an extent, they'll have you locked down again. Oh, it came back in the fall, oh my goodness, 6 feet apart, wear a mask, you know. [Alan chuckles.] So…)

"The COVID-19 crisis has shown us that our old systems are not fit any more for the 21st century," said WEF executive chairman Klaus Schwab.

"It has laid bare the fundamental lack of social cohesion," he told a virtual event hosted from the WEF headquarters in Geneva.

"Now is the historical moment, the time, not only to fight the virus but to shape the system for the post-corona era.

(A: There's a statement right there, ‘eh? Historical moment, ‘eh, in time. They always use these little covert terms, you know, this is the time, this is the hour of the time, is another thing they use too. Bill Cooper used to use that just to show you, he used it in his opening every night, The Hour of the Time he called it. Because that was part of, that's what they used to open up a revolution. They always say the same little things, ‘eh?)

"In short, we need a great reset.

"We must not miss this unique window of opportunity."

United Nations Secretary-General Antonio Guterres said it was a chance to build more equal, inclusive and resilient economies and societies that could stand up to pandemics, climate change and other global challenges.

(A: That's what the rioters are on board for too, climate change, you know, we've got to stop this climate change, and carbon and all the rest of it too, and yada, yada. Yep. So they're all on board. Including the rioters who have the same agenda. That's just coincidence though.)

"The Great Reset is a welcome recognition that this human tragedy must be a wake-up call (A: ...not to be conned ever again. I added that last bit myself. Because if you haven't woken up by now to the conology of it all, it's, you never will.). It is imperative that we re-imagine (A: Again that’s the Bill Gates term, reimagining education. It’s the beginning. These are the buzzwords they’re all using amongst themselves, for the in crowd…), rebuild (A: …rebuild, there’s your builders…), redesign, reinvigorate and rebalance our world," he said. (A: So, it's unbalanced right now.)

International Monetary Fund chief Kristalina Georgieva said that 170 countries would finish 2020 with a smaller economy than they started it with (A: She's a genius, that's why she's put in that place, ‘eh?), with greater debt (A: Oh, she's definitely a genius!), deficit and unemployment. (A: My God, I wish I had her insight, I never thought of that myself.)

She said it was time "to turn a page, to have that history be about the great reset, not about the great reversal.

"The best memorial we can build for those who lost their lives to the pandemic is that greener, smarter, fairer world."

(A: …the whole agenda, ‘eh? You all died under a con for a green economy, ‘eh, and a fairer world, because you’re going to get into rationing shortly, folks. Yep.)

Meanwhile Prince Charles, the heir to the British throne, said rebuilding economic prosperity had to be balanced against the natural world it depended upon. (A: Yeah.)

(A: Remember, he's the offspring of his daddy who was a complete eugenicists. He believed that there's too many of YOU, you know. It hasn't changed with Charlie boy. Nope.)

Meanwhile Prince Charles, the heir to the British throne, said rebuilding economic prosperity had to be balanced against the natural world it depended upon.

(A: Think about that, ‘eh.)

"The threats posed by this dreadful pandemic came upon us suddenly," said the Prince of Wales, who himself caught the new coronavirus.

(A: I don’t think it would live on him very long.)

"The threat of climate change has been more gradual, but its devastating reality for many people and their livelihoods around the world, and its ever-greater potential to disrupt, surpasses even that of COVID-19.

We live in a whole, under an array of conologies. Con, con, con, con, con for the same agenda. It's always YOU, too many of YOU. It's all YOUR fault. You see? Climate change is your fault. Right. I don't know, I guess you can go back and charge the little, um, the little amoebas millions of years ago. Because they had the occasional, occasional ice ages, you know, then warming phases in between, all down through time on this planet. Before there was even humans here. So maybe we can go, and you can curse those little amoebas that became human beings one day. Because it had to be their fault, that they had, you know, eruptions back then and hot periods where volcanoes even erupted and all that kind of stuff. All because of, the precursors of man were there. Obviously, it was their fault. It's all our fault, isn't it? Ah, there ya are.

But of course the whole idea of eugenics is too many people, they want to reduce the population, and you must blame the public for the ills of the world. Even though it's got nothing to do with them, generally. They've trained a whole generation that the world is coming to an end. Isn't that amazing? Again, train them for their purpose. When they hit 18 or whatever you've already trained them and brainwash them up until then, and they'll believe it completely. They're radicalized and they're almost homicidal with it all. They are ready actually, if they were given the nod, they will become homicidal. They're terrified that the world is going to end.

They really, they've really done it, they've created a mental illness intentionally, all done by the people at the WEF and the Club of Rome in order to depopulate and sterilize the planet. And you get a lot of folk volunteering for it shortly. You've had some in the past, youngsters volunteering for sterilization. So it says, again, the slogan at the end of this…

"As we move from rescue to recovery … "Think big and act now."

There you go. I wonder how much they paid for that. Mind you, the taxpayer paid for that slogan to get made by some corporation, some PR company.

Prince Charles announces ‘Great Reset Programme’ - standard.co.uk / 3 June 2020

Yep, there ya go, another one. And then…

Post-virus green reset urged for divided, ailing economies

news.trust.org / 3 June 2020

(A: Just one article after another.)

In the face of protests, inequality and rising climate threats, a coronavirus recovery needs to spur a "greener, smarter, fairer" world

Strange how they're all saying the same stuff, ‘eh. There you go. It's just coincidence that one. And…

Brace Yourself For 'The Great Reset'

forbes.com / 31 May 2020

(A: Another one. Oh, wow. That's from Forbes...from 2017 where they float the idea, to get the idea across, it imprints in our brains basically, getting us prepared in a sense subconsciously for the coming times of what's being implemented. So in 2017 Forbes had an article called the global reset. So here you go, three years later and they're all global resetting once again. It's all happened before, really, all the chaos in the last few years, was all designed to happen and be implemented. It says…)

We are coming to a period I call "the Great Reset."

(A: Well, come on, mate, you're only one of many [Alan chuckles.] who have been told to say it, there you go. …government debt and blah blah blah blah blah, and...)

…global debt … The other is the even larger bubble of government promises.

(A: That part's true.)

These promises add up to hundreds of trillions of dollars. That's vastly larger than global GDP.

These are real problems we must face. It will mean forging a new social contract.

(A: Where is the old social contract? That went out long ago.)

It will also require changes to taxes and the economy.

(A: There ya go, into austerity, folks! N-n-n. [Alan chuckles.] I tell ya.)

What I mean by government promises are pensions and healthcare benefits.

(A: …'eh? They're talking about cutting back on everything. Again, the healthcare here, you name it, duh-duh, duh-duh, duh-duh, dut.)

Death, death, death. For you. Not for them.

NYPD’s Terrorism Official Says Unnamed Groups Planned Protest Violence in Advance

nbcnewyork.com / 1 June 2020

(A: I like specialists, they always make you realize how dumb you are, ‘eh? Hhhhh, that's why they get paid all that big money. You've got an official, a terrorism official who says it was planned, the violence is planned in advance. Hm.)

New York's top terrorism official says there's evidence that members of anarchist groups from outside the city intentionally planned to incite violence at protests calling for justice in the death of George Floyd.

I wish they'd stop using that excuse, because this was planned before this happened. They use it as an excuse. Poor guy. And by the way, another thing, this is part of it too. I don't look upon it as just some bad person that killed somebody. This has been happening for years in different, regardless of the races. Society, it's been breaking down. Life has become cheap across the board, as you become more materialistic. There's no doubt about it.

You live on a diet of slaughter and mayhem in fiction and movies and so on, very graphic. That's been a regular diet, until life becomes cheap. You abort your children. You euthanize the elderly. I mean, these are talks I gave in the 90s, all come to life. It’s all happening now. Then you're told to suddenly feel guilty about something, or abhorred about something, when one person gets killed. It doesn't really wash anymore. I'm sorry, I hate to say it, it doesn't wash.

Also too, since Gulf War One they've been incredibly militarizing the police. The countless articles I read years ago when guys were coming back from the different wars, you know, and getting put into police forces. Well, they're already trained in a completely different scenario of how you detain people or hold people, or catch people even, corral people, or treat them. And it doesn't wash the same way. And that's where most of them were getting promised jobs.

Now, even during the Obama administration, I shouldn't say even, I mean, he was part of the establishment guys. He kept the wars going. Donald Rumsfeld from the Bush era, the PNAC group that got the wars going, and who drew up the list, he said, he congratulated Obama for carrying on the same agendas across Syria and the Middle East that the previous administration had done. He congratulated him for carrying it on and even expanded them into more wars. This peace-loving left-winger, hm?! [Alan chuckles.] If you fall for that nonsense! Aaaah, folk never learn, ‘eh? They never learn.

against each other. Politics is a wrestling match, the giant haystack versus the mountain man, that's what it is. Which side are you going to take, you see? It's just a con to keep you going along and voting all the time. Once you vote, remember, then they do awful things to you with laws and so on, and you can't disagree because it's a legal contract. You voted them in, which gives them the right to do what they want to do with you. Voting gives them the right, you understand that? They never do what you expect them to do. Because they're liars. That's what they do to get into politics, they lie. So it says…

Deputy Commissioner for Intelligence and Counterterrorism John Miller said there is a high level of confidence within the NYPD that these unnamed groups had organized scouts, medics, and supply routes of rocks, bottles and accelerants (A: That's for fire and so on.) for breakaway groups to commit vandalism and violence. There are strong indicators they planned for violence in advance using at times encrypted communications, he said.

One out of every seven arrests, of 686 so far since May 28, has been people from out of state, according to Miller. He said those arrested came from Massachusettes, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Iowa, Nevada, Virginia, Maryland, Texas and St. Paul, Minnesota.

(A: They know a lot more than that. They also know that a lot of them are descendants from old Bolsheviks. And that's a fact. That is a fact, that their grandparents were Bolsheviks, and their parents too some of them. They know that. They're well aware of it too. And they know who they all are. But they won't arrest them because it's part of the game. This goes on about how they're all prepared to commit the property damage and so on. And they were directing people who were following them, that it should be done selectively and only in wealthier areas or high-end stores run by corporate entities. But they went into the black areas too and started burning their places down as well, like that woman said. To try to get them agitated and go and join them you've got to get as many people as despondent as possible so they're ready to fight anybody, and you tell them who to fight and they'll join you. So you make it miserable for them, that's the idea. In this article they go into some of the things they observed, which is standard stuff they trained them with. About how they use agitators and have...)

… a complex network of bicycle scouts to move ahead of demonstrators in different directions of where police were and where police were not for purposes of being able to direct groups from the larger group to places where they could commit acts of vandalism …

(A: In other words, they're showing you some of the techniques, the standard stuff that's been on the go for many, many years. It's interesting too…)

Mayor Bill de Blasio said Sunday morning that the members of the anarchist movement plan together online and that "they have explicit rules, and we're going to make all this information available today and in the days ahead."

(A: His [Alan chuckles.] daughter was out and joined some of them too apparently. He was ticked off that the police actually admitted some of her record, what she was up to. Aaah, these are the folk who are going to guide you, ‘eh, that you vote for.)

Police officers 'take a knee' in front of angry crowd of 2,000 Black Lives Matter protestors at the gates of Number 10 (A: In Britain, right, London.)

dailymail.co.uk / 3 June 2020

(A: So that's your Black Lives Matter group. You understand, if you're acting like hooligans, why would you want to be taken seriously and have the respect by creating mayhem and chaos and throwing things around and attacking people? That doesn't get respect. It's the opposite. I wonder if they really think about it. But of course from the cult at the bottom, how they're trained at the very bottom, they literally think that by terrifying people, they want to see people cowering so that they will be afraid of them. They get off on it, you know. It's nothing to do with getting respect. That's the only kind of way they, you see that's how they see respect, folk being terrified of them. So it's very basic and very primitive at the bottom level.)

At least 15,000 Black Lives Matter protesters including actor John Boyega and singer Liam Payne gathered in London on Wednesday, ignoring social distancing guidelines, as a show of anger against the death of Mr Floyd in the US.

(A: Well, it’s true, they ordered the viruses to stay on hold, y’know. And they did, they went into hibernation there, just as stasis, until it was all done.)

Now, why would that have effect in Britain? Hm? Why? Why would that affect people in Britain?

Where have been the big movements across Britain when some people there killed soldiers a few years back there and cut one of their heads off? Remember that? Nope. There was a very sad but civilized response there. But this is different altogether. This is a complete riot, overthrow, managed overthrow. Not of the system. The top and Boris, these guys will still be running it on behalf of their overlords. It's the overthrow of the people down below at the bottom, to make them feel despondent. It's much psychological warfare against them than anything, until they feel despondent, depressed and worthless. That's what it's about. That's part of the real reset.

This next article is John Whitehead's commentary.

This Is Not a Revolution. It's a Blueprint for Locking Down the Nation

globalresearch.ca / 2 June 2020

(A: Of course it is.)

"When it gets down to having to use violence, then you are playing the system's game. The establishment will irritate you—pull your beard, flick your face—to make you fight. Because once they've got you violent, then they know how to handle you."—John Lennon

Brace yourselves.

There is something being concocted in the dens of power, far beyond the public eye, and it doesn't bode well for the future of this country.

Anytime you have an entire nation so mesmerized by political theater and public spectacle that they are oblivious to all else, you'd better beware.

Anytime you have a government that operates in the shadows, speaks in a language of force, and rules by fiat, you'd better beware.

And anytime you have a government so far removed from its people as to ensure that they are never seen, heard or heeded by those elected to represent them, you'd better beware.

What is unfolding before us is not a revolution.

The looting, the burning, the rioting, the violence: this is an anti-revolution.

The protesters are playing right into the government’s hands, because the powers-that-be want this.

(A: He's saying the same thing. But this is the revolution, remember what I said before it all started a few weeks ago, that what was happening with the Covid thing was the elites’ next part of the revolution for themselves, it's their revolution. You see? These guys are playing right into it, along with it. They're doing exactly what the elite already wanted to happen. Right.)

The Justice Department is deploying federal prison riot teams to various cities. More than half of the nation’s governors are calling on the National Guard to quell civil unrest. Growing numbers of cities, having just barely emerged from a coronavirus lockdown, are once again being locked down, this time in response to the growing upheaval.

This is how it begins.

It’s that dystopian 2030 Pentagon training video all over again,

(A: I'll put that up tonight too by the way and the link is there for it as well. Because the Pentagon training video talks about this. It's almost like that movie Escape from New York, a dystopic future and so on. But they actually show that in the military, in the Pentagon too, of how they'll deal with these societies as it all happens. And how they manage uprisings, and even create them in fact for certain purposes. But we've got a shorter version here. The longer version is, only part one of a whole series of them for the people who get into the Pentagon.)

which anticipates the need for the government to institute martial law (use armed forces to solve domestic political and social problems) in order to navigate a world bedeviled by “criminal networks,” “substandard infrastructure,” “religious and ethnic tensions,” “impoverishment, slums,” “open landfills, over-burdened sewers,” a “growing mass of unemployed,” and an urban landscape in which the prosperous economic elite must be protected from the impoverishment of the have nots.

We’re way ahead of schedule.

The architects of the police state have us exactly where they want us: under their stamping boot, gasping for breath, desperate for freedom, grappling for some semblance of a future that does not resemble the totalitarian prison being erected around us.

This way lies certain tyranny.

For just one fleeting moment, “we the people” seemed united in our outrage over this latest killing of an unarmed man by a cop hyped up on his own authority and the power of his uniform.

That unity didn’t last.

Indeed, it didn’t take long—no surprise there—for us to quickly become divided again, polarized by the misguided fury and senseless violence of mobs taking to the streets, reeking of madness and mayhem.

But the fact is, it was all planned that way. Any trigger would have set it off. They're planned it to go, you see. Absolutely, no doubt about it. But yeah, this whole thing is the elites' revolution. This is their revolution. It's their ongoing revolution, part who knows what, 10, 20, 30, 40, 50... Because they planned for the whole Covid thing, a total resetting of the economy, a total lockdown, a whole new restructuring of society, and behavior, ‘eh, completely reorganizing social behavior. They want it permanently too.

This is their revolution, all right. And again, grabbing and plundering the economy for themselves. With every reset they win and everybody else loses. Look at the trillions we're throwing around the corporations and Wall Street. Trillions. GIFTS! Whoof! Every country did the same thing. [Alan chuckles.] So your currency, when it gets back to any kind of normality, it's not normal at all, you'll get maybe one quarter of what it was worth before. It had already crashed after the 2007/8 reset as they called it. N-n-n.

CIA Backed Color Revolutions

globalresearch.ca / 1 Oct 2017

The Dishonest Career of the Remarkable Srda Popovic

Many readers likely never heard the name of the remarkable Serbia-born political operator named Srda Popovic. Yet he and his organization, CANVAS, have played a lead role in most every CIA-backed Color Revolution since he led the toppling of Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic in 2000, at least fifty according to last count. Now he has turned his sights on Hungary and Hungary's popular and defiant Prime Minister Victor Orban.

On September 8, the professional regime-change specialist Srda Popovic came to Budapest and joined with the anti-Orban opposition groups in front of the Hungarian Parliament. It's clear that Popovic was not in town to promote his Hungarian book on nonviolent regime change but rather to give aid to the anti-Orban parties before Hungarian elections in spring of 2018.

Because of the manufactured aura of "hip doer-of-good-deeds" surrounding the personality of Srda Popovic, it's useful to look closely at who sponsored his remarkable career since he founded a tiny Belgrade student opposition NGO called Otpor! in 1998 with its now famous clenched fist logo.

(A: I think it's one of them. There's one there and there's one in Hungary as well, where they were leading these radicals, again, all dressed in black, these guys, that would be trained in the schools over there. And who were coming over to all the globalist meetings. They were the ones who caused the riots at the anti-globalist meetings. You would see them, well clad, wearing combat boots, and throwing, again, Molotov cocktails at cop cars and things. These are peaceful demonstrations for the people, but these characters were getting sent in to do this.)

The career of Srda Popovic from 2000 until today suggest a remarkably dishonest manipulator in the service of foreign intelligence agencies and governments, despite his vehement claims otherwise.

(A: Then it goes through some of this history here.)

… organization Otpor! which means "Resistance!" in Serbian.

(A: ...and so on, and how to get student groups organized. It meant too, they had to dish out big cash. Meaning, he's well sponsored, 'eh, well-paid for it. And allowed to do it, you understand. Which tells you, anything that is allowed to do it is generally run by the CIA itself. The CIA are the masters of overthrowing governments across the whole planet. Including inside America [Alan chuckles.] in the US.)

(A: If these characters, who really, if they really thought, the ones that you're seeing rioting, and the Antifa, if they really think, the followers anyway, really think that they're making the big, big difference for some wonderful tomorrow… and they think the CIA has just missed them or something?... it hasn't noticed them? Do they really think that? No, because the leaders I'm sure are paid by them. I really mean that. The CIA has nothing to do with what you think it is. Nobody makes a move without the CIA's permission at the top. They work with the World Bank. They work with all the other organizations. This article says…)

The US Agency for International Development (USAID), widely known as a CIA front, had channeled the Serb Otpor! Millions of dollars in funds through commercial contractors and through the US-government-financed NGOs: the National Endowment for Democracy (NED), the National Democratic Institute, and the International Republican Institute. The Open Society Institute of George Soros was also funneling money into Popovic ’s Otpor! for the toppling of Milosevic.

What I said before, do you really think that George Soros can do what he's doing across the world, there's even articles in the paper with him saying, oh, the head of China must be removed, and the head of this must be removed. Who is this guy? No one elects this guy. But he's saying things with impunity and getting lots of press about it. And he's got the financing to try and overthrow governments across the world. Do you really think that he wouldn't be dealt with by some independent intelligence agency? How come he's not been dealt with by some independent intelligence agency?

Because as I’ve said before, you'll find that the very top of all the superpowers are one big intelligence agency. The CIA, MI6, the Mossad, etc. and some of the Russians, and Japanese and so on, ONE big intelligence agency, folks. That's why George Soros gets away with it, because he's, he works like an asset of them, like many others do. Most of them in the intelligence agencies are assets and they wouldn't dare rock the boat, believe you me, or be allowed to.

So this article here goes into the different organizations, as I say, they get money to their sources, to the NGOs and to the radicals and so on to create the color revolutions, of democracy building foundations, that’s what they like to call it, democracy.

The NED with all its affiliates was a project of Ronald Reagan CIA head, Bill Casey, in the early 1980’s to conceal CIA regime change operations around the world behind the front of a “private” democracy NGO, the NED. Allen Weinstein, cofounder of the NED admitted to the Washington Post, “A lot of what we do today was done covertly 25 years ago by the CIA.”

(A: It still is though.)

According to Michael Dobbs, who was foreign investigative reporter for the Washington Post during the Milosevic ouster, the IRI paid for Popovic and some two-dozen other Otpor! leaders to attend a training seminar on nonviolent resistance at the Hilton Hotel in Budapest in October,1999. There Popovic and the other handpicked Serbian students received training in such matters as how to organize a strike and how to communicate with symbols, such as the clenched fist that became their logo. They learned how to overcome fear and how to undermine the authority of a dictatorial regime.

(A: You can use it against any regime. This article continues with the different characters involved in this with one particular scenario in Serbia and so on.)

…Gene Sharp, founder of the controversial Albert Einstein Institution, teaching techniques to the US government to conceal its coup d'états under the guise of nonviolence.

(A: All these wonderful names and things, you never realize they're all part of it too.)

Sharp was described by Helvey as "the Clausewitz of the nonviolence movement," a reference to the renowned Prussian military strategist.

Popovic and his Otpor! NGO were recipients of a major share of over $41 million US government money for their "democracy-building" campaign in Serbia. Dobbs describes the US involvement:

(A: It's very lucrative to the leaders who are picked. The followers never realize their leaders are getting so well-funded and well-paid for overthrowing governments and so on. Because the followers never ever figure out much of anything, really. They really don't. They're in the dark. They're given another different reality. But it shows you the techniques that are used. It's a good article by William Engdahl, I think it is. And it gives you…)

Globalization of revolutions

After his success in getting rid of Milosevic for his US Government sponsors, Popovic created a new organization called CANVAS. He decided to globalize his business model that worked so well in Belgrade in 2000, to make himself an international "go to" person for making US State Department fake democracy regime change. CANVAS or the Centre for Applied Nonviolent Action and Strategies calls itself a non-profit, non-governmental, "educational institution focused on the use of nonviolent conflict." According to Wikipedia, CANVAS seeks to "educate pro-democracy activists around the world in what it regards as the universal principles for success in nonviolent struggle."

Popovic and CANVAS claim that at least 50% of their obviously substantial funding for this philanthropic work comes from Popovic ’s Otpor ally, Slobodan Đinovic, co-chair of CANVAS and listed as CEO of something called Orion Telecom in Belgrade.

You understand, there's massive money. You've got millions and millions of dollars in to all these things. Do you think all this stuff is happening, for the leaders of this, across the whole US riot that's going on at the moment, a well-managed riot, never mind about its affiliations in London and elsewhere across the world, do you realize the millions of dollars it's costing to make all this happen? And if these leaders didn't get their paychecks they'd just go home? The followers just, no, they do what they're told. They never figure it out. The beauty of covert intelligence is that the followers must never really, really know what the object really is. It's never what they think it is. That's how the world is really run. But everything now has got to be a display on television. Everything is televised, the revolution is televised, ‘eh. It's got to be a big display on everything to make an impression that you remember, that sticks in your head, hm.

Remember the “Fake” 2009 H1N1 Swine Flu Pandemic: Manipulating the Data to Justify a Worldwide Public Health Emergency

globalresearch.ca / 25 Aug 2009

(A: This is Global Research that puts this one up. But the same kind of thing that happened then, and how the media went into high gear, without a shred of evidence about what it was about. Fake news, fake statistics. That was then, 2009.)

“Swine flu could strike up to 40 percent of Americans over the next two years and as many as several hundred thousand could die if a vaccine campaign and other measures aren’t successful.” (Official Statement of Obama Administration, Associated Press, 24 July 2009).

(A: The same techniques you see over and over and over.)

But the pandemic never happened.

There was no pandemic affecting 2 billion people…

Millions of doses of swine flu vaccine had been ordered by national governments from Big Pharma. Millions of vaccine doses were subsequently destroyed: a financial bonanza for Big Pharma, an expenditure crisis for national governments.

(A: Quite something.)

There was no investigation into who was behind this multibillion fraud.

The Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe (PACE), a human rights watchdog, is publicly investigating the WHO's motives in declaring a pandemic. Indeed, the chairman of its influential health committee, epidemiologist Wolfgang Wodarg, has declared that the "false pandemic" is "one of the greatest medicine scandals of the century." (Forbes, February 10, 2010)

And they repeat it again with this one, only it's worse, they shut down the whole society of the planet. It had never been done in warfare before. And the healthy were all quarantined, 'eh. They never stop trying. They never do.

'Kettling' of peaceful protesters after curfew shows aggressive shift by New York police

chicagotribune.com / 5 June 2020

(A: That's the technique they used years ago in London too, remember. They kettle them, they just… You don't realize if you're in a big crowd you can't see very far in front or behind or left or right, you know. How you can actually get very carefully moved by certain movements by police. It's like Roman centurions and how they use the different techniques with their shields to gradually nudge the enemy in one direction or the other. It's the same kind of technique actually. This article goes on about…)

Hundreds of demonstrators stood there for 10 minutes, chanting, arms raised, until their leaders decided to turn the group around and leave the area.

What they had not seen was that riot police had flooded the plaza behind them, engaging in a law enforcement tactic called kettling, which involves encircling protesters so that they have no way to exit from a park, city block or other public space, and then charging them and making arrests.

It goes on about that too, how it's done, etc. It's a great experiment. Again, every time they do this kind of stuff every few years, they have a big experiment and see how, more studies on the crowds that followed them and the age groups and very, very intricate experiments actually breaking down how the 14-year-olds will react, the 15-year-olds will react, the 16-year-olds… Literally it's quite amazing the data they collect, like you wouldn't believe, and it all goes to MIT and big psychological organizations and universities to study. Another one’s called…

Alliance for Global Justice (AFGJ)

influencewatch.org

The Alliance for Global Justice (AFGJ, sometimes styled AfGJ) is an organizing group that serves as a fiscal sponsor to numerous left-wing initiatives, among them Refuse Fascism, United Students Against Sweatshops, and Stop Mass Incarceration.

(A: What do you mean? They've just locked down the whole planet here for Covid. That's incarceration. They didn't protest that did they?)

The group arose from the Nicaragua Network, an organization which supported the Communist-aligned Sandinista regime in Nicaragua. The group describes itself as “anti-capitalist,” opposed to the principles of liberal democracy and individual rights, and favoring a “multi-polar” world order with powerful rivals to American international primacy.

(A: It’s about the same actually as the Antifa movement. They have the same kind of organization, again they’re more into a multipolar world order as they call it. They don’t want individualism, individual rights. They want, like, you’re all equal. [Alan chuckles.] Equal slaves I suppose. [Alan chuckles.]

The group provides “fiscal sponsorship” to groups advocating numerous foreign and domestic far-left and extreme-left causes, including eliminating the State of Israel, supporting convicted violent leftist extremists, and advancing various labor union efforts. Fiscal sponsorship is a legal practice by which a parent 501(c)(3) organization can handle tax-deductible contributions on behalf of a project in alignment with its mission.

So, I guess they all have their tax write offs I suppose. It gives you some of the history on it too, what they've done in the past. Nothing is ever what you think it is, really, you know. Some of these organizations, as I say, just like the foundations, are literally dispensing the cash, you know, tremendous networks of cash dispensing. [Alan chuckles.]

America masterminded ‘color revolutions’ around the world. Now the very same techniques are being used at home

rt.com / 2 June 2020

Nebojsa Malic is a Serbian-American journalist, blogger and translator, who wrote a regular column for Antiwar.com from 2000 to 2015, and is now senior writer at RT.

"Pro-European protesters" (note white supremacist symbols on shield) clash with Ukranian riot police in Kiev, January 19, 2014.

How Americans view the events of the past week greatly depends on their political persuasion, media preferences (A: I guess what channels they do watch.) and to large extent even ethnic identity. This is hardly the first death of an African-American man at the hands of police, nor the first time a peaceful protest turned violent and resulted in a city on fire.

(A: It was planned before it started. Once it, it wouldn't matter who got killed or whatever, once someone got killed, they knew exactly what to do, folks. It wasn't just pallets of bricks that they immediately organize to get in there. They had Molotov cocktails stashed in gardens and behind houses on the way into some of these so-called protests.)

It is, however, the first Black Lives Matter protest that spread all over – and quickly gained an openly political, partisan dimension.

That ought to be baffling. The four officers involved in George Floyd’s death were fired almost immediately, rather than suspended with pay pending investigation. One of them was charged with murder just days later. Conservatives and liberals alike agreed that Floyd was murdered and that the men responsible should face justice. Yet the riots started, and spread, anyway.

(A: There's your telling point, you see.)

“This was a made for television moment,” (A: And wasn’t it ever.) CNN's Don Lemon said after tear gas was fired at protesters as President Trump addressed the nation from the Rose Garden. “Open your eyes, America. Open your eyes. We are teetering on a dictatorship. This is chaos.”

(A: And they give the link to it. The Daily Beast I think also did the same thing.)

Could the clues to why this is happening lie beyond America’s borders? In December 2010, a Tunisian street vendor set himself on fire and died after tax police confiscated his unlicensed stall. Within days, there were demonstrations. Within a month, the country’s president of 23 years was overthrown and exiled. Similar rebellions broke out in Libya, Egypt, Syria… It was dubbed the “Arab Spring.”

In November 2013, thousands of demonstrators gathered on Independence Square (Maidan Nezalezhnosti) in Kiev, Ukraine, protesting the government’s decision to reject a trade deal with the European Union. Attempts by police to clear them out resulted in clashes with armed protesters, and eventually a firefight – where snipers allegedly loyal to the government opened fire on the crowd. Finally, in January 2014, violent protesters stormed the government offices and declared themselves in charge.

The 2014 “Euromaidan” – fully endorsed by the US – was a far more violent iteration of the “Orange Revolution” from ten years earlier, when sympathizers of an opposition coalition refused to accept the results of an election and forced the government to hold another one.

“US campaign behind the turmoil in Kiev,” proclaimed a Guardian headline from November 26, 2004. “The operation – engineering democracy through the ballot box and civil disobedience – is now so slick that the methods have matured into a template for winning other people's elections,” the article beneath it said, adding it was “first used in Europe in Belgrade in 2000.”

(A: It shows you the techniques and how, that nothing ever is what it seems to be, what it's portrayed to be, by the public. Especially at the time when it happens. They go on about the recent one in Bolivia was successful recently, Venezuela which was not successful…)

… Bolivia (successfully), Venezuela (not) and Hong Kong, where “pro-democracy” protests against an extradition bill lasted long after it was withdrawn.

Interestingly, the Hong Kong protests were embraced by the progressive firebrands such as Congresswoman Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez and her 'Squad,' calling for something similar at home, against Trump.

“Marginalized” communities have “no choice but to riot,” Ocasio-Cortez said on a radio program in July 2019, adding that she meant “communities of poverty” in the US, as well as around the world. That was long before Covid-19 killed more than 100,000 Americans and lockdowns imposed to stop it cost 40 million Americans their jobs. Long before George Floyd.

So it shows you how it's all really, it's just building up and building up and planned and planned and planned and you get geared towards it. You wait for the spark and away it goes, you see. It's all organized in advance. That's how things really are. Again, the tremendous social upheavals were planned in advance as well. What do you want? How do you make it happen? Guide it's to its conclusion and there you go. Another article says…

Antifa arrests coming, concerns over riots heading to suburbia, government source says

foxnews.com / 2 June 2020

(A: As I've said before, the actual Antifa groups and so on are sending messages to different towns they're coming for them, we're coming for you, hm. N-n-n.)

Agitators behind the rioting that has paralyzed the country over the past week want to move into more suburban areas, a government intelligence source has told Fox News.

Much of the worry stems from the notion that many in well-armed, suburban, and rural neighborhoods won't hesitate to exercise their Second Amendment rights and elevated anxieties could lead to heavy confrontation.

"Antifa knows this," said the source, who spoke on the condition of anonymity. "Local and state authorities have to get a grip on this because if it moves to the suburbs, more people will die."

(A: And they will. The folk in rural areas aren't going to stand for folk burning them out of their homes. And why should they? Why should they? Whaaaat? This is the message, you see, and Antifa knows this too, they're waiting, they're saying, my goodness, Trump has done nothing so far as far as I can see, and as I say, the police are kind of standing down to an extent because they get no backup at all, no backing from their bosses. If your bosses won’t back you, they won't work. If the military or even the National Guard aren't going to get the backing of the leadership at the top, they won't push anybody around. Even to save themselves. It won't happen. That's human nature. If you've got organizations which work for the system, and for you, you have to give them the backing. And you do it by their leaders telling them, we’re backing you 100%. Then they can do their job, if it gets really, really bad. This article goes on to different places that had…)

…"testbed" locations – including Madison, Wis., which was ransacked Saturday night, along with quiet pockets of Charleston, S.C.

HOW RIOT GROUPS COME TOGETHER TO LOOT, DESTROY

(A: As I say, there's nothing really that they don't know about the organizations. You know, even... You know, I can remember an RCMP guy came out and put a book out on his life inside the Hells Angels group out West in Canada. He got ticked off with his bosses, who he kept telling them when these big drug pickups were going to happen. His bosses, he couldn't fathom out why, they wouldn't let them go ahead and pounce on them and grab them all at the same time with the drugs and that. This happened a few times. So he wrote the book. Then he was reprimanded for writing the book. I don't know what happened to him after that. He hadn't figured out that it was meant to happen. It was all meant that they, the Hells Angels are the distributors for the drugs. Drugs are a big income for black budgets or covert operations and for Canada's versions of the CIA too, you know, you've got CSIS in Canada and other organizations too that are quieter but very heavily involved in things in the world. But the cop didn't know. That's how things really are.)

(A: That's how the operations too with these Antifa groups, etc, operate. The leaders know what they are about. They don't even have to know the whole picture either, but they know enough to know that they're not there for the reasons they're told, or their followers are told. This is to bring society, which is going to be into the sustainable world. Oh, we have to have a new world system of governmental system, along socialist principles, almost verging on communism, which will create more efficiency for food distribution and funneling of money and basic goods and basic necessities, etc. to the peoples. This is on behalf of them, those guys at the WEF, the World Economic Forum. That's what it's about folks. The rioters are just doing their bit. They don't know it themselves, except for their bosses who get well-paid to do it all. This article goes on about…)

LOOTERS RUN WILD IN BRONX AS VIDEO SHOWS NYPD OFFICER BEING BEATEN: 'FORDHAM IS ON FIRE'

It's quite something, isn't it, the times in which we live. But again previous generations went through similar things. But everything now is televised, isn't it? It's all, it's got to be a good production for TV, and that's how it's done. I'll put this up as well…

Antifa's Handbook: A Primer On Violent Illiberalism

theamericanconservative.com / 8 Feb 2018

Keith Ellison, the deputy director of the Democratic National Committee and congressman from Minnesota, recently ignited a Twitter firestorm when he tweeted out a picture of Antifa: The Anti-Fascist Handbook, a book, he declared, that would “strike fear in the heart of” Donald Trump. Upon reading Antifa, it’s easy to see why the tweet generated so much controversy.

Since its release last August, the handbook, by Dartmouth lecturer Mark Bray, (A: Who's got his own story by the way. [Alan chuckles.] Who himself really is kind of communistic you might say.) has garnered attention as one of the few windows available into the mind of the newly prominent Antifa movement. Bray makes clear from the beginning that the book isn’t an attempt at a neutral rehashing of facts, but rather “is an unabashedly partisan call to arms” for the purpose of equipping activists “with the history and theory necessary to defeat the resurgent Far Right.” He articulates clearly the revolutionary ideology of the far left and defends using violence in its service, from street brawls to kidnappings to assassinations. For those who do not desire to see the world reborn in the flames of global anti-capitalist revolution, the popularity of The Anti-Fascist Handbook should prove alarming.

It is quite fascinating, isn't it? I think about the whole thing about the US, and they go on and on about, oh, they can't use the troops, etc. Well, what are you supposed to do if your, if the commander-in-chief doesn't even put the National Guard out to even save themselves? And they're hoping on a wing and a prayer that the police are going to be able to manage it. Even though the police aren't getting the psychological authoritative backing of their leaders. They'll be hung out to dry. They all know that, every cop knows they'll be hung out to dry, in the present climate, if they were to go ahead and even stop a murder happening in a riot and a rioter gets killed in the process, they know what's going to happen. So they won't do their job. Obviously.

But what gets me is, again, the left will say, oh you can't let the, it's true you're not supposed to use the troops inside America. Even though they brought them in, that's true, from abroad when New Orleans got flooded that time, when them booms busted and so on. They brought some of them in then. But it reminded me of Pierre Trudeau, Justin Trudeau's daddy. Now, Pierre Trudeau at one time in the 1950s, I think 1952, was the head of the Young Communist League for Canada. He took the delegation over to Russia, the Comintern, and he was head of the delegation at that time.

But when Pierre was put in, and don't forget the whole idea of communism was to get in under any and every possible way you can. If you're a liberal, you're a capitalists, you were a communist, whatever it took to get in, just say you'd join the party, whatever party it was, get in, then do what you have to do. That's what they said. They even discuss this with his pal at one time on a CBC program. His pal did more talking than he did. That was Rene Levesque and he said, oh yeah, we were young then, you know, when they were communists and Marxists, and we did what we have to do.

When Pierre Trudeau was in, now, under the guise of liberal, you see, there was a communist kidnapped, a dignitary in Canada. They wanted to kidnap them and ransom them, or even you know, safe passage to Cuba or something. And hhhch, it was amazing because everybody knew who Pierre Trudeau had been, and was, obviously. You know, it wasn't something you change like a different kind of clothing, where he's simply relaying what he did in the past. Maybe they thought they'd get support, these guys. But Pierre Trudeau worked for the real group at the top, you see, the real globalists. He turned out the troops on Montréal loose. At the time he said, before when he said it, the media interviewed him and said, you don't really mean it, surely no one would do that. He said, oh really? He says, just watch me. And he did. So it took a communist to put the troops on the streets in order to quell an amateur communist uprising, a small one inside Canada.

At the time they had no idea that he was a bigger shot than they were, in that same league. And that's what it is. Remember what Quigley said, we're often mistaken for communists. That came out too during the Reese Commission with Norman Dodd. Quigley said, our agenda is so similar. And it is, they've chosen a socialistic technique. It was far better than having individualism and people having individual rights and so on, and opinions which they're allowed to not just say but act upon and so on. Communism/socialism is far better where folk are a more collectivist society, and they would decide how much goods and fuel or whatever it happens to be you're going to get, instead of you deciding for yourself.

That's why it's the way it is folks. That's why the World Economic Forum is all on board with this whole socialist agenda and everything to be run by experts and bureaucrats, etc. That's exactly what it is. I'll put this article up on their handbook and so on. It says the ideology of their war techniques and so on and the use of violence which they push...

Bray’s many arguments against free speech—and in favor of violence (A: This is what he, you know...) —sound terrifyingly rational, at least in the context of his stated goals. The overthrow of capitalism most likely can’t be accomplished by working within the current state system, so there is no need to be concerned with the tenets of that system. Free speech, for example, plays a vital role in the preservation of our social harmony. Because of free speech, we talk instead of fighting when we have differences of opinion. When people think a law or regulation should be changed, they don’t start gunning down law enforcement officials or setting government agencies on fire. Rather, they lobby Congress or campaign for representatives who will enact the changes they desire. This system is far from perfect and it allows many injustices to be perpetrated, but it’s much more attractive than the alternative in which violence is allowed to settle disputes and enact political change.

However, for the revolutionary left, the total elimination of injustices—not just their minimization—is the goal. Rather than viewing free speech as a way to keep things from becoming worse, Bray flat out rejects the First Amendment as a tool that can be used by oppressors. In his words, “at the heart of the anti-fascist outlook is a rejection of the classical liberal phrase…‘I disapprove of what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it.’” Instead, Bray opens the book with a quote from a leftist revolutionary killed in the Spanish Civil War: “[F]ascism is not to be debated, it is to be destroyed!”

And fascism to them is anybody with any other opinion really. [Alan chuckles.] That's just it. It can never end, once the slaughter starts, you see, that's how communism always does. They bring in, they've got everybody listed. You've all been listed by them, probably given the list by the top capitalists that run it all. Then they go after their targets and eliminate them.

They don't believe in rehabilitating you, even though sometimes they'll say that to their more, the junior followers who aren't quite sure of total violence, and they'll say to them, oh they've got to go to reeducation camps. But what they really mean is extermination camps. That's what they really mean by it. Stalin said it. Stalin even killed and eliminated most of the prisoners of war of Russia that had been caught by Germany. The idea in communism, you would not allow any what they called contaminated person back into Russia, who once experienced to the Western ideals and maybe even luxuries, they might be contaminated and bring it in with them. They, we weren't going to have that, so they killed them all. That's what you do. It's called contamination, you see.

Don't forget that. I hope you're realizing what I'm saying. This has been said before in history, and I think Alexander Solzhenitsyn said the same thing, that happened in Russia. You had the same thing with the interview by John Pilger on Lenny Riefenstahl where he talked about, how did it happen in Germany? And she said, the people were really almost like they were kind of hypnotized, just going through life as normal, like it wasn't really happening, and before they knew it, they had a whole new system.

But I think it's even more obvious with, in the way that Alexander Solzhenitsyn said, that in the beginning, the same thing, he says, everybody said to themselves, it couldn't happen here, and not now. You always think you're living in the now, the pinnacle of the now, not in the past, you see, that's how you think. And you somehow think, we’re more evolved now, we’ve somehow become different and better and more humane. I don't know where this fallacy came from because we’re going the opposite way in fact. But he said that, that's what they all thought at the time, when the revolution was creeping up on them, and the rhetoric was out there and you had the Bolsheviks, you know, really agitating, agitating and stirring it, and trying to get a following to do the rioting, etc, for them, it will never happen, it could never happen here.

Well it CAN happen. Yeah. You're watching a similar thing happen right now. You're literally a hair's breadth away from them smashing windows and looting and killing folk. That's, it doesn't take much once it starts and blood's up and the adrenaline is going and they're in hysterical excitement almost, you see. It doesn't take much. So never say to yourself, oh yeah, it's just a little, it might not be, it might be this one, it might be the next one. But they're going to get it. And they will do it. And they’re given authority from the very top to do it. Obviously. OR it would never have happened, it would never have happened. N-n-n.

Did you know that every country has its form of secret police? [Alan chuckles.] They've got more tabs on everybody than you'd ever, ever imagine. At peacetime, even in 20 to 30 years of peace time they're just as active as ever studying everybody, watching everybody and on top of everything. They know who's going to start what, when and where, why. There's nothing they don't know, folks. So when it happens and they stand back, it's allowed to happen by those at the top. So as I say, this article goes on to the fact that, the author of the book actually…

Bray makes clear that, from the anti-fascist point of view, such a farfetched scenario would mean it’s already too late;

(A: Meaning if you allowed someone like a Hitler to give rousing speeches, if you allow that to even start, it's too late. You see?)

instead, potential Nazi movements must be stifled in their infancy. This allowance leads to an ever-increasing number of people who need to be destroyed.

(A: Personally, I see… If you think [Alan chuckles.] it's just one Nazi, Nazi, Nazi, the people who took over in the communist system were, had pretty well the same type… different people, and not in the Nazi movement. But again, you're looking at a specialized elite people. You are. You all know what I mean. It's a fact, it's history. That's how it's done. That's how it's done. There are no good guys at the top.)

For Bray, politicians like President Trump, media figures like Ann Coulter and Bill O’Reilly, and intellectuals like Charles Murray all deserve to be nipped in the bud speech-wise due to their opinions.

By the time he’s finished, Bray has thrown everything and the kitchen sink into the category of fascist ideologies that must be targeted, ranging from whiteness …

So if you're white, you understand, if you're targeting people racially, what do you expect to happen except a race war? Because folk will have to eventually defend themselves when they're being targeted for annihilation, hm! Hasn't that happened before with other peoples in history who are targeted for complete annihilation? Does that ring a bell? Ding, ding, ding here? Hm? But again it depends on who's doing it, doesn't it? Including someone who even thinks that they were on the receiving end at one time.

That's exactly what Peter Hitchens mentioned too, that he was trained to be a revolutionary in university, Oxford I think he was in. He said by the time he came out he was ready for blood. I mean, that's how he was trained, with him and many like him. He said that one of the first things he learned was how to stop people from having a point of view and to squelch any freedom of speech of opposition, you see, that’s standard stuff. They don't believe in [Alan chuckles.] points of view. No, no. It's their way or... and it's total murder eventually, literally. How else are they going to stop it? Why do you think it's always the same scenario, as they slaughter people under the guise of socialism/communism? Hm?

That's what they do. That's how it's done. Until you end up with a place like China, kind of like China, where everybody will pretty well, in public at least, always voice the same opinions on every topic, all the authorized opinions. That's what you've got. It took years before Peter Hitchens realized that he'd been brainwashed. M-hm. Another article too…

Armed Citizens Defend Town: "Rioters, Looters KEEP OUT!"

thenewamerican.com / 3 June 2020

This is a tale of two cities: Spokane, Washington, which recently suffered riots and looting, and neighboring Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, which has averted (thus far) the same kind of planned havoc. Retired military and law-enforcement personnel who regularly monitor the websites and activities of militant leftists told The New American that Coeur d'Alene, 30 miles east of Spokane, has been targeted by the same Antifa/BlackLivesMatter agitators that have left Spokane and other American cities in flames and smoldering ruins.

(A: D'you realize how this looks like to the rest of the world? It's like a failed state, isn't it? That's how it seems, if you look at the media, you know.)

"We saw that they were planning to strike CdA (Coeur d'Alene) on Sunday and we sent out an alert to hundreds of area contacts," a CdA defender we will call "Thad" told The New American. "Besides their website activity, we saw several of their people 'scouting' Coeur d'Alene," with a particular focus on Winco, a large supermarket near the I-90 interstate. "Sure enough, Monday several van loads of Antifa/BLM agitators — 30-40 of them — unloaded at the Winco parking lot and took up positions. We were ready for them and soon had 100-150 armed defenders there, in addition to a group of biker patriots on their Harleys who showed up. They were NOT going to burn OUR city!"

Another CdA defender who was at the Winco event said she believes the situation remained peaceful between the two groups because the Antifa/BLM crowd was "outnumbered and outgunned." "Even though our side was non-threatening and expressing our beliefs that protesting is fine, as long as it doesn't get violent or destructive, they clearly were intimidated by our presence and our message that we mean business," she told The New American. A sub-group of the agitators broke off from the Winco gathering and met up with a band of cohorts several miles away in the downtown CdA business district on Sherman Avenue, a popular center of cafes, pubs, and shops. Again, they were vastly outnumbered and outgunned by local citizens who came out in force to assure that their town didn't join the list of cities destroyed by "the revolution."

Coeur d’Alene, a beautiful resort town of a little over 50,000, is the county seat and the largest city in the Idaho panhandle's Kootenai County.

That’s what they want of course is to go in and pillage, destroy and burn and loot. Of course anybody who can fight back is done for, ‘eh, it's just as simple as that. You either give up and just walk away… Your government's not going to help you. And that's what they know, they want this to continue and get even tougher, if they can. Then you get folk literally groveling and bending knees and so on as though they're guilty for all the sins of the world, which of course is the Stockholm syndrome. That's what you see, folk collapse mentally and apologize for the whole history of the planet for things they've never done. In order to survive. Which they hope they'll survive.

Another article too, we keep missing Julian Assange news. But he's been too ill apparently to attend some of the meetings they've had. Supposedly, I reckon. All we get is secondary or thirdhand news, isn't it, on him. And where's the protesters for HIS cause, eh?

Julian Assange 'too ill' to attend latest court hearing in US extradition case - independent.co.uk / 1 June 2020

Do you realize when it's so selective, so selective and the whole antiwar movement suddenly was all quiet when it came to attacking Iraq and Afghanistan and Syria, completely just nonexistent, eh? Because they're turned on and off by the ones who control them all. This is so obvious. So obvious. From big marches in the streets, antiwar during the Cold War and so on, and then the massive protest against globalism. And then switched off when the actual wars start. Completely switched off. Then it's switched back on again for, under the excuse, it's an excuse, albeit it's bad enough what happens with one man getting killed like that, but completely ready for a complete communist revolution [Alan chuckles.] on queue. Right when everybody's getting loosened up from the Covid lockdown, on queue, and everybody's back stuck in their homes again trying to evade this burning down and looting and all the rest of it, hm?

Come on! Wake up folks. And yeah, nobody's out there protesting for Assange. None of these characters will. A guy who literally said, put an end to this spying on the public by all the agencies on the net. No. Strangely enough, you'd think that would be up their street, but nope. Not a peep. Amazing eh.

Even though they've got that LGBT group, a lot of them with them, you see the rainbow insignia on a lot of the rioters in the fronts, on the front groups and so on. But what about Chelsea Manning? Where's all the protests? Where was the LGBT groups when Chelsea Manning was going through hell in the prison? Who was standing up for this person who stood up against the system at the time and even disclosed to the world what horrible atrocities were happening on behalf of the American forces at the time over in Iraq and other countries? And because of that he was punished. No, they'd rather riot for other things. But no, forget that.

It's people who literally showed you what was happening with war and all the rest of it. What they complain about, the capitalist system, humph, fascistic system supposedly. People who were exposing the real stuff that was going on, on behalf of big corporations that ran the loot and oil and all the rest of it, get punished, incredibly punished just for showing the people what was happening. And there's not a peep. No, none of these people are standing up for them. They're very selective, aren't they? And it's always on board with the global agenda, sustainability and austerity, environmentalism and zero carbon, yada, yada, until you're right into poverty and austerity at the end of it. That's what it's about.

That's what it's about folks. Nothing is ever what it seems when it's televised. Again, where was the whole antiwar movement then? It wasn't to be seen. There was no big protest in the streets, nothing like that. The same with Assange, etc. It's very selective. It isn't until you realize that it's all managed, again, it's all managed by the people at the very, very top.

The World Economic Forum out of this chaos that's happening right now will get their whole agenda of sustainability: rationing, postconsumer society, using a socialist type system run by bureaucrats and so-called experts and technocrats from top to bottom, no democracy. That's what they want. Don't forget that George Soros talks, he talked again at the last one at the World Economic Forum. If this man was a rogue agent of some kind he would be dealt with by all of them. That doesn't happen. He's part OF it. And so are all the rest of them at the very top. The richest folk in the world are running the left wing, believe you me. Out of it they'll get their whole sustainability depopulation program put in place.

‘Let’s not excuse violence’: Barack Obama forgets his ENTIRE presidency and argues riots should lead to voting Democrat

rt.com / 1 June 2020

(A: Amazing too that he comes right out of the woodwork again, ‘eh? Out of the deep state. He is one of the front men, or at least one of them, the low-down front man for it. Because at the top, it's a much higher, higher organization. The ones that you hear about that face the public are really still worker bees. The ones way above them are quiet and you don't even know a lot of their names, in fact, that really run the whole show. But yeah, he was put in charge of one part of the deep state to foment, you know, a complete breakdown of anybody who tries to break the agenda. Don't forget again, Obama, the Democrat, was praised by all the PNAC group of supposed neocons for carrying on the same wars in which they started. M-hm. Don't forget, when things don't add up, there's a different game going on, isn't there? Hm? Of course there is. This article says…)

To the former president, protests across the country have been overwhelmingly peaceful, and express a “genuine and legitimate frustration over a decades-long failure to reform police practices and the broader criminal justice system.”

(A: When he was, and I can remember the articles I read where he was literally [Alan chuckles.] recruiting the Army guys straight into the police forces. Don't forget too, and I hope you remember this, the billions of rounds, the ammunition rounds all calibers, military grade calibers, rounds and hollow point he was bringing into the country, into all the different government departments. What was it all for? And also getting all the ex-military gear, not just military, well, there were flak jackets, the whole lot, and armor-plated vehicles from the military that were supposedly used… and dished them out all across America. Everybody is saying, what's coming down the pike here? You know, what's going on here?)

(A: Bush started it, and it continued. I think you had someone, Clinton was in, but when Bush was in it was coming in big time. They even had tanks, you know, armored vehicles getting given to certain police stations and so on across the country. We said, what's going on here? What are they expecting? M-hm. What are they expecting? Who, what side are they going to give it to, to use? That's what I'm wondering. Hm? This article says too… [Alan chuckles.] You see, Obama isn't what you think he is either. He never was. None of them are. As they play this game of left and right.)

The problem with Obama’s message isn’t that it’s partisan, but that it brazenly ignores reality – such as the fact that he was the president for eight years, with full control of those levers of power. Yet somehow the greatest achievements of the Obama Era – Obamacare, Obergefell, DACA, or pushes for transgender rights and Title IX “campus rape culture” rules, to name a few – ended up having nothing to do with racial justice.

Surely it was the Obama administration that passed the First Step Act to give relief to federal inmates, the majority of whom were African-American, from harsh mandatory sentences imposed during the Clinton era? Oh, wait, no, it was the “racist” Donald Trump. (A: [Alan chuckles.])

Well, it was definitely Trump who presided over the killings of Trayvon Martin, Michael Brown, Freddie Gray, Tamir Rice, Laquan McDonald, Eric Garner... and fueled racial anger that set Ferguson, Baltimore, Cleveland, Chicago and New York on fire in the aftermath? Erm, no, wrong again.

Glenn Greenwald tweet:

How can the Obama/Clinton decree that the solution to all of this is to VOTE! -- and VOTE BLUE -- be reconciled with the fact that many of the police forces engaging in brutality, starting with Minneapolis, are in places with Democratic Mayors, Governors, and City Councils?

(A: It goes on and on and on. They go on to about…)

What, like running guns to Mexican drug cartels? (A: When Obama was in, that was true as well.) Like turning Libya, the most prosperous country in Africa, into a warlord-run hellhole where black people are sold as slaves? Like droning citizens without trial, (A: That's true, Obama used to pick them himself, that was always in all the papers. He used to get up in the morning and pick who he wanted to destroy that day.) spying on journalists and political campaigns?

Nothing is ever what it seems to be. Really. N-n-n. Another one is…

Black Lives Matter Dublin: Irish Cultural Colonisation and Left Hypocrisy

theburkean.ie / 2 June 2020

(A: Poor Ireland. It's such a tragic country, it really is.)

Dublin’s streets could have been mistaken for inner city Los Angeles yesterday as it played host to its very own ‘Black Lives Matter’ protest.

Numbering the best part of three thousand strong, the protest came as the city is tentatively recovering from the coronavirus epidemic.

Technically such a gathering is banned under public health guidelines, and not forgetting that Dublin’s inner city is one of the country’s viral hotspots.

The protest was in response to the ongoing conflagration emerging from the death of an African American in Minneapolis last week, with the usual grievance issues of Direct Provision latched on for good measure.

As expected, it received neutral to positive coverage from an Irish media fixated on cultivating its very own racial grievance industry (A: And it’s true, you’ve got racial grievance…) akin to what exists in America. As highlighted ad nauseum, Irish journalism is merely an extension of the left-wing activism on display.

Ireland really, it’s a sad, sad case because they fought for so long to get their rights and so on. Out of it, it was already sown early on, long ago, even with the official IRA, the original ones, the seeds of communism, even then, with the tenets of communism. Once they got the freedoms and that, it festered and festered and gradually worked its way right to the very top. You had the celebration of abortion not long ago, in a country at one time was hated, HATED by the far-left because of having some religious values. Which also gave it primacy to human values, you know, human life, the importance of human life. All gone.

Then it was sunk by the bankers with the last big crash, and in came the IMF and the central banks to start, [Alan chuckles.] put up their terms there. It was flooded too with a lot of Europeans with the European mass movement, the free movement idea. A lot of crooks set up there too for a while. Then in came masses and masses of people, refugees, who literally are from countries that have got nothing to do with wars or anything. Flooded with them. And people inside Ireland making a killing off of it because there's big money dished out to get homes for them and settle them. Some characters even just bought over almost like streets in some areas to house them all and they're guaranteed money from the government. So it's like everything's a business. People are business themselves, you know. And here they are, apologizing for stuff they've never done. It's just astonishing. It's so sad. It's so sad.

The Irish literally, they had an inferiority complex for a while. They used to always make jokes about themselves, because it was an inferiority complex for such a long time. Because they were dominated so terribly by England, well London really, and kept down as a people really. All the digs from even Jonathan Swift who said they should eat their own children when it came to famine and so on. I mean, just horrible, horrible past, and they were despised. Again despised because they were a Catholic nation at one time, you know. They haven't had a chance to be themselves really. It's one thing after another until literally now they're getting phased out. They'll be bred out of existence shortly. They know that too. That's part of the obvious agenda of those who really rule everything I suppose. M-hm. Sad. Tragic. Tragic, tragic.

Remember, there's many ways, genocide doesn't have to be straight killing. There's many ways to get rid of you. Bombarding and filling your country with other people's is part of it. The UN mentioned that in one of its organizations years ago, that that was part of, even banning your speech at one point or your own language was part of genocide, to destroy your culture, to destroy you. Then you're destroyed. That's how it happens. Sad, sad. The problem is, within Ireland too, it's much like Scotland, you've got people who literally are ready to fight each other over parties, the same sort of thing. You've got to rise above it all and see what's really running at all. N-n-n. It says in this article…

To some, championing trendy left-liberal causes about racial dogfights in America grants people immunity to the virus.

(A: Because they get out there too, eh? [Alan chuckles.] And suddenly get brave and it’s okay that the virus is put on hold, into stasis, until the rioting is over, or the demonstrating.)

The fact public health has been imperiled to feed left-wing egos is beyond anything this publication could even conjure up. The fact this was done for the sake of a foreign policing issue (A: …and it’s true, it’s got nothing to do with Ireland.) by quite literally the same people who just last week were castigating Gemma O’Doherty and John Waters for doing much less, is hypocrisy on another level.

Per usual Ireland’s well-oiled and well-financed NGO diversity lobby (A: And it's well-funded, it's so true. And their own people sell them out by the way.) was on full display, pontificating on matters as they flouted public health advice.

As if to typify what they felt towards Ireland and the Irish taxpayer who fund these activist groups, they flouted any modicum of self-awareness as they ran roughshod over public safety concerns.

Virtue-signalling about racial politics in America was more important than basic public health concerns. (A: …in Ireland, right.) The people who wanted baton charges against relatively minuscule anti-lockdown protesters at the High Court, stormed the streets of Dublin without a second thought.

The hypocrisy is only matched by the fact this was done for the sake of an issue largely irrelevant to Ireland.

Sad indeed, ‘eh. Yep. It's sad indeed. Oh yeah… Fauci, little Fauci, Foxy Fauci, it says…

Fauci: Let’s Reopen Schools In The Fall — Carefully - hotair.com / 5 June 2020

Here he is, though, I guess he's missing the limelight though, I don't know if he’s still in it or not. And you know he's going to try and spike it again. Mind you, he wanted you locked down until they get a vaccine. Your own immune system, even if you had antibodies, meaning you'd conquered it, it wouldn’t make any difference, they still want you to get their particular brand, you know, the expensive brand that comes in a little needle. They always want, the authorities always want to stick it to you, ‘eh, whatever it is, taxes, needles, you name it, they want to. You're just owned like farm animals.

This other article is quite funny in a way too, and how the tragedy of the farce about… There's a young woman in Germany, I think she's 19 may be. Naomi Seibt.

German officials threaten Naomi Seibt with prison for ‘denialism’

clintel.org / 22 May 2020

(A: Denialism. Everybody's, you know, so fed up with all this, it's all your fault for the climate, it's all your fault for the climate and so on, and the intense indoctrination to the children, until they are literally, they grow up and they’re petrified, they think the planet is dying, as I say. That's what radicalizes them. It's all intentional. You see, you always breed the generation of rioters that you want, if you're the leaders, you see, that's what they've done. It says…)

The response to our appeal for Naomi Seibt has been splendid – but more of us need to help her, because the State Media Authority in North Rhine Westphalia, in the hope of interfering with Naomi’s right to post YouTube videos critical of the Party Line on climate, have menaced her not only with two enormous fines and two sets of costs but also with prison.

(A: That's what it's come to now, ‘eh.)

Naomi really, really needs our help.

(A: They’re asking for donations.)

Naomi’s defense lawyer has already scored one success: the Authority has been compelled to abandon its campaign to force her to take down the first of the three videos it has complained of, because she made it long before she had met anyone from the Heartland Institute, which the Authority dislikes because they regard her single mention of it in one of the three videos complained of as constituting “product placement”, contrary to the anti-free-speech law of North Rhine Westphalia, where she lives.

(A: Astonishing how they try to shut you up, ‘eh? Isn’t it amazing?)

…Naomi is only 19, after all, and cannot be expected to have known that free speech had been shut down in her part of Germany by an obscure and inspissate law – the Authority is trying to make her pay a fine of 1000 euros plus another 200 euros costs for each of the two videos: total 2400 euros. If she doesn't pay, this is the threat these wretches have made:

(A: What she said...)

I WANT YOU TO THINK

Welcome to the Heartland Institute 2020

Posted Feb 11, 2020

Hello, everyone. My name is Naomi Seibt and I am a new member at the Heartland Institute. And I've got very good news for you. The world is not ending because of climate change. In fact, 12 years from now we will still be around, casually taking photos on our iPhone 18s, Tweeting about the current President on Twitter and ranting about the latest celebrity gossip. However, we are currently being force-fed a very dystopian agenda of climate alarmism that tells us that we as humans are destroying the planet and that the young people especially have no future: that the animals are dying, that we are ruining nature.

I truly believe that many members of Antifa, Fridays for Future groups, Rebellion Extinction, I really believe that many of them have good intentions but they are genuinely scared of the world ending, and scared that their parents and grandparents are ruining the planet, that it's breaking relationships, it's breaking up families, and we at the Heartland Institute, we want to spread truth about the science behind climate realism, which is essentially the opposite of climate alarmism.

(A: She goes on and on about it too.)

I don't want you to panic. I want you to think.

But yeah, that's what they're doing now, that's what it's come to. Because it's a big agenda. You've got to believe you're all guilty, because it got to start reducing the population. Your masters tell you that. Your owners tell you they want a big, big cull, and they'll do it if you don't want to do it voluntarily. They're going to do it one way or another. And they really mean it.

You understand, you're dealing with real psychopaths here and if they want to bring you into starvation – it's not pleasant if you're going to see millions of folk dying of starvation, not pleasant at all – they will do it. I hope you understand what we're talking about here. And they have trained a generation to hate anybody older than 15 or 20. Absolutely. The old communist technique don't trust anybody over 30. Then they reduced it to 20. Hhmph. I tell ya. M-hm-hm.

Another article…

Global Capitalism, "World Government" and the Corona Crisis

globalresearch.ca / 1 May 2020

Stage One: Trade War against China

(A: Of course that was part of it as well. Yep.)

Stage Two: The Financial Crash Spearheaded by Fear and Stock Market Manipulation

Stage Three: Lockdown, Confinement, Closing Down of the Global Economy

Who Controls the Politicians?

(A: You'd better ask that! They're all in on it. No matter what side you think they're on. N-n-n. Then you've got…)

The fear campaign prevails. Social distancing is enforced. The economy is closed down. Totalitarian measures are being imposed. According to Dr. Pascal Sacré

… in some countries, patients can leave hospital by agreeing to wear an electronic bracelet.

(A: I call it a manacle. Because that’s what it is.)

This is only a sample of all the totalitarian measures planned or even already decided by our governments in favor of the coronavirus crisis. It goes much further, it’s limitless and it affects a good part of the world, if not the whole world.

So I'll put this article up as well for those who want to see it. It really is stunning. What amazing times we're living through. And most folk I suppose will be in confusion all the time. Through fear, fear causes confusion. You can't think rationally when you're terrified. That's the first part of, that's why you cause terrorism, it's a great control mechanism and you can guide folk who will follow blindly and obey blindly because they're terrified, they can't trust their own instincts, judgments, or anything else, you see. It's a great tool. Fantastic tool. I'll put all these things up as well.

I'm not finished just yet, mind you, for those who can still put up with it a bit longer. It'd be so interesting to watch what's happening because this IS history you're living through. A well-planned organized massive, maybe three-point or three-pronged assault starting with the Covid, and the shutdown of the economy, the total reorganization, structural organization of society and how you behave with each other. And the readying for starvation. You're going to see this. It's planned, folks. It's planned. If they've cut down on all the meat plants and all the rest of it, it's planned. You wait and see. Then you'll have the same problems as they start cutting back on what's left, all the harvest stuff. Then they'll start exporting it to other countries, oh, they're in worse condition than WE are, and you'll and up being in the same condition as THEY are. It's all planned that way. If you let them get their way. And if they can't get it right off the bat, they'll close you down again. Oh, it spiked again, the virus is back, round two. And there ya go.

Governors back massive protests after months of banning large gatherings

washingtonexaminer.com / 2 June 2020

(A: No kidding, ‘eh? The same governors, ‘eh, that would have you put in prison for breaking the rules, are out there protesting. Nevermind the six-foot space and all that nonsense, you know. Nope, no problem there at all. There's the hypocrisy people in... who you vote for ‘eh. [Alan chuckles.] They're complete liars and actors, aren't they.)

Democratic Governors said they support large-scale protests, a reversal from mandating social distancing and lockdowns since March.

(A: What do you mean, small groups? No more than four or five, or 10 at the most. Oh, let's have massive riots, it's okay. [Alan chuckles.])

“I stand behind the protesters and their message,” New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo said Monday.

He noted earlier in the day, though, that protests “could exacerbate COVID-19 spread.”

“We spent all this time closed down, locked down, masks, social distanced. And then you turn on the TV, and you see these mass gatherings that could potentially be infecting hundreds and hundreds of people, after everything we have done,” he said in his press briefing.

(A: Of course, they won't say anything about arresting everybody for causing potential deaths of other folk, if it's all true, right, and spreading it. Oh, no, they won't do that, will they, ‘eh.)

Michigan Gov. Gretchen Whitmer (A: …was quite a character. I don’t think she believes in democracy either.) also encouraged peaceful demonstrations Monday. She lifted Michigan’s stay-at-home order Monday, 11 days ahead of schedule, and told Michiganders to “stay smart, stay safe, and let’s all do our part.”

(A: …our part… She didn’t say, we’re all in it together, generally the collectivists say that. And so do folk in wartime, you say, oh, we’re all in it together.)

She also announced Monday (A: You know, just like a decree… like a royal decree…)

She also announced Monday that restaurants will be able to reopen at limited capacity next week. Gatherings of fewer than 100 people are now permitted, (A: [Alan laughing.] …and here they have riots in the streets with maybe thousands, ‘eh?! Ha, ha! But for ordinary folk, you know, fewer than 100 people are now permitted…)

meaning massive protests are still illegal under the state’s gradual reopening plan.

(A: Oh what a joke that is. I tell ya. I heard though some of the restaurants are going to open up and serve just soup, you know, very thin soup, and special masks with straws, a hole for your straws to go through them. So you can all sit there and slurp away and see how it goes. I tried, you know, eating soup with a mask on and it just went all down my chin. It was just awful. So don't try it. Now...)

Protests broke out in Washington, D.C., over the weekend as well. Mayor Muriel Bowser implemented a citywide curfew Monday starting at 7 p.m., just two days after announcing that restaurants can start reopening for outdoor service (A: …again…) at limited capacity.

M-hm-hm. What... D'you understand, this was a farcical thing, this 6 feet distancing. I went through the story last week of how it started, with the girl at school who is wanting to get into computer programming and modeling, and they did this thing for school. She came up with the idea, oh how many folk would you meet in the day, how many children do you meet in the day, hundreds of people and blah, blah, blah. They are the spreaders, yada, ya, and 6 feet apart. It all came through computer modeling, a completely made-up idea. It wasn't based on any reality, folks. Hm?! N-n-n. Hhhhm. Quite something. Take some talcum powder with you, right, stand outside, even when you think it's pretty calm, and sprinkle some. Just throw it in the air in front of you and watch which way goes and how far it goes. It doesn't abide by any stupid law like 6 feet! Hm? Oh, dear, dear, dear. It really is all magic, isn't it, ‘eh? N-n-n.

This one was quite something, I'm sure you all saw this one. It shows you the radicalization of fools, dangerous people really now. And nothing will happen to this, this is a professor, a young female.

Professor tweets how to topple ‘racist’ monuments like Washington Monument – then backtracks

americanmilitarynews.com / 1 June 2020

On Sunday a Twitter-verified professor and self-described Egyptologist (A: …no kidding? Egyptologist.) posted a thread of tweets insinuating rioters could topple obelisk monuments and described instructions for just that scenario.

“PSA For ANYONE who might be interested in how to pull down an obelisk* safely from an Egyptologist who never ever in a million years thought this advice might come in handy,” tweeted Sarah Parcak. “*might be masquerading as a racist monument I dunno.

“PSA For ANYONE who might be interested in how to pull down…

(A: She says how to do it basically.)

“The key to pulling one down is letting gravity work 4 you. Chances are good the obelisk extends into the ground a bit, so you want to get CHAINS NOT ROPE (it’s 2020 AD not BC let metal work for you) extended tightly around the top (below pointy bit) (A: …the pointy bit, I guess she’s very practical.) and 1/3 down forming circles,” she tweeted. “For every 10 ft of monument, you’ll need 40+ people. So, say, a 20 ft tall monument, probably 60 people. You want strong rope attached to the chain—rope easier to hold onto versus chain. EVERYONE NEEDS TO BE WEARING GLOVES FOR SAFETY (there is a lot of safety first).”

In another tweet, Parcak said, “WATCH THAT SUMBITCH TOPPLE GET THE %^&* OUT OF THE WAY IT WILL SMASH RUN AWAY FROM DIRECTION.”

(A: This is someone who is going to cause deaths galore, never mind the massive destruction to the property. It's a professor. And you wonder why your universities are churning out radicals. Well, how d'you think she was churned out? Hm? What churned her out?)

She even included a stick-figure schematic of her instructions.

(A: She adds a caveat…)

“BUT OF COURSE THIS IS ALL ENTIRELY HYPOTHETICAL,” Parcak added towards the end of her thread. “ALSO PLEASE DO NOT PULL DOWN WASHINGTON MONUMENT.”

(A: Meaning, that's to cover her behind.)

There might be one just like this in downtown Birmingham! What a coincidence. Can someone please show this thread to the folks there.

So she wants to bring down all the monuments of what she call the old America, you know, the nasty America. The America that allowed her to get up there with her hobby of being an Egyptologist.

M-hm. Quite something. Also an article here...

How Free Trade Is (Still) Killing America

technocracy.news / 23 July 2019

When the Trilateral Commission set about to create a New international Economic Order in 1973, (A: That was back then when it was in the process of creating the system, this part of the system.) so-called Free Trade blossomed as nations dropped their external tariffs that allowed multi-directional trade.

But this has got a video on it, how it works anyway. It was an interview by Charlie Rose with Sir James Goldsmith. I remember Goldsmith's talk that he gave to the Senate as well and he, everything that's happening today with the economy and everything, he warned them all about. He said, Britain’s the same, all your jobs go, your labor force is left with no work, and with no manufacturing, everything's going offshore, and cheap labor is given all the jobs in other countries, and yada, yada, ya, and how you go down the hill and down the hill. He was quite, oh, it was a great talk he gave to the Senate. But they went for it regardless, for free trade for the Americas for the NAFTA deal. He warned what would happen. He knew about GATT and NAFTA and the whole thing. He died unfortunately. He tried to get Britain out of the EU before anybody else did, or before Nigel Farage came along. He died of cancer of the prostate, very fast acting cancer too it was, he died quickly, within a matter of a week or two I think it was of diagnosis. But great talker by the way, he knew his stuff. M-hm.

Then another article, it says…

Cahersiveen: Irish Asylum System Enters Meltdown - theburkean.ie / 22 May 2020

...because of the massive migration into Ireland. It’s still going on, through all this, and there’s no work or anything. And they’re broke they are financially broke. But that’s the agenda. That’s the agenda, you’re not supposed to exist very much longer in little old Ireland. Sad. Good article though. It talks about the amount of asylum-seekers still waiting to come in, there’s thousands of them. And someone is directing them towards Ireland. Because the UN is involved, and there's folk who want to get rich off of it all inside Ireland naturally, with the government handouts as they manage it all. N-n-n. Sad indeed. It's a sad story.

It's the same in Scotland. There's this, I always had a sense of sadness in the country when I went into the highlands, you know, where the highlands were, where a lot of the clearances happened. Right across the entire country, east to west coast into the north that the troops went through just exterminating. And then the rest of them, they were put on prison ships and shipped abroad and so on. Young guys could join the new militaries, the Scottish regiments to fight for England. That's why they did. But oh yes, tragic, tragic. You feel it. It's there in the air, you know, in the area.

This article too, it's quite interesting. It says…

Kneeling for George Floyd is grotesque Western infantility

israelnationalnews.com / 7 June 2020

(A: Again, it's an outside point of view. It's from an Israeli paper. But again, you've got to look from all points of view. You can get stuck in, again, your little bubble where you are. You've got to see how things look from outside at times too. It says…)

Kneeling is a central rite in Western culture. Kneeling for George Floyd is the expression of a grotesque Western infantility.

There, I said it, although I know that those who do not kneel are considered amoral monsters these days. Everyone kneels, the prime ministers, the journalists, the parliamentarians, the police...

When Londoners protested the Minneapolis incident, police guarding the Downing Street gates were told to "get down on their knees." Four policemen did it. Thousands of people in Britain went out on the streets, falling on their knees, as if hallucinating.

It is acceding to the claim that Western society as a whole is racist. It is a form of ideological hysteria that makes those who kneel belong to the "right side". In several videos, we have even seen American whites kissing the shoes of their black compatriots to apologize.

“Are you white? Feel guilty, you also killed George Floyd”. Being white has become a kind of original sin. If you do not do penance for being white, paying homage to mass immigration and multiculturalism, you will become a "white supremacist". The archbishop of Canterbury called on "white Christians" to "repent of our own prejudices". Time magazine: "Whites have inherited their white supremacy". Inherited!

American universities are full of courses on "white privilege" and if you look at academic calendars in France, there are conferences "forbidden to whites". In Paris you are not trendy enough if you don't write about la blanchité. At each massacre where the murderer is white, the global collective ritual of penance begins.

Utoya? White man. Christchurch? White man. Blacks that kill blacks? Not on the news. Muslims who kill Jews and Christians? Not on the news. Christians who kill Muslims? First pages. The white trade of black slaves? Everywhere. The Arab-Islamic trafficking of black slaves? Taboo.

The whole past is projected onto the current generation, colonialism, crusades, birth of America, Nazism, slavery, everything ends up in the same historical kneeler, everything is traced back to your white genes.

There is no aperitif - even that does not end without the great new truth echoing: White man is evil, by definition.

Giulio Meotti, an Italian journalist with Il Foglio, writes a twice-weekly column for Arutz Sheva.

So that's how he sees it. It's… It's… It's quite a way of putting it really.

...the expression of a grotesque Western infantility.

...where they apologize for everything, you know. And don't forget, this is an agenda. Which would end up, if you allowed it, to go into extermination. I really mean that. You understand, you can't apologize enough to insanity. When you've got nothing to do with it. You could only be responsible for what you do yourself. And that goes for every people, every person in every ethnic group.

When you see a targeted group, we've heard this before in history and not long ago, targeted for what? Extinction? You just can't apologize enough. And you're allowing it to happen. Your own tax money is teaching it in courses in University. No, this is hate, folks. This is organized institutionalized hate against a group. It's been fomented by a very old party, a communist party, to bring the same old thing back again. It obviously is. It really is.

This has nothing to do with one person or even a group of people being discriminated against at times through government forces. This is, this is beyond that. Way beyond that. And it’s taught... When you see people being taught to hate you, it doesn't bode good. It's going to build up into something grotesque and horrible. Obviously. OBVIOUSLY! And no amount of apologizing is going to make it any more lenient. It's not going to do it. This is incredible times we're living in. Incredible.

Look at what happened with the groups that had planned the, hhhch, IF there was a pandemic, you know, Johns Hopkins and so on at the University, IF there was a pandemic this is what they would do, along with the Bill Gates foundation. They said during their training exercises that they already had, they already had things to go for, to save the Chinese getting blamed for it so there was no racism involved. They had ads where they would have people coming up and saying, oh I was discriminated against, Chinese people saying that. That was okay, right, to say that was terrible, oh, that's terrible if they did that. Well, here, hhhch, how many thousands, or how many millions of children here have been brainwashed to hate the white folk? And that's OKAY? N-n-n-n-n. Nope. Nope. It will never be okay. Never.

And police brutality against anybody is never okay either. Of course it isn't. But you don't blame a whole race for it. No way at all. N-n-n. This is a bigger agenda than that. Much bigger.

Another article too is the unfortunate siding of Russia with China now. Because the US again, and Trump is definitely surrounded by the neocons as usual, hhhhhh, targeted China and Russia again, I'd say resurrected them as the enemy, right. And because of that, naturally when that happens countries ban together in mutual support. So...

consortiumnews.com / 9 June 2020

Whatever hopes Russian President Vladimir Putin may have had for a more workable relationship with the Trump administration have been “trumpled,” so to speak. (A: …all his hopes.)

This came through loudly and clearly in acerbic remarks by Russian Deputy Foreign Minister Sergey Ryabkov in an interview Friday with The National Interest.

Ryabkov lamented the sad state of Russia-U.S. relations, while pointing, not very subtly, to China as Russia’s ace in the hole. He was simply acknowledging that what the Soviets used to call “the correlation of forces” has changed markedly, and strongly implied that the U.S. should draw the appropriate conclusions.

No amateur diplomat, Ryabkov used unusually sharp, almost certainly pre-authorized, words to drive home his message:

“We don’t believe the U.S. in its current shape is a counterpart that is reliable, so we have no confidence, no trust whatsoever. So our own calculations and conclusions are less related to what America is doing … we cherish our close and friendly relations with China. We do regard this as a comprehensive strategic partnership in different areas, and we intend to develop it further.”

In other words: We Russians and Chinese will stand together as the U.S. tries to paint both of us as arch-villains, all the while isolating itself and painting itself into a corner.

That's by Ray McGovern, that one. Also with Minnesota it says…

Charges: Minnesotans drove plateless car, carried guns and hammer during George Floyd protest

startribune.com / 3 June 2020

In warning that “outside agitators” had infiltrated local protests over the death of George Floyd, a black man killed by Minneapolis police, state officials outlined a list of concerning developments, including cars stripped of their license plates driving around town.

But at least one case charged Tuesday in Hennepin County District Court showed that a group of mostly local young men were riding in one of the mysterious vehicles.

Police allegedly recovered two guns, a hammer and an “electric grinding tool” from the men.

(A: I guess that's to grind off padlocks and things in places.)

Authorities charged Junior G. Smith, 24, of Rochester; Augustine Z. Livingstone, 22, of Ramsey, Minn.; and Peter Shin, 29, of St. Paul.

They face one count of second-degree riot, armed with a dangerous weapon.

…and that caches of incendiaries had been discovered near sites of protests and vandalism.

There's more organization that went into this than meets the eye, naturally. It doesn't bode well as I say, it's being allowed to go further and further and further. It doesn't bode well for society. It's meant to... It's a revolution, they think it's a revolution at the bottom for their own. But what's going to happen when you end up in total austerity? And you burn down your places? And the food system is gone? What have you won? And the country is broke because no one's working? Argh.

But the ones at the top know where they're taking it. That's what they want to happen. It falls in with global austerity, right. And then the WEF steps in and says, well, now we'll have to globally manage the whole supply system, and the food system and blah blah blah, you know. Just coincidentally.

Now is as good a time as any to refresh your memory of how things are and how revolutions are caused and designed by people way at the top. And the followers never figure it out until it's all over and done with and they don't get their utopia. In fact, the ones who take part in mass revolution and chaos and violence are the ones who get picked off. Because the rulers know that they'll rebel again, against them, if they don't get what they want in the new system. That's what always happens. So remember, it's good to refresh your memory by watching a portrayal of this kind of technique in The Land of the Blind. Awfully good movie with Donald Sutherland. It goes through that kind of agenda. You do the right things at the right times, you think, only to find out that you brought the same kind of tyranny back in.

Because basically the corruption is within everybody. That's what people who are screaming and mad and furious at everything in their life is wrong, they don't realize that everyone has the propensity to be corrupt. And the leaders they bring in are, often have that in their head to start with, they want to use everybody to get themselves into power. You're always run by a small elite. Don't forget that. But refresh your memory, it's worth watching.

Again too, when the invasions went on in Iraq and elsewhere, we saw the museums getting looted there. Ancient artifacts stolen, auctioned off in another country, that was all in the news at the time. We know all about it and who was involved. Nobody was charged with that. It was looted. And of course so was their reserve currencies and all the rest of it, and their gold, all just disappeared. The same thing happened after the US went into Libya. A massive gold reserve there. Again, vanished, just like that. And that's looting operations because war always has a looting operation.

But this is the key to it, look at the culture in America with the looters. It's the same thing going on, you know, loot, loot, loot, it's ingrained in the culture. Because the whole system is based on materialism over human value and life. And that's the problem. Don't forget too, that no one's going to make things better for you individually. You might find that as you get a bit older. If you live that long, you know. That's the chance we're all up against now, is trying to get to an age where you can actually understand things better.

But don't forget that everyone is born with the propensity to be a crook, a criminal, tyrant and corrupt. That's why all the old communist systems and the Soviet system were all corrupt as well at the very top. The higher you went, the more corrupt it was. And they shared the loot of the people down below them, a whole slave population for goodness sake. Nothing worked eventually at the very end of it. Don't forget that. Because you're not bringing in some kind of utopia at all.

The corruption is inside humanity itself and every individual. The more you're into pure materialism and you have no other values outside the purely material, the more corrupt it will become regardless. It's up to you.

And travel, the first thing that communism always did, they stopped traveling, ‘eh. You've got to get your little passport for traveling for your area. And, papers please. But we're electronic now, we can do it with apps on your phones. Or bracelets and stuff, eh? So here they're using, again, organizations, ‘eh? You wouldn't think that global protocols and stamp for the new normal would come from safe travels. Hm?

'Safe Travels': Global Protocols and Stamp for the New Normal

(A: I guess it’s world tourist and travel coalition or something.)

WTTC alongside our Members, governments, health experts and other industry associations are working together to achieve effective recovery protocols (A: I love that word protocols…) by developing meaningful action plans that optimise sector-wide recovery efforts.

(A: They’re all bureaucrats, aren’t they, the way they speak.)

Part of our protocols include providing the public & private sectors with the insights & toolkits for interaction & implementation to ensure that people are and feel safe however WTTC, our members and the sector can not guarantee 100% safety. It is paramount to have common rules. Ultimately, we envision a future of travel which is safe, secure, seamless and provides an authentic and meaningful experience to the traveller across the journey; one which supports the livelihoods of millions and contributes to sustainable economic growth.

(A: Everything’s got to be sustainable, you understand.)

We will be publishing the protocols in phases and for at least eleven industries, including; Hospitality, Attractions, Outdoor Retail, Aviation, Airports, Short Term Rentals, Cruise, Tour Operators, Convention Centres and MICE, Car Rental and Insurance.

(A: So this is travel and tourism, right, along with all the aircraft companies, you know, all the airline companies. They want you all to have your travel passports with your updates on your vaccinations and are you safe or are you not safe and so on. Oooooooooo. Yep. So here you have a coalition of tourism and travel, eh. Do you vote for that? No.)

Global safety stamp of approval to recognize safe travel protocols.

A specially designed stamp will allowed travelers to recognize governments and businesses around the world which have adopted health and hygiene global standardized protocols so consumers can experience safe travel.

Eligible businesses such as hotels, restaurants, airlines, cruise lines, tour operators, restaurants, outdoor shopping, transportation and airports will be able to use the stamp once the health and hygiene protocols outlined by the WTTC have been implemented.

Destinations will also help award the stamp of approval to local suppliers.

So you'll be safe. Just like China, everything was trialed in China with the apps on their phones and so on with the green, red and blue colors coming out. That will let the shopkeepers know if you're safe, or you're not safe and they wouldn't let you in and blah blah blah blah blah. This is what they always do. But it's a beautiful, it's soo masked as soo good. Before, as I say, communism would demand your papers. Now they got your apps, they can immediately see if you're safe or you're not safe, and have you been approved to travel, have you been banned from travel because you might be this, might be that, whatever it happens to be. N-n-n.

So it's...

There ya go. N-n-n. Quite something eh. Quite something indeed. And also too, you can look it up yourself…

Origins of Antifa

capitalresearch.org / 16 April 2018

(A: ...and why you should maybe care about it, or not care, or whatever you want to do.)

Antifa, … a revolutionary communist-anarchist militia movement that aspires to forcibly overthrow the United States government, is responsible for “a level of sustained political street warfare not seen in the U.S. since the 1960s.”

But it’s got all the other networking with the same organizations that brought nations to a standstill with their riots for Extinction Rebellion as they like to call it, etc. etc. All on board with the same agendas as the World Economic Forum. Isn’t that strange, this amazing exact same agenda as the multibillionaires have these little people at the bottom? Isn't that really, quite a coincidence that is. First in history. And...

Pentagon Video Warns of “Unavoidable” Dystopian Future for World’s Biggest Cities

theintercept.com / 13 Oct 2016

(A: I've mentioned this before. I'll put it up too. It says…)

According to a startling Pentagon video obtained by The Intercept, the future of global cities will be an amalgam of the settings of “Escape from New York” and “Robocop” — with dashes of the “Warriors” and “Divergent” thrown in. It will be a world of Robert Kaplan-esque urban hellscapes — brutal and anarchic supercities filled with gangs of youth-gone-wild, a restive underclass, criminal syndicates, and bands of malicious hackers.

At least that’s the scenario outlined in “Megacities: Urban Future, the Emerging Complexity,” a five-minute video that has been used at the Pentagon’s Joint Special Operations University.

Megacities: Urban Future, the Emerging Complexity - youtube.com / 22 Jan 2018

As I say, it's really a teaser for, because the whole thing for the Pentagon, it's like a course, it's about a 20-set course on the future. There you go. I've also got…

And then another one just to finish it off, it's called…

The Slippery Slope to Despotism: Paved with Lockdowns, Raids and Forced Vaccinations - globalresearch.ca / 6 June 2020

That was for May 21. And even that's really old news now, isn't it? But it's not really. Nothing is old news. The problem is folk really expect to have up-to-the-minute brand-new news. They toss out the old stuff, not realizing it all creates the whole picture of the truth, you see. So don't believe anything is ever old. Much of what's happening today could have been avoided if folk knew their history, even the last 20 to 30 years perhaps, hm.

Now remember folks that, as I say, go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com and list all the sites I've got listed on that site. These are my official ones. Find out how to donate to me or buy the books and discs. You can use PayPal or send cash or checks, that's all okay with me. And I'm going to look for other ways of getting payments as well, electronically. Hopefully. That keeps me ticking along with these talks. Believe you me, my archives are used by [Alan chuckles.] pretty well all the other names that you probably heard out there in the alternate media. Because it's a free archive for those who want to look into it with so much information on it. You'll hear people quoting them every other day of many of the talks I've given, they just don't mention where they got it from. [Alan chuckles.] Which is an awful shame.

But that's part of the fact that, part of the real system we're living in. It's not a real system. Even your opposition is often, it's not, not all of them but the big ones often are already paid by, they're part of an organization that was meant.... You're always given your leaders, folks. You're given them. They're authorized. They've always, this is how you always… Nobody gets into this without being authorized, unless they come through the back door. And if you come through the back door, you get shadow banned from the beginning. [Alan chuckles.] And I did get shadow banned from the beginning, once they found out what I was saying. M-hm. That's how it really is. Nothing is what it seems to be.

But you're going through amazing history, as it happens. Again, the truth behind everything that's causing the movements and so on is way different from how it's betrayed by most of the media.

People have to remember, don't panic. Don't panic. Your thoughts do count. Even to yourself. Be true to yourself if nothing else in the long run. And don't be groveling to anybody who are simply driving home their own agendas and using you as part of it.

And don't give up your brain to anybody either. Don't give it up. You don't know how precious it is.

So remember, donate to me and hopefully I'll tick along for a bit longer.

I'm Alan Watt from Ontario, Canada and it's good night and may your God or your gods go with you.

"Cutting Through the Matrix" with Alan Watt

Hi folks I'm Alan Watt in this Cutting Through The Matrix June 14, 2020. Kind of like vision, you wonder though if you have any vision left with the way things are going. But it's not your fault. Because you're going through an amazing, planned change of a system worldwide. We have been for quite a long time in fact.

Remember when we heard all those talks from Bush Senior about his wonderful new world order coming into view and all that kind of stuff? And then his son about 10 years later when he was president, he gave a similar speech about the new New World Order. Even before that you had speeches, around the same time as the first one actually, Gorbachev gave talks about the world order, as they blended the systems together. Got rid of the Cold War at that time, which of course they're resurrecting now [Alan chuckles.] because it's just too lucrative for the big military-industrial complex. But they're also about New World orders. You see, Kissinger in his last talk about April or so talked about the new world order again, and a new New World order. Lots of new normals all the time and New World Orders and things like that. You've been going through it of course for quite some time.

A lot of it was before even this Covid thing came along. I've been talking about it for years, coming for years and years and years. Back in the 90s I talked about the schooling of children and what it was intended to do, the modern schooling. And it really was blatant social engineering. I went through the techniques of where they use music to drive home ideas too with each up-and-coming generation. boo

Say you're born in the 1999 or something like that, and really, 2001 came along and the big change happened then. But before then too you had the social engineering in school where they were teaching you what Norman Dodd talked about in the Reese Commission, was the amalgamation of the Sovietized system or socialized system... Remember the Soviet system as Khrushchev said and Lenin did too, and Stalin, Stalin especially liked to quip about it, that communism was socialism in a hurry. Socialism is an in between step to communism or collectivism, run by experts, that's what it's about.

They've been training the children for years and years into this. Then, again, through their entertainment that takes over even when they're out of school or high school or college and so on, you get updated through movies, and lots and lots of talk shows that are on mainstream television and have been on for about 20 to 30 years probably. You have no idea of the incredible effectiveness of, or efficacy I should say, of psychological conditioning through persuasion and creating consent. The stuff that Bernays talked about and others really upped it since his day with behavioral experts really studying and studying and studying us all minutely. There's nothing they don't know about us and how to make us change this and change that.

Look at the farce of the Covid idea. I've got some of that to touch on tonight, and a few other things too to touch on tonight. But what's happening with the Covid idea, it's part of the revolution that didn't work, for overpopulation, you see, there's just too many of YOU, you folks there, you see. I've given so many talks about that too. You've watched about all kind of new definitions of men and women, all that kind of stuff, and even having children or family, etc. And a total indoctrination into children that families are bad now because they consume things, and the world can't afford to have all these things consumed. Because the elite who rule it are really upset, they want their progeny down in the future to have all those things for themselves, and if you're having it all now, they won't have it for their progeny, you see. So for your own good they want to eliminate you, you understand. You've got to see it from their point of view.

That's what we're going through, a very, it's a completely scientifically organized and arranged through the SAGE [Scientific Advisory Group for Emergencies] organization and all the other organizations that work with governments. Like in Britain they're more open, well, a little bit more open with their COBRA for terrorism. But they also admit that SAGE and the subgroup of SAGE and the BIT   [Behavioral Insights Teams] group and so on, they're managing our minds through this whole coronavirus terror, you see. Because it's a terror, the war OF terror on the public. I've said it so many times since the beginning, when the media went into overdrive, then you find out, sure enough, the media were given, and I'll put some of this up tonight. They were given an outline by this very group, from the British government, on how to use, to heighten anxiety amongst the public by giving them terrifying stories and so on, to try to make them all to conform to obedience, by the experts.

So they admit it now - which was obvious anyway, I don't need admissions when you can see it for yourself - that the media of course was complicit. This terrible media as I say that had lost so much… Look, for years now they had to start charging money for folk to look into their newspapers, to see their opinion columns and things like that. Because there are no real reporters now. Yeah, they know how to put a story together. But like everybody else they sit on their gluteus maximus, and they basically get it from the ethernet, all the information, like everybody else. They don't go on the spot.

But they're just as complicit as they were before that, because newspapers were always on board with government policies. Every newspaper wanted to have prestige. Even the small local ones wanted prestige. So they get in on the town councils and things like that, and they get little quips and off-the-cuff interviews and stuff. And if you're not playing ball with politicians, for instance, eventually you're not allowed into the meetings. So all the ones who are were allowed in are compromised, they're on board and have their little gestures and winks and all that. They know how to play the game of deceiving the public.

Eventually they actually think they're part of the ruling class that manages the public. Because they manage your mind. They manage your minds, you see. They've always been doing it. Even when they'd had real reporters, they were on board with all the wars that came down the pike basically, when it suited the elite in their own countries to take over the resources of other nations and so on.

I know that, well I could go on and on and on about how Britain recovered from, didn't recover really, but London recovered from World War II by continuing the military-industrial complex in Britain. They had nothing much left really, except a mountain of debt because they borrowed and borrowed from the US banks all through the war. They were still paying off the loan from World War I. But what they did have at the end of World War II was manufacturing for weaponry, and aircraft, and jet aircraft too, they got into the Comet and so on.

They started to realize that you could look at the oil regimes in the Middle East, and they got awfully pally with them. Especially Saudi Arabia and a few other ones. Other ones, they just deposed whoever was in and put their own people in for little while like they did in Iran. And then they were thrown out eventually. They've never forgiven Iran for that. But those in London wanted the oil, the corporations, and they use generally the military to do it. Then the best thing to do is to start selling the weapons, you see. They're still doing it today.

That's awfully lucrative, tremendously lucrative, when you see what, for instance, Saudi Arabia buys from England every year, or London. I hate using the nations. You... When you realize, when they talk about England's doing this and Britain's doing that, or Canada... It's not at all. It's a clique in your Capitals in the cities that are in charge of it all, on behalf of those who really own the countries. It's not the people. Sometimes they leave you a little bit more scrapings and breadcrumbs to keep the people happy. But at the same time, they resent even that at the very, very top.

They have their great futuristic views of where they're taking the world. Eventually, before the novel, it was called, the Stonecutter [The White Cutter], a story about a medieval era, early medieval really in a sense. Where a stonemason would carry his son around, very important this idea of passing everything onto your son, the true apprentice, you see. He would carry his little son on his back when he would travel to new towns when they were building cathedrals or castles or whatever it happens to be, or big mansions for the elite and wealthy across Europe. You get into the story, and you find out that they have enemies, you see, at the lower levels of Masons, the stonemasons. It refers too of course to the modern Freemasonry that takes the, they use the terminology of masonry and geometry, etc. and architecture, and of course the Old Testament to... to... well really, to mystify those at the bottom and to eventually enlighten those who get up in the higher degrees [Alan chuckles.] so they can be used for higher things and keep silent about it. But the book goes on about how they have Hugues de Monfort I think it was, the same one who was let loose upon the Albigensians and in France, or the Alsace at the time.

The Albigensian were doing their own thing. They were, they had their own religion. They had their own priesthood. They rejected a lot of the Catholic Church at that time you see. But they also had other groups in with them too. There were even Jewish rabbis that were noted in amongst them. They were often, most of them were vegan by the way, you know, a very important thing. The Albigensians also talked about the evil of bringing children into the world. Awfully important. But because of their different opposition to authority, the ruling authorities and the nobility's, they were eventually put to the sword. Not all of them died naturally, not everybody always does get killed off in any purge. But that's what happened to them.

But this is incorporated, a little bit was incorporated into the book. So this terrible de Monfort was a terrible character, you see. You get into the book and it's really interesting and all the rest of it. The dad is really a gruff guy, not the brightest fella. The son is much swifter. But his son is noticed by the other of Masons around them. It's an actual, like an officer command all away down to NCOs, you know, just like Freemasonry in a sense. They see the son has got these insights into situations, political as well. They start to almost groom him. He's getting kind of groomed.

Eventually they all meet at a big annual gathering on an island, of all these different ranks of stonemasons. You find out that they are all shocked eventually when de Monfort turns up himself. They're all aghast in horror because this is like the antichrist to them, you see. But then they find out, don't worry, oh no, calm down, calm down, he's one of us, you see.

Then you realize that the group with their very secretive, and again they're secretive in a sense, but their display of nature, the green man and so on you'll see in all the different even churches in Britain and temples and so on, representing nature and the man himself, the man who is part of the world and nature, etc. It's called occultic, but it's very understandable and easy to understand really. So anyway, the whole idea was that if you don't plan the future, the future will stagnate, the people will stagnate. And stagnation creates unrest and unease amongst the people who are stagnating.

You found that in countries in Europe, and Britain was definitely one of them for good period after World War II. Forget all the hype about the Beatles and stuff like that. This is amazing psychological warfare as well as being awfully lucrative for those involved in the culture industry who were also changing culture. But the fact, for the average person it was awful for them. The scarcity of money. You couldn't get bank loans back then unless you had something to put up as collateral. You couldn't even get a credit card in the UK at that time. But you're supposed to be happy for this fake made up package deals like the Beatles, you know, and many others. That's how it's presented to the public. They would go on the stage, like Top of the Pops, every group that went on, and they would mime. You would notice they either generally didn't have any leads going into the guitar, if you're observant at all, or you would see the leads went nowhere, they just went to a dead end and taped down to the floor.

These packaged groups were really modeled after the American system, where you had the family type things, the Jackson 5 and all that. And the Cassidy's, was it the Cassidy's as well? There was a whole bunch of them anyway. But they were like family things, all made-for-TV. The music was all written for them and they're a package deal, etc. That's how they did it in Britain too. It was the first time they had really done that kind of thing for the TV group in Britain. They would throw movies out about the guys, you get the four guys running here, laughing here and getting chased by women and running away from them and yada, yada, ya. All very, very silly stuff. A big package thing.

But for most of the public, they didn't have the cash. As I said before, there were freezes on wages and freezes on everything really. Except, even though they had their own prices supposedly, but the prices kept going up anyway. Even energy was awfully expensive. A lot of folk in the working classes had meters in their homes. You'd put, initially it was a shilling I think it was, and you might get an hour, or less than that, of electricity if you're using a bulb or two, you know. Of course it would go up all the time, they'd keep resetting the meters. But yeah, things that folk take for granted today were in dire straits back then. Terrible.

But they gave you all this make-believe stuff for the youngsters to believe in. And the revolutionary thing behind it all too. Especially with as I say, the Bob Dylan stuff. Initially it was all revolutionary stuff, along with Joan Baez. Then it didn't work so well. So they changed it to sex, sex, you see, sex, sex, sex. And drugs, that was the next stage. Because the other part wasn't doing too well, the old system. So revolution is a great way to foment during stagnation times. Just like it is today.

For those who haven't noticed, the buildup to the Covid, before that had broken out, a feeling of stagnation. What we were getting all the time was wars across… The same wars. The 30 years in the Middle East, at least 30 years. And Afghanistan again. And watching the US getting burned out with its debt burden for instance. Except for the big corporations that are behind the wars and supplying it, it's very lucrative. And the companies that grab all the oil, and Tony Blair kind of admitted a bit of that too. But as I say, it was a stagnation. It was like nothing else is happening. Things were getting more expensive. The money was becoming worth less and less, especially after that last crash 2007/8.

So those who run the world, and getting back to this book, that's what it was about. It was well done actually. As I say, they meet on an island to find out that their archenemy, who is the opposite, they think he's come to kill them all because they're kind of a cultic groups, you know, they have little passwords and secrets and stuff. Then they find out, no, he's a nobility but he is on our side. They meet the bishops of the Catholic churches and different ones like that who are also in this particular group. So all sides that generally opposed each other for the rest of the year, or seemed to, it was all arranged to do so using the dialectical technique, you know.

You want to change. You want to guide the world into, your world into the future that you have planned. So they decide where they want to take it, then how to take it there, and you must have conflicting parties. Again the simplest technique, if there's only two, then it's the thesis, antithesis and synthesis. You've got the thesis, right, here's the ruling system as it is, this is how you live. Here's some people who argue, oh, we want a different system, so you oppose things, and you get it going. Out of the arguments and the debates, and sometimes wars, you get the synthesis, which is the goal that you wanted in the first place. You've got to have opposing parties to get change going.

That's part of the technique of ruling the world. It is by those, the elite people planning where they want to take the world, their world. They'll never do without. They'll never make the world equal for themselves, believe you me, except that they are equally running it all on top, or owning it all on top. But they'll never jump into the same financial system as you are into, believe you me.

So yeah, they all met on the island and they, they were actually grooming the young boy, you see. They want, they call them visionaries, they wanted a visionary, the guy with insight. It gave him a lot of power initially. But his ego gets, he gets carried away with his own ego eventually and screws something up royally, and he's demoted and banished to a little island off Scotland I think it was, to live in a monastery with a vow of silence. In other words, you can't tell anybody what you're up to, right, or what you've done in the past, you're part of the brotherhood.

But it was interesting, the whole concept that that's how you rule the world. You create the enemies, and yet they're not enemies at all. Only the general public think they're all enemies, and they will believe it. They will even tell their children, oh so-and-so, they hate us, or, they're going to do this to us blah blah blah. You don't realize the leaders are all on board for the same agenda, you see.

That's what we have today isn't it? We have the crash in 2007/8. All these years, I've lost count of the talks I've given from not just the World Economic Forum but the different departments of population control, that have come out over many, many years that were on the go before I was born too, talking about, oh, there would be too many people. And the baby boomers, you know, people born after World War II were called the baby boomers. Like they had never had children before apparently, y'know. Then they said, they'll be old folk eventually, those baby boomers will be old eventually, and that was going to be a crisis as well. They never told you why it would be a crisis. Because I found out, by studying intensely, that they've had old folk down through history. Ahhh, I never knew that, ‘eh. So the baby boomers were going to get old, ‘eh? And my God, what are they going to do with all these old folk?

They've told us in the last few years, they're more open about it, they have their favorite psychologists coming out, and so-called philosophers. And bioethics of course, this new science where they know what moral is, but you don't, you need an expert to explain it to you.

The same scenario that you had with, and it's an awfully good little quip, I watched it again the other day, I've got it saved on a disk somewhere. It was The Meaning of Life by the Monty Python crew. It opens up with John Cleese and one of the guys from Monty Python, in white coats chapping on the door. Chapping is a knock, you see, it's a chapping on the door. A woman opens it up, it's one of the other members of the team, and asks about the address and the whole thing and is your husband in? He mentioned the name. That's him, yes, he's through there. They go through there and literally whip out his liver, you see, they're here to get his liver. Because he had put down that he was going to be a donor if anything happened to him of course, ill or anything like that. They didn't wait until he died, they just went and got his liver.

Then they try to talk the wife into giving the liver as well, at the end of it, by making her realize how small she was. There was this massive universe where there's planet swirling around space in galaxies and so on, thousands of miles an hour, etc., and how small you are in all this great scheme of things. And she says, okay, okay, then they go to work and whip out the liver.

Again, you understand this whole idea of bioethics is being promoted and promoted and promoted for years and years, even when the Monty Python crew all met, I think it was at Oxford, it was one of the universities they met at. They got that kind of stuff put in their faces there too, where the world would go, how it would be run and experts would rule us all. Because Britain came out of World War II after opposing national socialism, they came out as an international socialist country. [Alan laughing.] Meaning, communist if you like. But communism is awfully good to those who rule it. Because it means that people have to scrape at the bottom with their wage freezes and price freezes and all that, and the rationing of electricity and poor food if they can afford the decent stuff at all, even get access to it. But the elite love it.

That's what I'm talking about, it's the same scenario, you see, run by the bioethicists who keep telling us there's too many of YOU, like it's a crime. There's too many of you, ‘eh, and they just know it, and you should feel terrible about existing. So they went to town by social engineering a whole generation. I even mentioned that back in the 90s. I says, right now the children, the children's books, because that was all the rage then, there were awfully good exposes on it at the time of the grants that were given by our tax money, and the culture industry as they like to call it, from government, every government has got a Department of Culture. You ever wonder what it's about? It's to help create the beliefs of the upcoming children, you see.

You get paid money, still do if you write children's books and incorporate all the new politically correct things into it, you know. The child grows up thinking all these things are quite normal, because it's and storybooks. And adults would tell you if it was bad. But they don't because they themselves feel guilty if they say, oh maybe the child doesn't.... you know, maybe it will upset them to find out the truth here. Well, all kinds of things really are engineered into all these different stories, and movies, for children as well. That's how you shape the future, through the culture industry, you see. And through politics. And through all the organized and well-funded and directed, and the leaders are all supplied to them [Alan chuckles.], all these different groups that oppose each other. Either in politics or the ones in the riots that you get too, civil disobedience and stuff like that. I caught on to that myself as I say many, many years ago how that part was all run.

You'll find those who organize, who are the real organizers, are well looked after financially. They know what the score is. They know they're using everybody that follows. But they get well-financed. The nongovernmental organizations that were all invited, the heads of them, I think I mentioned this last week, I mentioned it years ago when it actually happened years ago when the globalist meetings were on with the big international global corporations with the governments all meeting in Canada and different countries. There were massive demonstrations with the students who had legitimate beefs about, the thing initially was, anti-global.

Because they didn't want these massive corporations exploiting Third World countries for the cheapest labor and getting immense profits because of the cheapness of labor, then they get paid by your tax money to import it back into your own countries. So we would buy the stuff there, and they would keep the prices at the same price as though they were made in Britain or Europe or America or whatever. But the fact is, it was a fraction of the cost, so it was massive profits for them. Massive greed profits. It hasn't changed.

The politicians looked down, you actually saw them, they had a camera crew up there from some TV station and they allowed that quip out to the public, that little bit. They looked down and says, well who are they, what party, what groups are they? They mentioned some of the names of these different groups that oppose them, student groups and so on. He says, well why don't we just invite some of the leaders to come up. And they did. Then they put the same leaders on salaries. That's why they're very selective in what they protest. They're TOLD what protest. The leaders are all well-paid on salaries living high on the hog, really. Really high on the hog. They get paid better than a lot of the working-class people. They're not working-class, though it seems. They get all the followers.

They get well trained by the way, there's all kinds of government agencies that deal with training folk for subversion. That's what your own MI6 in Britain and you've got CSIS in Canada and many other organizations, and again the CIA is one of the experts in it now. They literally are masters at how they create organizations to foment rebellion. I gave the talks on soft power, the creation of soft power they call it, and how they used it across a good part of Europe. Soros does it too. Because they're all ONE big club. There are no enemies here, I hope you understand that, at the top. That's why your CIA, your Mossad, your MI6, all the different groups at the very top are all on board with the same agenda. All of them. And you couldn't keep any of them out, could you? Your own group will eventually get infiltrated. They found that before World War II started with many of the different organizations that existed then. So you bring them all on board in a big pact working together. Again, you play, just like the adversaries, the fake adversaries that you had in that book, that Stone [White] Cutter, you know. It is quite fascinating when you see that's how the world really is run.

It's like John le Carre reading some of his books as well. You get little… Don't get wrapped up in the story, I don't. [Alan chuckles.] But what's interesting is the little bits of techniques they'll show you on the way, you see. How everyone is still disposable. Except the very ones at the top, the ones who don't go out in the field so to speak are more important. They're the ones who play the chess games using thousands of people, sometimes millions, across the world. That's how the world is really run.

We've gone through this whole Covid thing, oh, the world is going to fall apart, and the sky IS falling. But initially it was, they made sure that everybody saw, we all saw the little bits from China. And oh, horror stories came out of China! Horror stories! And there was no censorship on the West's part about the horror stories. There was no cry from the big tech companies about, oh that's false and that's bad, it's not, it's not true information, false, false news. There would be none of that. No. They made sure you got your hefty, hefty doses of terror, you see.

Then of course the World Health Organization and then Fauci too declared it a pandemic, and they only had 100 odd cases outside of China at that time! That's impossible. You understand this? That's, oh, we changed the rules just for this. They change the rules of how to define a pandemic. You didn't need numbers anymore, or figures. [Alan chuckles.] Which is your first clue it's a big, big con going on here, massive con. Of course it is. Many things have come to light along the way too.

But the fact is, the media were calling everybody else, you know, fake news that were reporting about, look what's happening in China. You put the links out and there's all the... There's massive trucks going down the streets in Wuhan and blasting this mist out of them that they've gone hundreds of feet into the air, and guys carrying these blasters that blasted stuff from backpacks and so on, like heavy mists. Horror, horror. My God. And Wuhan, Wuhan, oh my God there's a Biolab not far, about a couple of miles away, yada, yada ya. So we all got the picture, we all got the picture that was meant to be put across.

Then of course it literally, SAGE and the group that SAGE... There's different levels of SAGE you understand, and some of them are so secretive you still won't get the names of some of them yet. But we got the names of SAGE and one of the subgroups that is specializing in terror, the creation of terror on the public. I've got the actual form they gave out to the media, all the different media were given them, this step-by-step thing of how they'd have to basically terrorize the public into compliance. So the different levels of terrorization on the public, and to increase anxiety, they said, for those who were unwilling to comply with all the rules.

So it's a nice way of calling... Well, we don't call it terrorizing, no, we call it increasing anxiety. And it may lead to depression, maybe even suicides. But listen, it has to be done to make them comply. This is animal management; I hope you understand. This is Pavlovian here. Your own governments employs agencies to terrorize you. This is not new by the way. It's been done many times. They use it in warfare. Oh, you're all going to die unless you hate those folk that we're going to go to war with. And we want you to hate them so that you will go to war with them. That's standard stuff.

But again, here you have it, you're in a socialized system now, a good atheized, socialized system with experts' rule. The new Soviet is in the West, you see. This was their mantra, science rules. All the psychiatrist's and behaviorists and neuroscientists, they're all on board together, with their hands out and filling up their massive pockets that they have in those white coats, you've noticed, 'eh. Because they fill out, the grants are getting thrown out like confetti to them. These are your future multibillionaire's here, folks. Oh, give me another… I could sit and write 10 studies a day of imaginary things quite easily and say, give me another few million every other day and I'll investigate these things further, I can keep churning this stuff out. That's what they do, folks.

But the psychological teams are just weapons. These are weapons experts, weapons of the mind, you see. That's what they use on you. They understand you and what makes you tick. They understand how YOU will react to scenarios if they present it in the proper way, to make you react in absolute fear and terror and panic, and then they will guide you where they want you to go.

I mentioned this even in the 90s, that's what they do. When the public are quite happy, because they're natural people, you see, quite happy to be, again, pretty stagnant sometimes in a field or two for grazing away. If it's not too bad, and there's good trash getting turned on television just to make you kind of fade out when you come back from work, if you got a job that is, and you can just fade out in front of the television set watching trash really. It's all trash really, it's been trash for an awful long time, they just churned out trash. Just like Orwell talked about a 1984 where machines which churned out the music too, maybe even the novels, the porno novels, maybe in the movie type things, that's what he was getting at, that it would be so automatic and automated, that as long as the main messages got out there, you know, it didn't matter about the quality so much. That's what TV was too.

But also updated you, as they say, with the new PC things. Oh, I shouldn't think about that like that anymore, I should accept this new normal. And oh, there's another new normal and I'll accept that too. Then you get again, more experts that would come out, and you sit and watch that... that trash you get all the time, buried in experts. Did you know, y'know, that blah blah blah. There's one I'll put up tonight from, I thought it was a joke at first. But again, somebody's got their hand out. Maybe it is still a joke. Because it's technically a joke, isn't it [Alan laughing.] where literally they said that the strangers having sex during Covid should still wear masks. [Alan laughing.] I thought, there you go, eh! Here they are into a kind of an Eyes Wide Shut kind of thing, very kinky.

But whether it's real or not, it wouldn't surprise me. Because it's all kinds of farces going on with the hands out, as government throws out trillions of your hard-earned cash, that's going to devalue your currency forever and ever and ever, to these parasites! Parasites that all got their little confetti degrees from university on this, that and the other to be experts in RUBBISH, absolute tripe! They're prostitutes basically. I have no time for these people at all. They're shallow. They're psychopathic, no doubt about it, when they have no guilt on what they're doing to the public and reaping such incredible benefits off misery, you know. They're psychopaths, no doubt about it.

They churn this tripe out, constantly, just daily. We don't realize, you've had that your whole life, you know. I can remember years ago in Britain they showed us some of the TV talk shows, to give as an example. They were showing you how it was done in America with talk shows back in maybe the 70s, maybe even before that, but the 70s for sure, the 80s. Phil Donahue was one of the guys they showed you. But they showed you, and this is what was obvious too, when you saw the ending of one of Donahue shows, the thing went on for, unrolled for 10 minutes of the names and organizations of professionals and psychologists that put all this thing together for that ONE hour show, maybe 40 minutes really, 45 minutes once you got the ads out of the way.

What they could do was present something with, then, was shock value, but done with authority. Donahue would always speak with command and authority, you know, like he knew what he was talking about. One of them was women, about four women on stools I think or highchairs. He says these are some real professional women, to discuss things. But they don't tell you that every.... Even then they had such a great survey done on the public. They knew who was right-wing, left-wing, in the middle, progressive, meaning they're for all kinds of new kind of ideas, sexually or whatever, yada, yada, yada. So they knew them. So they would ask the right audience with each particular topic; that still goes on today for different things. So they had the right ones in.

But these women, he said, as soon as he mentioned their names you know, they're, they might not be liked by many townsfolk because they're women of the night, they're madams and prostitutes. And there was a big hhhhhhhhh, hush. Which of course was expected. Everything was done so perfectly, like, they'll probably go hhhhhhhhh now, and so they give you a pause for that. Everything is prearranged. The audience don't even know themselves generally, most of them anyway. So he starts off with that. That's years ago too when there was still a bit of ideas of right and wrong. Because meeting prostitutes and all this kind of stuff can damage family units, which makes towns up, and eventually communities up too, and families with children and all the rest of it. That can help destroy them. We know that now. It's been pretty successful. But they had the normal response back then, oh my God, oh dear, ohhhhhhhhhhh.

But within the 45 minutes to an hour, he'd have, and the way it's presented, step-by-step, pre-managed you see, it's all worked out and produced before it was produced, if you like, and they've got all these experts and psychologists and psychiatrists working on their scripts with them They actually had the women crying on behalf of these women, because they had such a hard life to get on, and they're earning money, and they're doing the community a service know, you see. That's back then. That's how slick it's done. You don't realize it. Until you, with any of these talk shows, look at, the longest part of the talk show is when they unroll the credits at the end on all the different participants and organizations and agencies that all took part in it to make that one hour possible. Very important you understand.

Most folk don't even think of that. They really think it's all spontaneous. There's nothing that comes across TV that spontaneous. TV is one of the most powerful tools that's ever been invented. And weapon. I think even, what's his name, the producer, the TV producer, or the movie producer... Spielberg mentioned the same thing, it's a great weapon, one of the greatest tools and weapons. Others have said the same thing of course. Orwell in different off-the-cuff comments about radio at the time and the coming technologies that would be shown, movies at that time of course they had that, he said was a tremendous tools and power for managed changed. It doesn't mean it's a good change, because those in charge, tyrants can use it so easily. Which, obviously they do.

The things you take for granted as I say, it's astonishing. And why shouldn't you take things for granted? You'd be ultra-ultra-paranoid and biting your nails and neurotic at everything if you were brought up with just a basic crash course as a child, a crash course in how the system really, really works. You're meant to be naïve. You're meant to take things at face value. Then you're a good citizen because you comply with everything you're told to comply with. That's awfully important to those who control societies.

Now, when you have a massive experiment going on, which is also part of a complete change, it's meant to be a new world order, remember, a completely new way of living coming out of the Covid. They talked about that, that nothing would ever be the same again. Told by Mr. Foxy, little foxy Fauci, a man who is so involved with this big [Alan laughing.] ahh, what can you say? ...well worked out agenda along with Bill Gates. They've got their fingers in all the pies that's profiting from it, it would seem to me. It's not just guessing either. And with the complicity of all parties, and all countries, ‘eh, and all agencies of government remember.

You're right back again to the island in The Stone Cutter [The White Cutter] where they all meet there, all the different supposed opposites, the ones who really truly believe they're arch enemy is, and ready to kill each other. No, they're pals in their brotherhood as they manage the world and shape it through conflict and public arguments. Even repression. Even killing people of the peasantry and so on to make changes happen. But it's all planned ahead of time.

Getting back to what I'm saying, all sides are complicit at the very top, high levels of government. They could never ever be always at loggerheads with each other. When it's not efficient, don't forget their whole motto is efficiency! Technocracy, efficiency, you see, where experts will run everything. The whole communist system was based on atheism and science was the new religion. Science. Through science they would conquer everything. But they would also rule everything. That was all kinds of social experts, again, and psychologists and behaviorists, they would manage the population and they'd have perfect peace when you're all trained into being zombies. You see?

So, it really took participation. Even during the Cold War, even as a child, I said, this thing is so fishy, the whole Cold War scenario. Because I went to library, and we had good libraries in Scotland. If they didn't have the right books in, they'd order it for you if you knew what you were looking for and what you wanted. But they had great reference libraries too. They went through the whole, these books on the science of warfare, things like that. They would go into the Cold War strategy, etc. etc. Again, you have all these specialists announcing that those with the most advanced technologies would win this Cold War, and any kind of war in fact. That still goes true today.

Even one of the top generals that's against Trump there recently, I looked into the one, you know what one it is, who's turned against him, you know. There's a bunch of them turned against him. But there's lots and lots and lots of generals remember, they make it seem like they're all against him. But you forget too, a lot of them are also on the payroll of the military industrial complex, so they're awfully rich, [Alan chuckles.] an awful lot of rich multimillionaire generals there. They also belong to their brotherhood too of course. And the brotherhood is part of THE establishment, you see, it IS the establishment at the very top. There's lower orders of it and higher orders of it of course.

But you find as I say, efficiency, for efficiency's sake you see, why would you always be at loggerheads with an enemy, like Russia, during the Cold War? And since science and the top scientists, they're always talking about, oh they'll steal our scientists. Occasionally you would have that in the papers, oh my God if this top scientists leaves Britain, we'll be left defenseless, he'll work for the Russians. And vice versa and so on. But what you find is all through the Cold War all different types of science would have its own meetings with the Soviet system, annual, sometimes twice a year. So you have the physicists meeting twice a year and you'd have the different ones for psychology again, because they were all involved in, how do you keep your populations placid and, you know, obedient, things like that. And other ones who would deal with food supplies, agriculture.

They'd either meet at the United Nations or they'd meet in Russia. It was generally in Russia where they went to meet. That was interesting to me. And the British taxpayer would have to fund it. I thought, why would you, why would you be so terrified of them defecting to the Soviet system, but at the same time your top, top atomic scientists there and biowarfare experts, all this kind of stuff, why would you have them meeting their counterparts in Russia to share? Well, it's for the advancement of science. No, these folks were all involved [Alan chuckles.] in weaponization of different things, you know. Why would...? But it was allowed! Which told me this thing, this is not what they're telling us it is. Obviously. Really.

If the book said it, and they all said, you know, that's what we were all taught, again, officer colleges too would teach the military the same thing, that science is going to, those with the most advanced science will win and dominate. But here's your best scientists every year going over to meet your counterparts in Russia? It made no sense at all. None at all. Until you realize you’re back to that book again The Stone Cutter. [The White Cutter.] That's what you do. Because after all, since it's all based on efficiency, why wouldn't you have agreements with them? Because you all want the same things, don't you? Efficiency.

The Soviet system also was really, pushed for the elimination of religion. The West too took on that role more and more and more, again through TV and movies and so on, it pushed, and all the joking and y'know the gesturing, the nasty gestures towards religion, all get sunk through until folk became atheized themselves and just fell away. And the Church of England was a joke because it was so progressive in the lefty sense of the thing, there was nothing left to save. You see? Then when you end up having archbishops, like the Archbishop of Canterbury who is a Druid and a very high Freemason too and belongs to a different groups as well apart from the Druids, [Alan chuckles.] then it's over and done with, you know. Then you had mass defections of what was left back to the Catholic Church. Others to the Eastern Orthodox Church. Because they realized that the war that they were fighting against the Communists in the East [Alan chuckles.] actually had destroyed what was left of your own system back home. With the complicity of their own governments of course.

But religion really in Britain was, it was tied to the crown. That's why it also went under.

Because in World War I, as an example, even before but in World War I, with the crown and the King or the Queen being the head of the Church of England, then hhhhh, obviously how could you have all your ministers and priests blessing and telling the folk to be behind wars, which were antithetical to the peace and love and all the rest of it? It didn't work. So with the shock of mass deaths in World War I and the mass financial depression after it too, and it got into World War II, Britain didn't really improve because of the war. As I say, war pulls you out of the depression, the physical, financial depression. But Britain didn't because it was on rationing, and tokens really were used for it just as well as money during World War II. But once again the church tried and failed really to promote the war in their churches. After World War II there was nothing left really to stand up for. They had broken everything they stood for, and it faded away, it fell away, you see. Sad, really.

Because then you're into the scientific system running our lives. And you believe in it. And you're taught to believe in it, that science, you're humanist, you know, there's another term for it too, a secular humanist, has their own manifesto and it is a religion as well. That man is a God really and the right gods, the right human gods should rule over the rest of you. It's very Greek in a sense, isn't it? I always thought that when I was young, I thought, you know, the Greek idea of God's, like a hierarchy of gods, and it's wonderful too how they're all based on kind of humans, that kind of look like humans most of them, although they could change their form and shape shifters, etc. And the Greeks had fantastic stories, the children must've loved it even back then.

But the Greeks would talk about, again, degrees of godhood. That the earth itself was the lowest form of existence. Because everything was base and temporal and temporary for humans and animals and things, where you didn't live that long back in those days sort of thing. And you're at the mercy of the winds and the climate and all the rest of it too. And you're at the mercy of bad food supplies at times, and wars, and famines, things often brought on by people too. So it wasn't the greatest place to be. So you'd turn to the gods. What was good about it too, I suppose, you see, if it was primitive man, but they weren't so primitive actually, [Alan chuckles.] they were pretty intelligent, [Alan chuckles.] the Greeks.

They'd have different gods, which is like India. And by the way, they were well aware of India and Hinduism, etc. The Greeks studied all the different religions. But they knew that the public, as they're suffering, it would help to calm them to some extent but give them hope in tough times to pray to different gods for different functions. That became awfully important. Even the church adopted that, the Catholic Church adopted some of that too with saints and so on, different ones for special purposes, special problems.

It's very human. It's a human thing really when you think about it, because there's times where nothing scientific [Alan chuckles.] is going to satisfy you. That old saying, the world is not enough, can be awfully true at times. If you're going through really terrible horrible times in your life, and it's true, the world is not enough, there's no book out there or self-help book that's going to help you, that they churn these things out of machines too I think so fast it's incredible.

But there's a spiritual side to humans that some folk want more than others. They desire it more. It's not a weakness by the way. Total atheists will say it's a complete weakness. But it's not. It's a natural thing. If you get experiences from it that are beneficial to you, then obviously there's nothing wrong with them. You know?

But the Greeks said, again, they knew the world was somehow bad, kind of like the Albigensians later on, the Albigensians. So the God that was in charge of the world, it would be the lowest form, the demiurges, a kind of a bully type God, kind of strict and all the rest of it. Very human in some ways. But there were other Gods above them, that's how they kind of tried to work it out to be.

The Greeks also had all the different schools of thought, they call them schools. Only the wealthy classes got education. That's where the word 'school' comes from, 'Scola', for really 'leisure', you know. So their upper classes had more instruction in philosophies, and they would debate life, and the meaning of life if you like, more than other people's. And they wrote it down for future generations to see.

So you understand that the enemy of basic human, real human feelings and needs, which cannot be supplied all the time by material goods, y'know, are spiritual, the one thing that the left and the humanists have hated, and the technocrats, for all this time, is this remnant of either religion... They don't mind New Age spirituality because the new agers can be trained very quickly into sustainability, through the food that you're eating, what not to eat, what they should eat, what they should avoid, don't eat meat, be totally vegan, etc. Step-by-step, it's like a cult, they're brought into this way of thinking. And it's much easier today by the way with, say the last, oh, 20 years of heavy indoctrination through what they call the New Age.

I'll put up, I might put up a little YouTube link to a comedic sketch. And you've got to laugh at yourself. I don't care who you are, if you're offended by things all the time, then you really have problems. You're not living. You gotta get a life in some way or another. If you can't laugh at yourself, everybody should laugh at themselves sometimes. This comedian does his little skit on spirituality, how do spiritual people – meaning the New Age type, what you call the modern New Age, that came out of the old flower power era and got worse and worse and worse to now, it completely changed its character – how do they argue. It's a little comedy sketch he does. It's awfully, awfully well done. The guy is really good, and the team who helps put it together obviously is very professional in some ways. But that has happened, in the sketch you'll see a lot of that going on.

It's easier to train the ones who had the heavy, heavy, heavy brainwashing in school that the world's going to end tomorrow because of mismanagement of the planet. They don't know, they have no idea that all of this was written down years before they were born of how to manage, just like the terror campaign for Covid managed by the governments using their psy-ops teams and so on. This isn't conspiracy stuff. They published it, it's been published. I'll put it up tonight to show you how they would just terrify the public and apply extra anxiety on them etc. etc. Without letting them know that they were doing it. [Alan chuckles.]

You've got to understand this stuff. Well, they've been doing it all through school for 20 years, or more, maybe 30 years, preparing today since then. Today is just the culmination of all that indoctrination from then, with the right generation all stirred up ready to, almost ready to go and kill anybody older than themselves. I'm not kidding about that. They tried, this is the communist technique. The Communists are run by them too. There are no opposing sides that are not... The leaders in all opposing sides, I mean the real high leaders, and they do have high leaders who manage this like a chessboard, are all in on the same clubs, you know. Again you must get change, you must create opposing sides, and say, oh, let's work this out, and get a compromise. Which means change, you see. Planned change.

So as I say, the one thing that gets in the way is any other, like, a set type religion with set values and rules. The new age is very simple with its set rules, you know. Eventually you'll work yourself to be an ultra-master enlightened person who becomes utterly vegan eventually. The joke amongst them is that a vegetarian is just a form of sadism. That's what the vegans say. You become completely vegan, then you're really altruistic in a sense, you're virtuous, you have high virtue. You can really strut your stuff then and churn out books on how spiritual you are, you see? It's become an industry; I hope you've realized this. There's a complete industry out there. But it's used to control and guide people on behalf of those at the top.

That's why the sustainability problem being there's too many of you, are being promoted by the generation that's not going to have children and will phase themselves out, they'll die out without really changing much. They're eating very little. I really mean it, all these movies they're turning out too about The Culling and all the rest of it, The Purge, there's so many different names for them. It's all gearing them towards this whole idea.

They tried this you know with the Communists in the 60s. Don't trust anybody over 30. I mentioned that last week and many times before. Then they started lowering the ages of it. And Bob Dylan you know with… d'you think he's just a single person that writes, just turns out his stuff himself? Come off it here! Machinery system, it's a machine, hhhch. The whole industry is a machine. You don't become a star; you're made to be. I know all about who used to manage him, even a guy in government who was part of the management for creating revolutionaries in the culture industry took him over. I know the whole history of it. And out comes…

The Times They Are A-Changin'

Bob Dylan

Come gather around people, wherever you roam

(Alan: …and blah, blah, blah.)

And admit that the waters.

Around you have grown.

(A: …etc, etc.)

The times they are a changing

(A: Then it says your mother and father's and the older folk shouldn't…)

stand in the hallway.

your sons and your daughters are beyond your command.

This is all done by a well-organized communist agenda, well-funded with the partition of specialized government agencies and your big CIA group in the States and so on making it all happen. Do you realize an organization like the CIA, that has admitted about, at one time they had so many of their operatives or agents, because they have assets too, stuck in all the newsrooms across the country on television? They still do by the way. All the big names will be them, man or woman, I don't care who they are, especially on talk shows, are part of it. You see? They'll glide their particular flock into the big battle, the melee, as they say, but try to steer them through it with the right opinions on, the desired opinions on things. This is how it's all managed.

Efficiency, this big unwieldy herd, eh, humanity. You must have specialized leaders and agencies managing all the different groups. And they do. [Alan chuckles.] They definitely do. If you want instant rebellious groups, they'll give you one very quickly. Because they've got agents that are like chameleons, they'll change so fast and parrot the new lines that are all written out for them by the experts in subversions and stuff like that. This is old, old stuff. Old stuff. You get little glimpses of it, not much actually but little glimpses in the movie The Good Shepherd. But there's much deeper information on it if you really study the old books.

So yeah, governments do work with each other during it all. Why do you think Richard Nixon who was the staunchest, supposedly, anti-Communist, hm, why he was set up pretty well to fail by the deep state, that's always there, the ones who really run everything and rule it all and manage it all? Remember too, with the whole Vietnam fracas and everything else that was going on, the communist insurgents down in Latin America and things going on, he had a name for being a, you know, right-winger, you see. Why do you think the communist China, when he fell out of favor, supposedly, that's what you think…

Everybody thought he was dead. He just disappeared, until folk thought, oh he must have died over. Years later he emerges for his funeral, that's the only time he came back into the limelight was for his funeral, he got this massive burial. I think he got a gun carriage thing if I remember too with the boots going backwards, you know, in the stirrups and so on, something like that. That left everybody scratching their head, saying wait a minute here, we thought he was dead. Where has he been? He had been over working with the Chinese, he had been working covertly with China all those years getting it already for the free trade agreements and the set ups. Along with Maurice Strong, you know, another big globalist and sustainability expert, too many of you stuff.

In China, getting already with it, the Chinese asked for Nixon, Richard Nixon to be the guy to head it all. Why would the communist government ask for their archenemy to be the big heavy, heavy leader for this integrative system of a one-way free trade? [Alan laughing.] Because it pretty well is one way, isn't it? You ship all your cash to them, and they send the goods to you. So the balance of trade goes out the window from the beginning. It was never meant to be a balance of trade. It was a con by those who rule the world. So things are never as they appear to be. Never.

What you have even in the US right now, the Covid idea, it was meant to change everything immediately. And they're trying, Fauci is back out, oh you'd better start, you know, locking yourselves up again and the spike might happen, but it's not going to happen, blah blah blah. There's lots of stories, and I'll mention some of them later on. But here's the thing, it was fading off, this whole idea with the Covid thing, and bingo, then you get the radical left, well-trained organized, and the real leaders you're not going to see in the barricades. And those barricades, remember, it's like repetition of the barricades, or the burials they had in France during one of the revolutions there. That's what it's meant to be like, you know, we'll commandeer parts of the streets and so on, that's exactly out of the textbook. And it is.

For those at the very, very bottom, they've got the disaffected, you can see who they are. I won't go into the details of it because they're very... These are volatile topics now, there's a lot of crazy folk out there, I hope you understand that. That these are the nihilists and the atheists at the bottom who can do the damage, but they also are the ones that are easily disposed of at the end of it when their usefulness is finished. The ones who really organize it, believe you me, you won't see on camera the ones who plan it all. The ones with the high agencies and so on that bring in the cash and have the real, you know, expertise in intelligence services and agencies and so on. That's how it is.

Do you really think that your governments, and as I've said before, I caught on years ago. D'you really think your governments, who know all about everyone of you, daily, it's updated daily on you, do you really believe, in this day, and look at the Snowden stuff, all the different stuff that's been unloaded on the public from WikiLeaks and so on and yada, yada, yada, and the massive, it's like cities now that collect data on us all, and they admit there's nothing they don't know.
Do you really, even in 9/11 the big cry came up from the top groups, of course they knew about what was going to happen on 9/11. They said there's nothing can be kept hidden like that in this day and age. And it wasn't hidden. The head of one of the intelligence agencies in Britain came on the day after 9/11 and says, we warned them this was going to happen. Other agencies did the same thing. It was meant to happen. To change. A Pearl Harbor event, they needed it to happen, right.

That's how things are really run and worked out, folks. For BIG changes you've got a give a BIG scare. Just like the Covid thing. And when that doesn't work, you’re going to have, oh here's part two, the continuation of terror by different means. Because they're trying to crash, for the public to believe in, is the economy. Once this dies down, here's about you and the rest of them trying to get you all terrified again, oh, a spike could happen, you know. Even though the World Health Organization has lost so much credibility, they're kind of, well, there probably won't be a spike. It doesn't matter. Facts don't matter! Facts haven't mattered since this whole thing started.

It was a massive operation, this. When you see all the countries comply with the same agencies, you know it's a massive deception. If countries really were all independent, you wouldn't have this cooperation. You'd have all kinds of ideas out there. Hm? Let's commit suicide by stopping the whole economy of the planet. Hm? What a farce! What a farce, ‘eh. N-n-n. Quite something.

As I say, facts don't matter. Facts really don't matter. But yeah, now that they're using it again, what they call a spike, you know. Antifa talked about that in their training manuals and so on, and other subversive groups are taught by the same people by the way, at the top, you know. They get them all prepared and ready for the spike. It could be any incident on the list, and when the word is given, the code words, they jump into action, you see.

And they’re right there, they piggyback onto anything that gets the emotions going. In this case it was another guy that got killed by the police in the States. Incredibly so too. Televised to the world. And in a slow death. I mean, that was murder. I don't care if he had a heart attack in the process. You don't keep a guy on his belly like that for, with the knee in the neck for 8 1/2 minutes anyway. And yes, that is taught by foreign agencies, that technique. Of course it is.

We all know that. We all know that. The fact is too, okay, if the guy, IF the guy was passing off a dud $20 bill, so you killed him for that? You see what I'm saying? This is what it's coming down to. And it has come down to that for a long time that kind of thing.

But still, you've got this other group that piggybacks on that, on the emotional thing. Because they need numbers. It's the communist technique. The Communists always use this technique. You would exacerbate whatever wrongs were going on, not because you cared about the wrong, but because enough people, if enough people did care about the wrong, they could use those folk for numbers. That's what communism always did, exacerbate the problem, exacerbate the problem, and then jump on it so's that you can get yourself into some kind of leadership capacity and position. That's how it's done. Always was. Basic stuff.

They don't give a darn about you and the right or wrong, or some guy getting killed by the cops. They don't care. Not in the least. Not in the least, at the top. But they do want the same thing to come out of this, world order, you know. Sustainability. Just, on board with the same agenda that the elite want and I've been telling you about for years. And that David Attenborough and all these leaders, who belong to eugenic societies, they believe in superior peoples and inferior types. I've done talks on that for years on and off. They don't care about you. Or your little causes. But they will use you all.

Sure enough, you look at all the different groups that are participating, and yeah, you use the nihilists and the atheists, you'll use a lot of folk too, with problems, big problems, you can see them. That's what you loose, who carry the can at the end of it, you know. To change the world again. Because if they can extend all the chaos into the fall and then claim there's a big spike too, or release another, and this is not an impossibility here, it's been discussed by higher authorities, if they did release something that was more potent.

Why do you think they create all these biowarfare things? I mean come on here, you're not that naïve. They admit it, that these Biolabs under the pretense of wanting to find, if this little thing from this bat, this little thing you can't see, decides to jump and evolve a few hundred years in a matter of a month or two, we should do it first so we can be prepared for it. That's the excuse that they use for gain of function. What a farce.

They create, they create like that Mark Lipsitch said in the States at Harvard, and by the way he's one of the teams in the States and he was out talking recently. He talked and I put the link up, remember, I don't know if they pulled it from YouTube. He was giving a talk to students who are going into this field, and that was the title of his talk to them, is it right that we are creating potentially deadly pandemic diseases in the laboratory? Because that's what they DO, folks.

Marc Lipsitch--Should we be making potential pandemic pathogens in the lab?

YouTube.com

They've got an incredible arsenal of stuff they could unleash if they wanted to. But don't forget, the goal eventually is a radical depopulation of the world. One way or another. They've got a whole generation petrified, or at least a good segment. It would be interesting to know the percentage of youngsters that truly are neurotic about all of this with their indoctrination from Junior school all the way up. Using the same techniques by the way, in the school, that the SAGE group and the group that works to terrify the public, who admitted, telling the media to basically terrify the public into compliance. It's the same thing as they are being taught in school, terrify the children into accepting and believing it all. Then when they're in their late teens, let them loose on the public. You've got radicalized, terrorized people who are neurotic with fear.

I think it was something somewhere and I think it was in the Bible, that said that, in the end people would kill, they would kill the people, maybe even their parents, and believing, they would believe that they were doing God's work. Other holy books have similar things. Because similar things have been done in times gone by, by using youngsters that you radicalized. When it says that the children wouldn't obey parents and would be against their parents and so on, that's all been done in ancient times with different regimes. The US has used it in the States, the CIA have used it in Latin America and elsewhere across the world, creating terrorist organizations to supposedly overthrow enemies.

You create terrorist organizations, of children, and part of the training was to get them to go, to get induction they'd have to kill their parents and be seen to kill their parents to be allowed into the new radical group. Do you understand that this is how it really, really…

Do you really think the CIA goes over the world and persuades folk to see the better side of things? You know? D'you really believe that? Or the School of the Americas, [Alan chuckles.] where they bring them up from Latin American countries, train them to be merciless, MERCILESS terrorizers of the people that they were going to get sent back down to conquer, and how to torture and everything, you know. It's just astonishing how naïve folk really are.

Or is it part of human nature? I often wonder too, is it part of human nature that if your belly is full and you've got enough entertainment, and your little bubble world is, here's the same characters coming into that pub in the little comedy show that's on every week, and you know, that's your little world, make-believe and all that, that anything outside there done in another country must be the other country's fault. D'you really believe that? Hm? But that's what you've got.

Of course Britain has been complicit in it too. It's silence to what's been going on because the world, do you really think, here's something you've got to understand right now. Just a few years ago you saw armies, literally armies, like miles and miles of folk coming across from Africa and other countries in the Middle East as well, that had been under attack for years. Especially the ones in the Middle East. They've been in a 30 years' war from Gulf War One to the present, taking out the countries on the list, the PNAC group countries, all published. And the general [Wesley Clark] that talked about it to on Democracy Now. He says, yeah, there's a list of countries to get taken out. I did talks on the blowback.

Well what d'you think all these folk are going to do in, say, Libya and Iraq and Syria or Iran, which has been under the, for years, and it's a technique too to terrorize them so much, for fear of total destruction, they'll emigrate out by the way. I've got all the declassified stuff, and some stuff that's maybe not quite so declassified. I've had it for years. That's how you do it, you don't have to even bomb them at times. But if you were getting bombed, what do you think they're going to do when they're being told they're not going to be allowed to rebuild up to be a prosperous and self-sustaining country?

That was the agenda that Kissinger and Brzezinski had differed about. They didn't argue. They were in the same organizations, the CFR, the Trilateral Commission. They literally, Kissinger said, well it's maybe better if we have the long-term approach where you just bring them, basically he means just bomb them into the stone age and don't allow them to rebuild their country. Keep them, finance different segments that have come to be, live in peace, even if it's a forced peace by Saddam Hussein for instance. He kept the peace to an extent and kept everything functioning whether you like it or not, that's a fact. But now of course the US has financed all different groups to war with each other, and that's what Kissinger said they wanted, then they'd never be able to formulate and create a country again that was workable or a danger to anybody. That's it. Well, they weren't a danger to the West in the first place. Not the West.

Then of course they went into Libya and destroyed that too. That was the most prosperous country. As we know. I won't go into all the facts. Facts don't matter anymore. Folk tend to make their minds up on things without really studying anything, or even trying to remember what happened in their own lifetime. It was all looted, and again, they used the armaments that they caught too, and they used them to supply ISIS, with all the different changing names of the same group, financed by the West again, the US, to attack Syria. And they're still attacking it yet by the way and the US has still got the oilfields in the north. They built two more bases up there as well during all this peaceful period.

But the blowback is the people. Yeah, they're getting out. Armies of them came across into Europe. We saw them. Ha, folk in Germany are waking up and there's hundreds of them going through their streets and everything. They were getting welcomed off the trains in Sweden and elsewhere, blah blah. To change the face of Europe forever. That was part of it. But again, military age men, hm? Now, you just take what's happening now with the so-called Antifa movement, a lot of them that actually have been going into different places in the State and elsewhere... Well, I won't even go into it in much detail but some of them are definitely from those groups by the way. I'm sure a lot of them are actually paid to do it as well by agencies above them. But they jumped on the bandwagon, and they weren't into Black Lives Matter. They're well organized, those particular ones.

So there's more to all of the things than meet the eye. It's obviously been approved and authorized by those at the top. Because you've watched it happen in Britain. You've got to step back out of the massive onslaught, visual and auditory onslaught that you've got, by the same media that gave you the Covid idea and lockdowns and the destruction of the economy and all the rest of it, and literally terrified, deliberately terrified the public. Go back, stand back from all of this, all of this, what's happening, across Europe too, and in London, and even in Ireland where you've had horrific things done to Irish people, by people who are incomers. This is the key too, the incomers think they're in some kind of revolution because the media is telling them that. Young guys who are 16, 17 have no idea they're getting used. And they will pay for it down the road. Like Bezmenov said, they use folk and then they, the ones that they use, because you are technically revolutionaries, even if they are just violent, are done away with by the utopia system they help bring in. That's standard.

But go back again to the whole idea, as I say, of the elite, what the elite want. They plan everything way, way ahead and they are experts at using revolutions. All kinds of cover, not just color but it's cover, they're covers for something else, you see. Those who get riled up with emotions, because everyone's got a chip on their shoulder, everybody's got a chip on their shoulders these days, it's quite easy to get them into gangs or groups and all the rest of it and tell them to go at it.

That's the message across London for instance, as they topple statues and that. They literally think that they're getting rid of grievances. For what? What, they personally, what's their beef? Think about it. You see, emotions aren't logical, when you get into this kind of state of frenzy and there's sort of retribution or whatever it happens to be. It's racism! It's just turning the tables. And the ones who are the victims, literally claiming victimhood, are being racist to everybody else that's around them. They're given their target. They are GIVEN their target group obviously, it's allowed, and it's permitted, and promoted. From the very top.

The BBC media is all on board with it. Which gives the message to the rioters, go ahead, do what you want. And they ARE doing what they want. They're just stabbing people here and there and all that kind of stuff. They think they're going to get away with it all. It's just astonishing to watch this happen. But it's because the elite want it to happen. The people, the rest of the ordinary people have no idea what I'm talking about, that this is all permitted and planned to happen. This is standard technique of the elite, and other countries, they've used it in every other country, now they're just simply using it in their domestic countries, as they change it all for a world system. But you must create a chaotic system, a violent system in order to clampdown, and they will clampdown on everybody, EVERYBODY, big time. That's the agenda for a new type of system of authoritarian control.

That's what it is, folks. Don't you believe that the ones at the top, but what’s astonishing too, is all these members of Parliament are just radically left, that's what it appears to be. But the fact is, they take the orders from the ultra-elite in England. Of course they do. As they can turn a blind eye to what really, really is happening here and the violence, there's violence going on here. That's the message, that somehow, it's a revolution for righteousness. Who's kidding who? Who's kidding who? [Alan laughing.]

For righteousness, ‘eh, you'll end up in the same boat, all of you. The elite don't want so many of us all around anymore, of any color or creed or whatever. Believe you me. So you're all getting used. It's unfortunate that they've written off X amount, I don't know what that number will be, of folk that are allowed to get killed, and murdered, you see. But they definitely are accepting, they've got a definite quota of allowance, there's no doubt about it.

Britain is not what you think it is. It never really was. Today it's very apparent that it's not there to stand up for, say, British people or even domestic populations, traditional domestic population. No way at all. The peasants in Britain, it doesn't matter what color you are, are still peasants to the ultra-elite. And the ultra-elite of the world quite happily intermarry with each other at the very top. They're international at the very top. They see all the peoples of the world in the same light. You’re the remnants left behind after evolution, that's what they tell you in eugenics. You'll never make it. If you haven't made it by now up to their level, then you never will. You should read the reports from the Eugenics Society. There's whole records of their meetings up there and what their agenda is, going back 100 years, from their own records, you know.

So that's what it is. They don't shed a tear. It's no different than sending thousands of troops into battle and they don't care how many they lose as long as they have a few more than the enemy at the end of it, then you've won. They don't see you as people really, at the top. They never really have. It's very appropriate to remember the movie Braveheart, when King Edward uses different, again, ethnic groups against other ethnic groups as warriors. Standard technique of the British Empire. They tried to use Irish against the Scots. And Welsh against even the English, and the Scots at different times. So this is what they've always done. Edward eventually tells the archer, when there's a battle, a hand-to-hand battle going on, he tells his own archers to fire into the crowds that are all combating. He said, but we'll kill our own men. He said, it doesn't matter, we've got more in reserve. THAT'S how it really is folks.

For all you silly folks who literally think you're getting your own back, your own back for some reinforced indoctrinated grievances of the past, it's astonishing, like it's going to make a big difference by killing other folk today? Is that what you really think? Do you really think you're going to get away with this and you're not being used? It's just amazing to watch it all happen. And all these prostitutes in government in different countries, pretending they don't know it's going on, [Alan chuckles.] even though it's all over YouTube in reality. You wouldn't know that if you watch the BBC, the Marxist BBC who've really sworn allegiance, they'll all get up the ladder, they might get OBEs eventually and big bank accounts if they play the game on behalf of their masters. That's how it really works.

Just like the blowback, planned blowback from the Middle Eastern wars they planned. They didn't say, oh my goodness we didn't realize armies of people would leave Africa and different countries and the Middle East and flood through Europe. Of course they knew that. It's a chess game, what do we get when we do this, this, this, and this, what will happen? It's all planned yeears ago, sometimes before you were born. That's how things really, really work, you know. And it's never for the benefit of any domestic population. You're just cannon fodder, that's what you are.

All of those things that are happening are authorized from the top. Because believe you me, there's nothing happens, I don't care what scrambled systems they're using for communication. If you've seen, the GCHQ in Britain, is, it's like the NSA, there's thousands and thousands of folk employed there, all the latest stuff, and experts, blah blah blah. They break everything. I'll tell you another thing too, anything that they'll use, oh it's scrambled for the..., they've use them for the groups over in the Middle East when they wanted uprisings in Egypt and so on, all designed by the West to scramble them. It's the same stuff they're using here that's all encrypted. It's completely [Alan chuckles.] decoded in real time by GCHQ. They know what's going on. They know where folk are going to target and pulldown statues. Because it's all organized. There's professors and everything involved in the US and in Britain with all this stuff. It's meant to happen.

Because you're going to go into a time after all this of change. This is the century of change. I've talked about it. A transition that they've talked about in the universities in the 20th century, over the coming change, the century of change, the century of transition, everything was to transition, literally everything. Your way of thinking, definitely, big time into sustainability and better management by the authorities. To save you all. Again. Don't forget, it's always the same hype.

When they have their meetings on sustainability, which are completely intertwined with the climate change group, because they use the climate, they thought that would fit the bill. The Club of Rome said that when they were given the task to find something that would, we're all gonna die unless we do that... Oh, it's going to be the climate, and we're causing it, man is the enemy, yada yada. So that's what they used for a while. Global warming just fell into the dust. This last few night here in Canada, northern Ontario here, I've had freezing temperatures at night. About two in the morning it's just down to 32°, 33°. The highest in the last week it's been is about 40° Fahrenheit, at night.

So any excuse to terrorize, oh, you're all going to die and fry, fry, everyone's going to fry if you don't reduce the population, you're the problem. And the World Economic Forum, it's ad nauseum isn't it? The World Economic Forum said at the last meeting last year, that humans again were the problem and that they weren't taking it all seriously enough, and they were still consuming and consuming, you weren't going to go into a postconsumer society, so they have to make something happen. Well bingo! You got it. Covid. Now riots.

Then you're going to have the fake financial system that can add as many, they can keep putting fake money into their fake accounts if they want to for as long as they want to. It's all fake. It's all based on nothing for goodness’ sake. But they're not going to tell you that. They're just going to say, oh my God your dollar is going to, and your pound in Britain is going to be so devalued by another 30% to 40% after the last big crash in 2007/8, then, oh, you've got to have real austerity here. Bingo! They wanted austerity.

And they wanted energy taxes. That's what technocracy is all about, everything is an energy unit. They've floated the ideas again, oh, energy is a currency unit. How much are you consuming? Even your food, oh, how much energy went into growing those vegetables, etc.? Then they'll even put the cost of the pesticides on too, by the way. Oh, the energy to make those pesticides and chemicals, oh my God, that's all energy units, energy units. This is your new system. Again, Bertrand Russell talked about it, a credit system. Because they were well aware of what technocracy was. And so were the Soviets by the way. The Soviets were to be based on a kind of system like that, all energy units, consumption, materialism, etc. Each item of the material would cost so much to make blah blah blah blah blah, then they work out a cost on it. That's how it's all done.

Money, right now, is a substitute for all this, isn't it? It really is. So there's nothing that they've planned they're not going to get. They are in the process of getting what they want. They'll use terror after terror, either of diseases or famine, because you can create a famine quite easily, or anything they want to do quite easily.

It's not far-fetched by the way to go through looking at Africa. Looking at Africa. I remember, I won't go into all the thing about it and so on. But I do remember when they were discussing it with AIDS thing in Africa, it was hitting them faster and quicker and so on. That was one of their target countries for, you know, that Kissinger talked about, the Third World countries at the time that were reproducing too quickly he said. And bingo, they get hit with something like that, that hit them faster, much faster than the West. It's never been really fully, fully explained a lot of the stuff. I won't go into it all because again you get hammered for false news. You know, the official news comes from Fauci who's been in on the AIDS things since the beginning, along with Gallo and so on. The same characters isn't it. The same characters. But that's just coincidence.

So you're living through a script. I've said it so many times, you're living through a script. Our prewritten scripts. All the big parts of it are just part of the plan, you see, a script, and they unfold it step-by-step. And you'll adapt into it in reality, you're thinking it's all just real reality, [Alan chuckles.] this is your reality, well, they have to save us all from dying of that Covid thing. Then scam after scam is certain. Never mind the fact there's no logic or reality to 6 feet apart. It was invented by a schoolgirl to get her name in the history books by her daddy, who worked in computer programming for the military-industrial complex. No basis in reality. Never been done before. Let's go 6 feet apart! Oh, the SARS one was probably about 3 feet apart, this has gotta be double that, 6 feet apart.

Sure enough, apparently, they could arrest you. They had the public so terrified in the stores, they'd literally have hysterical fits if a person was getting too close to another shopper, you know. And walking one way, all this absolute new think, new behavior, you see. New obedience. It's all new, new, new. And when you're adapting to new, new, new nonsensical stuff, do you realize that is the stampede I've talked about many times, they get you moving. You like the field you're in, you get comfortable with it, you're chewing away, you're chewing the grass, it's nice. How do you get from there to there? Well, you get new, new, new until you're terrified, and when you're terrified all reason goes out the window and you'll adapt to whatever you've been told to, no matter how silly it is. If they told you to walk on your hands everywhere, you'd start too, a lot would start to do it. They would. Yes, they would, if they're terrified, they would.

A lot of the women, it was a fake message on 4Chan apparently, again, the Stockholm syndrome jumped into the group that's being terrorized. Oh, there's too many folk, we're going to starve to death, oh my God, we're going to fry in the world, and deforestation, aaaaaaaaaa, terrible. A lot of the folk who read that, the woman said they were to shave their heads in compliance to show they are on board with the whole thing. And they did. It was a joke, but they did it. They didn't know it was a joke. Because they have Stockholm syndrome... I'll show how virtuous I am, and they'll leave me alone, they won't, they might not bash me in. You know? But it's all allowed by your governments who are all on board with this.

No matter how many die even with Covid, remember, of this, they can't get medical treatment and all the rest of it, oh, massive, huge… It doesn't matter. That's an acceptable, whatever the figure is it's an acceptable figure. It will be the same thing with the chaos with this literally on the edge massive communist revolution that's on the go. This has nothing to do with the protests. It was hijacked immediately by the Antifa group that's well-funded and well-paid, the leaders are at the top anyway.

They use all the radical types who haven't grown up yet and figured anything out yet, you see. They use them for all the, they are the ones who take, carry the can eventually when they come for them. Brzezinski talked about this technique. Once you got the system in, that's decided upon by powers above them by the way, then you can't allow them to continue. Because they won't get their utopia. They won't get their perpetual life of free drugs and free food and free whatever else is their fancy for the day, every day. They won't get that, so they'll create more riots. And the authorities know that, who they are, and they come for them. That's the Soviet system. That's how it's done.

But yeah, it doesn't matter if they get unleashed just, and this is the dangerous time by the way, when they are putting up their little free zones, as I say, their little barilles [?], in France they had them in the revolution then, the later revolutions anyway, at the barricades. They turned on each other towards the end. That's the standard thing that happens. Because they're radical folk that are left there, you know. Nothing can make them happy. The problem is inside them. Some of them are mentally ill for goodness’ sake. They start to argue for supremacy, different groups forming amongst them, it's already happening in the States, of who should rule their little area, you see.

They found the same thing with communes that were so well studied by the FBI and the CIA, who were behind a lot of it [Alan chuckles.] back in the 60s and 70s, and using behaviorists to study them. Even you'll find that Manson, one of his main communes that he headed there, his group, it was supplied and studied by, they had cameras up by the FBI studying the behavior. So did Jonestown by the way. You always find the same things happening. It's so unbelievable for folk, they don't want to believe it even when it's admitted by the authorities. It's astonishing.

But yeah, they always turn on each other for supremacy. Even in a commune, even in hippie communes that happened. So they start off with their free love and that and their utopia and pass the weed until they start to get less of it. Then some of them would want special food eventually, they get fed up eating just vegetables. And they've got no money, so they'd, some of them would start to extort money from folk around them. That's already happening in the States too in some of these places, extortion, they've had that coming out. Then they turn on each other. They'll literally have arguments about who's the most virtuous amongst each other, you know… I should be leader, I'm the more… And it's all again, I call it social preening. It isn't just the virtue signaling, it's beyond virtual signaling. It's virtue preening, as they strut the chests out, and how wonderful I am.

I will put up that little link, it's quite comical. It's good, it was a good comedy actually of...

Folk should remember, if you can't laugh at yourselves, you really do, you don't have a life, you know, should get a life.

Now remember too, you can help me keep going. If this kind of settles down a bit with the Covid thing, they'll go back to sleep and sure enough the money will drop off, etc. And I have to live like everybody else, believe you me. And I live in generally a lot cheaper than most folk out there, I really do. You can help me to go along and keep my websites going by buying the books and discs @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. You'll find out how to pay for it and to donate if you want to. Donations are certainly welcome. Through PayPal or even send cash if you want to, and checks.

Because the times we're going through, you've got to keep these lines of communication open. So much out there is so compromised, I really mean that. It isn't just the groups doing all the radical stuff. You'd be surprised, put it this way, reality is very surprising. My whole message has always been to think for yourselves. You can always look up everything yourself and make up your own opinions on what evidence you can get. And even when you find evidence just don't always swallow it and believe it. You always say, where is it coming from, what else is behind it, etc.?

Politics to me is a joke. Because you've one group, again, back to The C[The White Cutter], you've got one group really running all sides. Of course you have. The deep state didn't suddenly appear with Donald Trump, being an exact, you know, archenemy of it. It's always been there. It wasn't just Eisenhower that talked about, beware of the military industrial complex and those seeking to get power over the…, you know. It was there long before he came along. It was there before World War II, in the States. You can go way back in the States.

It's in human nature. Wherever you get money coming into, you've got this clique that then initially say, how can we get most of it. Well, let's create a central-bank system, or whatever it is. You know. That's how it's done, folks.

There's an old saying that evil never sleeps. It doesn't.

What's really amazing when you study people, is those who are truly evil can rationalize what they do away quite easily. Because they're psychopaths. They'd be so convincing you'll even believe them... Well, you know, they weren't that bad, you know.

So as I say, you've got to look at what's out there and why it's out there and so on. Some things, I can remember the old patriot movement in the States. There were all kinds of movements out there. But what they all had in common was the rights of the people. Folk have forgotten that. It didn't matter what party they belong to, they still took to the rights of the people. That's what was written into the foundations of the US basically. And yet they've been chipped away and chipped away, and again through wars, all crisis and wars and so on, and they forget and forget until you've got a massive bureaucracy and new bureaucracies forming all the time.

But they're all there to save us all from either financial collapse or whatever it happens to be, as they plunder the economy over and over and over. Oh, let's create a G20 and a World Economic Forum, ‘eh. And let's have these private groups like the CFR decide everything for us and draft up treaties and trade treaties and stuff like that, which again will subvert sovereignty until you meld into a big world system. You see. That's how it's all been done.

But the old patriot movement, you used to literally stand up together for things. And they knew to watch the politicians like hawks, you could never trust them, I don't care who they are, and the groups behind them. The president are generally front people anyway, just fronts. But the big deep state has always been there. Always been there.

So yeah, go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com website. Make a list of all my official sites and if one goes down hopefully you can, I can still use the other ones. The reason I had so many was because when I started up and came out with this, and I was on some big shows and so on, and coast-to-coast shows and things, I told them like it was. It was shocking to a lot of people at the time. I would get hammered immediately with my websites. So I put more up.

Because literally, they would stall me right out. They'd give me trouble uploading to them. I was getting shadow banned by the companies and corporations themselves, or they would be using, oh, the satellite would go out, boomf! You know. Often. [Alan chuckles.] I would talk until five in the morning night after night trying to find out what's wrong. Come on. Then I found eventually they had a choke on it, they called it a choke. A new girl was on one night who punched it up and said oh, there's choke on it, yes, there is a choke on it. After years of denying it. [Alan chuckles.]

So yeah, this is how it really works folks. I don't push politicians or the systems behind it. It's the same system behind them all. So you can help me tick along and how to do it and donate and so on @cuttingthroughthematrix.com website. You can always get the show first before other folk put it up if you want to, if you're in a hurry. Okay. And by the way, I should mention this too, I'll be picking up the books this week and have them probably posted out before the end of the week along with discs and all the rest of it. Now that things are opening up a little bit, I should get a whole bunch of them just in case.

Because they want to shut down the economy again, you know that. They don't really want it opening up. They want it to be so bust globally you'll merge into this new global system, global management system that the UN has prattled on about this event being wonderful for bringing in a world governmental system. And the UN, I don't care if it's a far-left communist organization, it's run, it's owned by the richest folk on the planet! There are no sides here.

Do you really think if there were sides and politics worked, why do you think you're so damn poor most of you? Hm? As I've said before, if it worked for the people, it would get banned. And why do they devalue the currency? When it isn't backed by anything. Hm? Anyway, that's where we are with it all.

So remember, donate to me and help me tick along here. It's awfully important. Because you'd be surprised at how many folk really do use it. [Alan chuckles.] Don't believe whatever you see in the figures on the sites. [Alan chuckles.] Really, don't believe that at all. They've been doing that for years. Some of the ones that are big out there by the way, who even use my stuff, you'd be surprised who's behind them. You really will. N-n-n. But I won't grouch about it. It doesn't surprise me a bit. It's sad to see folk go under and folk get brought over and approached, etc. Then starting to keep the whole con job of present politics going the way that it's going. There's a one-party system at the very, very top. And they're always having a party and laughing at us all as they have the party. Everything else is just part of the dialectic of course.

The rulers of this world, as I say, they can literally get an army mobilized in a week if they wanted to and have it off to wherever they want on the planet to kill and destroy and demolish, do you really think they just don't know how to handle a...? Do you really believe this, the poor souls on the streets are strutting about looking some of them like mentally ill folk, really some of them are, do you really think, did they really think that the world's watching them because they now have, really have power? Do you really think that?

Whatever's happening today is because the real deep state, the real rulers of the planet, want this to happen. For their own benefit. Because they will end up consolidating all power over everything on the whole planet through all of this. All of it. And all the ones at the bottom, well we're all for sustainability and being good to nature, and not eating much and rut-dut-dut. All the same agenda ‘eh.

Well, wait till you get your first bad winter without much power and you're freezing... Because humans take energy to live! Everything that lives in the planet DOES use energy to live. Everything. N-n-n. But when you can’t heat yourself, and the weather is bad, and then you get your colds, turns into pneumonia, and your energy is down now, your immune system is shot because you're malnourished... Good luck to you. Good luck to you. There's your utopia.

What I'm going to do now is go into, and don't yawn, the Covid thing. Because even though, you've got understand, you should have a record of all the cons that have gone on up until now. And they're not finished with it yet, don't forget. They're not finished with yet at all. If they can make it stick again and terrify the public once more, using all their psychological terrorist teams, which they employ, and this is a fact, it's not fake news. That's come out and I'll put the links up tonight to the different teams including the ones that work for SAGE, and other ones for the government and universities as well. They're well-paid, these people who play with your head, the mind control, and use terror and fear to coerce you into doing what they say is the right thing. Of course, [Alan chuckles.] that's a great thing for psychopaths to say when they rule governments and things like that.

But it just astonishing that we live, we put up with this nonsense, over and over again actually. Not just with diseases. So I'll go through some of these articles now on that first of all before I get into all the things that have happened that have taken over from in the interim, as I say, before they bring it all back again with, oh, a spike, oh my goodness, ‘eh. And there you go.

What we know too, and this is true, there's a couple of, two or three articles up actually that came out about the awful con, it's an awful joke when they attacked Trump when he came out with the hydroxychloroquine treatment, right. Forgetting all the time of course that it was advised by the doctors at the time for SARS when it broke out in 2003. It was okay for that. But as soon as Trump mentioned it, because don't forget from the beginning you had this clique, this clique that runs the infectious disease departments of the planet really, you know. You've got Bill Gates who literally runs the WHO, it would seem by the financing and so on. And Gates has got his fingers in with the pies of Fauci and his different companies as well. And many other ones as well. It's just, it's a small world in a sense, a club, you see. And it's true, you're not in it, that's for sure, as the comedian once said.

But the fact is, they're not finished with it yet. I said this from the start, I says, isn't it odd they said that for the first time in history your own immune system is going to be no use, they want to give you the vaccination. As soon as they heard that this disease had broken out, oh vaccination is the only way you're going to get back to work and be allowed out of your houses and yada, yada ya, eh’. You've never heard this in history before, where the healthy are quarantined. And even when your immune system kicks in, and most folk don't even know they've had it, have already got the antibodies to it. No, your own antibodies aren't good enough for the natural way they have developed, you have to get a vaccination to make your own antibodies work better. [Alan laughing.]

What a joke this is to sell their con games and stuff. I really don't trust them, especially with Bill Gates and so on. I really don't. Because this man is really into population reduction. He's quite open about it. Why would you take vaccinations this guy is pushing? Seriously, any thinking person, for goodness' sake?

But anyway yeah, from the start, so hydroxychloroquine that the Chinese were using, and other countries used as well, and had, they claim they got good results with it yada, yada ya. There was a doctor in New York City who is in charge of a BIG community there, he used it along with a couple of other medications and had tremendous results according to him. But the press immediately, oh, no, no, whatever Fauci says is true, that's going to be no use at all, yada, yada, only his stuff and the vaccine when they are made are going to be any good at all. And [Alan chuckles.] he already had it in mind, Fauci, which company he was going to give the contracts, like Gilead, for the antivirals. It's a small world as I say.

So everything else was bad, bad, bad, bad. So everything was cheap. And that's the key. You see, they don't like anything that's going to be cheap. You make a killing when blood is running in the streets. That's what Rothschild said when he was asked about when the best time to make money was. He said, when the blood is running in the streets, folk are terrified, they'll pay anything to survive, right. And hydroxychloroquine is plentiful and cheap. Now of course they put it on prescription only I think, as they corner the market once again, 'eh.

But here's the thing, it's comical what came out. All the papers parroted Fauci and so on, and even the British Medical Journal, The Lancet, broke its lance on this one. Because they publish the same thing, oh, hydroxychloroquine or chloroquine...

RETRACTED: Hydroxychloroquine or chloroquine with or without a macrolide for treatment of COVID-19

We did a multinational registry analysis…

They took this analysis from Professor Mandeep R Mehra, MD and this kind of thing. It turns out that the folk, there were six of them that did the study. [Alan chuckles.] One of them was involved in riské photograph materials, or video. [Alan chuckles.] That was their specialty, and a few others. This is incredible stuff really. Because the money is being thrown out, you see, and no doubt they wanted to defame this stuff, so they got this little group to do it. And the Lancet published it as well. So I'll put up tonight a couple of articles, one is on their story, officially, they actually parroted this stuff that was done by this little group of whoever, you know. Then they had to retract it eventually and admit they were wrong. Because the group had no qualifications at all to do any kind of study. [Alan laughing.] Apparently. And I don't think they did it anyway, they just made it up. So they got egg on their faces, on their broken lance. So there you go, I mean, they're all party to the same stuff. But that's who they got to do this supposed in-depth study, and it was a complete farce.

I'd like to know the money that they paid, the taxpayers' money they paid for that too, to try to make it valid so they'd have to, oh, we must take the Gilead antivirals for goodness sakes. So yeah, the Lancet had to retract it and admit it. Not very humbly though, mind you. They didn't put anything, they just retracted it. Other articles have got it too, who these characters were that did the study altogether. I'll put them up tonight, right.

Now, there's a stack of stuff. I'm just going to go through some of these articles here to show you the farce of it all. This one here too is from this team that were put out by the SAGE team, the behavioral sciences, to help fight the coronavirus. They talk about how to get people to cooperate and do what they're told, and obey, basically, and how they'd have to really frighten them and create more, how to create more anxiety amongst them and coerce them to accept what you wanted them to do and so on. And how they can really change society, and social norms during a fear campaign. They admit all this stuff quite openly.

This is what the government hired to terrify you and to put this whole thing into action. I hate using the word governments. What is the government today over in Britain? What is that creation? It certainly hasn't anything to do with the ordinary folk who have been totally destroyed over quite a few years by the actions of the government.

But yeah, they go into, they mentioned in the article that it might lead to undesirable action, all the lockdowns, such as they might need surgery and so on. People express unwillingness to isolate themselves when they harbor doubts about the chances of infecting others. They go through it all, and how they have to coerce them and cause more fear. And how to get the other folk to turn on them if they weren't complying exactly. If they weren't feeling the fear [Alan chuckles.] they would get other folk to turn on them. You saw that in the stores and things, didn't you?

Oh, you're not 6 feet apart, oh you can only walk in one direction. I said in one of the stores, I says, well can I reverse, [Alan chuckles.] you know, can I walk backwards a bit? [Alan chuckles.] You know, because I missed something. Oh, you can't do that. This is a farce, ‘eh. This is mental illness, folks. They've created a form, by tampering with the mind in a terror campaign, they've created mental illness amongst the public. Who literally, I'm surprised they haven't been attacking each other. Maybe they have been. I'm sure there have been instances of that. I'm sure there have been. So yeah, wait and see.

But yeah, they talk about what they can do and how to terrify them all. And all the side effects of depression, maybe even suicide, yada ya. And it will take maybe even years to get over it for some folk, the mental damage that it will do. There's nothing that they didn't know to start with. I'm sure they were studying us all like little flies in a jar.

But yeah, the UK Behavioral Insights Team worked with them. That's all part of it. I mentioned that a few years back, how they use the BITs. All through the Internet systems too, to nudge you all and to punish you too. They work with all the big providers, etc. to punish you and block you and yada ya. This is their part of the war on you. They talk about...

Using Behavioural Science to Help Fight the Coronavirus: A Rapid, Narrative Review

Journal of Behavioral Public Administration Vol 3(1), 2020, doi: 10.30636/jbpa.31.147

These include the “Behavior Change Wheel”, which centers on a model of behavior change consisting of three essential elements: capability, opportunity, and motivation. Individuals must be psychologically or physically able to undertake the behavior, the environment that surrounds them needs to facilitate the behavior, and their own mental processes need to energize and direct the behavior.

The researchers behind this approach have advocated its use in the context of COVID-19. The EAST framework (Behavioural Insights Team, 2014) emphasizes that behavior change is more likely when the behavior is made Easy, Attractive, Social, and Timely.

(Alan: Then they go through the different techniques for the folk who don't quite, are not terrified by it, how to terrify them basically.)

Quite amazing, ‘eh? And your tax money paid for all this, for your destruction, and your abuse. You've all been abused. I hope you understand this, this is real abuse. For something really that was really... they've had a lower death rate than the flu normally causes in most of the countries. Again, facts don't matter when there's big plans. Because this is to change the world. It will never be the same again, remember? And, oh my God, there's going to be financial chaos after this, ooooooooo, dear, dear, dear. And austerity. All the parts of the agenda they were pushing. M-hm. Yep.

But they go into this one in quite detail too. This is 25 pages of this one. I'll put this link up for you. It's from their own site themselves. And yeah, you paid for it all. Yep, terrify the public and coerce them into obeyance. Now they're bringing it all back again, eh. Quite amazing.

It was okay, they told the virus to go on hold while they had the demonstrations, and then the other ones that did the riots, they had that, they went on hold for that too. Especially in the States. It's quite amazing to see the far-left people in different state power, different states, the power, who were absolutely brutal about following the whole agenda and mandating vaccinations for all, yada, ya, and social distancing and how they were going to force folk to comply. Who, went out and demonstrated, ‘eh, shoulder to shoulder. [Alan chuckles.] So it was quite amazing. It's a politically motivated virus, eh, it just stopped dead and says okay, it's okay for this, anything else, no. You couldn't do anything at all. In fact, they said you had to have sex with the mask on for goodness’ sake. And don't, it was illegal to have sex with strangers during it, did you know that, in Britain? Whoah, I'm sure they will obey that one. Especially those at the top of government.

But yeah, this is the farce you're brought through. I'll put another article up on the same thing.

Sage publishes evidence behind advice on lockdown following calls for more transparency

itv.com / 5 May 2020

…have revealed the evidence behind their guidance, following calls for greater transparency.

The Scientific Advisory Group for Emergencies (Sage) (A: ...that's what it's called. It's also used in magic, you know that. That's probably why they picked the name. I bet they did, because it's all magic, isn't it.) has published a number of statements and accompanying evidence for measures like the lockdown, and issues such as herd immunity.

In particular, Sage has advised lockdown restrictions be eased very gradually in order to maintain public trust in health policy.

(A: Well, they’ve lost all of that, I think. It’s quite amazing as I say what they’ve done.)

Especially they talked about, look at the evidence, they've killed more old folk by throwing them in with infected people and put them on ventilators. This is murder, folks. And yes, there's nurses coming out talking about it openly, that's what's been happening here. This is murder. And it's getting everybody used to, used to this idea of euthanasia. Yes, it is. Absolutely. Definitely. Absolutely.

And then another one…

COVID Coercion: Boris Johnson's Psychological Attack on the UK Public

ukcolumn.org / 14 May 2020

(A: Why would they say… He's just a front man too. A good front man, he's in with the City of London, though, the CITY of London. Like Teresa May was too. She's also in with the City of London, the real, real country. Everything else is just to be used, the peasantry. It goes onto, they came out with this too...)

SPI-B

(A: ...this group that's subcontracted, it's part of SAGE, SPI-B, and how they started off, at least came out publicly in the swine flu pandemic...)

During the 2009/10 ‘swine flu’ pandemic, SAGE received advice from a subgroup called the Scientific Pandemic Influenza group on Behaviour and Communications (SPI-B&C).

That group was reconvened on 13 February this year. This time, its remit was limited to behaviour and it was renamed the Scientific Pandemic Influenza group on Behaviour, or SPI-B.

And they had meetings amongst themselves and so on and updated their thing. Again, the PDF is actually mirrored off the site too. I think that's the UK Column there. But when you go into the actual stuff they talk about it, how they could encourage fear amongst the people to make them obey, and increased tension amongst them, and anxiety, that's the wording that they use. That's why your news went along with it. They were working with the newscasters to terrify the public. And what a job they did on that, ‘eh? Woa! N-n-n. I tell ya. [Alan chuckles.]   So I'll put that up too.

Then this is a good one here. This is a good one… You know, the great philanthropist that you think he’s just doing it all for free… [Alan laughing.] Ah, it says…

Exclusive: Bill Gates Negotiated $100 Billion

(A: I'll say that again for the hard of thinking …)

EXCLUSIVE: Bill Gates Negotiated $100 Billion Contact Tracing Deal

(A: ...for the tracing people, right.)

With Democratic Congressman Sponsor of Bill

(A: That's the 666 one, you know, H.R. 6666.)

Six Months BEFORE Coronavirus Pandemic

(A: …before you even heard of it.)

EXCLUSIVE: Bill Gates Negotiated $100 Billion Contact Tracing Deal With Democratic Congressman Sponsor of Bill Six Months BEFORE Coronavirus Pandemic

truepundit.com / 14 June 2020

(A: They had already arranged this whole idea of contact tracing and who will get the contracts for this and who will get the contracts for testing gear and stuff, all that stuff. The testing stuff doesn't even work. It doesn't matter. But the contact tracing deal, 'eh, there ya go.)

The Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation helped negotiate who would score a $100 Billion government-backed contact tracing contract in August 2019 — six months before the 'pandemic' arrived in the United States and four months before it swept through China.

(A: It's got an audio here, you can hear them talking about it, these guys.)

The shocking revelations were unveiled on the Thomas Paine Podcast and the Moore Paine Show on Patreon by the two investigators who blew the whistle on the massive Clinton Foundation tax fraud during a Congressional hearing in 2018. John Moynihan and Larry Doyle testified in Congress, detailing the fraud and schemes utilized by the Clinton’s to avoid paying up to $2.5 BILLION in federal taxes.

(A: That’s what they’ve been following and investigating, into this whole scam here with the cash and so on. They were the ones who testified...)

The investigative duo, in their first interview since that bombshell Congressional testimony, revealed to Paine that representatives from the Gates Foundation met with U.S. Congressman Bobby L. Rush at a sit down in Rwanda, East Africa in mid August 2019 to hash out who would score the windfall from a government contact tracing program. And just last month — nine months after the meetings with the Gates Foundation in Rwanda — Rush, a Democrat from Illinois, introduced the $100 BILLION H.R. 6666, the COVID-19 Testing, Reaching and Contacting Everyone (TRACE) Act.

Rush’s bill would establish a program run by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) (A: …again, right.) for national coronavirus testing and contact tracing.

I guarantee you they worked out all the different companies that would get all the millions and billions that are thrown out there to trace you and spy on you, and bracelets and all that, all the prison stuff. And that's what it is. If you wear bracelets, then you're a prisoner. That's what they use for prisoners, right. The corruption is... There's nothing hidden here, folks. There's nothing hidden. Another one here too is Tucker Carlson came out on Fox. I don't follow the different media characters but he's saying the right things, now that it's time to say the right things, hm?

Tucker Carlson bashes lockdown proponents: 'They used a public health emergency to subvert democracy' - foxnews.com / 11 June 2020

Well, I won’t add to that because you don’t really need someone to tell you. You should know this yourself. You should. You should be thinking for yourselves. You're given the folk to parrot and to follow, you know. Think for yourselves. Another one here too is…

The trouble with British immunity passports

This is all the stuff from the tracing and all the rest of that, where they're going to lock you down forever until you take the vaccinations and get an immunity passport. I gave these talks in the late 1990s, what would come, that eventually you wouldn't get into a store, a supermarket, an alarm would go off if your vaccinations weren't up to scratch. It would be all electronic, in chips and so on. And here we are.

IF you let them do it. IF you let them get away with it. You see, you're all responsible, individually you're all responsible for your decisions. And if they can get away with this, there's nothing they're not going to... They're not going to stop with this. They won't stop with this, folks. This whole idea is completely post Constitution, for the US, and Bill of Rights. That's what it's about. The other countries had this vague thing of democracy, they're waay beyond that [Alan chuckles.] now. That's the old system.

Remember, the Club of Rome said that democracy doesn't work, we can't get things done quickly. Bill Gates said the same thing, he said he admired China. You had Justin Trudeau saying the same thing on video, about China, how he admired it and how, because their system, meaning a totalitarian system, right, they could get the things, they could deal with problems very quickly without bothering about what the public thought. [Alan chuckles.] This is it, folks. It's all here. IF you allow it to happen.

The trouble with British immunity passports

spectator.us / 4 May 2020

Creating any system that dishes out a biological status is going to create a series of ethical quandaries

(A: No kidding. M-hm.)

Could we see ‘immunity passports’ in Britain?

(A: It's all been prearranged, folks, just the same as the last one with the Gates and the rest of them.)

Ministers…

(A: Ministers… This is politicians, they call them ministers. I don't know why they call them ministers. They used to call them ministers, Protestant ministers that were religious. Ministers, I don't know who they minister to, you know. Maybe to their bank managers, I don't know. And they're all lobbyists anyway.)

Ministers are reportedly discussing them as a route out of lockdown.

(A: ... a route. Come on, eh!)

According to today’s Guardian, the UK tech firm Onfido is in discussion with ministers about creating a ‘digital certificate’

(A: That means they’re in a payoff deal, where they’ll be giving them offers [Alan laughing.] if they lobby the higher-ups there, you know.)

about creating a ‘digital certificate’

that would be issued to those who have already been infected with coronavirus — who are presumably more immune — so they could return to some resemblance of normal life…

(A: You see how they’ve worded this? And they’ll cut out the fact of having to get a vaccination. Because that’s where it’s going to, you see. I wonder who wrote this kind of stuff?)

The technology needed to carry out such a scheme is reportedly in the ‘discovery stage’ and big questions linger as to whether British bureaucracy — which has struggled to source plastic PPE and has trailed other countries in COVID-testing for months now — would be able to assemble and carry out such an elaborate scheme in the near future.

(A: It says it would raise a lot of different, not just…)

…not just about the civil liberty implications of digital certification, but about the philosophy behind the lockdown itself.

(A: The CON of the lockdown, I’d say. The abuse of it. It turns out, ‘eh? Even though they say, oh, no, no, you can't say that, that's wrong. It turns out...)

It turns out, as early research indicates, that some groups are inherently more susceptible to COVID-19 than others, how long would their genetic make-up be a determining factor in what parts of society they can rejoin?

It's okay for the big boys to point out the ethnic differences and possibly more prone to getting the disease. Because we're all, all groups are so well studied. They know exactly, even the Scots, they know exactly what they are prone to physically, the problems, ‘eh, and what they are not. It doesn't mean you become immune from anything.

At one time, for instance, the Scottish never had any cancer of the intestines and the bowels. Didn't have it. Because they had a high-fiber diet and oatmeal and stuff like that. But they didn't. That's all gone now of course with the processed foods. But that was taught in medicine, you know, at one time. Whereas the Japanese were awfully prone, especially the ones on the western coast in the fishing villages, awfully prone to cancer of the colon compared to the rest of them, etc. etc.

We're all so well studied. They know exactly what we're prone to. Absolutely. Of course they had their whole DNA system checks of the whole planet of what we're all, with their different tests on us all, the human genome project, etc. Quite something.

But anyway, here they go trying to get you into the debate of it. You see, these articles are actually in a sense, and this published in The Spectator in Britain. But it's getting you used to the debate. You get involved in the debate, and say, no, no, no way, I'm not going to even go into the debate. Forget that. Out the window before it starts. They're trying to get you into it, well, I can see this point of view and I'm not ready for that part, and they work you through the whole thing. No, no. You don't need an immunity passports, folks! This is another chain, believe you me, big chain too. Oh, you can't go here, oh, you can't go there until you take all your, all your, and they want to give you new boosters every, every year, for every vaccine by the way.

Hhhhhhh. There ya go. Quite something. I tell ya. Also now, let's see now…

Patients face a TWO-YEAR wait for elective surgery with NHS backlog set to hit 650,000 by September - even without a second coronavirus spike

dailymail.co.uk / 7 June 2020

(A: This is the backlog waiting for elective surgery. How many have died already because they couldn't get in? Even with their second, even without a second coronavirus spike? So there you go. Oh, it will cost the health service... Well, it's funded by the public.)

…£4billion due to surgeons pay

Non-urgent surgeries were postponed for three months from April due to Covid

It led to completed operations that were 'non urgent' plummeting by 72 per cent

What about all the other treatments? It wasn't just all surgery, right, folks. The cancer folk, they could have had, some cancers, you hope to get it early and get it off, get it out, if you can get in there before it spreads. All these folk are written off. ALL written off for a big, big racketeering con of social engineering to change the society. Hm. Quite something. Quite amazing.

Not that it was doing great before, you know. Because I can remember reading the articles on the air on the radio at the time where they had, the tricks the NHS were doing were astonishing. I mean, the NHS was sinking for, oh, 30 years, under them flooding in from Europe and across the planet for surgeries and treatments and so on, by using the European Union as some kind of landing point and they'd say, oh you have to take us into Britain for all the surgery. They were coming in from other countries outside of Europe to have their children in the hospitals and everything. All paid by the taxpayers of Britain. And if you complained about it, oh you were shouted down, you know. [Alan chuckles.] This trick has been used so often, ‘eh… Oh, you're a racist, you're a racist, what's wrong with them coming in from all over the world to have their children? You were getting handed the bill to pay for it all, that's what was wrong with it. And the folk couldn't use the service that they were paying for, the folk living in the country, hm. So I'm not going to go into the facts. Facts don't matter when there's big agendas. But that's the truth of it.

What they were doing at the time when Tony Blair was in for instance, they were putting out, they were studying the people and giving them questionnaires, that were waiting for surgery. Sometimes you'd wait two or three years at times, you know. They would ask them on these questionnaires, were they thinking of taking a holiday, where would they go? It was all to get them, to find out when they were going, and when they were gone, this is the fact, it was in the newspapers at the time. When they were gone, the National Health Service would send out their demand to come in for their surgery, knowing they were gone, you see. Once they came back, they said, oh, we were on holiday you know, you didn't tell us. And the hospital, well, we sent it out to you, you know, you're back in the bottom of the waiting list again, another two years. This is the con. This is the racketeering that goes on.

Why do people vote for these... uuugh, there's nothing foul enough to call these characters, really, ‘eh! They’re nothing but sponge who live the high life on the public, on top of the public. It's just disgusting! Disgusting! N-n-n. Hasn't changed. Now of course they’re privatizing it all, big chunks of it. Because that was always the agenda. They always use the public to pay for something. They start it all up, fund it all, get it created, build the buildings and so on, and then they privatize it. That's what they do. [Alan chuckles.] And folk never catch on.

Then we have, oh, a terrible, terrible announcement by the WHO, the world... The WHO, doctor WHO. This STUNNED me, you know. Because really, nobody, as I said before, no one has ever died up until now, you know that. That's how folk are cushioned from death, isn't it? Not so long ago folk looked after their own, and often their neighbors too, and they were dying at home. That's how it had been for centuries, and maybe thousands of years. From your counsel house to your little mud wattle home before that, you know, that's part of your privilege in Britain, and we forget that, that's where folk all died. And that's where folk were born. [Alan chuckles.] Believe it or not. Yep. No kidding. Yeah. No kidding.

And under this manacled system and again massive bureaucracy and socialism, everyone's forgotten it, when folk are dying, they go off to hospital or they put them into these exit homes, maybe offer them euthanasia now. It's much cheaper for the authorities, the owners, they prefer to have all the profits for themselves. And for your pension, for goodness’ sake, the government can use all your pensions, rather than YOU, you dithering old idiot, what good are you with a pension, for goodness’ sake?

The UN said it itself, a good global citizen is a good producer AND consumer. And if you're pensioner, well you're just consuming. And they’ve taught all the children to hate you, you know, you've destroyed the planet with your consuming and eating and awful things like that, clothing yourself for goodness’ sake. Heating yourself, hhhhhhhhh, how foul. And that's how it is, you see.

This is reality. Think of things as they really are. Don't fall into their little debates as they con you to give up your liver like Monty Python did in The Meaning of Life, ‘eh. Oh, you feel rather small now don't you, insignificant, can I have your liver? Oh yeah, okay. That's how it's done.

So here you have it, so the World Health Organization, they said it at the WHO. What an amazing statement…

Up to 650 000 people die of respiratory diseases linked to seasonal flu each year who.int / 13 Dec 2017

(A: HHH! Oh, I would never have guessed that. 650,000 people.)

Up to 650 000 deaths annually are associated with respiratory diseases from seasonal influenza, (A: ...that’s what the cause is.) according to new estimates by the United States Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (US-CDC), WHO and global health partners.

This marks an increase on the previous global estimate of 250 000-500 000, which dates from over ten years ago and covered all influenza-related deaths, including cardiovascular disease or diabetes.

(A: You see, they put that all down, you see, as the flu too.)

The new figures of 290,000-650,000 deaths are based on more recent data from a larger, more diverse group of countries, including lower middle-income countries, and exclude deaths from non-respiratory diseases.

(A: So this is what I'm trying to tell you. They keep changing how they do it, ‘eh. They keep changing it all the time.)

The estimates take into account findings from recent influenza respiratory mortality studies, including a study conducted by the United States Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (US-CDC), published in The Lancet on Thursday (14 December).

(A: Well, Lancet, as I say, it's a broken lance now. [Alan chuckles.] I tell ya, it's hmmmmmmmmmm, I don't know. I don't know. It says…)

According to US-CDC, most deaths occur among people aged over 75 years, and in the world's poorest regions. Sub-Saharan Africa accounts for the world's greatest flu mortality risk, followed closely by the Eastern Mediterranean and Southeast Asia.

So yeah, it's just astonishing how they pulled this one off, this latest thing off. I'll put that one up tonight as well with the rest. Then there's this article here…

Surgisphere: governments and WHO changed Covid-19 policy based on suspect data (A: This is the one I mentioned, by the way, [Alan chuckles.] there's another two or three articles. I think Ron Paul has also got one. I'll put that one up too. But it says...) from tiny US company

theguardian.com / 3 June 2020

(A: So Surgisphere is the company they gave the contract to. I'd love to know how much money. They're probably going to live off this for generations. They give it to this company, but six folk worked there apparently, who would decide the fate of, as I say, the hydroxychloroquine. It says…)

The World Health Organization and a number of national governments have changed their Covid-19 policies and treatments on the basis of flawed data from a little-known US healthcare analytics company, (A: It's an analytics company, right.) also calling into question the integrity of key studies published in some of the world's most prestigious medical journals. (A: …like The Lancet.)

Surgisphere, whose handful of employees appear to include a science fiction writer and an adult-content model, has provided data for multiple studies on Covid-19 co-authored by its chief executive, but has so far failed to adequately explain its data or methodology.

(A: It had none. They made it up. They were told to defame the studies on this being any good for you. That's what it was for. It doesn't say this in the article, but that's what it is, folks. Hm?)

Data it claims to have legitimately obtained from more than a thousand hospitals worldwide formed the basis of scientific articles that have led to changes in Covid-19 treatment policies in Latin American countries.

(A: Also in American countries, what d'you mean Latin American...)

It was also behind a decision by the WHO and research institutes around the world to halt trials of the controversial drug hydroxychloroquine. (A: It's been used for years and years, ‘eh.) On Wednesday, the WHO announced those trials would now resume. (A: [Alan chuckles.])

Two of the world’s leading medical journals – the Lancet and the New England Journal of Medicine – published studies based on Surgisphere data. The studies were co-authored by the firm’s chief executive, Sapan Desai.

(A: They'll live on this for generations on the money they got for this. I guarantee you. Yep.)

The Guardian’s investigation has found:

A search of publicly available material suggests several of Surgisphere’s employees have little or no data or scientific background.

(A: [Alan laughing.] I'm surprised there was only six of them. I thought there would be several.)

An employee listed as a science editor appears to be a science fiction author and fantasy artist (A: Well, that's his job, is making things up.) whose professional profile suggests writing is her fulltime job. (A: …probably writing checks.)

Another employee listed as a marketing executive is an adult model and events hostess, (A: [Alan laughing.]) who also acts in videos for organisations.   (A: [Alan laughing.] Probably for the WHO to watch, no doubt.)

But there you go. This is how things really are. This is what, this is the best medical evidence, you see, so that you wouldn't use this hydroxychloroquine, this really cheap, cheap, it was widely available drug. Which worked, was actually advised to be used for this last SARS one, right. This is SARS 2, remember, Covid 19, SARS2 as they call it. But no, no, because Mr. Foxy wanted to use his own stuff, you know, get his own companies to do things, or companies that he had them favored, put it that way, favored ones, yes, yeah, with the antivirals. There you go.

And that's what they said. Even the Guardian had to admit it too, you know. They had said before, they parrot the same stuff too, oh the WHO...

WHO halts hydroxychloroquine trial for coronavirus amid safety fears (A: Hhhhhh.)

theguardian.com / 25 May 2020

… could raise risk of death and heart problems, study shows. No, you get the heart problems

No, you get the heart problems and death by watching the videos I think that they're making [Alan laughing.] at this place, ‘eh. That would probably do it. But there you go. Again…

'Yes, they were definitely lying': Tucker Carlson claims coronavirus lockdowns were unnecessary - washingtonexaminer.com / 10 June 2020

You shouldn't need these characters to think for you anyway. Unfortunately folk, a lot of them really have given over their reasoning to the media to do their thinking and they're reasoning for them. That's what Brzezinski said was the intentions, that's what they're going to do. And they DID it.

Another article by Ron Paul, it's quite interesting too. Which is true, it's a truism. Anyway, I don't go along with anybody, but I mean he's got so many articles out and so far he hasn't steered, as far as I can see, the folk in the wrong direction.

The 1793 Project Unmasked - ronpaulinstitute.org / 13 June 2020

But he says…

Coronavirus Shows Why We Need Separation of Medicine and State!

ronpaullibertyreport.com / 9 June 2020 / Ron Paul

?It seems like only yesterday. Americans were denied the right to go to their churches.

(A: The whole manifesto of technocracy was to destroy religion, remember. Because it stood in the way of their own experts whom they now call bioethicists. They'll decide what's morally right and wrong, or who will live and die, etc. etc. etc. You see, so they've gotta get rid of religion, human values and religion. That's their biggest enemy. Because it's their biggest fear, if folk were really religious and organized could all say no at the same time, what are they going to do? They pick every group off one by one until there's no opposition. Then, you want to see scientific tyranny like Bertrand Russell said? That's what he wanted, a scientific tyranny. That's what he wished for, he says, he hoped it would be the scientific tyranny if there was going to be any tyranny at all. Anyway it says here...)

It seems like only yesterday. Americans were denied the right to go to their churches. They were denied the right to visit their loved ones in the hospital.

They were denied the right to open their businesses and go to work to provide for themselves and their families. They were denied the right to go to restaurants, to bars, to hair salons.

(A: This is the first time too that you couldn’t visit them in the hospitals, who are dying, for their relatives, ‘eh. Do you understand, this is a massive, massive psychological operation here? A psy-ops. Massive. For a new system to devalue life. Believe you me.)

No laws were passed denying these rights. Even that (A: …if they had been passed.) would be illegal and immoral. But what happened was worse. They were denied these basic rights by governors, county judges, and even local mayors who used the coronavirus outbreak as an excuse to rule by decree.

(A: Think about that, it’s against all the rules and laws.)

They stole power that was not theirs to take and wielded it at all levels to force America into three months of house arrest.

Isn’t that the truth of it though. Think about that. Think about that. That makes me think again of what Thomas Jefferson said, probably better educated than most folks today, you know, in his day they were WELL educated. Jefferson said…

> There is no justification for taking away individuals' freedom
> in the guise of public safety.

> When you abandon freedom to achieve security,
> you lose both and deserve neither.

M-hm. Think about it.

> There is no justification for taking away individuals' freedom

Because that's how it's always been done. Oh, you’re going to get invaded, we gotta take your rights away, you know. Oh, there's a pandemic, or disease, oh, we've got to take your rights away. You know? Yep. Oh, there's riots in the streets, we've got a take all your rights away, because we're not going to stop it. [Alan chuckles.] Hm. So back to this article and it says…

Then, in the midst of stay-at-home orders across the country, the same governors and local officials who locked Americans in their homes suddenly came around with their keys and threw open the doors. Suddenly not only was it OK to go out into the street, it was required to go out into the street!

What happened? A cure? A miraculous vaccine? No. The officials who locked Americans up found a cause they felt required Americans in the streets to protest. Police had killed a black man, George Floyd, in their custody in Minneapolis and suddenly the need to protest trumped the need to “stay home, save lives.”

Suddenly the same health “experts” who told us we must not gather in crowds or there will be death in the millions from coronavirus issued statements supporting gathering in crowds.

(A: …instantly, and that’s true isn’t it.)

An open letter on the George Floyd protests signed by more than 1,200 doctors and other health professionals clarified that they “do not condemn these gatherings as risky for Covid-19 transmission.”

However, they wrote, “this should not be confused with a permissive stance on all gatherings, particularly protests against stay-at-home orders.”

(A: So, you’re allowed to protest and go out and break all the rules, because I guess the virus would understand, ‘eh? It’s a very understanding virus, this. It’s a politicized virus, ‘eh.)

Did the coronavirus develop some kind of superior intelligence enabling it to distinguish between those who were congregating for a “good cause” and those who were congregating for a “bad cause”? Of course not. What has happened from the beginning of this shameful coronavirus episode is the politicization of public health at the hands of authoritarians.

(A: …but for a big job though, not just for what he is talking about here obviously. It’s a new world order they want, right. He also mentions…)

Two prestigious medical journals, The Lancet and the New England Journal of Medicine, were forced to retract studies they had published concluding that Hydroxychloroquine was harmful to Covid patients. The rush to print the studies looks very much like a political move rather than one based on scientific principles. Once President Trump revealed that he was taking hydroxychloroquine the mainstream media and even “expert” journals began attacking the drug.

(A: And that’s true, isn’t it, ‘eh. But again, you’ve got to see that Fauci is behind that too.)

This is what happens when medicine merges with the state. We get the worst of both. We get career bureaucrat Dr. Fauci telling us we can never shake hands again and that we must stay home until a vaccine is found. Meanwhile, doctors across the globe are reporting that this variation of the coronavirus is disappearing on its own.

But he’s right, though, he’s right on what he says here. It’s a very politicized virus. I mean, it’s progressive, it’s a progressive virus, sorry, yeah. Before it didn’t know about politics, and right and wrong, and a good cause, and it’s suddenly changed its mind and just put itself into temporary hibernation, until it can spike again in the fall so’s they can get the vaccines going and get everybody [Alan chuckles.] getting bracelets and mandatory vaccinations. No, thank you. That won’t happen. Nope.

The tests, I won't go over the tests. Because facts don't matter anymore. We've seen the cons, even the China ones where they found that their testing, their swab test, they’re jokes. I said at the beginning of this whole thing, months ago, I said you're better off getting fortunetellers in to tell if you've got the thing or not, or maybe somebody you can read tea leaves, give everybody a cup of tea in the lineup and then get a really good tea. There's women, I met them when I was young, they were awfully, they went around to the houses at one time in Britain and they would read your tea leaves. They're pretty good, you know. I'd say they'd be a lot better than these swab tests. They could say, nah, you're positive, no, you're negative, nope. Because they'd be more precise than this joke of the swab tests. Look at the ones they dumped, that even Italy got from China and different places, they were useless, getting false positives and false negatives. It was a joke! Here you have this article here…

30,000 coronavirus tests had to be redone after being sent to America (A: From Britain right.) for processing, the government admits

politicshome.com / 4 June 2020

(A: I wonder how much that cost the taxpayers?)

The Government has admitted almost 30,000 people (A: It will be a lot more than that, by the way. Whenever they tell you 30,000, they actually admitted there was 67,000 samples in all, so I'll guarantee pretty well all of them were the same.) had to be retested for coronavirus after their swabs were voided on their return from America.

According to a report in The Telegraph, 67,000 samples were sent for processing overseas at the start of May following capacity issues at a lab in Northern Ireland.

(A: Where probably everybody in the lab was told to stay home, [Alan laughing.] they couldn't go to work.)

It said they were airlifted (A: No kidding, airlifted…) to a university on the east coast of the United States in "multiple batches" over 10 days.

But on their return one bag contained accurate tests, while the second batch had a much higher than expected "void rate”.

The Department of Health and Social Care (DHSC) confirmed that 29,500 of those sent abroad had to be done again.

But they are such a farce and a joke. Absolute farce and a joke. If you're around folk that have had it, right, like the cruise ships, and they stick those things up your nose, right, you're breathing in the same air. Most of those cabins were having circulated air, most of them, except the ones that are on the outside where they can get doors out and open the deck. You're getting fragments of the RNA, it's broken-down DNA in cells, you're breathing them in. They're harmless to you. But that's what's going to test positive, you see, fragments of dead cells, that's what you're going to get. Other ones too, you might show positive if you've had certain vaccinations recently, [Alan chuckles.] like the annual ones, at a certain time of the year, you know. I won't go into that too much, but that's true as well.

It's such a joke. Yep. An awful joke. And by the way, they've been floating the idea of for a while now, oh yeah, you know, even if you get your own antibodies against this thing, they won't last long, they seldom do, they say, maybe a few months. This is their joke. Well, so would their vaccinations by the way, you know, it's the same with them. It's such a farce what... Big money though, billions of dollars for a few individuals. Billions and billions and billions of dollars, ‘eh. And they don't have any come back if folk get sick or paralyzed or narcoleptic like has happened in the past with certain shots. It won't matter. Because they've got immunity, and the governments always look after their buddies at the top, the rich folk, you know, the real, real, real rich folk, ‘eh. Hm?

I've said before, if this is being made mandatory, you'd better get it from your doctor, to read it out to you what it's got in it. And thoroughly. You're supposed to get informed consent, inform you of the dangers of it. Like in detail, right. And then agree that you can sue them if you get sick with it, after them telling you it's okay.

You should all be petitioning your governments to toss out these immunity from prosecution that all these corporations have got. And go for them. And your prime ministers in certain countries that are mandating it too, make sure they accept that they are going to get sued by the public for permitting this to happen.

This is incredible what's happening here. Incredible. Total slavery to an electronic system as well? Come on! No, no, no, no, no. Nooooo. No, we're not cattle. At least I'm not one. Are you? You have to decide, folks. You really do have to decide. It's up to you.

I want to mention as well one article...

It’s an article that was put out by the Christian organization. I've read previous ones over the years admitting the same stuff. There was lots of data on it at the time. They even had certain people who actually selected who would be put into different causes, or even into bureaucracies or into even the Catholic Church as a priest and so on back then. This was all, this came out at hearings by the way from the folk who were involved, who are the selectors for the Communist Party. I do remember it well. It's not conspiracy stuff. It's factual stuff. Because they had these trials and the hearings about it not long ago. But yeah, a lot of them were funneled into the Catholic Church. They definitely were told to form clubs, which they did. They ended up being the ones who would bring in novices, to bring them in for the Catholic Church. It's continued for years since then. That's where you've got so much of this trouble from.

There's an article from the present Archbishop who came out and warned Trump about the Masonic, talking about the Freemasonic group behind it of this thing too. He is not wrong by the way. He's definitely not wrong what he's saying, and I don't know if Trump understands it or not. I think Trump just does what he told, myself.

That's why you're getting people at the high, some high generals, some of them, not all of them, the media would make you think all of them are against this, what's happening. But it's not so. Some of them, don't forget a lot of the generals are multimillionaires who also literally lobby governments for the military-industrial complex. There's big money in that. So don't forget that for a minute. And generals do, they do what they're told. The whole idea of a soldier is to get sent to where you go and do your job, it doesn't matter. You don't bring ethics into it. That's not your job is to be ethical. That goes all the way up to the very, very top. Their whole job is to win. That's what they're told to do, go out there and win, you see. I'll touch on the generals in a little while.

It's interesting, I think it was the same Archbishop who came out with this stuff again about the Catholic Church about two or three years ago, I think. It was quite interesting. As I say, I'll touch on what he said to Trump later.

Also this article here, it's about all the amazing, you know, fast testing of different vaccines. Because there's billions of dollars of profit here, you understand this, for those who own the companies. It's getting tossed, as I say, money is getting tossed out like confetti to these folk, it doesn't matter if it works or not. It doesn't make any difference at all. Or if it kills you, they don't care either. The hands are out. Just like the ones who got all the different money agreements before the thing even broke out for goodness’ sake, with the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation and the WHO.

2 billion doses of the Oxford coronavirus vaccine will be available after a new deal that included $750m from Bill Gates, AstraZeneca says

businessinsider.com / 5 June 2020

2 billion doses of the Oxford coronavirus vaccine are due to be produced (A: I think that fell apart, I’m quite sure. And that was from May this article here, maybe.) after pharma giant AstraZeneca struck two new deals to double the supply.

AstraZeneca partnered with the Serum Institute of India to supply doses to low-and-middle income countries. 400 million of these should be ready by the end of 2020.

There is still no guarantee the vaccine will work — but the company is pushing ahead with production anyway

(A: It’s interesting that Trump did say that he would shorten the testing times for different drugs when he first ran for politics, to get in for the presidency. That's no coincidence, folks. Because it should take two or three years or a few years to test any vaccine, and to see what the fallout effect is. Because there will be long-term effects that won't even manifest initially either by the way. Especially when you're going into RNA type vaccines that are going to alter your genetic makeup [Alan chuckles.] and so on.)

to shorten the timeline in case it does prove effective.

The global supply of a potential coronavirus vaccine being developed at Oxford University…

(A: And some of them at the Oxford University by the way, I think one of them was even working at Wuhan. I might be wrong on that, but I remember reading the article about one of the women who worked, it was at Oxford, was looking to get contracts for some kind of testing kits as well, I think. They're all at it. What d'you think they're in business for? To teach folk, because they love to teach people about...? No, no, no. They're in there for the handouts and the grants and the business opportunities that terror brings, you know. Of course they're all working with the...)

…Coalition for Epidemic Preparedness Innovations (CEPI) and Gavi the Vaccine Alliance (A: The Bill Gates group and so on.) to boost its supplies.

Of course they're coming out with it again now, you see, now that things might die down after all the protests and different, you know, things that are going on.

STAY AWAY Britain’s beaches could fuel second coronavirus wave and may have to be locked down, MPs warn (A: No kidding, eh?)

thesun.co.uk / 7 June 2020

(A: I hope the folk just ignore all this stuff. Matt Hancock again, oh, my goodness...)

Matt Hancock raised the prospect of localised restrictions yesterday - hinting that areas hit harder by coronavirus could face tougher measures than others.

Politicians from multiple parties have now warned beaches could be those forced to lockdown due to the influx of visitors.

(A: Ohhhh, my goodness, ‘eh. Hhhhh.)

Meanwhile more folk die with the flu. Every year. Yep. But they'll keep the con going because out of this is the whole new world... a new world system, not just a system in Europe or Britain or whatever, ‘eh, it's a WORLD system.

And you have to go back to having sex with masks on, and you know it's illegal if you have sex with strangers. Even if they've got a mask on. You might get afraid if you notice it’s your spouse and you didn't know it at the beginning. And so will they. There ya go.

Him Couples "Should Wear Masks During Sex" (A: It must be a joke surely.) In COVID World, 'Experts' Advise - zerohedge.com / 7 June 2020

Experts advise. I wonder how much money they get for advising. As I say, I could sit and make up these things all day long. I should have my hands out, and put a shingle outside the door, you see. I could do better stuff, I give you better results, and give long-winded explanations why you should do this or that, or not do this or that, you see. And I could always say, a further grant would help me study it even deeper. That's how you get along in these businesses, you see. They churn out thousands of these folk from universities every year. Parasites, all of them. With their expert advice, and, let me look at this closer, you know. Drinking red wine every night, one glass, it's good for your heart. Wow. Give me another, and I'll see, I'll tell you next year. There ya go.

Here's another good one…

Walking to work is WORSE for environment than car sharing (A: Hhhh!) because it makes you eat more leading to higher greenhouse emissions, new study finds - dailymail.co.uk / 11 June 2020

Oh, my goodness! Ttt. As I say, I'll put up that [Alan laughing.] comedian who's awfully good, you know, good skits he does. It's about how, he's talking about the really, really virtuous type, you know, at the top. The ones who are really spiritual, in the new spirituality, the ones that preen themselves in front of everybody. About how they argue. It's awfully good too. It's about food too, you know. And they use all the modern pseudo-psychological chatter because they get it all from these books they consume like you wouldn't believe. They're always buying books to tell them how to behave, what to think, what to do and what to eat, you know. It makes them more enlightened than other people.

So there ya go. Walking is worse for the environment, because you're eating more. Who would've thought? I'm glad an expert must have noticed that. It says…

Walking to work is WORSE for environment than car sharing (A: Hhhh!) because it makes you eat more leading to higher greenhouse emissions, new study finds

dailymail.co.uk / 11 June 2020

It may have many health benefits including cutting the risk of catching coronavirus.

(A: Well, why would it cut the risk?)

But walking to work could produce more greenhouse gas than driving.

The carbon footprint of producing the extra food a walker needs as ‘fuel’ for the journey would be more than that of a car travelling the same distance.

(A: Wow! I've never tried feeding into my car, I don't know if it will work or not.)

Researchers estimate that, in a country with high calorie diets such as the UK, walking for one kilometre would require food that would have generated around 0.26kg of carbon dioxide compared with 0.21kg of CO2 for the petrol used by a car.

(A: Can you believe this junk! [Alan chuckles.])

The scientists, from Otago University in New Zealand and Oxford University (A: Natually.), said a carshare scheme over short distances could produce less greenhouse gas than one person walking.

Now, isn't it just the psychologists behind it all saying, stop the folk from using so much cars by making them all cram into the one car. That would apparently, that apparently was deadly, that's why a lot of the folk that worked in these meatpacking plants and so on, that were brought up from Latin America, and this was in the papers here and I read the articles, so it's not fake news, they were cramming the cars and their employers were getting so worried because they wouldn't social distance! Ttt! So here you are, no, you're supposed to cram into the car as they're going to spike the coronavirus con game again. And it's okay then. It's beautiful how they can keep changing reality back and forth, ‘eh? Do you realize if you go back and forth with their statements you'd be a basket case? Very quickly. Hm.

So, food is a major source, once again getting that guilt thing through to you. You're eating, you are eating the supply of lettuce on this planet, you certain little you, yep. So if you're really small now, you're so insignificant and small, can we have your liver? Hm? So there you go, some con game article. This is how they do this stuff.

Remember too, the agenda at the top from the population control group, right, and the WEF, said all they really want coming out of this new world order and Covid nonsense, etc., what they've got to do is only authorized businesses that are green and that are sustainable to open up, and the other ones to be banned, like permanently. Are you getting the message here, folks? This is a big agenda. This has nothing to do with the virus. This is the excuse. Just like the Club of Rome came up with the excuse of blaming climate change on humans and that would be the excuse for changing us all and reducing our intake of food and everything else that we need to live. Hm. Are you starting to get the message here?

This isn't... The virus is the excuse that was eventually chosen. Climate change wasn't panning out the way they wanted it to. As I say, this last week or so I'm getting freezing temperatures, freezing, right on the freezing in Fahrenheit, like 32°, 33°, 40° at the most, per night, this last... This is June! This is the middle of June. So the global warming isn't panning out, you see. So along comes Covid. Oooooooooh, oh, we can't live like we used to live. Ooooh, Covid, Covid, sustainability, and we've got to reduce our caloric intake, and because of food rationing, yada, yada, ya. You starting to get the picture here? ‘Eh?

Having sex with someone you don't live with is illegal from today under coronavirus lockdown laws standard.co.uk / 1 June 2020

Brits have been banned from having sex with anyone outside of their own household under new coronavirus lockdown legislation rolled out by the Government.

(A: That's from the Evening Standard. That's a broken standard I'm sure after reading this.)

Officials on Monday introduced new measures that ban people in England from socialising indoors with anyone not already in their household bubble.

(A: [Alan laughing.] That's a new name for it, for bursting your bubble.)

Up until Monday, the person visiting another's house would have been the one in breach of lockdown rules.

But now both people could be prosecuted under the new amendment to The Health Protection (Coronavirus, Restrictions) Regulations 2020 bill.

(A: I'll have to look it up and see if it's really true.)

But the amendment to the bill now makes clear only those with "reasonable excuses" will be allowed to meet indoors, with sex not featuring on the list of exemptions.

"No person may, without reasonable excuse, stay overnight at any place other than the place where they are living," it says.

(A: Except politicians, I guess, and folk working, well, like Neil Ferguson did, you know. He had no problem with that. And other politicians too by the way, you know. But again, the virus, that virus is very politicized, and it will allow special folk who are much superior to everybody else to do these things. This is for the ordinary folk, you understand, you know, the peasantry.)

Those who may be deemed to have a reason for meeting others indoors are sports professionals, people attending funerals, vulnerable persons fleeing a risk of violence, carers and those with unavoidable work commitments.

For people attending a funeral of a loved one, the new rules also permit an overnight stay…

(A: I guess they don't let the body stay in the coffin very long either, 'eh. With all the folk standing around there, it will be a fast funeral, bum-bum-bum. Maybe they've got a big bubble over the coffin, I don't know. Who knows? Nothing would surprise me these days, folks. I mean, why should athletes be allowed to stay in a different location to their own residents if they're training for competition? Do you know how much food they're eating?! And carbon dioxide they're putting off when they're training?! Do you understand what's going on here! Hm! Hm? I'm telling you.)

Guidance issued to officers by the National Police Chiefs' Council (NPCC) and College of Policing said: "You may only direct a person to return home. (A: … if they find them out.)

"There are no powers in the Regulations to remove someone or use force.

(A: Really! Well, they've been arresting folk in Britain, under fixed penalty notices...)

"Fixed-penalty notices (FPNs) and arrest still apply, where appropriate."

(A: Oh, so they're still going to arrest you and give you fines. M-m-hm-hm.)

I dunno, I just don't know. Yep. Another article I'll put up too is…

Coronavirus (COVID-19): shielding support and contacts

gov.scot/publications / 12 June 2020

(A: This is for Scotland, this one here. It says...)

This document is part of a collection.

(A: I guess you're going to spend your whole life reading all their stuff and everything. This is from the government.)

If you require urgent support with food, please call your local authority. You can do this directly or via the free national health line. (A: And they give you a number.)

Weekly grocery packs: If you buy them online or have someone else who is able to get the food and the household items you need, you should carry on getting things in this way.

(A: You need your government to tell you this, ‘eh?)

If you're not able to get these things we can send you weekly grocery packs, the basic food boxes are free and there's no delivery charge.

(A: And they tell you what's in it, you know. Pasta, the usual stuff, pasta. Actually, they've got more stuff in it than I've got.)

Teabags, bread, baked beans, pasta. (A: All free.) Fruit one and two. Shower gel. (A: I don't know what shower gel is. I don't do any kinky stuff in the shower.) Semiskilled UHT milk. Cooking sauce. Pre-potato, or whole washed. (A: I don't know.) tin meat, tuna, vegetables, (A: ...peas probably...) chopped tomatoes, tinned fruit and toilet roll.

If you're not able to eat some of the food supplied and feel that the remaining contents of the packet are not enough, please contact your local authority.

So there you go. They didn't bother with it in Canada. We just, you know, Canada mind you, won't have the problems with the rioting, or mass demonstrations that turn into burning places down like the States. Because Canada is already communist, I don't have to go through that. We've been communist for a long time here. We're progressive, you see, and that's why we don't get these problems. [Alan laughing.]

Anyway, you could go on and on forever with this kind of stuff you understand. Because it is a whole new way of controlling the minds of the public by trying to get them into, well maybe they're right here, maybe they've got a point here. This is the whole point of it. Don't get into their POINTS! The real point is, don't get involved in it to begin with, just stick to your own common sense.

Psychology is being used on you all the time, through this entire debacle here. And it's not stopping. They want a new system worldwide with the technocratic expert run world, you see, of massive bureaucrats that are just really, they're not experts at all, they're just bureaucrats appointed to the jobs. They've got no end of things they want to try on you and make you do. Hm? They really do. I hope you understand.

As I say, I'll put up the one too for...

SAGE publishes evidence - Options for increasing adherence to social distancing measures assets.publishing.service.gov.uk

(A: ...and how they're going to make you all do it, and terrify you, and coerce you, and frighten you and so on. And different types of, they've got different categories of behavior all fathomed out, different kinds of people and what kind of pressure that will apply to the different groups, you see. Some folks are more terrified than others, and others are not. And how they will use social approval and disapproval. Oh, you're a good boy. Oh, you're a bad boy, bad boy, you know. And little gold stars and give you publicity for having a gold star. Yep. It's just astonishing 'eh. And more legislation, like masses of legislation that they keep coming up with, 'eh.)

Consideration should be given to use of social disapproval but with a strong caveat around unwanted negative consequences.

Then this one here too from Zero Hedge. It says…

"We're All Suspects Now": A Look Inside The NSA's New "Contact Chaining" Tool

zerohedge.com / 31 May 2020

(A: That's what it's called, 'eh, contact chaining tool. It's astonishing isn't it. I've already read the article, Bill Gates and the other guy had arranged, who was going to get the contract, etc. for chasing contacts up, etc., tracing.)

We all know Edward Snowden revealed that the NSA collects and stores massive databases of information on Americans’ phone call and text metadata.

(A: And they do. Everything. Everything. Folk forget on the phone who they're, you know, there's a 3rd ear in every phone call. I always say that. And it's a permanent one, you know. Never scrubbed.)

But then what? Most people think it sits on ice until and unless an alphabet agency like the FBI, CIA, or DHS wants to dig through it.

In reality, it is processed into a detailed map of your social contacts, constantly updating with new data.

Everytime you make a phone call or send a text, a new piece of data enters the government’s hands, and they update the map of your social contacts.

(A: I think they’ve been listening to me maybe.)

A new book explores the “contact chaining” tool, which is an essential second piece of the collection and storage of mass metadata.

This tool allows the NSA to play “six degrees of separation” to connect you to almost anyone.

They call it “contact chaining,” as in, determining who you are linked to. They know better than us who is in our inner circle, who are our casual contacts, and who is a friend of a friend.

This is so much broader than the government seeing when you sent a text. They can map out your entire social life.

And as coronavirus “contact tracing” comes into effect, it would be wise to remember just how dangerous it is for the government to have such detailed information on all Americans.

Everyone is being investigated, before they are ever suspected of committing a crime. We’re all suspects now.

Ohio judge blocks state from enforcing lockdowns against gyms

(A: I'll put that article up for those who want to read it.

And...)

Judge rules FBI can’t even look at your phone’s lock screen without a warrant

When police arrest a suspect, they inventory personal items like a cell phone.

During the process of powering down a phone, it is reasonable for law enforcement to see the phone’s screen.

That had already happened in this case.

But the FBI agent did not bother asking a judge for a warrant. (A: …from a judge.) And that made it an illegal search under the Fourth Amendment protections against unreasonable search and seizure, according to a judge.

The evidence was thrown out.

What this means:

When we are so used to the government doing whatever it wants, and not facing any consequences, little victories like these are encouraging.

There is a reason the Constitution attempted to restrict law enforcement and government powers when it came to the rights of the accused.

Otherwise, it is far too easy for the government to go digging around for a crime, without ever suspecting one in the first place.

(A: That’s what they do, a fishing expeditions, that’s what they call them.)

And with the number of petty laws and victimless crimes out there, we are all guilty of something

(A: But the first article is, you know, it mentions that there's a book out now.)

A new book explores the “contact chaining” tool

I gave these talks years ago, how every day, every day that you put stuff up on to all the different social media, and your phone calls, it's all collected. The Pentagon even had articles about virtual you’s that got set up for everybody, they've got a virtual you. Like a game thing. They add to your personality updates to it. They can do little games on it with your personality and your behavior in it and so on, and give it little tasks and little situations where, to see how it will react in the computer model. They say it's pretty accurate to how you would probably behave in real life faced with similar things. This is how, you have no idea how far into it... And these characters say, we have no idea about who's terrorists and who's not a terrorist, and what they're going to do. Oh, come on here, ‘eh? I-yi. N-n-n-n-n. Quite something.

After Endorsing Mass Protests, Gov. Cuomo Threatens New Yorkers Congregating, Janice Dean Finishes Off His Hypocrisy

redstate.com / 13 June 2020

How the media has covered the BLM protests versus any other public activity is quite a study in contrasts.

While they have by and large not chastised any protesters for marching in huge groups, some without masks, they have said that cause is so important that it trumps the concerns.

By contrast the lockdown, other constitutional rights, your jobs and feeding your families were not important, deemed essential or something the state was going to ‘allow’ you to do.

Here’s Gov. Andrew Cuomo demonstrating that very dynamic.

I share the outrage of the injustice and I stand with the protesters.

(A: This is after he threatened everybody for leaving their homes and lockdown. [Alan chuckles.] He just goes with the wind, doesn't he?)

It’s not just George Floyd. There are 50 or more cases just like it.

It is rooted in hundreds of years of racism and injustice.

Let’s use this energy constructively and demand real, positive change.

(A: Well, what kind of change are you looking for? What kind of new system are you in on, ‘eh? Because that's what it is. They're all in on it at the top. And he isn't at the very top either. But he's long term so he's got more of an idea of what's going on. He says…)

There are justified peaceful protests across the state tonight.

But there are also people criminally exploiting this pain and this moment.

We will not tolerate it.

(A: Remember last week I read too that he said, I can't really force folk to do anything, anything you do in lockdown or so on is because you allow us to do it. [Alan chuckles.]   So he said it. Getting himself off the hook then. Now he's back to wanting to put down a lockdown again once this thing is over, right.)

He didn’t do anything to stop rioters and looters.

But now here he is on Saturday, threatening people for congregating on the street on Friday in NYC, in the Village, mostly without masks in video from the East Village Grieve blog.

Is Cuomo joking or literally threatening citizens for walking public streets?

(A: And I love this, what this person commented. Because Cuomo remember is the one who ordered all the folk, all the elderly into, and all the nursing homes to accept folk who were testing positive, into the homes, and spreading it, and killing them all. To get the numbers up. That's what it was. So someone commented to Cuomo and says...)

So what are you going to do, throw them into nursing homes?

(A: [Alan chuckles.] If they have to go to the streets, that's punishment. But really, that's how it is.)

That's how it really is, isn’t it. It's nothing to do with what they tell you it is.

Former NY Times reporter bashes governors over coronavirus toll in nursing homes: 'A lot to answer for' - foxnews.com / 14 May 2020

But yeah, you've got to understand, you're disposable now. Most folk. It depends on who you are. Yeah, you've all got categories of importance. But we are disposable, no doubt about it. And this one here… Dr. Birx, the nodder, she nods a lot. She agrees with everything Fauci says and nods, nods, nods. Yeah. She says…

Birx says dozens of coronavirus testing sites have been destroyed by rioters

justthenews.com / 10 June 2020

(A: Ttt. Oh. That's awful. And she's the task force coordinator it says here. [Alan chuckles.] She's a career bureaucrat really, like Fauci and the pal deals with the same, she's like an ambassador across the world to dispense money to certain groups and so on.)

White House coronavirus task force coordinator Deborah Birx says that dozens of COVID-19 testing sites have been destroyed by rioters during the recent Black Lives Matter protests, a setback the Trump administration fears could contribute to the continued spread of the disease throughout the country.

Numerous recent Black Lives Matter demonstrations, sparked by the killing of Minneapolis resident George Floyd at the hands of local police, have descended into chaos and violence as some protesters have taken to property destruction, clashing with police and looting.

Among the consequences of those riots has been the destruction of 70 COVID-19 testing sites across the country.

Birx said the destroyed testing locations have already resulted in a drop in testing rates in the affected areas. She urged governors to ensure that "there is testing available in urban areas" within their states, according to the Beast.

Some health officials in recent weeks have been concerned that the ongoing Black Lives Matter protests, which have sometimes involved tens of thousands of individuals packed into city streets, will result in a sharp spike in coronavirus cases.

So yeah, they're all getting it, ‘eh, to some extent or another.

Asymptomatic spread of coronavirus is ‘very rare,’ according to WHO official independent.co.uk / 8 June 2020

(A: I've got a few articles on that actually. One from the WHO themselves, and a video on it by the way where you hear the official saying that. After telling us, oh, you know, someone who's asymptomatic is probably spreading it all over the place, so we've got to lockdown the whole population of the planet. Right? Now they're telling you, the same organization is telling you, oh, asymptomatic spread of coronavirus is very rare, according to the WHO official.)

“What we really want to be focused on is following the symptomatic cases,” Maria Van Kerkhove said.

There you go. It's amazing how reality can just change, ‘eh, from one ridiculous extreme to another, isn't it? Whoof, just like that. And you're supposed to go along with it and say, oh well I guess the experts know best. It depends on the side of the bed they get up on, I think, what they tell you.

Now, this is something I want to mention here. It's awfully important to what's happening. Getting back to the whole, let’s get back to the basics. The reason for everything that’s happening is population reduction and a new form of ruling the planet. They’ve mentioned it at the WEF. They even mentioned it at the last big meeting they had, we might have to go down the whole extent for sustainability, deciding who can live and die, who can breed and who can't breed. Remember that old eugenics idea? Well, it's never gone away. It's never been old, really, it's always been there. And it's always new. And it's always spoken at the right time. It's a trial balloon getting you used to, ready for the new system. And the whole generation's growing up that's all freaking out right now, we're all going to die anyway, what's the point in having children, yada, yada, ya, and yeah, they've trained them all. It's just all working along one direction. That's what the elites have always wanted. Less of you.

Ecologists, like it's a religion, ecologists. What are you? I'm an ecologist. I thought we were all ecologists in a sense, aren't we, you know? Oh no, we're special ecologists, we're virtuous and we know what has to be done. So…

Social Norms and Global Environmental Challenges: The Complex Interaction of Behaviors, Values, and Policy

academic.oup.com / 1 March 2013 / Paul R. Ehrlich

...urged the government to move beyond existence levels of public permission

(A: This is what I've been on about four years folks, ‘eh. This is an old article. Hm.)

...governments can and even should move beyond extant levels of public permission in order to shift norms, allowing public sentiment to later catch up with the regulation.

(A: Again, back to what Justin Trudeau, admires China, they don't have the same problems having to convince the public to go along with things, they just do it. Because they're not Democratic, you see. The Club of Rome, the same bunch again, same old bunch, all come up with the same articles over and over.)

In a peer-reviewed paper

(A: They're always peer reviewed. Oh, that means they're really important.)

put out by the American Institute of biological sciences

(A: That's the ones that do the ethics as well, the new norms and ethics and so on. It's called...)

Social Norms and Global Environmental Challenges

(A: Exactly from the Club of Rome, the same stuff.)

To be published in the 2013 edition of Bioscience.

A group of well-known scientists

(A: ... WELL known, you see.)

calls on government and scientists to start with the planned social engineering of norms and values in regards to environmental policies.

(A: This is new norms and values.)

The objective, according to the authors, is that these engineered norms must work their way into existing ones so finally environmental policies will be accepted without reserve.

(A: ...meaning, you get forced to accept it.)

A sustained campaign in other words, with the government and scientists working together

(A: Isn't that what they just did with this whole con of Covid? Hm? And their SAGE organization? But here, let's work with scientists in government to create new normals, ‘eh, isn't that wonderful. They say…)

It will gradually create changes in behavior so environmental policies will be more easily accepted over the course of some time.

(A: There you go. You will know it's happening, it's gradual, you see.)

Life scientists could make fundamental contributions to the agenda through targeted research on the emergence of social norms.

Substantial numbers of people will have to alter their existing behaviors to address this new class of global environmental problems.

Alternative approaches are needed when education and persuasion alone are insufficient.

(A: Right. There you go. Down, down, down. And through all education. You've had it. It's been taught in all the schools, and they've created them. We're all going to die. You bad older folk have eaten all the food and destroyed the planet, and oh my God, the planet is dying! Really? Have you looked around you? Hm? I tell ya.)

The scientists expressed confidence that the recommendations can be carried out in a way that abides by their principles of representative democracy.

(A: You know they're going beyond all that and creating, using psychology and science to persuade you to do what they want you to do, right. Psy-ops again. This is what they do. I read the articles too over many years. I get... to me this is all old stuff. And this is an old article. But this is what they're doing right now by the way...)

...move beyond existence levels of public permission.

Just do it, get on with it. The Club of Rome came out with that with their books years ago, the Limits to Growth and all that, and The First Global Revolution.

You'll hear the other guys parroting this next week by the way. They never give me... [Alan chuckles.] I think for anything, and they use my archives for their talks, otherwise they'd just talk politics and who to vote for.

But that's the articles I'm going to use for the Covid thing right now by the way. Now I'll get into some of the other stuff to do with the overthrow of everything, the big overthrow that's going on. Or, the appearance of the overthrow, you understand, right, and how it's being allowed to go on by the establishment. It's quite amazing, isn't it. I'll continue with more of these articles because they all tie in together. You think things are separate but they're not separate at all. Everything is mentioned here tonight, and things still to mention, that are even a few years old, are all connected, completely connected with one agenda.

You'll find out, if you ponder things, don't get tied up in the minutia of things. It's like looking at signs and symptoms of a disease. You can always tell, that's how you come a conclusion and the diagnosis of what the disease is, you see. When you see all things working together...

It's like Bill Gates. Bill Gates who also came out with the reimagining education, you know, and his system would be for a lockdown society, a permanently locked down society all doing it from home on the computers, using his system and his curriculum. What a power over the planet that would be, to give a common culture. That would be UNESCO on steroids, ‘eh. And that's what they want, folks.

And they've got George Soros who wanted, a few years ago he came out with, he wanted a nationalized police force for America, a centralized... Centralization, centralization, centralization. That's totalitarianism, folks. Hm? Think about it.

Remember too before I forget again, go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com and donate a few bucks my direction. Because I'll still be going, hopefully, if I'm still breathing, or being allowed to breathe or whatever, as things get worse and worse and worse. Which they will. They're not stopping. You understand, this is a war against the whole planet, really, the people of the planet going on right now using different guises for the same thing.

It's also to threaten other groups and get racial groups fighting each other. There's no doubt about it. When one group is getting promoted over the other, and the others are supposed to sit and cower, as being bad, guilty, nasty people, while the other ones who are ready to do them in are being lauded as having some natural revenge rights or something, for things that never happened to them, ‘eh... Come on here. Hm? Things that happened centuries ago?

I'll mention one article too. It's called…

paulcraigroberts.org / 11 June 2020

The worst racists in the world are the US print and TV media, NPR, and university administrations. Their racism is directed entirely at white people. Although Ron Unz is correct that Harvard University discriminates against Asians and limits their enrollment as Harvard once limited Jewish enrollment, it is white people who are accused by white media and white political leaders of both parties of the racial suppression of black peoples. Even Trump’s vice president has taken the side of black looters against looted whites, as has the Republican majority leader in the US Senate.

That doesn’t bode well, when you’ve got... You understand, the people above all of this, again, in government and the deep state are allowing all this to happen. They're promoting all of this rioting, and the divisions and divisions and divisions. Because this is part of the agenda. Out of chaos comes out the new order. That's what comes out of it. That's what it's about, ordo ab chao. The folk who participate in it always forget it, they get emotionally involved and they forget what's really behind it all and who's going to win and what kind of system is going to come in.

But that's what's happening. Of course folk, you can see it on YouTube. You'll see some of the people in cars and so on yelling to the crowds and the gangs that are burning stuff and so on, to kill white people. There's no mistaking what they're saying here. And you can imagine if it was the other way around, there would be all hell to pay and oh, heads must roll, etc. But no, when you're allowing this to get advocated, from the very top, and what are white folk supposed to do here? Hm? Do they want retaliation here? Or if white folk are threatened and the police aren't going to turn up to help them out, they're on their own, what do you expect them to do?

You see, do you understand, this is all connected here. There's folk in London, I noticed, who are doing a bit of rioting too. Again, they're not all peaceful, believe you me, according to the media. This is not happy fun-and-games things. They're not peaceful at all some of them. There's folk that Britain has welcomed in from all these countries that were never slaves. And they've been given the best starts in Britain too. If you really want to, the doors are open for university and everything if you want it, and even the financial support. There's nothing to bitch about here folks, you know, for things that happened centuries ago.

Centuries ago, as I say, off the shores of Britain they tried, they deported people. They created stacks of laws in poverty times where you'd get deported for and sentenced to get put off to another country as an indentured servant. They didn't like calling you a slave but that's what it was. You were bought coming off the boat, and the cut went back to the judge that sentenced you, and part to the captain. And these were white folk. They were the first ones. They died too quickly on plantations, so they tried American Indians too. That same thing happened to the native Indians, they died as well. So they brought in Africans. And a lot of them were sold off by African chiefs over there too. Some of them even had their own little empires on the go. This is not an unknown thing here.

So yeah, you'll find the same thing even going back into much older times. You found in Ireland when Saint Patrick went into Ireland, I mean, he'd been caught himself and made to be a slave at one point. He escaped. He came back in to try to stop the pagan rights going on there with sacrifices and so on. But that was a normal thing was to enslave people you conquered. The Romans did the same thing. The Greeks did it. Across Africa and different tribes they did it to each other as well. That's the unfortunate history of humankind, folks. Very unfortunate history. Really terrible.

But this is all being manufactured in recent years for different reasons by the same group that brought you communism. [Alan chuckles.] Long before you heard of Antifa and so on. It's on the go, it's working well because it's much higher powers behind all of this.

As I say, send me a few bucks my way. Hopefully I can keep ticking a long as we go through the chaos. Because it's not going to end with this. This is just part of it. The Covid was another part before it. They've mentioned about the Covid, they want a whole new world order. What do you think that means? Hm? It means they're going to give you a different TV station added or something? No, no. This is a whole new order of doing things, being, accepting what you're told to do by experts from birth to death, and how much you’re going to eat and not eat, and how much you're going to pay for the privilege of being alive, and consuming, and all that, and carbon taxes. This is the whole thing, folks, right down to who will breed and who will not breed. That's what's to come out of all of this, all of this chaos, you see. All of it.

And you can't go having racial wars along the way too. There's no doubt about it, one police chief, I'll put the article up too. He mentioned that they should be looking into, and they will be looking into the relationship between George Floyd and this policeman who was on his neck for 8 1/2 minutes. Because they knew each other. They had hit, they had butted heads, it says, before in the club that they worked at and so on, some night club or whatever or dance club I'm not sure what it was. But anyway, yeah, they knew each other and there's definitely some kind of animosity there regardless on top of it all.

Houston chief says investigators should look 'very closely' at history between George Floyd, Derek Chauvin - foxnews.com / 10 June 2020

Because the guy, yeah, you just, what were they doing during that particular neck movement? Which is not used except in advanced martial arts really. I know it's used by another country that teaches America, this is true, I mean, a lot of American police how to do anti-terrorism movements and so on and that's part of it too, this kind of, they call it restraint. It's not restraints.
It's rather deadly force as you know. Even if George died of a heart attack as they say might have happened, regardless, you can get amazing permanent damage occurring if you cut off the carotid artery. Yeah, damage, incredible damage. In the brain too, of course you do. That's if you survive it.

So no, this is amazing. It's never been explained why they just had 8 1/2 minutes like that. 8 1/2 minutes. And that's not all the cops, believe you me. There's no way. There was something else going on here. I looked at some of the cops in New York City in different places here all being accused of being racist and so on. No. Hhhch. In modern society, they've got to be almost, it's beyond social work, believe you me, what they have to put up with too and still not go overboard. In today's society, with drugs and alcohol and drugs, and the drugs they have now too, my goodness, ‘eh, and the domestic squabbles that are going on, gang fights, yada, yada. The society is in a mess. It is in an awful, awful mess. Isn't it? It truly is.

Getting back to what happens to, look at, because Fauci was against anybody interfering with his big plans and Gates plans of who's going to get the contracts, like Gilead antiviral and so on. They can immediately, immediately pretty well ban hydroxychloroquine across the country, and buy up all the stocks by the way, I think the US government bought it all off, that's what we were told anyway, until the folk can’t get it. The ordinary folk just can't get it, right. They can do that instantly, right. But they can't stop drugs flowing into the country from all over the planet, and China with the fentanyl, hhhch, that's where most of it’s coming from apparently, they just can't stop that. Who's kidding who?! Come on here.

But then you know the governments are in, the CIA especially, in with cocaine and heroin and all the rest of it. That was the first thing, going back, because I lived through it, and I did the talks at the time of George Bush Junior. You know, Junior Bush, the first law that he passed when they invaded Afghanistan was that, yeah, now the Taliban, they could start growing the poppy again. The poppy, it was banned. For the opium right, the poppy was banned, poppy growing, by the Taliban when they were in charge of it. They banned it.

That's bad for business when you're flogging the eventual substitutes of the stuff that comes out of opium like the heroin. The CIA is so involved in using it as black budgets, heroin, across the US ‘eh. We've lived through the drugs-for-guns and all these kind of things before and yada, yada, ya. Hhhhh, do you really think your government is, do you have any faith at all in justice anymore when there's so much corruption going on, you know, so much corruption? It's incredible corruption going on. In Latin America, every intelligence agency on the planet has got its, even helicopters down there in the drug trade, you know, ferrying the stuff back and forth and so on. Astonishing stuff going on.

And here they are stirring up, as I say, the race war, ‘eh. Everything directed at white folk, who just calmly take it. I don't know if they're so calm, I mean, they're getting a lot of nervous people now, right. But this article here goes on about...

Even Trump’s vice president has taken the side of black looters against looted whites.

The extraordinary destruction of white and Asian businesses in many instances wiping out a family’s lifetime work, the looting of national businesses whose (A: And he gets really emotional here and calls it... a dumb-excretion, excretion...) dumbshit CEOs support the looters, the merciless gang beatings of whites and Asians who attempted to defend their persons and their property, (A: Yep. That's, this is dangerous stuff going on here.) the egging on of the violence by politicians in both parties and by the entirely (A: I guess he means entirety...) of the media including many alternative media websites, shows a country undergoing collapse. This is why it is not shown in national media. Some local media show an indication of the violent destruction in their community, but it is not accumulated and presented to a national audience. Consequently, Americans think the looting and destruction is only a local occurance.

I just checked CNN and the BBC and there is nothing about the extraordinary economic destruction and massive thefts. Instead, I learn from CNN that Nascar, a Southern institution, has banned Confederate flags—https://www.cnn.com/2020/06/10/us/nascar-bans-confederate-flag-spt-trnd/index.html . Are Southern people so stupid that they will still attend Nascar races? Yes, they are.

I learned from the BBC that HBO has removed “Gone With The Wind” from its offerings—https://www.bbc.com/news/entertainment-arts-52990714 . The famous movie is not about racism. It is about the South in the aftermath of Lincoln’s war. But the South is racist, and so HBO removed the movie. Are Southern people so stupid that they will still use HBO. Yes, they are.

Some years ago I read that a movie theater somewhere in the South—it might have been Louisiana or Mississippi—that had always shown Gone With The Wind on an anniversary had ceased to permit the movie to be shown. Did Southerners protest and burn down the movie theater? No.

The US Congress demonstrated its unconcern with America’s unraveling by having the brother of the often convicted criminal George Floyd speak to them. The US Congress is more interested in grandstanding over a convicted felon’s death than in the unfolding death of our country.

How do these facts boil down to white supremacy? The only person in the US TV media speaking truthfully about what is going on is Tucker Carlson at Fox News whose firing—indeed murder—is demanded by the “white is evil” multitude. How long can Fox News hold on?

There is no doubt that whites have accepted their demise. Whites acknowledge their subservience to blacks by serving as majority enforcers for punishments of whites. It is so commonplace that it goes unnoticed. Nascar driver Kyle Larson has been fired for using the n-word.

Before the white Nascar representatives of black power will give Kyle Larson his livelihood back, he has to grovel and complete “sensitivity training.”

So it's not a matter of being right, wrong, or whatever here. What he's getting at really is, I mean, he's obviously getting really ticked off with it. But this is what you're getting for news now. And it's so whitewashed, again there's that word whitewashed. I saw some of the CNN clips, and my goodness me, I mean, you think it was just the summer of love they were having, you know, and these little barricade areas, barilles. It really is, isn't it? That's what they're trying to promote to you. But yeah, it's finished really. It's pretty well finished I would say.

Now, here's the some of the articles here. But there's no guessing here. This is what I'm trying to get at, there's no guessing that everybody at the top is promoting this. Obviously. It's one thing to get a culprit who kills someone. But it's another thing to allow, which is obviously a preplanned thing. As I say, Antifa jump on the spike, they wait for a spike occurrence and jump on the back of it. They don't care what it is, but it's gotta be emotional and they jump on the back of it. Because they're communists technically. But the ones at the very top of Antifa, they know who they're working for, and they know what they want to get out of it obviously. They do.

Another article and it says…

Army: Esper reverses plan to send active-duty troops home - apnews.com / 3 June 2020

It's true, those at the top there are really, come out publicly against Trump. It's interesting to watch this, I just stand back and watch it all. Because there's bigger things going on obviously than what they're telling you. A lot of retired, as I say, a lot of the generals that are against him are actually retired and on the take from the military industrial complex who really want the wars resumed in full force across the Middle East, I hope you understand that. They want to get on to the total destruction of Syria, it still going on by the way, and a few other places as well. And they want to get rid of Iran and everything that they've signed onto. Because technically they have no problem working for even foreign powers. Because they're lobbyists you understand, a lot of these generals are lobbyists. They're all in on board with this new world order idea, I have no doubt about it.

So this Archbishop that came out warning Trump about Freemasonry is not off-the-wall by the way. Freemasonry, if you've read the Freemasons books themselves, including Albert Pike's works with Mazzini and so on, they, he gave Mazzini to take over the world revolutionary movement. It was a revolutionary movement, you understand. They knew exactly who to revolt against and who not to revolt against. But they were a world revolutionary movement and they, Mazzini took up the cudgel, he was given permission to take it over and further it. Eventually that revolutionary movement became the communist movement, for those who don't know that.

They started out from Britain, that was one of the headquarters, in London of course. Before that they had been attacking Holland and other countries too and trying to get rid of Catholicism across Europe to take over. Because Protestantism was a good cover actually for Freemasonry, for those who haven't figured it out yet. I can remember reading the articles that were in the mainstream papers years ago where so many of the pastors in the Baptist churches in the States were high Freemasons. They were quite openly high Freemasons. Folk never really quite figured it out.

But when you saw the turn on Trump when he did that PR stunt with the Bible outside St. John's church, St. John the Divine's church in Washington DC, that was a turning point again. Because the high Masons suddenly were in public view doing something the Masons aren't supposed to do. You understand, it's a Christian church and you're not supposed to have anything, any mention of Christianity in a Masonic lodge. So you're all sworn against Christianity, I hope you understand that. But you can quote the Old Testament, there's no problem with that, little bits and pieces from it. But the Christian church is anathema to it really.

So the ones who followed Trump and end up with their faces plastered across the planet, who are in the military, who are his advisors in the military, they really became furious when they realized what they'd done, and how it had been used, that little jaunt. Again, they really turned like crazy against him. Amazing, isn't it. Amazing.

Then you get of course everybody else jumping on the bandwagon, oh my goodness, do you know that they worship Lucifer? Pike mentioned that himself, you know. So did Blavatsky, who was given the right to create a kind of female version with the Easter Star version of it for Theosophy and so on. It's so interesting. It's a whole area there that's very, very interesting but I won't go into it all, about her, what she worked towards, and what others work towards too.

But yeah, Mazzini was put in charge of the revolutionary movement for the world for a while and he wrote about it. Pike wrote about it as well. There's no guesswork here, Pike did pretty well say that you know, that Lucifer of course is their, a God, you see. So did definitely Blavatsky did, no doubt about it, make no doubt that Lucifer is God.

This is the whole thing of the dualism of life, you know. He also had a strange name they give the morning star, you know, Lucifer. Because Jesus was also given reference as the bright morning star. So this is the idea of dualism, dualism, dualism all through everything. The dualism through nature, and human nature, and the control factor of the world.

Getting back to what I mentioned earlier about The Stone Cutter. [The White Cutter.] And the tesserated floor of course of black-and-white, you know, you move in between the black and the white, that which is visible to the public and not so visible by them. But the occultists see what they're also doing, and what you're hearing. You can hear the same things and get two totally different messages from it, if you know how to decipher what you're hearing, you know, and seeing.

But again, yeah, this masonry idea was always for a world order. Always for new world order. They believe, because they're all working for the big boys that are way, way above them, believe you me, that they'll be rewarded. But still, they're working for the big boys way above them that plan it all and really mightily, hhhch, you know, benefit financially, etc. from their big power moves at the very, very top. But it is interesting to watch it happening.

Freemasonry under Pike was really dedicated to the destruction of existing religions. They would take what they could from other religions, they didn't mind talking about Muslims and so on.

Benjamin Franklin talks about it quite openly in his own memoirs and he says that, when I'm in the east, I'm a Muslim. In other words he'd be like a chameleon, he would put on the appearance of whatever was the dominant system, you know. Like the old adage, when in Rome do what the Romans do. That's the covers they take basically.

Don't forget, when you worship someone who's the Grand Master in the east, you're giving them the respect of a god, you understand. The sun rises in the east, eh? But yeah, there's a whole different system in freemasonry, and the military is completely, completely immersed in it, you know, totally baptized in it. The police used to be a one time too. And the black lodges as well, Obama is in Prince Hall, the Prince Hall Lodge and so on. Everything is catered to. Women are catered to by the Eastern Star and a few other organizations. The world is run by these organizations. It's quite fascinating to watch it all happening.

So yeah, you're watching them bring, they'll create more and more chaos, then they'll bring out the order. Order out of chaos. That's the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry. You'll see it happen, it might not be pleasant. And to make it happen on a world scale it's got to be absolutely chaotic and horrific and terrible with lots of suffering. What you’re seeing now might be the testing of the birth pangs basically, for a worse thing to come.

I really think so because the Antifa itself, they don't care about what really happens, they jump on it and use it, whatever it is. Whoever is being, who claims victimhood, they jump on the bandwagon. They say that in their manuals, their training manuals that when there's a spike, social grievances or whatever, they jump on it immediately, go into action, and then they use, they hide behind it, but they also use it to push for world, this, it's not anti-fascist, it's pro-communism for a New World order. Along the ways of George Soros and along the designs of Bill Gates and all the big folk who already believe that they really have the right to rule the world. They certainly own enough of it. That's what's happening.

So yeah, you'll see the military going against Trump right now. Because he hasn't, the only time he got kudos from the military and the politicians is when he did send the missiles over into Syria that time, when they had to fake, they tried to blame them for releasing weapons of mass destruction, gas or whatever. Which they had not it turns out. But facts don't matter. He sent the missiles over anyway, and suddenly the papers, oh, he was a good guy again. For a little while. A very short time. But he didn't get on with the wars enough and they’re not too happy about it. And that's a fact. The top generals are well rewarded for getting the wars going, you know. Really. Big time.

California attorney allegedly offers free representation to black people willing to kill police

A southern California criminal defense attorney is being investigated by the Los Angeles Police Department for allegedly advocating that black people kill police officers…

"It won't stop until black people start murdering cops, which they should do — often and with great relish. These c---sucking, low-iq, can't get into law school jarheads need an asphalt nap, during which they bleed out on the streets where they're shot down. I would have no problem with them. I would absolutely 100 percent defend to the death any African American who picked off a cop or two. It's time. It's well past time," one screenshot read.

Well, that doesn't bode well when you have these things being promoted, and allowed, at the top. What's so evident is the complete lack of backing up of people, telling them they'll be protected when all this is going on, that's just nothing being said, that I can hear anyway. Really. From the top down. Which doesn't bode well for anybody... for anybody, folks. I really think they want to get racial wars on the go. That's all I can imagine here.

Another article by Paul Craig Roberts says...

Can We Survive Our Collective Stupidity?

paulcraigroberts.org / 9 June 2020 / Paul Craig Roberts

I have come to the conclusion that collectively Americans are mentally and emotionally stupid. On any given day there is endless evidence that this is the case. Just a few selections from news of the last couple of days should suffice to establish the point.

Instead of reforming police training as a rational response to George Floyd's death from an aggressive restraint technique, the Minneapolis city council voted to disband the Minneapolis police. Council woman Lisa Bender responded to a citizen's question what she is supposed to do if she faces a threat in her home and there are no police to call: "Yes, I hear that loud and clear from a lot of my neighbors. And I know — and myself, too, and I know that that comes from a place of privilege."

All this white privilege stuff that's been brainwashed, you gotta stop using the terminology, folks. There's no white privilege. We're all going down together here; I hope you understand that. That's what's happening. I think one of them too, another article went up where one of them who said the same kind of thing, actually it's someone who phoned the police herself a few times in the past year or two for help. But facts don't matter, right. And...

Chairman of joint chiefs tells troops to 'uphold the Constitution' and says National Guard are under governors' orders in public rebuke to Donald Trump - as retired generals slam president and Jim Mattis compares him to Nazis

Former Defense Secretary James Mattis and retired four-star General John Allen both bashed Donald Trump in Wednesday op-eds for his response to the unrest

They specifically called out police clearing Lafayette Park with tear gas and rubber bullets so Trump could visit a church across the street for a photo-op

(A: Well, they were burning down places, and they were trying to burn the church for goodness' sake here. Come on here. Let's get the rest of the stuff into this article, Daily Mail, hm!)

'It may well signal the beginning of the end of the American experiment,'

(A: Very im… You see, that's a Masonic statement right there. Because that's what it was called by the Masons, the American experiment, hm, the system hey.)

Allen said of the church visit where Trump held up his bible (A: I don't know if it was his bible or not.) for photos

Mattis chastising Trump was a break from his previous silence on the actions of his former employer

'Donald Trump is the first president in my lifetime who does not try to unite the American people - does not even pretend to try,' he wrote

The thing is, none of these guys are happy that the wars aren't... You know, they're getting pressure put on them, by the way, from outside forces to get the wars finished. Why, why do you think America has been over there for 30 years? Why do you think, 'eh? Who benefits? Never mind the money that's going back and forth all over the place to these guys who literally are lobbyists for the military-industrial complex. Big money. I read some of that last month too I think, who are getting millions. Like every contract, their cut was in the millions for every contract they got from certain manufacturers of equipment and so on. Yep. It's very lucrative.

But yeah, he has to get on with the wars. You see, Trump hasn't put, they want the boots on the ground. American troops, they want them all over Syria and all across Iran and get on with it. That's what they want. And a few other places. Big agenda, eh, on the go, big, big agenda.

But no one's going to win here, all the rioters or whatever, they're not going to win. Nobody's going to win out of this. You're going to get a complete system that you'll never recognize. No one of any particular creed or ethnic group is going to recognize it. It's not going to be pleasant for anybody.

Then, Chicago Mayor Lori Lightfoot who was all for lockdowns and stuff, and had the woman minister of health or whatever they call them down there, in charge of it dictating, you're all going to get the vaccine when it came out and all that kind of stuff, ‘eh. She was all for the total lockdown until they had the vaccine ready and all that, and then your passport, immunity passport. Anyway…

Chicago Mayor Lori Lightfoot briefed the city's 50 aldermen during an online conference call on May 31 about the civil unrest in the city

In the audio, some aldermen are heard breaking down in tears while others voiced outrage that their communities have become 'the wild, wild west'

Alderman Ed Burke said he had not seen such chaos since the Chicago riots of 1968, sparked by the murder of Martin Luther King Jr. and leaving 11 people dead

Alderman Susan Sadlowski-Garza broke down in tears as she said she was 'scared' her ward had become a (A: …is that a spit show, I don’t know what that can be…) 'st show' with rioters 'shooting at the police'

(A: …rioters shooting at the police.)

Lightfoot admitted that 'people are just (A: I guess she means, feeling, it’s f something…) fing lawless right now'

Others warned vulnerable residents will lose access to food and medicine as local businesses are destroyed

The fraught call came the same day that Chicago recorded its most violent day in 60 years with 18 fatally shot in the city

(A: That's them shooting each other by the way. That's the way it goes, folks.)

And some of them literally in some of these areas had spent years building up their own areas, and their own shopkeepers and grocery stores, and now they're all burned down. One of them said, they'll probably never get the stores to come back in again. M-hm. Is called winning? Really? I don't think so.

Through all of this, as this is all going on…

Chinese military officer arrested after trying to leave US

washingtonexaminer.com / 12 June 2020

A Chinese military officer is accused of trying to leave the United States (A: …apparently…) with a cache of scientific research conducted at a California university.

(A: That happens all the time unfortunately, just like the other stuff that happened with the vials before. But they belong to, they're officers remember a lot of them in the Chinese military, and what they're claiming is the fellow didn't mention that he was still associated with the military. When he actually still is part of...)

Xin Wang, a high-ranking member of the People's Liberation Army

He was still getting paid by the Chinese military while he was over in the States, you see, getting this stuff. Anyway, they're taking a lot of stuff from him, I don't know what they're working on, from the California universities, it doesn't tell you here I don't think.

Councilmember Uses Key to Allow Protesters and Rioters Into Seattle City Hall

thegatewaypundit.com / 9 June 2020

Sawant has been calling on Mayor Jenny Durkan to resign over “violence and brutality” by police in the city’s response to the “overwhelmingly peaceful” riots (A: …overwhelmingly peaceful riots … [Alan chuckles.] Riots. Peaceful. I don’t know…) they have seen in response to the death of George Floyd in Minneapolis.

Protesters poured into the building chanting for the mayor’s removal and were met with a speaker from the Socialist Alternative party. (A: [Alan chuckles.] There ya go.)

Worse is still to come. And if there's more, and I'm telling you with the whole, the Antifa will ride these people, the protesters, they'll ride on their backs like they are a mule, they will. That's what Antifa does, that's what communism does. They’re agitators and they will get it going big time. If another spike happens, another killing, it will happen, they'll jump on that too if they can get it going. They want this to be total warfare across the country, you understand that. I mean, that's the whole point of it. You know, when they leap on someone's back, it's to get something else forward. It's not because they care about anybody being killed. That's the truth of it. These folk don't care how who gets killed, or who starves to death, or anything. Not at all.

This is the old communist techniques. Well written about and there's nothing… A lot of them will tell you that openly, you know, these people are quite open they're all for it. They don't see past revolution, they don't understand, they don't see past revolution into hunger and starvation. They don't see past any of this stuff. They never do. Yep.

An article was mentioning about that, some of the African slave countries, in Africa, that ran a lot of slavery. There's Dahomey was one of them, a historical kingdom in Africa. That's from the Encyclopedia Britannica. But there's some good books about it, pretty in-depth about it. It says...

britannica.com

Dahomey, kingdom in western Africa that flourished in the 18th and 19th centuries in the region that is now southern Benin. According to tradition, at the beginning of the 17th century three brothers vied for the kingdom of Allada, which, like neighbouring Whydah (now Ouidah), had grown rich on the slave trade. When one of the brothers won control of Allada, the other two fled. One went southeast and founded Porto-Novo, on the coast east of Whydah. The other, Do-Aklin, went north to found the kingdom of Abomey, core of the future Dahomey. They all paid tribute to the powerful Yoruba kingdom of Oyo to the east.

They go on about, yeah, they would buy arms from European traders and lots of other things too. It was a thriving, they had a thriving system of selling slaves to Europeans, they conquered other tribes round about them and so on.

It's, no one, really me, when you get into history, I always say that history is a horror show. Forget all the, of course there's nice things happening in between, for individuals, if you have a sense of humor and a laugh once in a while, you know, that's all you had really, often that's all you had. But history generally under power structures is a horror show. It truly is. It's a horror show. In every country.

Thanks to tenured radicals, (A: And they are tenured, I mean, the radicals are not the people at the bottom of the working class, believe you me, who are organizing this.) we are witnessing the retribalization of the world

Isn't that the truth that, ‘eh. M-hm. They give you examples of what's happened in the past, the same kind of things. It's like repetition, repetition, yep, a lot of it is repetitive too. But yeah, you've got so many groups who will jump on the backs of folk who are being killed, obviously, and to use them for different purpose altogether. And that is a fact, it's not just a guess.

I'll put of these articles too on NexGen…

NextGen America

influencewatch.org

NextGen America was founded in 2013 as NextGen Climate.

(A: Founded in 2013, initially again, they're all combined you see, the next generation climate, for climate action and so on. Then it changed its name…)

The organization changed its name in 2017 to better reflect that it was not only concerned about environmental issues, but also would be a leader in opposing President Donald Trump.

NextGen founder Tom Steyer is a left-wing billionaire activist who spent $123,000,000 (A: $123 million.) during 2018 in campaigns promoting Democratic candidates and advocating for impeaching president Donald Trump.

(A: Amazing isn't it. So, it's to combat climate, global warming. They have to come up here, I'm telling you, and you don't have to combat anything. You'll be looking for blankets to keep yourself warm.)

NextGen America focuses on supporting government action to combat global warming and helping elect Democrats.

NextGen teamed up with SEIU International and Planned Parenthood Votes to turn out Democratic voters in the battleground state of New Hampshire during 2016.

NextGen partnered with Hollywood liberal actors to produce ads pushing millennials to get out and vote for candidates promising to fight global warming (A: Ha, there ya go.) as part of the #WhyWeVote campaign.

NextGen Climate Action Committee - influencewatch.org

Global warming remember is sustainability, which is depopulation. If you haven't figured it out. It was quite plainly put out by the Club of Rome, they were given the task to find a reason to indoctrinate us on what, you know, well this is climate change or famine and drought and plague and so on would fit the bill, and mankind therefore was the enemy, man is the enemy of the planet basically, the environment, so that would fit the bill to train the kids into that very thing.
That whole campaign wasn't to indoctrinate us into it, it wasn't around before then. They were given the task of finding something that would work upon the people, to make us depopulate, not have children, etc., for a post consumerist society, not just postindustrial but postconsumer. So there ya go.

But how can you, how can any country, democratic country run smoothly in any direction at all? It's bad enough with political parties the way they are, they're all corrupt, that's true. And I mean all of them. Even the ones that they set up for different ethnic groups, before you know it, if they weren't corrupt to start with, they very quickly are. Folk get used to cash very, very quickly. And they want more and more and more of it very quickly. And power very quickly. That's unfortunately a trait of humankind. We know that's true. That's what history is. And it's all done under good auspices and good sounding agendas and so on, ‘eh.

But how can you possibly not be crumbled by such massive, even foreign trained organizations, into organization and subversion? How can you, how can any country? Unless your country goes to war with them, which won't happen because the people at the top of your countries are just as compromised. It seems to be. They're all on board with it, aren't they? But how could you possibly have any functioning democratic kind of system if you've got folk like this who can dish out billions just over and over again? And subvert everything. Hm? You can't, ‘eh.

How could even parents decide what their children will be taught? You can't. They're subverted too through the different school education systems. Bill Gates is in, you know, with his Common Core, etc. wanting a uniform education. Education, which is just an indoctrination system, right, for the new era for the whole planet. Yeah, visualizing education, ‘eh. I'll put some articles upon that. It's quite interesting to see it.

There are some articles here, [Alan chuckles.] I'm not even quite sure if they are real as I say. With the autonomous zones, one organizer was asking for vegan meat and soy… I guess it's Bill Gates because he's got patents on a lot of the vegan meat, you know that.

Another article says…

Radical protester threatens to tear cops apart if they don’t commit suicide (A: That's quite a choice that, ‘eh?) —Seattle city councilwoman justifies his sentiments

truepundit.com / 14 June 2020

Seattle City Councilwoman Teresa Mosqueda posted a live video on Facebook, knowing it contained vicious anti-Seattle Police Department (SPD) excrement, including a threat from a piece of filth in the crowd, bellowing through a bullhorn at cops protecting their precinct.

He vomited, “‘SPD, I need you to do me a favor. Take your guns, put them onto your chins, and pull the trigger,’ the man yelled. ‘I need you to kill yourselves. That’s your only redemption. Go ahead, save us the trouble of tearing you apart and ing kill yourselves. Did I stutter? I said, ‘k-k-k-kill yourselves .’” (A: And he says it a few times over.)

Jason Rantz, for mynorthwest.com, wrote that at the sometimes violent protests, Councilwoman Mosqueda remarked about the vermin’s threats and told the crowd “The anger you hear is justified.” Did she miss the threat to tear the cops apart, if they didn’t draw their guns and blow their own heads off? Did she miss that?

So, they're really building up, and of course the media is part of it. The same media that created the hype over the Covid thing, be very, very afraid boys and girls and children, be terrified. Because the governments are paying, you know, psychological teams to terrify you into compliance. Well, the same media is at it here too. Hm? Isn't it? Getting headlines, they've never had such headlines for yeears. Because folk were ignoring them, the papers are so bad, so terribly bad. N-n-n.

But again, I'll put up the article with George Soros.

Soros Exposed Plotting to Nationalize American Police

thenewamerican.com / 1 Sept 2016

(A: It's his agenda. Get rid of the local police, nationalize it, centralize it. What does communism say? Centralization, centralization. And the biggest communists are multibillionaire's, folks. They don't mind calling themselves this at one era and changing it for a different era. It's all the same thing, with themselves in control.)

Billionaire statist George Soros has been helping Obama and globalist forces to federalize control over American police forces under the guise of pushing “criminal justice reform,” hacked e-mails and documents from his shadowy Open Society “philanthropic” empire revealed.

(A: From hacking apparently, hacked emails.)

From funneling tens of millions to radical activist groups and race-mongers to building what leaked documents refer to as a “national movement” to “reform” law-enforcement and working with the White House to do it, Soros fingerprints can be found all over the growing anti-police chaos that has enveloped U.S. cities in recent years.

Well, he is allowed to do it, isn't it? He works with Obama and everybody else who's for the same. Mind you, if you work with Soros and you go along with Soros, the money will flow in like you wouldn't believe. I think he just makes it out of thin air really, you know.

WHAT A JOKE: After Antifa and Black Lives Matter RIOT AND LOOT Across America — FBI Sends Out Memo Warning White Supremacists Pose Greatest Risk of Violence - thegatewaypundit.com / 10 June 2020

I tell you, you just don't... The folk just don't quite get it, do they, what’s really, really going on. And why should they? The media is not going to tell them what's really, really going on.

I'll get back to Jefferson, right.

There is no justification for taking away individuals' freedom

in the guise of public safety.

When you abandon freedom to achieve security, you lose both and deserve neither.

The issue today is the same as it has been throughout all history, whether man should be allowed to govern himself or be ruled by a small elite.

(A: And that's so true. It's so true. He also said that…)

I think myself we have more machinery of government than is necessary, too many parasites living on the labor of the industrious.

(A: They take everything you have, it says.)

Government big enough to supply everything you need

(A: This is interesting too, is big enough to take everything you have.)

The course of history shows that as a government grows liberty decreases.

And that's true. That was taught in the US for a long time, up through the 20th century. The reason that it took off so well and people prospered, it was mainly small businesses. I mean, all over the place, all kinds, and manufacturing of all kinds, people with small, very small businesses, even machining businesses and things like that, really took off because of the LACK of bureaucracy and rules. That's what did it. Now you couldn't open up your little place in your back garage and start machining stuff. Oh no, you need a license for this and that, and industrial safety, even if it's only yourself working there, etc. etc. That's how it is now.

The course of history shows that as a government grows, liberty decreases.

The two enemies of the people are criminals and government, so let us tie the second down

with the chains of the constitution so the second will not become the legalized version of the first.

(A: [Alan chuckles.] ...when it's just the criminals running you.)

The end of democracy and the defeat of the American revolution will occur when government falls into the hands of lending institutions and money incorporations.

Look at the billions that Soros and others can throw around, ‘eh. How can you fight that? And the incredibly well organized and well trained, like, you're looking at like five years training, or up to 10 years for some of the senior ones, on how to go into countries and get the color revolutions going, how to exploit grievances, piggyback on the back of grievances, to get the crowds all on your side. Then you use them for your purpose. And the crowds go along with it, until they realize that they've been used and had, you know.

But how can you compete with this kind of thing? When you already have, as I say, members of the military on board with it? And the political parties all on board with it? Where are they all getting their orders? What grand Lodge are they getting other orders from a the top, folks? Think about that. Come on here. Come on. Come on. Hm.

They're all sworn to protect a system and a constitution. They're not sworn to bring in the end of the American experiment, as the general said. Hm? Think about that. They're all sworn to protect the existing system, with all of its problems and flaws. It's a lot better than a totalitarian system run by socialism and experts. That's just communism on steroids, you know. Way ahead of what the Soviets ever had when it really, really gets going.

Right down to divisions in ethnic groups and so on. And down to divisions as well, and again, reeducation camps and yada, yada, ya. Never-ending. And then execution for those that they say can't be rehabilitated from wrong thinking. I mean, that was a mental illness in the Soviet Union, was when you had wrong think basically. You had "inflexibility of opinion", that's what they called it. If you criticize the government, you criticized utopia, which proves you were insane. That was the verdict right there. I'm not kidding you. This was a legal verdict in the Soviet Union.

You'll see it here too. Inflexibility of opinion, on whatever you're told to NOW believe, you're supposed to believe it and jump. And you say, I don't, that's not, that's not what I see, that's not what I think, no, no, no. That's not good enough. No, that's it. It's all coming. That's what's behind it all.

Definitely the ones who are financing this are experts in it. They know what they're doing. They KNOW what they're doing, folks. They really do. There's a much bigger superstructure above all of this, for them all to be in obedience, all the way down, all the way down through chains of command. It has to be.

The only folk who are not let in on the big, big secret of the management of it all and the control are the general population. Of any persuasion. They are kept out of it. All they see is the little emotional things they're told to get stirred up about. They don't see the big picture of what's controlling all of them. They don't see it. They can't imagine that something is controlling something so big, a whole nation. In fact, all the nations, all on board on the same, with the total lockdown idea, you know. Be very terrified of a disease that's going to kill millions of you, in every country, millions. It didn't happen. It didn't matter. They’re at it again, ‘eh. Quite amazing what’s really, really going on here.

As I say, I don't take politics seriously. Because everything is so compromised and corrupt anyway. And it's always there to serve the existing elite. And if the existing elite obviously want what's happening, including the riots right now, then that's the way it's going to be. Because they're obviously behind it. They want it. It's been okayed from the guardian class at the top that guards their own system. That's obvious. But they're not telling the general public any truth at all, as they get emotionally riled up amongst all the fear and hype and their possible rioting. It will escalate if they can get more and more spikes from further police killings.

There was one that happened I think, I just got a bit of the headline, I'm not certain on this thing. But someone was, they found a guy in a car in some fast-food place, a drive-through you know, who had fallen asleep. And I don't know why the cops came. The cops tested him for alcohol I think it was, I might be wrong on that, but they tested him for something, and they tried to arrest him. He tried to run away and they pulled out a Taser gun, and he snatched it and ran away with it. I guess he was trying to get away from them. But it says that he was shot by a policeman. I don't know the whole thing about it, it's hard to, I shouldn't even talk about it because I'm not certain about what the circumstances were.

But if that's the case too, I mean, it's like Floyd himself, why was he killed? I don't care what the eventual cause of death was, heart attack or whatever. I think a lot of folk would have a heart attack if that was happening to you. And if he's on drugs too, which apparently he was high on fentanyl and so on. But the fact is, you don't kill folk for trying, even if he did or didn't have an alleged $20 fake bill he was trying to pass, that's not a death sentence. There's more to this than meets the eye here with the guy involved and him obviously.

But again, the other groups, the radical groups that are well-trained and sitting chomping at the bit waiting for the word to go, were just waiting for something to happen, which they call the spike - different from the spike of the coronavirus but the spike in the situations that are emotionally charged - and they jump on it immediately and get it going.

So it will be interesting to see if they really push this to its extreme. And let it burn itself out. Because as I say, the people at the bottom level, not the guys who organize it, they are the ones who are left to carry they can for all the damage that's been caused, etc. That's standard stuff. And they always turn on each other too, that’s standard again, as they vied for different, different groups eventually rise up and fight for power. One guy will stand up and say support me. Some will, some won't, some will break off, then they fight amongst themselves. That's what generally happens.

But the ones at the top that are managing it all, if they can drag this on and get it worse until you’re into deep fall, just prior to the winter, then the spike with the Corona, that's what they'll claim, then a total lockdown again, and folk will simmer over the winter months.

Anything's possible. I know they want to do it that way at the top. It seems to be that way with Fauci back out again. Everybody else, even the WHO has said that they don't expect it to spike again into any foreseeable problem coming out of it. They're against it too, they're saying you probably won't do it. They have to get some credence because they lost all credence, the WHO, with the whole farce of it to start with so they're coming out with that too. Yeah, it probably won't spike, and asymptomatic characters are very unlikely to spread anything.

Well, that's an amazing change, isn't it? After locking down, what, about half the planet. [Alan chuckles.] And destroying the economies... BY DESIGN, into sustainability and post consumerist society. All the things they talked about, ‘eh, all falls in line with it.

So as I say for those folks who are sitting terrified with everything, don't be so terrified. And yes, you have to look after yourselves because it seems, the appearance you're getting at the moment whether it's real or not, but the appearance that they want to give out is that if you're targeted, you're on your own. That's what they want you to think. The media is definitely all on board with this, just like they're all on board with terrifying the public with the Covid thing. You have to see how it plays out.

But take care of each other for goodness’ sake. There's so many folks suffer through all of this. Because a lot of folk are in touch with me who have lost everything, having places burned down and so on. And I mean black folk too. Come on here. Even they complain about these strange characters that are coming in that aren't black, who got the black clad gear on. And some of them are [Alan chuckles.] Asian and some of them are...

So they know, they're watching who these folk are too. I'm beginning to wonder if some of them came in with the so-called masses of refugees that had come in from, going through Germany and Europe all the way to America. Because I wouldn't be surprised, I wouldn't be surprised at all, and burning down their own areas, the areas of the black people for goodness’ sake, you know, and getting it all going.

As the woman said, it took them years to get their own businesses run by black folks in their own areas. That's what you call community, you know. And to watch it all get destroyed so fast, wiped out, boof, gone. Then the other big stores that were a good attraction for their area, the big stores from outside, probably won't come back in now that they had totally burned down and looted and, you know, total destruction. Yep.

So we have to stand and watch this happening and watch the farce with the coming Covid nonsense again with Fauci and his team, and the nodding woman behind him who will nod with everything he says. But yeah, you know, the corruption in this whole Covid thing, the corruption in money and trillions of dollars and, oh, billions given to all folk... Oh, you don't have to... We can try and get a vaccine here, we're all trying to get vaccines. They don't have to come up with anything. What a present, ‘eh? What a present! For a lot of them it will be a once-in-a-lifetime present and they'll be made multimillionaires, maybe even multibillionaires for life, from this one big crisis of Covid. Hm? Whether they come up with anything or not that's any good.

But we've got to stop panicking and allowing the state to step in and do what they want to do, which is using high-tech for a prison camp for all of us, a perpetual prison and you'll be monitored from birth to death. Everything that you do, everywhere you go, right down to them telling you to get indoors or you, you've been near someone who tested positive we think MAY have had blah blah blah, etc., and you can't work if you don't go along with this, and you can’t get out of your house if you don't do what we tell you.

No, that's utter tyranny of an awful kind. The very kind that Bertrand Russell dreamed of having. He thought it was fantastic getting that to come to pass.

So remember folks, I could go on all night but I'm not going to do this kind of thing. I've had enough of one talk. But I could go on, right, with a lot more data too about other topics. It's a shame.   But we're stuck on this for the moment because this has got priority as we go through the big changes, as I say, for maybe the end of the American experiment, you see. On behalf of those who gave you the Soviet experiment and that was the second one, you see.

The first American one was the idea that you're given the chance to govern yourselves, and you would either succeed or you would not. Well, you can't govern yourselves when you've got instigators behind it throwing billions of dollars out subverting your system. How can you, how can you possibly? Do you see what I'm saying? You've been under a war attack for an awful long time. Many, many, many, many years. Most folk don't know it. Social, cultural, all of it, financial, economic. So your experiment hadn't a chance of continuing. Hadn't a chance.

The Soviet system didn't believe that you had the abilities to manage yourselves, you need a collective system and experts to rule your life. That's what you had that for. And that was done away with, as you know, about 1991, 1990 or whatever it was, and Gorbachev voiced it all the time, that was the end of that experiment.

Now they're trying to say this is the end of, this is your generals, high Masonic generals saying this is the end of your experiment? Who are THEY to decide? Hm? Maybe you should ask to see their secret charters that they have, ‘eh? How about that one?

Here are all the current and former military leaders blasting Trump’s response to nationwide protests - taskandpurpose.com / 5 June 2020

Anyway remember, don't give up. Look after each other as best you can, if you have friends. Because is not over yet, this whole thing, you'll need them, you need each other. Help each other out the best you can. And don't get entangled with all the racism that's going on, and the goading from all, from the very top in fact and the way down that's going on to get this whole thing going.

Stand back from it because the people who end up fighting each other in racial, are not going to win. The ones at the top who want it will definitely win but nobody else down the whole slope will win at all. It won't happen like that. It won't happen at all like that.

And the generals that want to get on with these wars for, they really are foreign wars for foreign purposes, and really are not for the benefit of the American people at all. But that's the only way these generals will be pleased again, if you get the whole thing, all these things going once again, you see.

Why would you go off to fight wars across, wherever it is, we're in the Middle East again, or in Asia, if you're on fire back home? And the generals are not complaining about that. It would be pointless, wouldn't it? So why would they want all this to go on? That's what they really want.

Different agendas.

America was supposed to be, you know, The New Atlantis as they said, the Francis Bacon idea. But again, don't forget that Bacon said that they would have a form of government for the people where they could participate in the government, in the selection of government, but in reality, it would be run by a secret priesthood. Secret priesthood, ‘eh? That's how the world is really run.

Anyway remember folks go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com and you can send a few bucks my way. Hopefully you can do it. Because you forget if I don't keep saying it. My biggest enemy for years has been myself. Generally for years I never even mentioned it, to send money, and I should have, and I always suffer because of it. I really don't have cash to even fix my roof for goodness’ sake, things like that. And what I do takes time.

I rather talk on other things obviously. I'd even actually be able to love to do other things completely. I only came out years ago because it was time to come out and speak about it all. I knew what was going on, and I thought it was time the world knew about it, and the big organizations that were really running your system, that you don't vote for. That's what it's all about, folks. And the big plans that they had and how they were subverting you, etc., into where you are today. Where everyone was going to suffer. Everybody definitely will suffer; I don't care what ethnic group you want to belong to.

So yeah, send a few bucks my way and buy the books and discs and hopefully I'll get all these things out this week that have been pending because everything was closed down. Canada is worse. We're more progressive than most countries. As I say, we don't have to go through the revolutions of America for communism, we already have it here. So everybody's very obedient and everybody was closed down in utter horror including the printing stores, etc.

Now we're left with a massive debt which I don't know where, if Canada is just going to print it up or what they're going to do. But we don't have the same ingenuity of the States, we're dependent on the States for manufacturing cash, the Federal Reserve system. So the dollar is going to plummet again. Which falls in again perfectly with the agenda for postconsumer society.

Just like coming out of a war situation, that's what they want, where you're shellshocked and you'll put up with really bad food, little food and all the rest of it because you think we've been through a real war. That's what they're doing right now.

Send a few bucks my way, cuttingthroughthematrix.com, you'll see how to do it there. Cash is good. PayPal is good. And check are fine too.

For myself Alan Watt from Ontario Canada, where literally I had the heating on, I've had it on for a week now, hhhch, in the middle of June. Because the temperature literally at night, come about eight or nine at night, it's been hitting 32°, 33°F. And 32°F of course is about 0 centigrade. Night after night after night, because of global warming of course. And it's all your fault for that.

So for myself Alan Watt from Ontario, Canada, it's good night and may your God or gods go with you.

"Code of Silence" by Bruce Springsteen

There's a code of silence that we don't dare speak

There's a wall between us and a river so deep

And we keep pretending that there's nothing wrong

But there's a code of silence and it can't go on

Is the truth so elusive, so elusive as you can see that it ain't enough baby

To bridge the distance between you and me

There's a list of grievance 100 miles long

There's a code of silence and it can't go on

Hi folks, I'm Alan Watt and this is Cutting Through the Matrix on June 21, 2020. I hope as always that you're all managing to hold onto your sanity. Awfully important that. I mentioned that way back when 9/11 happened, I think that very night. I said, the hardest thing will be to hold onto your sanity, going through all the changes that would come, because 9/11 was just a kickoff for a good part of the agenda that we're living in today. I won't even bother going over it all again except to say that nothing happens by itself spontaneously. You might get the occasional real accident of a plane falling out of the sky or something. But most big things that affect the world are planned years in advance. That's really how it is.

So, 9/11, you already had the group that got into power at that time, the group before that, the same group before that published a list of countries to take out. Which would mean they would need "a Pearl Harbor event", they said in their own writings at the time, which they published. They said, we need a Pearl Harbor event, because the public wouldn't get on board with it. And a Pearl Harbor event means if the nation is attacked then the public are horrified, you play upon it, play upon it, and then you get them all behind whoever you've pointed out to be the bad culprit, the Moriarty character.

And it played out beautifully according to what they had wanted, when people lost their rights, across the world, isn't that amazing, across the whole world. The whole world in lockstep went into the same thing, oh, you can’t have privacy anymore, nobody can afford privacy anymore, we've got to keep you safe. And out went privacy. In came constant monitoring. They kept telling you little bits to get you used to the idea, and each time you shut your face, that's what they say in Britain, you shut your face and said nothing. You acquiesced to it, legally, you see, well the public accepted it, nobody complained about it really.

So here you are today with the next phase of it as I mentioned before with the whole big idea. It was a good idea, it's quite good, it's like the character, I think he called himself General Bethlehem. They don't like [Alan chuckles.] Christianity much in Hollywood I think, and that was in the movie that was called The Postman. The Postman, about a future scenario where civilization had fallen apart and was really reduced due to a terrible war or something, or maybe even by a war, who knows. Anyway, the idea is that feudal warlords start, kind of new feudal warlords, one of them, a big one, is ruthless, utterly ruthless psychopath and megalomaniac and he calls himself General, I think, Bethlehem. And he said, because he applied terror to his own men and to the populations he extorted the goods off of and the food off of and everything else that they had, and their obeyance of course. He said that terror, terror drives logic out of the public's minds.

Nothing changes, you see, he didn't invent the idea for the movie. That wasn't invented. It was invented for him long, long before that. Because it's always been known. Stalin talked about it too. And Lenin of course had a reign of terror. He referred in fact to the French Revolution, same kind of thing before it, where they go to town and start chopping everybody's heads off and celebrating it in fact. Quite something.

Everything can be repeated, remember, everything can be repeated in society. I hope you're all learning from what's happening today, that literally, literally everything you thought was barbaric and somehow ancient, because we are now civilized, is nonsense, utter nonsense. You're living in the same system that Plato said, if you can, if you know what worked in the past and you know the formula to introduce anything, any new meme you might call it today, in society to take off, then find out the formula and introduce it the same way, for the same causes and effects and so on, and reasons of course, the same reasons, step-by-step, and you can do it all again quite easily. You can.

I always think back to the old Dracula movies, and the zombie movies, they copied a lot of it too. But the Dracula era, it was real for the people. You can look up places like Bulgaria, and they're still digging up bodies, old bodies from graveyards that were buried with, it was iron they used actually for putting through the body. Because certain people they thought were vampires, you know, they were... They'd probably be the modern ultra-international moneylenders, who knows. But the fact is, they made sure they weren't going to come back to life again and they actually used iron. Iron was thought to have some magical property. A very old idea about the iron too.

But also, they, you find it getting reborn as I say in Hollywood and all the different movies in Count Dracula, and then the zombies of course, the zombie movies. Folk never figure out that you're being mocked all the time. Quite a few years back I gave lots of talks on the CIA's involvement with the military-industrial complex, with Hollywood. They have a department and an office in Hollywood. You know that, don't you?

They finance a lot of movies. Not just all straightforward military movies but also the CIA type spy movies and that kind of thing. Although they, and again, in the movies, you ever wonder why they can get the cooperation of the Air Force and the Navy and so on? It's all part of the… [Alan laughing.] That's who's putting out the movies, some of these movies. Because propaganda is wonderful, when you get all proud and there's all the orchestra blasting away as your ship goes flying through the seas towards, to destroy some enemy or whatever. Very simple primitive natural thing actually. Very tribal in a sense. But it works on everybody.

But yeah, the Pentagon and the CIA is behind that kind of thing. Britain had its own studios at Pinewoods for a long time too. I think they bit the dust a long time ago as well. But they did a lot of stuff or World War II as well. During World War I the government used the military and financing for the military to put up plays for recruitment that would be stage plays. And there was a brave young guy off, and his girlfriend is there or fiancé and she's so proud of him, and all the emotion and so on. Come back Jack, etc., come back to me alive and well, and all that kind of thing. It's as old as the hills that idea, it works awfully well.

We're played like fiddles. There's never been a time though like today, with such mass propaganda, mass propaganda, perfectly put across to the general public, with teams. I mean, the universities have been churning out psychologists and neuroscientists, behaviorists especially, who study us in all kinds of situations, and they know exactly how to switch us on and off for different things, you see. Rage, passivity, whatever they want they can switch on and off.

And it's quite fascinating to live through this, isn't it, and you see it happening. Amazing theater isn't it? The whole Covid lockdown was like one of these zombie movies, you know, where they all get zonked, the ones infected become zombies. You don't want to see them; they should be locked in their homes in the dark sort of thing. And not put out on the street there. And if they're on the street they should be immediately arrested or whatever. It's so similar. Plus, the US especially, and maybe Canada involved too, it was an exercise they had, they called it an exercise, was it, Zombie Invasion or something. It was an exercise anyway that they had a few years ago on, they never said exactly what it was about, but they did talk about biowarfare and so on, to get the idea across. So, you don't get ill in biowarfare, you become an enemy of the people. You see? Oh my God, he's got it, he's an enemy of the people. And that's how they play it out right now. Very simple stuff isn't it. It doesn't take much to get people to say, oh my God I guess it's, look at that, that person is walking on the street and they're probably, if they've got it they're spreading it to everybody around them, even the little birdies are probably getting it. You know?

Who knows, maybe the mosquitoes get it when they bite you, like up here in Canada. Or maybe the mosquitoes are giving it to you, you know? Maybe they're, ah, maybe you're into the realms of fantasy and they say conspiracy theory, really, 'eh? Did you see all the ones that Bill Gates and his group are releasing in Florida recently, all these different mosquitoes and gene editing and all the rest of it, 'eh? Well it will kill off the population of the female eventually breeding these infertile males and stuff like that. This is what they tell you. I remember years ago to they ended up with dengue fever in Florida when they released a bunch of stuff years ago and it comes back every year now. But again, that's a different story, even though you can verify it, it's not conspiracy theory.

You see, you've got to put out conspiracy theories today. If you're not authorized, you know, you're a professor of blah, blah, blah at some university at the moment, with the most up-to-date current topics, you know, at your fingertips, then you're a nobody.   The beauty of modern life is you can change reality instantly. If you're one of them at the top, you can, you've got the authority to do it. They won't hammer you for doing it, you know, for being wrong and then right, and then wrong again, and then right and then wrong again. No, no, no. Anybody who attacks you for being wrong, right, and wrong again, they'll be attacked, you see, because they are a nobody. You're nobody for saying that about them, you know.

So, are you surprised you’re hearing such amazing things? There's never been a politicized time like we have today where there's no such thing or even remotely, remotely resembling any kind of democracy. And most of the public don't get that. They really do believe that the riots they've had in the States, and the protests, because they're two separate things mixed together here and actually a few things above it too which you don't even know about. It was all planned years ago, this kind of thing.

Black Lives Matter had the decency to tell the public some years ago, at least some of the members, that they were basically Marxist. They wouldn't say Marxist, or really even communist, you see, A revolutionary, Marxist revolutionaries, you see. And don't forget, in communism and Marxism and revolution you always got to stir up emotional hype wherever you see it and get people on board with you. So, you get all the disaffected groups, even create disaffected groups that weren't really groups before, make them, and then graft them onto your movement. Then obviously your army’s much bigger than it was before.

You find that a few years ago one of the leaders was...

The Black Lives Matter co-founder has a leftist agenda to get President Trump out of office

theblaze.com / 20 June 2020

Patrisse Cullors, has a self-described mission to "build local power to intervene in violence inflicted on Black communities by the state and vigilantes."

(Alan: But she started off as, she says…)

"We affirm the lives of Black queer and trans folks, disabled folks, undocumented folks, folks with records, women, and all Black lives along the gender spectrum," the BLM website reads. "We make space for transgender brothers and sisters to participate and lead. We are self-reflexive and do the work required to dismantle cisgender privilege and uplift Black trans folk, especially Black trans women...

You understand, a lot of these groups never existed before. And I do remember, and I told you people before, I met a Marxist, really, a communist organizer from Moscow. But he was English, from England, who went back and forth to Moscow for the latest stuff. He came to Canada, with impunity, no one stopped him in customs or anything like that. He went around to the Communist cells and gave them updates. He said back in the 80s that they would bring all the different groups on board, all the sexual... variant groups, put it that way, and they would build their numbers, and when one group went out to protest something, they'd all come with them. They had Muslim Communists with them too at that time. I remember that at the time you would actually see them in Toronto for instance, the same groups, the same people from different groups protesting regardless of what the cause it was at the time. It was always the same group. And that's how you do it in these particular movements.

But they're well-funded today mind you, by the people at the very top because the people at the top plan the future of the world and everything else is just a way to get us to it. It's not meant to be logical or make common sense or anything else. It's meant to suit those at the top. I mentioned before that the World Economic Forum, is a good place to start. It wasn't the first part of their movement but, the guys that run it I'm talking about, these are the richest folk on the planet. (And it's good for me to see people actually following it, I've been talking about it for years.) Whatever happens in the world is done because those at the top permit it. Not just permit it but actually organize and pay for it to happen. It suits their purposes.

The people who shift trillions and billions around the world every day in the stock markets, etc., sometimes three times or more times a day, it's all done for them by the biggest money managers on the planet. That's who runs the world. And believe you me, if it suited them to go into some, ah, oh, even pre-promiscuity society, if it really suited them, they'd make it happen. They'd bring forth all these new people that would be youngsters, you see, who would testify to the joys of celibacy, etc., like millions of them. And they give you young ones, just always pick young ones, they quote young leaders and pay them awfully well and put them forth. They're really like little actors and actresses. Some of them are disaffected mind you and got chips on their shoulder, but those chips are well fed by the money boys at the top, too many chocolate chip cookies. They use them. But they get paid awfully well.

Believe you me, you'll see little Greta for instance, she'll be probably a multimillionaire before she's 20. Because she'll be made to be, you see. And you forget that these people in their own websites, the WEF, one of the big things is creating future leaders. They pick them young. The Club of Rome does the same thing, all the big foundations do it. You've heard about the Common Purpose group in Britain, that was part of their job too, was to pick youngsters and train them to be future leaders for all political parties, so they’ll all really be the one party. They've been doing it for years and years and years. Then you have the schools of course, getting incredible indoctrination system set up for the children, very perfected, really perfected systems, you've not much chance of escaping. That's how it's really run.

Back then I realized that those at the top ran all sides. Obviously. You've got to get change, planned change to control the world and guide billions of folks along the same path thinking it's just evolving by itself. And most folk do, they really do think that everything just evolves by itself, you know.

Bill Gates just came out with the system which of course which is a bit of a nonsense fairytale how it happened. But you go along with it, the whole world goes along with it. And they're all front people, as I've mentioned before, they're all front people, obviously. All the big names that you hear are front people. There's much bigger organizations behind them. As I say, the ones at the top don't work. They suggest things once in a while, and everybody else must make it happen. That's just how it's done. They don't have to fill in details, including removing people, they never say remove so and so they're a nuisance. They say, you know someone's being a bit of a problem. And things just happen. That's how the world's always been run.

A few years ago, there were so many scientists involved in different labs in biowarfare type stuff disappearing and having accidents. One year about five or six of them all died, falling over stairs and things and over banisters and down stairwells. It was a terrible time for them, they were just so clumsy all of a sudden. These things really do happen, folks. They really…

It's like watching that movie The Island, the one with Ewan McGregor where rich people, ultrarich folk, which isn't far removed from the truth by the way, because they had the stories out back in the 80s that it would soon be possible to clone whole human bodies. And then, oh, that would be terrible, you would have artificial people, or you know, new types of people. And they said, oh don't worry about it, it would be for body parts, you see, we wouldn't let them get to consciousness and so on. Well, that's really what the movie The Island was based on. The richest folk on the planet had their DNA taken, samples, and whole bodies, perfect bodies were grown for them. Only they were awake, and they were taught, they were kept to be children, almost childlike mentalities by very simplistic training and so on from you might call it birth. But they could grow them and very quickly, in about three years or so into adulthood. Which actually follows with the disclosed, that's where the movie all came from, disclosed scientific articles that were profuse a few years ago. How they could simply turn off the aging cell, the time, or speed it up if they wanted to. I remember reading the articles at the time on the air. All the stuff in the movie they could pretty well do.

We know that China has had one of their proponents out talking about it and getting a lot of heat for it. But he said that he had done it already years ago so... He won't be the only one. No country, no country, since all countries really, the way that they're presented to you, are pretty well fictitious in this modern age. There's no country that wouldn't do the same thing, you see, at the same time. And they do share secrets up at the top.

But in the movie as I say they kept them almost infantile. Like a mini world of infantile people who literally were kept in a very physical health regime, healthy regime of diet and so on and exercise so's that they were in prime condition, so that when the people who they had been cloned for, the richest folk, needed their organs or any organ, they could then harvest it as they call it. And they told the people on the island of course, the clones, that it was a lotto, you would get a lotto and when your time, when your number came up you went off to the big island sort of thing. Not knowing that that's the end of your life because they're taking you in for a kidney or whatever it happens to be.

It was well done. Because really it was referring to the whole system we're living in today. We’re raised to be naïve and dumb pretty well. We're raised on fiction which is mainly fiction on television or whatever you're watching all the time. It's fiction, fiction, fiction completely loaded with politically correct updates for whatever week you're living in at the moment and people adopt these points of view for themselves. You'll hear them parroting verbatim the indoctrination that they've had recently, word-for-word almost. Then they take the opinions that they are given as well on everything, without any deep thought on anything at all.

So, yeah, we are the island in a sense. In The Island too they mentioned that they could make the people live another 40 years or 50 years with life extension basically using these techniques. And that's true, they can do that today by the way. You can make them live longer with the right medications and transplants, etc.

I remember watching, I think it was a top, was it one of the top scientists in Israel at that time, giving a general talk. I mentioned this before. He casually mentioned it, and it was casual, and it was amazing with the audience were all talking to each other as though they had just come in the door or something. This professor or whatever, he said that if you've got an extra $7 million, he says, we can help you live to 140 if you want. And that's really how it's done at the very, very top. And that's a fact. But that was even strangely enough in the movie about the same amount time, years, as well, you know, 140 or so.

So, you're living through fact as fiction and fiction as fact. Of course, even the movies get you used to the idea, the trial balloons. A lot of folk who watch movies will say, yeah, I wouldn't mind getting that myself, if I could I do it. You've probably heard people say the same things, haven't you, throughout your life. Maybe. And you might be one of the people who are all for these things. You might say, well, you know, if I had the money, I'd do it too. And you'd also see, I've heard folk standup for top politicians or crooks who got caught with their hands in the cookie jar, big time, like big time, and they say, oh well I'd do the same myself if I was... And you say wait a minute. It gives you a little, it gave me a little start once in a while to realize that a lot of people think the same way. Corruption is a human thing obviously; it tends to become corrupt.

But today it's also prevalent with a completely, oh how can we say it, a changed moral society. All the old ideas of moralities have been thrown out the window. In fact, morality holds you back, you're not a winner if you've got certain morals, you see. That's all part of your games that you see on television where folk strip off and do stupid things to compete with each other. And the folk that manage it all are looking at them and shaking their heads and laughing. And making money off them. It's quite amazing.

But anyway, that's what you're living through. So at least with Black Lives Matter they admit once in a while that they are basically Marxist, and for world communism, a world without borders, all that kind of stuff. And it doesn't come out from them at all how we're going to finance all of this stuff, except we've got a vague idea of everybody will share properly and you'll have your commissars that will make sure you get your proper quota of food or ration or whatever. I guess that's how they manage. I don't think they think too far, really.

But at least this one as I say, she was in Black Lives Matter, I think she's one of the bosses there, one of the founders at least, Patrisse Cullors. You'll see her up now, talking about her talk a few years ago, where she said that she and another one there too were organizers, Marxist organizers. Now, if they're Marxist organizers they know how to set up the agenda to stir up trouble amongst people to exacerbate and amplify the/any existing trouble, and then they jump in and use all the different crowds that get involved for their own purposes. That's a standard communist trick. But at least she admitted it.

That's what you're looking at today. So believe you me, if they want to at the top, the people at the World Economic Forum, the thousands and thousands of ultra-ultra-rich families that attend it and decide what the future's going to be, what money is going to be in the future, what kind of lifestyle you are going to have in the future, you know, the future coming up too by the way. It's the one they publish some years ago I've been prattling on about, austerity, population reduction. And who can breed and who cannot breed. There will be for a little while a period where they'll give little brownie points, little gold stars for being goody-goody good and you might if you serve the Marxist type system of austerity, you might be given the right to breed at least one child. You see, that will be your reward. They actually had articles out quite some years ago about that where bureaucrats and people who worked for the system and make it all happen, my get the right at least one kind of copy you might say, a child of you. They never said anything about marriage, that's out the window of course. But you get to at least have an offspring. And your progeny will go down through the future being good Marxist for each generation. Serving the ultrarich. Who will not follow Marxism because they are all making sure that you all follow it with austerity. That all came out.

D'you understand we're living through nothing that wasn't planned a long time ago? There's no spontaneous anything. And Antifa, they said they look for spikes in emotional troubles and any violence or whatever it happens to be and they jump on the bandwagon, use the folk who are grieving, and use the crowds, foment the mass demonstrations, direct it and use it for their own cause.

That's why General Franco really won in Spain in the so-called Civil War, it was really an overthrow by the Communists, that's what they were trying to do. If you read the articles in some of the books by George Orwell, who was in the wars at that time in Spain, he said that, like most folk, you know, he'd been really bought into this idea of Marxism in a socialistic sense. He thought like most folk, again, they lie, and they use people, but he was taught in University this was the new thing of the future and there'll be a more just society that would come into being, etc.

He did definitely like many of the people at the time, witness the massive poverty from the Great Depression that continued right up until World War II in parts of Europe. Britain was awfully hard hit, and they had miner's strikes and so on. Not strikes but marches all the way down to London, peaceful, again, really peaceful. [Alan chuckles.] They weren't burning and destroying stores and so on and looting. They were really peaceful. But there were big marches, thousands of people going down to hand in petitions to parliament, that's how it was done.

It was a horrible time for people. He saw the working class and how bad it was. And he himself was not working-class. But he at least I guess felt their pain to an extent, as Bill Clinton would say. He went off to Spain thinking he could change it there too, you see, and the standard stuff, overthrow the church and overthrew the system and blah, blah, blah. Until he got there, and he saw them burning churches, raping and killing the nuns. Horribly too, it wasn't just executions. They really wanted to make people… They really have so much hate in them, of whatever targeted group at the time, they have so much hate, they want folk to really, really suffer, horribly. That's what he saw. That really happened all through Spain and other countries too mind you.

Eventually because he wasn't communist or Marxist enough, you see – and because they list everybody in communism, everything is record-keeping, record-keeping like you wouldn't believe – and he was on a list for extermination himself. Because they said he had become an enemy because he's not Marxist enough or communist enough, and he knows enough about us that he might be a good speaker and maybe be able to, so he could be a problem down the road that could take people away from the big movement. So, they had him... That's why he got out of Spain eventually.

But Castro himself was brought in because of the chaos with that was happening. You had all these different groups that all, again, we’re going to riot for a better tomorrow. You had different kinds of groups too. You had Syndicalists that would take over factories or even farms and so on. And people would join it, even farmers would join it thinking, yeah let's all share and share alike and do the work, then we’ll sell our produce to this other factory and trade the goods for it, you see. So, everything would get traded around by producers and each... each...

And there was a real communism as opposed to centralized communism, that was the idea of the Syndicalists basically and those who were a form of Anarchism against the standard system. But they always ended up in chaos. The Communists turned on them and started killing them too. So, Franco dealt with it in Spain otherwise there'd be nothing left of Spain, it would be utterly chaotic and a mess, you see. In Spain the Communists did what they always do, which was to say, we're just part of you, for people's rights and equality and all that. So, they use everyone else like a big mob to fight their battles for them as they join into them naturally.

But they said, you know, they don't take over completely in the beginning. They take note of all the other competitive parties that are on the go. And use them, because they need numbers. And once they think they're starting to win, they turn on everyone that's helped them, you see, and kill them. That's what they do. They always do this. So, whatever is the cause is what they jump on top of and say yeah, we really believe in this, so terribly much, and want to be part of it all. They'll have the same slogans, they'll chant the same slogans as everybody else because it's awfully important, you'll start to think you're one. Then of course once they think that they're winning, they turn on everyone that's helped. In fact, they turn on the majority that's even done all the work and take over. That's what the Bolsheviks did. You forget that too. Same thing over and over again to the present time. It's part of their manual. [Alan laughing.]

So, it's quite amazing to live or study these things and watching it all happening again. And yet, when you realize the evidence is overwhelming that it all comes from the top, as I mentioned before, Plato mentions it too, nothing would happen from the grassroots and be allowed unless the elite want it to be so. And that's the truth of it. That really is the truth of it.

Those who think they're fighting a terrible system, and are really foolish enough, or immature enough to believe that they are somehow winning, are lost souls. They really are lost souls. Because there's nothing that isn't managed from the very very top in huge think tanks on behalf of those who already run the world. Really. It was the ones at the top and the WEF and all the CEOs of the massive corporations, why you think all the top oil producers, the big big corporations, are all on board with sustainability? And the reduction of what you're going to get and all the rest of it, or be able to buy fuel-wise, all that kind of stuff, austerity? They're all on board with it.

They were the first ones to be on board with it. That should give you a little clue, you know. But it doesn't for most folk, really. Especially the young folk. They always think they're on a roll. We're on a roll, you know, it's OUR time now, and WE're running the world, yeah, and everybody's terrified of us, you know. Because they are being allowed to create a bit of terror, at the moment. At the moment. And there's nothing, I've never seen it so blatant as it is today. It's just astonishing. And it didn't happen by itself.

We are so politicized on behalf of our masters to accept things, that even high crime, high crime happened long before this, even with the thousands of young females that were getting picked up in Britain, put on drugs, heavy-duty addictive drugs and then used for prostitution by incoming groups. It was all in the papers and there's nothing racist about it, it's facts. Literally it took… For years the establishment tried to cover it up. Because everybody in the establishment knows you can't touch this with a 10-foot pole if you want to keep your job and get promotion in the police or civil service or local counsel. They all turned their back on thousands of poor young females. You've got to understand what's going on here.

We are so politically correct we couldn't save ourselves if our lives depended on it. And that might happen yet by the way. It's all intentional. The ones at the top live in their own little, what is that movie where they had their own kind of island in space somewhere? And if you really serve them well you might get to visit it once in a while. That's pretty well the idea that they're on about. It's really astonishing to live through it all again as I say and you're watching it happen. And the youngsters literally think they're on a roll, that they're making some difference here, it's their world, it's their future, hm.

It was the same as I say with the sexual revolution, promoted from the very top. You had the rock music revolution too, the revolution you see, the British invasion they called it too for America. The highest authorities in the world that financed the whole system in entertainment created, made it happen, the big machinery made it happen. If it didn't suit those at the top it would never have happened. Obviously.

I said before, look at, if you look at Freemasonry, like the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry, you look at the Communist Manifesto, most of the stuff is interchangeable. Don't forget, Albert Pike wrote copiously about the system and he had Mazzini the revolutionary, trained him to be a revolutionary, world revolutionary. As I say, that turned into world communism eventually, the Communist Party. So, it goes on and on and on. And Albert Pike didn't start it all, it was on the go before he joined. You can find traces of it even in Rosicrucianism, you know, in France in the 1600s.

But the idea was revolution, revolution, revolution. London, the City of London financed all this kind of stuff too and they set out, people trained Freemasons into other countries across Europe, the Catholic countries especially, to bring them down and create their own cells, just like the Communists later. The Communists didn't come out of nowhere. Look at Trotsky's books for instance. He'll give you a clue. He talks, he worshiped Freemasonry and praised it to the high heavens.

But yeah, you've got to understand, Freemasonry, there's no doubt about it, was a revolutionary movement. Massively so. The reason they had all the passwords and signs and all the rest of it, and their little secrets as they call it, was because they had to lie to the general populace who didn't belong to their groups. The fact of their whole system was to take down society to rebuild it, you see, that's the idea, and remake it.

So, communism and Marxist planks in the Manifesto, and the family unit, right. About the same time as free love of course, you know. The end of the family unit. And their guise as I say, like the founders of the left-wing who were awfully rich, who worked for the richest folk on the planet, like HG Wells who was promoting free love again about the same time as Marx was kicking off. They're all connected, all these different people, with the same ideas.

The only problem is, at the time, was what do you do with unwanted offspring? Well, they didn't want a heavy population. It's quite fascinating to go into really understanding what was happening back in the 1800s. Because folk really misperceive what goes on, according to the ridiculous books that they churn out today for them. They'll say oh, it was terrible, the system, oh, the capitalist system it was, oh, horrible. And it was, it was damned horrible. [Alan laughing.] The same folk are running it today, folks. But give you little revolutions and promote little people, little revolutionaries like Greta and so on, and use them all.

But you've got to understand that nothing has really changed. HG Wells literally foresaw a time when they could literally dispose of children. This great HG Wells, the great writer of science-fiction but he wrote a lot of nonfiction as well. He was quite open about it. He and many others too by the way, the eugenic societies that are still on the go by the way. Even some of the heroes in eugenics, you've heard about some of them, Galton Darwin and all the rest of them. But do you know that [Alan chuckles.] they're still on the go today? And really tight, you know, tied right in, right in with the left-wing. Tied in with it, completely, with its elimination of the family unit and the elimination of private property, for most folk, not for the ones at the top of course, etc. etc.

It's really the reduction of the population, the wrong kinds. HG Wells and others mentioned it too. It wasn't just they were going to help the working class. In fact, HG Wells hated working class people. It was just too many of them. That's how the left-wing was going to sort it out, getting rid of the abundance [Alan chuckles.] of labor by whatever means possible to reduce the population and numbers. That was it, folks. That was it. It's astonishing folk never quite catch on.

Which is exactly what the top eugenicists wanted, and they were all part of the same club. I've even heard about people like Nikola Tesla, they go on and on about Nichola Tesla. Oh, the man was a genius. So, take this genius status, and who makes folk into the stars, right, that you follow? That's why they call them stars, you follow them, and you adopt their opinions. Because they're geniuses, and you're not, you see, so I'll adopt that opinion. So, his opinion becomes my opinion. That's why they give you them, you follow the stars. Again, it's freemasonic in a sense, you see, the five-pointed star.

The same with even Hollywood. They give you, they never had stars before that. You had well-known people of the stage, but it wasn't a great profession. It was rather kind of a lowly profession; it could be kind of suspect at times too. But they made them into stars when Hollywood took over. Of course, that really more than quadrupled their budgets and income, etc. But then they use them because people start to follow them. They follow the characters they portray, without really knowing the people themselves. Then they use those people in the CFR, like George Clooney and so on and Angelina Jolie and others they've picked and the folk say, oh I know them, yeah, they're famous and awfully rich, I'll follow what they say, you know. Why would you follow someone who portrays fictional characters? Hm? They don't even know who they are themselves half the time, you know. That's how actors and actresses really are, they’re always attention seeking. But they're all used.

Everybody gets used for the following. The same with communism, as I say. And communism, or Antifa, or any flavor that you want must always agitate and agitate. When you see a spike in violence or spike in anything or emotions are getting going, they jump on the bandwagon and then they end up leading it, and then they end up domineering it, then they take it off in a different direction which was their purpose in the first place. That's how it always works, folks.

It really does, it's a well-oiled machine. It's been tried and tested over and over again. And it's all written in, as the woman said, she said she trained Marxist organizers. They know this, they know what to do. And they actually said in their manuals, they wait for the emotional occurrences to happen, the spikes in violence or whatever it happens to be and jump on the bandwagon. They'll distort any truths anyway; it doesn't matter what's facts and what isn't anymore. And before you know it, they've turned martyrs out of people too. And by the same token, the ones at the very top can make anybody a martyr, I hope you understand that. I hope you understand that, hm? It's not the first time they'll use you.

What do you think, what do you, and I really mean this, 'eh? I used to think about Remembrance Day and so on, in Britain they have a version of it too. It's always a cold time that they have it in Britain. And they're all standing there with their muffle coats on and believing they all fought for something that was good. Even though many of them that were dying off from World War II were questioning what they fought in the first place according to what happened to Britain. Really, come on.

Because obviously those in charge of Britain had a completely different future planned than the folk who fought it, to preserve it, ever dreamed of. You also get the different Cenotaphs, they go and put their wreaths there and so on and their poppies and yada yada. But you also have in every country they got the unknown soldier. It was a kind of afterthought, you see, because a lot of folk were blown to bits and there wasn't a bit of them left, or they were so destroyed by massive shelling, etc. Or just rotting unfortunately in the battlefields. World War I especially, and II, had its good share as well of that whole scenario. But anyway, so that they would get this idea, it could have been an empty coffin for all we know, but they make a big move, this is Joe Average, whoever this Joe Average was, you know, and they make a big deal out of fighting for their country and that kind of thing.

It's sad that they can make almost, and again here, it's apotheosis, you make godheads out of people, make them into gods, they rise and they become gods, just like the old emperors of Rome did, you know. Even Constantine. Constantine, yes, he adopted the Christian idea at the time. But because it was still new, and newish, and he was indoctrinated into the Roman system, he also built his own little area for his own statue, as a god, you see, he would become a god as well. Which is quite a good ambition I suppose if you don't have many things to look forward to, at least you could become a god I suppose. And that's how things are. You're watching it happening today in modern times as well. Really.

I always think of that old song, heroes and villains. They give you your heroes, they make them into heroes, and then they give you, some good people to turn them into villains, it's back and forth like that. That's how easy it is to manage our thoughts and our minds, by propaganda.

We had quite a few years – I mentioned it before, it's so important to remember and never forget – where folk had tuned, tuned out of the regular media, they were so sick of getting no news at all with the death basically of active traveling journalists, you see, and the politicization of everything. Everything had been so PC since the Levinson inquiry in Britain where they came out with the new statutes for journalists. They did the same thing down and Australia and elsewhere. Until all they could do, they were so scared of having lawsuit against them eventually, or getting fired, all they could do was politically correct stuff. Until they're propaganda, really blatant propaganda arms on behalf of those who own them basically. Really sad, isn't it?

But folk had tuned out and so badly that even with the very small discounts to buy a subscription to their news, most folk weren't doing it, they were so sick of it. Why bother when most of it was going to be regular handouts anyway by the free ones, the same stories? And also, folk were sick of celebrities, that's all you had for news. Celebrities are not news. It's made up fakery. I mean, totally. It's the star machine again, hey, it's total fakery. It truly is. There's nothing more fake than show business. That's what it lives on. It's a show. It's not real, it's a show.

But folk buy into it. And who cares about what someone has done, you know? And the women that they put on the newspapers and so on that have hardly anything on, they don't walk around or say anything, they just flaunt things. That's how the word flaunting comes in to play, they're flaunting, 'eh. That's news, is it? My God, is that news? But folk tuned out. They're so sick of it.

And they made hay immediately with the Covid. Oh my God, terror, terror, terror. And I've gone through the stories, I won't go back over them except to say that they were given permission when they got unleashed on the general public, by those at the very top, the World Health Organization and again, the World Economic Forum. They were told just to terrify the public, including literally with the behaviorists and psychologists brought on board in Britain, they admitted it, the papers admitted they were given handouts where the journalists were told to write things in such a way they might have to literally increase the tension or fear amongst the public to get them to comply.

This is warfare, folks. And it hasn't stopped. And they're on a roll now. Suddenly folk are tuning in everyday to find the news... in case you missed that little bit of information that might save your life. Like a horror movie, that's what I say, and you'll watch horror movies to the end. Because you get involved in it, you project yourself into the roles and if you turn away you might miss that one thing and you get eaten by the dinosaur, you see. That's what happens. The same idea. It's very simple.

But yeah, tune in tomorrow and we'll update you with the latest, the latest breaking news on Covid, should you take this, or should you not take this? and they'll give you about 10 different versions of the same thing, oh my God, and you don't know what to do. And the whole country and the whole world gets locked down pretty well, eh, pretty well. M-m-m. Except some African nations that ignored it completely and they seem to be fine. They seem to be fine.

And the testing stuff was a joke. It still is a joke. Fake positives. Fake negatives. Just toss a coin in the air, you know. If you really want to go that route folks, just toss a coin.

Now of course the news is the rioting and looting and the protesting as well, because they're different groups again, often mixed together. It's kind of dying down a little bit and losing readership in news, then the right back to Covid again. Immediately. Covid is such a political virus that it can switch itself off. Because they're not arresting anybody who goes off to protest or whatever. Including all the ones who are forcing it upon the people, all the different governors of the different states and some leaders of countries, they were out protesting as well, shoulder to shoulder. When you see such rubbish getting pushed, don't, why are you following anything that they tell you? Why do you follow anything that they're telling you?

Remember, I said this from the beginning, Fauci and others from the very beginning, because it was preplanned, it was not spontaneous. And most of the folk, who do have short memories, they really do, 'eh? But don't forget it was planned years before, reiterated at least one year before it all broke out again, this so-called pandemic. They change the rules for pandemics too, for even classifying it, by throwing any figures to make it a pandemic out the window they didn't need it anymore, just the statement of it is enough. Because it was planned that way.

This is the big push. This is the revolution that you're going through on behalf of those who own the planet. Not these little kids in the streets that are swaging around thinking, yeah, we are now in charge, you know. It's the folk who own the planet. The folk who buy and sell the grain of every country and flog it across the world instantly back and forth, you know, and can withhold it from a nation and say, oh they've been bad and let's make them suffer. These are the folk that all your money goes to, no matter what you're spending it on, they own it.   They own your, [Alan chuckles.] they own your governments. They're all on the payrolls. They all get big donations, you know, like thousands and thousands. And every politician when they retire from politics on their meager salary, is a multimillionaire. It's just a coincidence though.

Everything is a show in modern life. Everything is a show. Years ago, I gave the talks on prepared speeches. Every leader of anything, even the police forces have prepared speeches, they are public relations spokespeople. When you hear that you're listening to propaganda, that's what it means, public relations, you see. Otherwise you could ask anybody in the police force what they think about it. Oh, I can't tell you, you have to go to the public relations officer. And they'll spin it for you, well, you know… And you walk away with this kind of half-baked wishy-washy statement that you can't quite figure out. That's because you're not meant to figure it out. That's how it's done.

So, you're living through a huge agenda. This is it, folks. This isn't a preparation for what's to come. This is the complete push, the push for the whole new world economic forms new society as they want to call it. Into austerity. I gave all the talks years ago @cuttingthroughthematrix.com website, remember. I went through it all in detail, in real good detail and depth from the sources themselves and what they were going to bring in and what they wanted, etc., the kind of society they would build.

And they would use everything, sustainability, folks. Maurice Strong, sustainability, who was picked up by the Rockefellers as a youngster, supposedly, and groomed for his position in helping rule the world. [Alan chuckles.] They put him in charge of oilfields to show him the business, how it works. The same thing as George Bush was given. He was taken off to Kuwait where his daddy had helped to set up the oil fields there years ago in the family businesses, etc. And little Georgie was given charge for a little while to find out how it was all run. That's what they do, and say, we'll put him in charge of some, a few oilfields and so on and that so you know how the world really works. And all that kind of stuff, you know.

Then they meet the people who decide the prices, what the value of the currency is at the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund and the Bank for International Settlements. All, it's a big club and that's a fact. It is a big club. And I mean it, it's a club. It was set up by the Royal Institute for International Affairs, a private organization, and the CFR group type. Before that they were, they were a covert group that went around the world grabbing all the resources of the world under Lord Alfred Milner. They put their own people in charge of countries as Lieutenant Governor Generals, etc., the same power as the King or the Queen.

But yeah, they grabbed all the resources. The Empire for them was grabbing resources for themselves and the private corporations at the top. Nothing to do with going across, let's bring civilization to the poor people here, there and everywhere. Nothing. That was just propaganda for the general population who would be given the price, the tab for it, the cost of it all. And that's how things really work. Nothing has changed. Everything has to be made palatable through public relations or propaganda for the public to swallow. That's why you went to war with the Boer War, so that the ones in the City of London could grab the diamonds and the gold supplies of South Africa. And that's a fact, you know. Nothing's changed. It really hasn't changed.

So, they set up their own, let's create a world government embryo, so they set up a League of Nations that became the United Nations. And they still run that behind the scenes. Let's set up a World Bank, you know, private, we'll own it. Let's set up the International Monetary Fund, which is the collection agency for the loans that we'll be giving out. And they'll also manage the governments that fail to pay back the interest and so on, so we'll send officers in who then manage the country by slashing all the social programs. That's how the IMF operates.

Then they have the Bank for International Settlements, the big one, that's going to be made more and more prominent, especially now, this is the time for it. It was always set up to eventually be the final arbiter of all currencies. They'll decide whether you can live or die as a nation by devaluing your currency according to their standard or increasing it if you're very goody-goody-goody and they plan to live in your country for a little while. That's how it works and most folk never figure it out.

But the British Empire was a private corporation system. Yes, it was. And I tell you, it was nothing different, from my point of view, from that and the attempt at Russian or Soviet communism system. It was all a Corporation, everything's a corporation, folks, running the same thing. There's a group at the top that run it all, who benefit from it all, as they tell you that you're all equal, or like in Britain, you're fighting for a good cause, to bring civilization to the world, you know. [Alan laughing.] What's the difference as they fill their pockets at the top? There's no difference.

Marx was right in one thing, he did say that all, ALL wealth comes from labor. All. Making things. Producing something. All wealth is based on the products, etc. But the thing that they didn't mention, was that those at the very top would [Alan chuckles.] end up getting all the profits of your labor, etc. We won't call it that, we'll redefine the meaning of that, you see, that you can't make a profit off labor, so we'll redefine it. And they did.

There is no end to the ingenuity of corruption in the crooked class. There honestly isn't. And sure enough, they get, what d'you think the university degrees are to do with public relations? It's to teach folk to be better liars. And they use things like statistics to convince and lie to the public or to get gain on someone, whatever it is they're after, you know. Did you know that 5% agree with this, or 95% agree with... It's all conology. And that is the real degree, is conology, you see.

A good con man or woman is really worth their weight in gold, at least, at least gold, maybe even platinum to those at the very top. They employ the best ones at the top. They have amazing minds that sit there and, you know, so-and-so, our God so-and-so, whatever the character is above them on the higher level, wants this to happen and it's up to us to make it so. And they sit there, and they scheme. Well how will the public accept it? Well the public won't know, we'll convince them it's really something else, call it… They have whole programs, especially the changing of names, that really confuse you, until you can’t figure it out, when you can't figure it out, you just give up. [Alan chuckles.]   So, then it sails ahead. That's how everything's really run today.

It's quite fascinating really. It is fascinating. It's like years ago even in the times of Shakespeare, I mean, he would introduce thousands of new words into the lexicon basically of the English language. You have to say to yourself, what was the reason for it all, etc.? Well one was you had to standardize the language. Because England like Scotland had many different dialects until some dialects could hardly understand the folk next door to them. Because folk didn't travel much.

They're bringing us into the same system, mind you, with the lack of mobility. That's part of the World Economic Forum's plan for opening up society after Covid, or even during Covid. They don't want Covid to ever go away, you understand. In fact, it's not going to go away, according to them. It's not real to start with so it doesn't matter. With that kind of fantasy, you can make it stretch forever.

They even said too what they're going to bring on, the contact tracers were planned before Covid broke out. How they would do it with apps, etc. on phones was already planned before it broke out. The folk who would get the contracts was already planned before it broke out. I'm not surmising here, you know, I've gone through it all before. Yeah, you're living through a plan, you see, it was planned before it all supposedly broke out. And they don't plan on just unlocking it. They said at the start, little foxy Fauci, who has his fingers in a lot of pies, believe you me he's just too compromised to be believable. He said, life will never be the same again. Exactly what was said when 9/11 happened, life will never be the same again. That's a very important statement.

It's like Bill Cooper at one time he mentioned it, because in revolutions with the Freemasonic type, that happened in France, and the translations, they always give codewords and little phrases out before they start it, for all their members to pick up on, you see. One of them I think was now is the hour of the times, now is the hour of the times, and that's how you launched things. World War II was similar when they give codewords out to the French resistance by the BBC radio from London. They would give out the different ones every night for different groups that would be fighting against the occupation.

So really, yeah, this is the standard stuff. But you go back even, you know, into history and you'll find there were movements started in the 1700s and 1800s of people who were dissecting the meaning of a lot of new words and so on. Because there were such obvious cons by those in the so-called secret societies.

Now, don't go into, oh, it's conspiracy theory. It's a fact. They have names for them, and for the actual particular theory in itself. Because Pike himself said, we never speak so plainly as Masons as when in company amongst non-Masons, is what he was referring to. It's just that the non-Masons can pick up on the meaning that they're giving out to their own brothers, you see. That's how things really are.

And there's color coding ones as well, and there's numbers and numerology, of course that goes into Kabbalah as well, you know. And it goes way back into ancient times with the numbers, the whole idea of numbers as a language, you see, awfully important. The Chaldeans that were used by the Romans in their war – I'm getting distracted – in the Middle East. They actually hired Chaldeans and Jews who would, because they had alphabets were numbers. Every letter is a number and they would mark them on sticks, as couriers they would send them up as runners to other regimens and so on or centurions in groups. You'd have another Chaldean that would read it on their end, then translate it for them. Basic cryptology, you know. Fascinating in a sense.

But again, what I'm saying is, the whole system is cryptology. What you're taught regarding the system you're living in is cryptology. It's nothing to do with what you've been taught at all, it's not real like that. It's not real like that. I said back in the 90s I said, and other folk have picked up on it too recently, again. They'll say that, if voting work for the general public it would be made illegal, it would get banned. The reason it's not banned is because it doesn't work for you. It doesn't. The folk who get in are pre-picked anyway according to Carroll Quigley, regardless of the party that they're involved in. The leaders and the few folk around the leaders are all prepicked. Because they belong to the same one organization, it doesn't matter if they're left-wing or right-wing.

And I must admit it, I mean, I've got one of the books, I've got quite a few books from the international meetings they'd have when the Rockefeller foundation paid for the meetings across different countries, for their annual meetings for what became known to the general public eventually as the Royal Institute for International Affairs/ Council on Foreign Relations group. Before that they had covert names and again, often just went under, oh as a roundtable society, you see. But Rockefeller would pay for them. I've got quite a few of their books.

In the 1930s they went through the whole scenario, even into the future beyond now in fact, to the rise of China and how China would eventually become, after America failed, and America would eventually fail by the way, that's what they said. Because they use every people until you're bankrupt and they've wrung every [Alan chuckles.] bit of cash out of you like a sponge and leave you in massive debt, and they move on to the next ones. Well, China would be set up as a big superpower eventually. And that was unthinkable back in the 1930s. You'd say, my God, no, China could never become a superpower. They didn't have the technology. They didn't have the training, university systems and so on.

No, we made it all for them eventually and built them up. And your own governments, because they were told to, supplied education for them, and then we gave all the factories to China. They didn't steal it; China didn't steal anything at all. It had it all given to them on behalf of those who rule your countries. M-hm.

You got to stop thinking that you're living in a country where folk really care about you. [Alan chuckles.] I don't care who you are, you gotta stop it. You've got to really stop that. Look around you. Look at what it's turned into, the countries you thought were your countries, you know. Look at them. Until you come right into what Marx talked about, a borderless world, right. And what Marx wanted was exactly what the Royal Institute for International Affairs wanted. Just coincidence, 'eh? The richest folk on the planet that ran an empire wanted the same thing. It must just be a coincidence, 'eh. Hm? [Alan laughing.]

They never figure it out, do they? They never ever figure it out. I remember saying years ago that Vietnam, why on earth was the US sent off to Vietnam? Think about it, folks. Hm? I mean, you had the Communists inside America at the time, in the universities already teaching Marxism and communism. Think about that. Think about it. Why would you go off to another country that you can't even really identify with, at the time, and fight it there? It was different reasons altogether. Part of it was also to break the system in the US itself obviously.

But there's another way to look at things, you see. Like the elite, this is how they always do it amongst their own. They bring them in that are going to work for them and they'll say, look at it from this point of view. And it's always a way by nature you would never have, generally not have stumbled onto yourself. But they'll say to you, what, what, how is Vietnam today?

Well, back then it was dozens and dozens of small tribes all vying with each other for power. They had been for centuries in that area, in that region. North Vietnam tried, over history, they were historically true and accurate for keeping their histories, but the northern one, often there was a different name they gave it, and would often be trying to be an empire builder down through history, you see.

So, if you want to do what? What is it the World Bank wants? What is it the Communists want? What does those who run the world finances want? The same thing. Centralized government. And bring it in, then you can really manage it and organize it and rule it as you wish, you see, and guide it along. Then give it the same education system, the same everything until folk all just obey do what they're told, as one people. Well, how do you do that, how do you make...? Bring an enemy in. If it's just themselves fighting each other forever, it's not going to work, it's just a continuation of what happened down through history amongst them and different tribes fighting. So, you bring in an enemy which they can't identify with from the West then and they go at it. And suddenly for the first time ALL sides can say, wait a minute, what are these foreign devils doing here? And they unite eventually against them. Perfect. Isn't that great strategy? Hm? Except for all the poor suckers that were sent over thinking they're fighting for some decent thing against this terrible communism, 'eh. So, they end up leaving basically a united Vietnam, with centralized government and the great indoctrinations. China loves them too now because now they're basically a subsidiary of China to an extent.

It's much easier to get whole nations, if you can stop and get them out of the tribal mode fighting each other, and sectarian mode fighting each other, religious-wise or otherwise, until they're all, and do what they're told as centralized government, then it's easier, just add it to the whole collection for the world, until you have a collectivized centralized authority for the whole planet. That's what it's about.

That's why the WEF who own all the resources and all the financial systems and everything else, and they own your governments, that's what they want, folks. And they own what you would think is the Communist Party of today, the neo-communists. They own it all. And it suits them at the top.

It's an old plan. Old plan. Absolutely.

As I say, every dog has his day, you know. Because dogs, you see, the idea of even the cartoons they used to have, a dog would want to think, I'm a big dog, even if it's a tiny one, I'm really big and I'll be a boss one day. And everybody gets their chance, you see. And everybody gets used. Everybody gets used. It's quite something. Old techniques, the old Machiavellian techniques are now on steroids with the technologies and abilities to manipulate the public opinion and minds, pretty well instantly overnight, on a mass scale worldwide at the same time. That’s power isn't it? That is power. Quite something.

I can remember as an example when going through high school, and it was the first week or something at high school. There were some young students, might've been student helpers or something, or temporary students. But I know one or two of them came in, these young fellows and they're having a chat in the classroom. At that time of course they thought they were going through a revolution, and a left-wing revolution for whatever it was, for all the good causes, you know, the left-wing, they always give you good causes. It's always for a better tomorrow and a utopia and fairness and stuff like that.

You saw, you had all the examples of it eventually once the Soviet Union supposedly fell. They didn't fall, they just moved on. That's what Gorbachev said to the Politburo in his speech. He said we're moving it out into the world now, to the next phase. With the cooperation of the West, of course it was, the ones who rule the West.

Anyway, these teachers were there and they're saying, yeah, yeah, it's our time now. Just like you see the Antifa. It's our time now they were saying to themselves. Because they had gone through college and teacher training and they come out as good little communists. They talked about how they were using the power of music then too and one of them said, you know, his favorite was Dusty Springfield. Oh yeah, and then they had a little debate and argument about who was the better type, Dusty Springfield and the Springfield group at the time I think then, or Sandy Shaw, you know. And they got kind of hostile towards each other as they instantly formed groups. I'm all for Sandy Shaw, no, Dusty Springfield's got the better voice, yada, yada...

They literally thought that, in this day of Bob Dylan, you know, and revolution, you know, the times they are a changing idea, they literally thought they were part of it, and it was theirs. They really did think that. I knew better, I was a little younger than them, I knew better. I says, come on here. Don't they know? don't they know that [Alan chuckles.] these are all picked people to help change society on behalf... I knew it then; it was obvious to me.

The BBC at the time, only, at that time only ever recruited the people on television and who worked in the higher jobs for television too, not even necessarily on camera, they were all from Eton at one time. That's how rigorous it was. The same places that would pull their people for intelligence services for MI 5 and 6. Because you control the people's minds through whatever propaganda you're going to give them, and whatever entertainment you're going to give them.

So, here's your British government system, the government system giving you Top of the Pops and things like that, with the infamous Jimmy Saville. Where groups that were suddenly, suddenly famous with the big famous making machine, you know, big machine that makes you famous, who went on with no leads in the guitars or anything at the time, you wouldn't even have time to set up honestly if you had the real gear there, and they’d mime. But the teenyboppers didn't know.

And it was all for the sexual revolution as well. So, you have the sexual, and don't forget the words, revolution word was used, sexual revolution. What do you think that is? Did you see people in the street saying we demand to have sex? No, you didn't have that. Folk had always had sex. It just depends on the context that you had it, you know, and what you did with any offspring about it. That's what it was about too.

But someone else at the very, very top was promoting a new system, sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll, ‘eh? Sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll, and that's what they give you. And actually, you aren't going to think too straight if you're on drugs. And you won't make good decisions in any possible way. And it was well put out there and tested upon the public. And it worked awfully well. It did work awfully well.

But it was amazing to hear the people thinking they're part of some revolutionary movement, you know. Yeah, it's our music, yeah. Like The Who talking about our generation, or my generation. Yeah. They literally, it was all put out by show business on behalf of those who ruled to make youngsters think they were part of something and that it was their movement. It's our time now, you know. [Alan laughing.] Quite something, 'eh? Quite something.

But most folk never clue in. As I say, Plato said it, everything in society was so rigorously managed and detailed and recorded in society even in ancient Greece, he said that, even anything to do with music or plays as well. They had plays mandated that they had to go to, you had traveling troubadours and plays that would go around to the different Athenian provinces and islands and give performances and get paid by the state to do it. Because this is before Christianity, a lot of it remember, and when Christianity had its early Passion Plays like religious plays, Rome had other plays, that would be the emotions and systems and all the rest of it. And they were mandated. They had to be performed, and everybody had to attend to watch it.

Because plays, just like movies today really, really affect society. Oh my, did you see so-and-so, what d’you think of that then? And your emotions get played with like crazy if it's a good play or a good movie and you come away with opinions that the creators wanted you to have. And Plato knew this. And he says, everything has to be authorized from the top. Including youngsters at that time putting out music, back then. He says because music can either create revolutions. This is thousands of years ago, right, over 1000 years ago, over 2000 years ago is what I'm saying. That's what he said. And he said, we'll have to keep a tab on them all, an eye on them, and he says, literally license them because they can help foment revolutions. That's how strictly guided the whole thing was and monitored and managed, you see.

There's nothing we're doing today that we didn't know back then except today it's much more perfected. And the studies upon the human mind and how you will behave and react are so well predictable, predictably managed actually, by those who put the stuff out for you. And the instant feedback they get on everything to see if something is working on your minds properly. oh, so many thousands admitted today that they would probably go this way too or do that. It's very predictable. Very accurate. Because folk don't think for themselves.

Even when street theater, big street, I'm talking about massive street theater, is being managed in front of your eyes. So yeah, you had sex drugs and rock 'n' roll. Then you have what came out of it was, well how can you deal with all these, these unwanted pregnancies. Well then let's start financing that, until literally you have no responsibility for anything left, the state will take care of everything, you know. So, whatever you do it's… And the state will come back on you, right. You've gotta pay for all this now, you all do this so you've gotta pay for it all, you all have to pay for it all. Including those who are not even taking part in it. That's how it works.

Everybody gets used. It's quite astonishing to live through it and watch it happening. And then listen to the reasons that people who have been used give you. They parrot their indoctrination. It's just astonishing. Really astonishing.

But it's all theater. When Gorbachev, right, the head of the Soviet Union was launched with a remake, a total makeover for the West, who did they get to parade Gorbachev around as a new Soviet, a trendy Soviet, 'eh? Before, and it's true, before they used to have dull clothing, it was improper communism to have bright colors and things, you're serious and drab and all that. That's how it was portrayed. So here you have Gorbachev with custom, you know, really well-made suits made-to-measure, tailor-made. And blue and other ones, very good materials and, oh, reeking of wealth, he was a trendy communist. And his wife too was introduced.

Well, who did he tour with around the West, whose arm was he on? Margaret Thatcher, the supposed right-wing capitalist, takes him around the world and brings him to Britain. And they preplanned it, they preplanned, and this is what was admitted to eventually, eventually, that the media would have access, little interviews of Gorbachev and his wife, as long as they didn't ask him any personal or political questions. So, you found out from his wife for instance, yeah yeah people in Moscow, they can walk off the street into a place to have a facelift if they want it. That was all, wow, isn't that wonderful, ‘eh? Yep. Things like that.

But yeah, Maggie Thatcher, the right-winger, brought him into the world. Again, she took him over to the States and met Reagan and they were all pals together. The new Soviet system, you see. And you think it's all different and it's all at loggerheads with each other. [Alan laughing.] Who's kidding who? [Alan laughing.] Who's kidding who?

The people who, and the families that are the World Economic Forum, are the ones who made and still make the money off all kinds of wars, real and cold wars, hot wars and cold wars, they make the money off it all. And they made fortunes out of the Cold War. Oh, we're going to, we need new missiles, the Soviets have got one that's 5 miles faster than our one, you know. Etc. etc. Great business it was, you know.

But we truly, we are all used. We are all darn well used. All of us. If you had your basic indoctrination at school you'll be, you've already been used. You've come out like Oh Lucky Man, that kind of satirical movie they did in Britain, believing, oh, the world is really good and proper, I'll work hard, and I'll get ahead and all the rest of it. No, no. Look at it today. The top capitalists are saying, oh no, we've got to have quotas of people, and you know, you might be on the bottom heap here because here's a new normal just come in, you know, and here's the new rules for it, etc. etc. It's already happened actually.

So, don't ever believe that you understand it all unless you really study it and go into it in detail. Whatever you do, don't follow anything. Whatever you do. You'll get used. You'll get used. I gave talks years ago on all these stings that were set up by government agencies and intelligence agencies catching young guys, stings, for terrorism. Because you literally, they might have chewed the fat as they say on what they'd like to do in a kind of an infantile way, but it was all talk, talk, talk. Until the agencies come along, set them up with the means to do it, although with often fake stuff, and then guide them on what to do, then they grab them and arrest them. This is what most of these things are.

And young guys, who probably would never have thought of it in their lifetime, themselves, in reality, and certainly wouldn't have done anything, are arrested, and then they're used as numbers. Well you know, our agencies have caught so many of these terrorists this year. And every country is doing it. Every country. I remember the head, one of the heads of one of the top intelligence agencies in Britain came out and said this. He says, this isn't good, this isn't, actually this isn't just entrapment, it's fomenting the problem, creating it. Of course, it was, it's meant to be.

The whole world is a stage all right, isn't it. And believe you me, unless you're in on the big act at the top there, you're not even a player. Hm. You're not even a player. N-n-n. And it's sad, it's so sad that everybody gets used and abused. And if you ever learn too much, when you're getting used, you'd better be careful because eventually if you know too much they might come after you, about their internal workings, and you've actually worked for them fomenting trouble, or revolution, you know, for a better tomorrow... You can't have it today, but you get a better tomorrow.

And the whole world is destined, because it's planned this way, to go into a massive financial depression. Not for those at the top. They simply rebalance it all, the costs and the values of everything. The reset, as they like to call it at the World Economic Forum. They lose nothing, believe you me. But everybody else is going to go into real forced austerity. M-hm. Yep.

And then, it will be for the good of the planet. And they'll give you the commissars, all the them, often young women actually, it seems to be the favorite ones these days, who will be the ones who will dictate to you how much you can eat that week, you know, how much lettuce you can get and we had a bad crop this year so more brussels sprouts for you, 'eh. N-n-n. I'm not kidding you here. Yeah, it's comical, but it's the truth. It's the truth, 'eh. [Alan chuckles.]

And you wait and see, you wait and see it too. How they ran the Soviet system was they killed off all the little farmers. You might, I don't know if they still have clips out there, but they used to have little documentaries of the Soviets going after farmers. Who in the early days didn't want to give up their farms for the collective system, you see. Because after all maybe they, and you're talking about little houses, 'eh, very little houses, like the ones that they have in Scotland, like single-story houses. And there would be a farmer hold up there because he wasn't going to give up his farm, that his dad and grandfather had helped build so that they could have their half-dozen cows or whatever and a field or two. So here they are, the Soviets were going to take it all off them for the greater good. And these people literally would have a standoff with them. The Soviets would go in and bomb them out, put the grenades in and kill them anyway.

But once they did a lot of that they started; they'd go into a starvation process. The Soviets were selling off grain from the Ukraine, Stalin was, while they were starving the Ukraine, they were starving the rest of the country too but the Ukraine big time. And Ukraine was the breadbasket for the Soviet Union for a long time, even before the Soviets took over, that's part of the reason they took it over. And they took the means of production off them, including all their plows and everything away from them. And took all the food off them. Including their seed for next year. And starved them to death, millions of them. They say it's well over 6 million.

You can still see clips of videos, if you can... Folk who can't stomach looking at reality of the past are dangerous, they're dangerous because they'll help foment the same thing coming again. And I'm quite serious about it. Because those at the top always use the same techniques over and over and over, like a pendulum as they call it. That's why they say in masonry too, life is like a pendulum. Like it happens all by itself. No, it doesn't. No, it doesn't. It's made to happen that way. On behalf of those who own it all.

So, you had basically a country that was going through starvation at the time in the Soviet Union, and then they started replanting en masse lots of potatoes, the standard stuff, potatoes, potatoes, potatoes. They started to get what they call a beetle, they called it a Colorado beetle, it's a potato beetle, and it must have been the US that put it there, right. Immediately started that stuff.

Well, you're going to see with your Brave New World here when you're all forced to eat nothing but the modified vegetables, 'eh, that the usual famous names own and so on, then they have the same thing happen. Oh my, we didn't realize, it was a new beetle just broke out here and you're all going to starve this week I'm afraid, yada yada, ya. You are going to see all the same stuff again as you get trained and trained and trained into utter utter austerity. It's for the good of the planet too, look at the bright side, if you're not eating that much, you see, then nature's going to start recovering better from man's interference of what's been done in the past, and be more sustainable then, because a lot of you will die off with starvation. There you go. Look on the bright side, well, you know, it's for a better tomorrow.

This is the kind of stuff you get taught over and over and over again by those who really rule the world. And yes, the world is really, really ruled. Do you think for an instant that those who own all the property, and own think tanks and own your government, and send them off to war and grab resources, do you think they're worried at all about Black Lives Matter or Antifa? Do you really think they're sitting terrified about it? No, folks, they're financing it.

Now, before I prattle anymore, I should remind you to go into my website @cuttingthroughthematrix.com and have you throw a few bucks my way hopefully. You'll see how to do it on the website. You can use checks or send cash or use PayPal. Hopefully I'll be getting new systems, more new systems in shortly, hopefully. Because we know we're going to get locked down, you know we're going to get locked down right through the wintertime into next year. This is where they're going, those again, the same folk that rule the world. Now that they've switched Covid back and it's Covid again, you're all going to die. But all they're doing is sticking to the same agenda that Fauci mentioned at the very beginning, they always tell you the things at the very beginning, that life is never going to be the same again and this is going to continue into the following year, and, we won't let you out or anything until you get a vaccination, our vaccination, you see. I certainly wouldn't call it just a normal vaccination, it doesn't…

Anyway, go into my website @cuttingthroughthematrix.com and you can donate to me. You can also buy the books and discs @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Things are starting to move, maybe temporarily until they do the next lockdown, let's be honest, we can really move fast now and get things out, shipped out and so on. So, for the folks that are waiting, just have the patience. Canada remember as well is on board with this thing. Canada is pretty well a communist country already you might say, definitely completely new world order idea. It's on board with the whole the World Economic Forum agenda for complete austerity and the abolition of cars as Agenda 21 wanted, private vehicle abolishment. On board with it all. I'll touch on that tonight maybe if I get around to it.

Yeah, you can buy the books and discs @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. As I say, all my official sites are listed on the .com site, make a note of them in case any of them go down and hopefully you can keep getting my shows. Remember too, other folk put my shows up, but go into the cuttingthroughthematrix.com website if you want the originals. And you can sometimes get them a bit earlier than folk if they copy and put them up. So, it's up to you.

But regardless as I say, the future is written. It really is written. People may be startled to find out that most of the decisions along the way, they never had any say in it at all. You really haven't had any say in anything at all. Let's be honest, look at the nonsense you've had to fight and accept, either fight for or against or accept over the years, you know, it isn't just gender related, is it, even right down to bathrooms for goodness sake. This is what you were given to fill your heads with and have folk arguing about it. Well I think, you know, we should have all kinds of bathrooms.

But here you are, the whole things lead up to a bigger army, a bigger army, like they say, the nihilists and the atheists would get recruited into these movements. They all, a lot of them have problems, folks. A lot of them have terrible problems and the problems are within themselves, you see. But they'll externalize it when they get their fellow brothers and sisters together to go after the general society. What do you see happening? You have mayhem when mayhem breaks loose. I'm not talking about the shooting of the black people. I'm talking about the mayhem of those that jump on the bandwagon, the real movement behind it all that will keep it going and benefit from it. Of course, they will.

When they start literally elevating other lives above other lives, it's okay to kill black cops, that's getting promoted, and a lot of them have been shot and so on, then you're in big trouble. You're in big trouble. Right now, folk won't listen anyway. Especially the young folk, as I say, who think they're part of the revolution. They really do believe it. Bezmenov said it, they get used and used, when you can tell them, they won't listen to you. You take them up to a prison camp, they wouldn't listen to you. The system that they're going to bring in couldn't be bad, it's gotta be beautiful and utopic. He said, even if you kick them on the behind, he says, they still won't believe you, they're so far gone, contaminated is the term, Stalin used the same term, contaminated, that you can't reason with them.

So, the system that they thought they were part of the revolutionary movement will turn against them and get rid of them. Because now it's a threat to them. [Alan chuckles.] That's what always happens. It's just... But again, it's like Peter the Hermit as I mentioned before, who was a kind of a monk. I have no idea what denomination if any at all, but he was a monk. He encouraged youngsters, there was a lot of youngsters who again at that time were orphans or just on the street and waifs the whole thing, where their parents had died, starvation often, things like that too. He encouraged them all to start going to the holy land, this miraculous place, utopia where Jesus was born. And they were in fact the first true crusade.

Thousands of them danced their way, they say danced across Europe. They give them dances and everything, you see. They always give them drumbeats, dances and so on, you see it all down through the centuries, the same technique being used. Because you never, when something works you don't throw it out the window. Use it again. They were dancing to almost a euphoric state, you see, of fatigue and probably starvation too. And use them.

Of course, they end up getting over towards the Holy Land and then they were getting captured and slaughtered and turned into slaves and sold off and all the rest of it, you see. That's what happens. And if you told them, and a lot of folk did tell them at that time, you can't go over there, you just, it's terrible, it's completely different from our, they won't see you as the same people and they'll use you and abuse you and sell you or kill you. And they did. That's what happened. And the youngsters wouldn’t listen either. That’s the technique that’s used, well no, it’s a utopia over there, why are you telling us that, you bad nasty adults, you know, you fossils, you. And that’s the way it’s used. For a better tomorrow. M-hm. And the greater good, remember that phrase, the greater good?

I love it for warfare too because they always had it, even had it in the movie Brazil the comedy and you'll see the signs everywhere, we're all in it together, we're all in it together. And they're using all the same slogans hey, for Covid, we're all in it together. Yep. Really? Really? Well why can't we all go out in the street shoulder to shoulder for any little cause, you know, even just to get sunshine, 'eh, a little bit of sunshine and some decent, you know, vitamin D for your metabolism and your skin? Why not some of that then and just stand shoulder to shoulder. Forget the 6-foot stuff just like they did with the recent protests, and it was okay then. But why can't you do that? Why can't you, 'eh?

How could you authorize who can endanger others and who can't? How can you authorize that according to the causes? Well, it's not meant to be logical, you understand. The world you're in now is to become more and more and more illogical until fear and terror will rule you. I'm not kidding. I knew people whose parents were of Irish descendent in Scotland. Some of them had, a lot of them actually had come over in the 1800s, late 1800s. And I'm talking about like their grandparents and so on were still alive when I was wee.

And they were nasty to their kids. If the kids were slacking with anything or they're packed in work and oh we're not going to do that... Because they were raised, the famine wasn't just a few years, the memory of it lasted for a long time, right into the 20th century. Their grandparents would still go to town with them out of a form of panic. In other words, you don't understand what, you don't understand why the work ethic is so important you've got to survive, survive, you don't understand. You can't just pack in jobs and change them. They still had that fear, that whole, it was life-or-death, remember, that whole time and it gave a legacy to the offspring like you wouldn't believe. It lasted a long time. Total terror, sustained terror of real terror of life and death will last one or two generations, at least. It will also help destroy the family unit because it's run by fear and reaction to panic and fear. You have to do what you're told and pull it together or we're all doomed, you're a danger to yourself and maybe others too, yada, yada, ya. That's what happens, folks.

That's what happens when thousands of folk have died, and I literally, it really was manufactured starvation that was a form of genocide. There's no doubt about it. And don't say it wasn't, oh, they didn't do that kind of thing. As I say, they turned the troops loose on the Highlands of Scotland after Bonnie Prince Charlie went back, he went over to France actually. They wiped out thousands, maybe much more than just the thousands of the Highlanders coast-to-coast, and islands. And I mean men, women and children, you know. And afterwards they always try to hide it and covered up, oh it wasn't that bad. Because this is what they always do, rather than tell you what really happened, 'eh, they'll cover it up. Well it wasn't that bad; they got the worst ones and so on and the real revolutionaries and dut-dut-dut-dut-dut. And they weren't revolutionaries. They were in rebellion, really, it was to keep the same system that they'd had as opposed to go into a new system with new kings and queens from a different country. That's what it was.

Yeah, I mean, don't think that these things just happen in the past. You've been watching 30 years’ war in the Middle East alone that isn't and never was in the interest of the average American. They say what is it all about? Well, I'll leave that to you. But the fact is, the military generals all seem to be on board with it. Hm? And the Americans are going down the hill and down the hill and down the hill as they have to pay for it all. And with the Americans, other folks in the West go down too, naturally.

But, yeah, it's about 30 years, you know. You had the Desert Storm one, the first one. Then you had, they did almost a war, then a 10-year flyover and no-fly zones and military are going to Iraq and so on. Then again you had in 2001 they went to town again. It had nothing to do with the towers, it didn't matter. So, you've got a 30-year war in the Middle East and parts, in Afghanistan as well, yeah. Quite something, isn't it, 'eh? And we’ve all lived through it.

And most folk, the ones that are even rioting right now, think about this, their sons and daughters, in the black community too, go into the military because, well, you go in, you're a somebody, be a somebody, and suddenly you've got respect and all the rest of it and some kind of honor and prestige that you would never have in the city street. It's the same in all classes too across the world. That's how the armies really always did it, recruited from the lower classes, the cannon fodder.

Think about it. We've all lived through it, for this 30-year war, where were all your leaders then protesting against these wars? It didn't happen. 30 years of it. And it's still going on, the US is still financing the groups that are attacking Syria. M-hm. Why do you think the communist factions, that are all paid for by the big boys at the top, [Alan chuckles.] I mean, the big big big ones at the top, why do you think they don't say, well that's enough fighting with these other countries and so on. Why?

Because you see, they start it off with the color revolutions to overthrow. When that doesn't work then you get the real Army started, or terror, or you fund the terrorists, you see, that are just mercenary armies, I don't care what fancy name you give them, that morph from one name to the next, it's the same group. Again, the taxpayers of America pay for it all, and Britain. But the thing is, they did it with, what, Egypt as well, remember. And Egypt voted in a guy, then they got him out. He wasn't secular enough; they said in the West.

You see, under the communists, which is the totalitarian elitist group that runs the world, [Alan chuckles.] they don't give a darn about you, the ones at the WEF. They want the destruction of all religions, you see. Don't you get that part? All religions. They want a totally secular society. Then they can dominate it. Because you can buy folk off in secular societies quite easily, which they have always done. Then they can rule it all and plunder the economy and plunder the taxpayers of the countries and so on for themselves. That's what the WEF is all about, folks. Do you really believe they're there to help, we are part of your community, we're here to help you? Do you really fall for that rubbish? N-n-n. And folk don't remember anything, 'eh.

So, a 30-year war with the Middle East and they're still not finished with Syria. Which was on the list back in the 90s remember of the PNAC group. They must get rid of Assad, 'eh, and put in a completely secular society. They already destroyed a whole bunch, so many religious communities. We paid for it all, for them to be destroyed. And they're some of the earliest Christian sects, 'eh, all obliterated. Where was the humanitarians marching the streets then for? How can we slaughter these poor folks over there, these weren't rich people, who are slaughtering these folk because they were Christians. And the groups, the Islamic groups that were really mercenary groups that they were paying to do it all, were beheading folk. Again, where was the outrage? It didn't happen. It didn't happen, 'eh. Yeah, be a follower and get used, folks. You'll never see the picture as a follower and that's the truth of it.

Now, when you look at what's being demanded by the front people in the protests, and the riots too, it's more than just a, you know, fair laws and some and fair treatment. It's the sustainability problem that they designated at the very top, UNESCO and other organizations belonging to the United Nations and Agenda 21 and the World Economic Forum. It's all the same group by the way.

You have this article here for instance, it's quite interesting, from quite a few years back. It's about sustainable development. Now even many of them who were protesting and demanding, oh we can’t open up until we get fairness and rut-dut-dut-dut-dut, from the Covid thing. Same thing by the way in the WEF and the Club of Rome and many other organizations, all the front groups, for sustainability rollout saying, we can't open up and go back to the old way where we had cars and things, we want to go back to this primitive utopia of, you know, nice weather and walking and bicycles and things, you know.

I'd like to try that in Canada when the snow is up to your neck, or higher. But facts don't matter, you see. It's for depopulation and bringing down the numbers basically. If you're not sick and you can't get heating, you're going to get sick very quickly. And the population will drop when they can't afford the energy or get the access to the energy to keep them warm or to cook with or anything else by the way.

That's how you bring down populations and whole societies, under wonderful sounding names, we'll all live in a happy utopia of Disney, you know. I think I saw in a Disney movie once, and the sky was always blue, and it was just perfect weather, people worked and smiled as they were, they weren't toiling in the fields, you'd be smiling an awful lot and happy as they planted all the crops, so it must have been easy, etc. etc. Hm. But of course, the ones who bring you into revolution won't be doing the digging and the planting and harvesting and the heavy work of course. That's just the way it goes, 'eh. We've seen it all before in the Soviet Union and in China and elsewhere.

This article here is…

Shaping the future we want: UN Decade of Education for Sustainable Development; final report - unesdoc.unesco.org

So those ones out in the streets right now around 18 to 20, have had the last 10 years of mass indoctrination already, and even before that, into what's happening now. It all makes sense. As long as you get the same agenda through, you know, getting postindustrial naturally, they want to go into a postindustrial society... I mean, a preindustrial society. Well, folk were dying like crazy in a preindustrial society. They were often. The childbirth was horrible with illnesses and so on and malnutrition, etc. But that's what they want to bring upon you, for the good of the planet you understand.

So, as I say, they always demand sacrifices. So, so much must always be sacrificed for the good of all. It's just the old, old ancient religion recycled over and over, isn't it? And it works awfully well, the same formula. Yeah, it's going to take sacrifice. It's like the Covid idea, well you know, it will hit mainly the old folk. Well, the flu hits mainly the old folk, in a bad way that is and kills them too and yada yada ya. But that's, let's get the numbers up by putting infected folk into the old folks' homes, by law, like New York City did mandating it. That's murder. That's planned murder. To get the numbers up as we know. Facts don't matter as long as you get the numbers up.

You gotta understand what I said before about beheading folk. I mean, there's many ways to kill folk and sticking them into an infected area is just another way to do it. This is as old as the hills using bacteria or viruses, diseases for warfare purposes. They used to put parts of corpses and sometimes the whole corpses over the walls of castles they were besieging, or city states as they called them too, their main cities' high walls, they'd fire them over the walls on the big catapults and the arbalests, or whatever they called them, the big catapults.

Shaping the future we want: UN Decade of Education for Sustainable Development; final report

unesdoc.unesco.org

The midpoint of the decade is a good moment for the international community (Alan: You always have these terms that are so vague, because they are meaningless. International community. What are you a community of?) all to reflect on its understanding and commitment to the decade.

(A: Did you know you were all decaded...? Dedicated in a commitment to the decade?)

It's also a moment to take stock of what's been achieved so far (A: ... blah blah blah blah blah.)

This 2009 educating for sustainable development global report, learning for a sustainable world review of context and structures for education for sustainable development presents a succinct but insightful overview of the context (A: ...con is a good part.) in which regions and countries around the world are trying to develop education for sustainable development and related forms of education and learning.

(A: No, that's indoctrination folks. This is indoctrination and social engineering.)

Regional and national realities have shaped how the development and promotion of ESD's have occurred, thereby engendering (A: Amazing, you think words are just there by accident? It's to promote ideas in your head by using certain words. Engendering…) a variety of interpretations of ESD. (A: Not STDs but ESDs.)

In the next half of the decade we need to focus on finding the unifying dimensions and are thinking about ESD's and work towards (A: We need to do that, you understand, right, work collectively...) towards identifying ways to translate general themes into particular applications responsible to local needs, you see.

(A: So, here's a report for things you never get to vote for. It all comes down from the top and implemented into your educational systems to brainwash the children. It goes on and on and on. Every year you get the same stuff, just churned out like you wouldn't believe, these massive agencies, when you think you're living in democracy, 'eh. [Alan laughing.]   Quite amazing.)

(A: But they go through their plans for the future and…)

…the structures and formal and non-formal education.

(A: You see, a lot of it is non-formal. It's, you don't think, you don't know you're being brainwashed watching television, do you?)

Sustainable research and development and ways forward.

(A: I just saw something recently to do with the opening up, it includes all the same goals, opening up from Covid, 'eh. We can't have this, and we can't have that, and we mustn't go back to the old system. By the Club of Rome. Do you vote for them? No, you don't vote for them. Why don't you just admit you're under some strange oligarchical control of corporations and think tanks? Why don't you just admit it, folks? Because you don't have any kind of democracy at all. You really don't.)

(A: So let's get back to, I won't go through all this, I was just mentioning you can look it up for yourself and go through UNESCO the big organization that Julian Huxley was all for and helped to fund and start up. On behalf of again of the private group that gave you the United Nations. That gave you all the other agendas of the Empire of the day. Including, you know, Planned Parenthood, that was all part of it too, to get taught in it, yada yada yada yada ya. And your education has all helped to funded with all your money, so they can brainwash your children into ways you don't, you couldn't even imagine. Well maybe you can imagine these days if you watch a lot of TV, you've already had your mind bent I'm sure into all kinds of directions.)

structures in and formal and non-formal education research and development in ways forward.

(A: They're always, always a way forward, you see, as though it's going to happen by itself. Nope, it's all made to happen. You don't even get a say in anything. But they do go into the same old stuff...)

Sustainable environment on the planet, refers to development of natural ecosystems in ways

that the carrying capacity of the earth and respect that the nonhuman world,

(A: Right, so it's the carrying capacity of the earth, that's too many of you.)

Sustainable economic developments

(A: And put that down into prosperity, right, not austerity, but they call it prosperity to throw you off the track.)

Sustainable economic development focuses on the development of economic infrastructure in which the efficient management of our natural and human resources is important.

(A: When did you become a human resource? Hm?)

Finding of balanced ways to integrate these dimensions in everyday living and working that poses perhaps the greatest challenge of our time and requires alternative ways of thinking and valuing and acting.

(A: Well, when you go through the gobbledygook of the public relations propaganda here and you start to catch on what all things are about, do you really think the folk at the very top, that use all movements, remember, and often create and fund the movements to bring in their agenda, give a damn about any individual ethnic group? Do you really think that? Do you really honestly really think that? Hm? Well, we are winning now [Alan chuckles.] ...etc., eh. This is from quite a few years back, this one here. They go through chapter 36 of Agenda 21 on...)

Education training and public awareness for, which for UNESCO was designated as task manager. It identifies four overarching goals.

They always have lots of goals and like 5- and 10- and 20-year plans and stuff like that. That's standard communist technique. Run by the richest folk on the planet though, you understand. Yep. They don't care about labels. They give you labels to fight for, whatever mindset you have they've got a label fixed for you. You can just pick one yourself, they've got ready-made labels, you see. Yep. Oh yeah, and all varieties and subsections of labels too if you're not happy with the main one. And that's how it's done. It's always been this way. By those that rule the world. It's always been done the same way.

Now here's Lord Hague…

Lord Hague calls lockdown

We need Lords to tell us what we already know, you know. You understand, once again it takes a somebody to tell us what we already know before it becomes talk-able, ‘eh, mention-able I suppose, but I like talk-able. So…

Lord Hague calls lockdown a 'national disaster' (A: No kidding. I wonder, he must be a genius too.) and demands immediate end to two-metre rule after new numbers show 600,000 dive in payroll workers and benefit claims soar by 125%

Grim figures show number of workers on payroll dropped 600,000 March-May

Former Conservative leader has brandished lockdown a 'disaster for society'

He has backed former Labour Prime Minister Tony Blair's (A: [Alan laughing.]   He's backed him, 'eh.) calls for mass testing

(A: I'm not surprised, Tony Blair has got his fingers in the pie. He’s got very lucrative pies, you know. So, Tony Blair calls for mass testing, quite interesting. The same Tony Blair that waved his hands a lot, a one-man band to get Britain into the war across the Middle East along with the US. The guy who doesn't believe in having, you know, positive freedom and stuff like that.)

Lord Hague's comments in Telegraph come ahead of new unemployment figures

(A: So, here's your doublespeak here, right, so let's get mass testing, and get rid of this 6-foot rule. Even though the 6 foot rule again was dreamed up by a schoolgirl, supposedly, on behalf of her daddy who worked for the military industrial complex, all doing computer modeling, programs basically, projections of what would happen and they came up with this fantastic farcical mythical idea of 6 feet, you know. That means nothing, it means little to nothing in medicine at all. It's a brand-new idea. But again, you've got to do crazy things like wear masks and stand 6 feet apart, etc. etc. etc. It says…)

In a sign of the carnage to come, official figures showed the number of paid employees dived 2.1 per cent or 612,000 between March and last month.

The breakneck decline is particularly worrying with figures this morning showing the government's furlough scheme is now propping up 9.1million jobs - many of which might never return as UK plc reels from the pandemic.

Well, this is all planned this way. How do you get the folk into austerity? Shut down the entire economy. Tell them to stay at home with borrowed money. Even though it's all fictitious money. And bring them out of it through a complete testing, forever, for the rest of their lives by the way. This isn't just for like one little thing here, this is for the rest of your life. I hope you understand what they're talking about here. Hm? Forever and ever amen.

They’re even talking about giving you measles vaccines, that’s another little thing, because folk were wanting the measles vaccine, ‘eh? And so, they came up with this one, it might, if I get that it might help against coronavirus, they said, the Covid 19. Wow. Where's the proof of it? Well, we don't really have any. [Alan laughing.] Well, waving smoke in front of your face from sage might help you too, probably a bit more than their cons. Another one too and it says…

Lord Hague calls lockdown a 'national disaster' and demands immediate end to two-metre rule after new numbers show 600,000 dive in payroll workers and benefit claims soar by 125%

However, the worst of the hit for workers appears to have been masked by the government's massive furlough bailout scheme, with experts (A: We need experts to tell us we are in a mess.) warning of 1980s levels of unemployment by the end of the year.

Well, they're working hard towards it by keeping you locked down, 'eh. Oh, it's spiking again, my goodness, what would happen if we let the folk out of their homes? Then natural immunity might just happen by itself, like it always has done before, so if we lock them up they can't get the herd immunity, so when we do let them go it will start spiking, oh my goodness, we are surprised. Really? [Alan chuckles.] In other words, they're testing it. These are not folk that are sick. These are not folk that are sick. These are folk that they're testing says that they've had it, or they've got it, but they're not sick. And that's what they say, most folk don't know they've had the flu. Every year, some folk get awfully sick with it, some don't.

Anyway, they're pushing ahead to get austerity in, you see, with mass testing. It's got to be bigger than that though, you see, they always give you little ones here and there, this is an individual guy's idea, that's what that is. No, it's not. They've got lots of little individuals to put in front of you to say, you know, we should really get testing done on all, mass testing, etc. Until you think, well I guess if so many folk are all for it, then it must be the right… No, no. They're all getting paid to say this, folks. It's the agenda. Fauci said at the beginning, you know, you're never going to get back to work until you take our vaccinations. And then you get testing all the time blah, blah, blah, blah, blah, right. Quite amazing.

Another article too is…

Globalist elites to gather in Swiss resort town to plan post-COVID ‘Great Reset’

lifesitenews.com / 12 June 2020

(A: I've got the articles from a few years ago saying the same thing, from the same group. They said, we have to get a great, a good reset here, of the money agenda, sustainable... And it says…)

The objective is 'rebuilding' the world's economic and social system in order to make it more 'sustainable.'

(A: Too many of YOU again, 'eh? [Alan laughing.] Too many of you. And as folk try to get their autonomous zones set up, where no money is going to come in, they think they're going to get saved by the World Economic Forum and all the rest of them. Do you think they're going to keep us all around as pets when we have no work? Do you really believe that? with their fine sounding speeches, etc., power to the people, etc.? Really, do you really believe that? These folks, in the previous articles from a few years ago, were saying the same thing. We're going to make a, well, here's your plan, the great reset, right here, NOW, right. It says…)

June 12, 2020 (LifeSiteNews) — “Nothing will ever be the same again.” It was the mantra that we heard in many countries at the height of the COVID-19 pandemic. It came with a warning that a “new normal” (A: Hmff.) would replace the existing order. Easy travel, interpersonal relations, large gatherings, even things like shaking hands would have to give way to long-term social distancing, drastic rules, and surveillance.

(A: But it's for the good of all, you know, the greater good, 'eh. Of corporations. They get the reset, get the surveillance equipment and get all the billions thrown at them. [Alan chuckles.] The greater good...)

But these changes on the personal level are only a part of the picture. The World Economic Forum, together with Prince Charles of England and the International Monetary Fund (IMF), has launched an initiative revealingly dubbed “The Great Reset,” with the objective of “rebuilding” the world’s economic and social system in order to make it more “sustainable.”

(A: Well, that sounds good to me, 'eh, more sustainable. Yep. What's better than a big juicy steak? A nice stale bit of bread. That's from that other movie, 'eh, [Alan chuckles.] It's all coming back isn't it?)

(A: Prince Charles remember, is the guy they put forward by the World Economic Forum and all the top other groups that are there from the elite classes. They put him forward years ago to start the kickoff the public-private partnerships, where the public pay for everything for corporations, you know. They pay for your launch and even build them things and roads and everything, you give it to the private corporations to own it. They take all the profit and you maintain it; the taxpayer maintains it. Beautiful projects, these public-private partnerships. PPPs, 'eh?)

(A: But yeah, this is the same agenda, the same folks. Here you are. As folk are worried about, oh you're going to lose all your.... Oh yeah, and youngsters think they've actually got a revolution on the go. [Alan laughing.] I-yi-yi. Yep.)

The idea has received the full support of the U.N. secretary general, (A: Who cares?) António Guterres, former president of the Socialist International from 1999 to 2005.

(A: You see, he's a communist. Don't forget what Quigley said. He says, oh yes, in the CFR, he says, we bring in communist and dictators, we don't care who they are, he says, as long as they're on board with us. They do all sides, they run all sides, folks. Antonio Guterres, the Socialist International from 1999 to 2005...)

Technically, a reset is a re-initialization: in the language of our digital era, it means erasing all hardware and data on a hard disk and formatting it anew in view of a fresh start.

(A: That's what it's like. It's like Year Zero in communism, you know, they tried that in Cambodia on behalf of the CIA [Alan chuckles.] that was running a lot of the stuff behind the scenes in Cambodia. Or like you know, Lenin said the same thing, history is bunk, he says. So, they always eradicate the past and destroy the statues, and it all starts with some latest guru figure that they give you to worship and folk do unfortunately, or they're made to, mind you. It says…)

For many decades, the World Economic Forum, founded by Prof Klaus Schwab in 1971, has been getting heads of state, billionaires, and heads of big business together yearly in order to reflect on economical and governance issues and work toward a common end: free global trade, common world rules to supersede national sovereign decisions, promoting nondiscrimination, “to transform economies and societies.”

(A: So, these are all the other, they use everything, you see, to make sure that whatever flavor of communism you like, they've got a special flavor just for you.)

They go into the Davos meeting and so on. It's a massive organization, with thousands of folks that are trained by them every year, youngsters. They pick them, put them in and train them to be future leaders, for all the different parties across the planet. [Alan chuckles.] They can't lose, can they? But yeah, it's too many of you, you understand. And again, they want you to start to not have children, be awfully good and not have children, and just work hard for the great future and then die off quietly. They'll help you die off quietly, in fact, with euthanasia. You'll be being a good citizen then, you see.

Young Revolution makes eight demands for police reform in Peoria, Peoria Police Department responds - centralillinoisproud.com / 10 June 2020

Another article too. It's comical too, to watch stuff that... You don't understand, as they bring out the police, take police off work, and then you watch the, they've already had shootings in some of these places, you know, and murders around the areas. Because now the cops aren't going to reply to any of them. And why would you? The cops have been told, really, you better not go into these areas anymore and just let them… Otherwise you might be charged, you know, if something happens and you have to deal with it in whatever way it takes, it doesn't… You can't do the right thing, there's no way you can do anything that's right anymore. So, the crooks and murderers, they already had quite a few murders actually, so the crooks themselves get a field day, they know the cops won't respond. If the cops do respond Antifa will say, oh they're racist, bigots, etc.

So, they won't do anything. And so, it will get worse and worse until chaos rules. Then the government will bring in, because they want to bring in a centralized, and Soros does too, a centralized police system. In communism, centralize. The World Economic Forum, a centralized governance body for the planet, for everything, trade, for everything, you name it. Centralize. Marx, centralized government, right. Standard stuff. And the folk never catch on to it. N-n.

Again, the police, yeah, they're going to ban the use of choke holds and stuff. That makes sense. But they didn't use to use these until they got trained [Alan chuckles.] by outside sources. But facts don't matter anymore. It's quite interesting too, what's happening. But again, Antifa will use that, communist always sit waiting for a spike, as they say, of emotion and they jump on the bandwagon and then they take it over.

Now, listen, in New York City, right, mayor, it's quite amazing, that orders an army of Covid 19 contact tracers not to ask about BLM protest attendance. Hm. I think this one got banned before by some, by the groups that put it out. But the mayor ordered an army of the new tracers, that these are your new Stasi by the way, if you haven't figured it out yet, it's not just to do with this, it's to do with everything, for the future, forever into the future. Including your social credit system score and all the rest of it. All that stuff combined, believe you me.

An army of Covid 19 contact tracers not to ask about BLM protest attendance – thecity.nyc / 14 June 2020

You see. So again, as long as you belong to, and really, I'm quite serious about it, I said years ago, you better belong, if you don't belong to any special interest group, or minority group, you'd better join one to get any rights at all. Otherwise you going to have no rights at all. And that's where we are now, we have no rights, you see. So, try to find something and join it. I think Monty Python had a League of Silly Walks, you know, if you had a silly walk you could join it. But at least you'd have rights, right? And then you could really hit folk that laughed at you, because you'd say, hey you can't mock me, right. Absolutely. There ya go.

So, the contact tracers, again, as I said before, the whole agenda was on the cards before Covid came along, it was all worked out before with the same groups of people that run the present show. It's a Stasi type thing. They're going to come into your homes and all the rest of it. Break all the laws and rules of your home is your castle, the last vestige of any right at all in the West really. M-hm. To save you all, you know, it's to save you. As they, if there's anything going around, do you want them coming in, that have been in 100 houses before you? And if one person in 100 has had it, it's covered them, and now they're going to bring it to you? Do you understand? It's nothing to do with sanity at all. It's all social training for everybody. That's what it is.

NYC COVID-19 Contact Tracers Not Asking About George Floyd Protest Participation, Despite Fears of New Virus Wave

thecity.nyc / 14 June 2020

The hundreds of contact tracing workers hired by the city under de Blasio’s new “test and trace” campaign ...

(A: And de Blasio too, is international con, I'd say, definitely.)

... “test and trace” campaign have been instructed not to ask anyone who’s tested positive for COVID-19 whether they recently attended a demonstration.

(A: Well, I guess you’d have to put all the politicians [Alan chuckles.] in quarantine if that was the case, 'eh. [Alan laughing.]   I tell ya, Monty Python is sane compared to what's happening now. Yep.)

Even though I again, the WHO, the World Health Organization suggests that asymptomatic individuals, with more recent studies, right, rarely pass on the virus, they said. Before, oh my God, it's getting spread by asymptomatic people. Now they say it's hardly ever happening. So, there's no real anything here to do with anything. The whole thing is, it's a made-up thing. Really. It's a flu-ish type thing, whatever. But yeah, it's killing old folk, mainly because they can't even get treatment, or proper treatment. And they're putting them in, forcing them to go into old folks’ homes where there's already infections present. Or taking folk in the homes which have no present illness there and then bringing ones with the live virus in with them. It's just incredible.

And don't ever think they're stupid, folks. Don't fall for this, we just didn't think. Don't fall for that, 'eh, don't fall for that. N-n-n. What happens at the top, the slightest whiff of a variation from any part of an agenda goes through about a dozen think tanks and every little part of that to see what the consequences could be if this happened and that. Nothing happens by accident, oh, we didn't realize, you know. No, no, no, don't think that.

I had to laugh too, in Aberdeen someone sent me an article from Aberdeen in Scotland.

Video and pictures: Hundreds turn out for Black Lives Matter protest in Aberdeen city centre

pressandjournal.co.uk / 13 June 2020

(A: This is Northeast Scotland, you know. It says…)

The good-natured demonstration, which took place between 1pm and 3pm on Union Street, was the largest of its kind in the city since the death of George Floyd in the US last month.

What does the death in the US got to do with anything in Northeast Scotland? Hm? Across the world too, in Australia and everywhere by the way? All worked out ahead of it, just waiting for the right incident to happen and outcome completely coordinated, the leaders all financed and paid, hm. And the media all paid to get on board with it, right off the bat, obviously. [Alan chuckles.]

And in the middle of a, the latest great depression, financial depression, 'eh [Alan laughing.] and folk can't figure this out. The same governments that are all on board at the WEF who watched city after city getting slaughtered in the Middle East with their paid, the West's paid mercenaries under different names and guises since it's all the same group, and nobody said boo or a hiccup to that. Huh? But let's all be upset because one fella got killed. And the cop is charged with murder. Which is law, right. No, there is more, there's always more happening, folks, believe you me. I tell ya. But that's the main thing happening in Aberdeen. Then you find that...

Aberdeen City Council gears up for easing of lockdown restrictions

eveningexpress.co.uk / 16 June 2020

(A: Well, they're a bit late. I mean [Alan chuckles.], they've already had their protests and stuff, they didn't give a damn about lockdown restrictions. So now they're going to go back to it or whatever? Unfortunately, Scotland is like a communist country, it really is. I've said it before, it came out of this farce, the Scottish National Party, which really was international socialist. Winning its rights to have its own country for the first time, what a farce that was, 'eh, and the first thing you do is open up its borders, [Alan chuckles.] and boast about international socialism, let's all merge... Which means, doing away with your borders. What was the point of getting it in the first place, then doing away with it? A kind of waste of time, 'eh? Then of course it came out under the EU, you know, under their auspices and their dictates, and the same with Ireland did the same thing too, 'eh, they come out into freedom under a new master, [Alan chuckles.] which is bigger than the last one. What a joke.)

First Minister Nicola Sturgeon (A: The characters that they put ahead of us is just astonishing.) is expected to set out the second part of the Scottish Government’s four phase plan to lift some of the conditions on Thursday.

I wonder what, I don't know what the GDP of Scotland is? Because it's not, it's about 5 million population, used to be always pretty steady at about 5 million. And most of them today, an awful lot of the new births, they're all from outside, they admit that in their statistics, people coming in and having children. But still a small population. And how are they, you know, what are they supposed to do, keep folk locked down forever, keep paying them to sit at home? Where is that all coming from? I tell ya, 'eh. [Alan sighing...] We keep the red flag flying high... There ya go. International socialism.

But yeah, it's such a farce, isn't it, 'eh. M-hm. But that's what they give you for news, 'eh, dictates from these people, like Sturgeon, whatever she said there's something awfully fishy behind it though. Manipulating the masses, Edward Bernays, I won't go into that one, I've done it all before, for years and years and years. It's about group psychology and how Sigmund Freud too, again, Bernays was the nephew of Sigmund Freud. Strange family though, they were kind of, even Freud was having some kind of affairs with the different Bernays family’s [Alan chuckles.] wives and things, [Alan chuckles.] quite a strange thing. Anyway, this is… That reminds me really of Darwin and the Wedgewood family, they seem to just be interbreeding with the same kind of family over and over and over. That's my take on it.

It says the easiest way to divide people is through political theater and it's going to be a tough red pill for people to swallow, and yada yada da. But I've done it all before and other folk are just repeating stuff I put out years ago. It gets kind of boring. Actually, it's verbatim from some of my talks, some of it. [Alan laughing.] So, I won't bother going into it. Then this one here, the World Economic Forum...

Centre for the Fourth Industrial Revolution

weforum.org

(A: This is how they even run the world, all the richest folk on the planet run the world, 'eh, the Center for the Fourth Industrial Revolution. And...)

Real world impact at the speed of now.

(A: I wonder how much they paid for their PR companies for, the speed of now. Wow.)

We’re not just developing new ideas – we’re implementing them across the globe at the pace demanded by technological change.

(A: You must adapt to their technological society, you see. And you can't have any privacy in a technological society, they've already told you that many times before. They keep telling you that. Most folk don't mind now though.)

The Forum’s Centre for the Fourth Industrial Revolution is a newly established focal point within the international community for multistakeholder dialogue (A: That's not including you though.) and concrete cooperation on governance challenges and opportunities presented by advanced technologies.

(A: You can download the brochure, as they sell you the whole idea of it, isn't it, 'eh. Then they give you...)

The Great Reset - this week's world versus virus podcast

Now is the time for a 'great reset'

(A: There is ‘now is the time’ part again for revolution, you see. Isn't that interesting, you always see what you're looking for, now is the time for a 'great reset', 'eh and...)

How artificial intelligence and machine learning are helping to fight COVID-19

(A: Machine learning, 'eh. There ya go. In other words, the tracking traces and all the rest of it in your apps, yada yada. Yeah, that's what they tell you, it's helping to fight Covid 19. Not that you need to fight it in the first place.)

This was the year automation started taking over the workforce

(A: And that's MIT news in with them...)

How the Fourth Industrial Revolution can help us beat COVID-19

(A: ...and...)

Robots have demonstrated their crucial role in pandemics - and how they can help for years to come

(A: Really? Wow. Gee whiz.)

Five ways collective intelligence can help beat coronavirus in developing countries

Well how can we even develop/fight it here with going to developing countries? Maybe developing countries have to stay away from televisions and stuff, and don't send folk off to the WEF, will be quite okay and safe, maybe, how about that then, 'eh? Hm? How about that? And they can't afford all the machinery to lose all the rights and freedoms, that monitors them, etc.

But the World Economic Forum too, as I've said before, just like the Club of Rome and all the other groups, that you think are left-wing groups, that are really fronts for the big agenda for the ultrarich. But you're not going to get opening up after Covid unless you're sustainable. And they're going to have these commissars that will come and inspect you and look at you and measure you probably. And smell you maybe even… I don't know if you should open up or not, you don't smell left enough.

It says, traveling, you see, their whole agenda was planned before this thing came out.

Known Traveller Digital Identity - Advancing secure and seamless travel

weforum.org

This project is part of the World Economic Forum’s Shaping the Future of Mobility Platform

This project seeks to develop and pilot a decentralized digital identity platform which leverages Fourth Industrial Revolution technologies to help government and industry leaders (A: ...you know, your fascists.) facilitate seamless and more secure international travel. Together with a community of travel security experts, (A: Oh, that word experts gets me groveling right away, oh my God, it's so wonderful.) policymakers, businesses and international organisations, the project will achieve this by:

Piloting the KTDI concept in a cross-border context:

(A: I guess they have rubber lips and mouths, these folks that speak this verbiage.)

In collaboration with a consortium comprised of the Government of Canada (A: Of course, naturally Canada's completely on board with it all.) and the Kingdom of the Netherlands, Accenture, airlines, airports and technology providers, the Forum is currently piloting components of the KTDI concept in a real-life, cross-border context.

Advancing safer travel in the face of COVID-19 impacts:

(A: Oh, it's to do with Covid 19, you see, to keep you all safe.)

... (i.e. biometrics, blockchain and digital identity) is now more crucial than ever. The Forum will facilitate multi-stakeholder (A: That's all the rich sods that get all the cash.) dialogue to gather insights and develop actionable strategies to promote more secure travel through improved border and health screening, touchless passenger processes, and more effective use of data.

(A: Meaning, totalitarian measures that you don't get to travel unless you take all the new ID stuff, and get monitored all the time, in real-time, for the rest of your lives, folks. That's what this is, [Alan chuckles.] if you don't know what it is. Yep. So, there you go.)

Developing tools and guidance for scalability with the end goal of global interoperability:

The Forum recently published the KTDI Specifications Guidance white paper, which describes the technical foundation underpinning the KTDI platform...

Now, they know that the average person doesn't have a lifetime to spend reading their verbiage, you see. What you're looking at is a multilayered massive bureaucracy, way above your governmental level, all privately owned. But throwing it at your governments and telling them to get on with it. And to get, you know, they don't have any kickback from the governments so they're quite happy to receive the kickbacks maybe, who knows.

Another one is...

Global New Mobility Coalition

weforum.org

(A: Again, you can't open up unless you get out of the car and all that, 'eh. So...)

This project is part of the World Economic Forum’s Shaping the Future of Mobility Platform

(A: Oh, there ya go, it's about mobility, they want to make sure you're mobile, is that what it is? I don't think so. So here it is…)

The Global New Mobility Coalition (GNMC), curated by the World Economic Forum, is an active and diverse community (A: Oh that makes it better, it's a diverse community…) of over 150 globally renowned experts, (A: Oh, there's the experts, you get shivers up your spine when you say that word.) NGOs and companies for accelerating the shift to Shared, Electric and Autonomous Mobility (SEAM) system (A: So no more you driving yourself, it's going to be shared, you see. Electric and autonomous...) that provides for healthier cities, reduces carbon emissions by 95%, (A: I think they used the same computer for global warming and climate change that Neil Ferguson used for exaggerating the Covid problem.) improves mobility efficiency by 70%, (A: …by stopping you from traveling.) and decreases commuting costs by 40%, (A: …because you can't afford it and you won't be allowed to travel so naturally it's going to decrease commuting cost, because you won't commute.) while tapping into a 600 billion-dollar business. (A: Which the WEF characters are in on it, will own you understand, they'll own it all. But it's for the good, the greater good, they only own things for the greater good, to make sure that you're all living safely, for sustainability.)

On The GNMC publicly communicates a sustainable mobility vision to civic, public and private stakeholder in order to catalyse supply and demand for carbon neutral mobility ecosystem by 2050.

(A: I used to, we used to think it was so terrible about how bureaucrats, and communist, how communists talked, it was a different language, you know. And this is the same stuff here because it's by the folk who really brought you communism. [Alan chuckles.])

The GNMC also forms public-private partnerships designed (A: Naturally, they need taxpayers’ money to fund their programs.) to accelerate SEAM adoption? through agile policy design (A: I guess they must give you a dictionary to read this article.) and experimentation in handpicked cities, and iterates learning to a broader network of stakeholders to inform positive actions. GNMC is steered by the World Economic Forum (A: Oh, what a coincidence.), ClimateWorks (A: What a coincidence again.), University of California Davis (A:

(A: I thought we were going to go vegetarian, and here's all these folks that are stakeholders. I mean, we aren't going to get any, we can't afford the steaks, folks, 'eh. So here you go…)

Oh, that's really a coincidence.), China EV100, Uber (A: Naturally.), Energy Foundation China, Israel Institute of Technology (Technion), Lyft, Via, BMW, Ford, and Uber. ?Among its key partners are C40, OECD International Transport Forum, UITP, MaaS Alliance, Europe Polis Network of Cities, and the World Bank.

(A: Well, what a coincidence! It’s the same group that have been running the world for an awful long, for over 100 years anyway. But that's just coincidence, that. It's just that they're better at it, you know. Because they do it for your good, you understand, for sustainability. And yes, they take a bit of, you know, profit for themselves, and buy islands for themselves, and have special underground cities even built in case anything really unforeseen broke out. But you know, well that's their right. They sit there… It's like Dr. Kildare, when they were brainwashing the women of the world to- Dr. Kildare was the guy they all wanted to marry. He just couldn't stop worrying about his patients. He hardly slept. He'd get up in the middle of the night and, my God, eureka, that's what she's got! Now, he knew how to treat her. So, these folk are entitled, you know, the World Bank and all that, to make a little bit of profit, you know, 'eh, off your money with public-private partnerships. You pay for their businesses, that's only fair, right? And so, it gives you...)

The Challenge

Deployed in the presence of supportive policy frameworks ...

The Mission

Co-develop, pilot, and scale awareness-building and policy initiatives that promote the benefits of shared (A: ...for themselves, 'eh...), electric, and automated mobility technologies (SEAM) to society and the environment.

(A: So, they are in charge of the world AND the environment. They are the gods of the air, powers of the air, and the earth, everything that walks and crawls and flies and burrows, they are the gods of it. Nothing much changes from the days of Egypt to the present, 'eh? In the old days of course, they just forced you to worship, and because you were superstitious, you'd say, my God, ok... And there's a God for everything on the planet. So, in ancient Egypt you'd worship. It seemed to kind of make sense to you, especially when you need crops and stuff, and you might get a plague of something one year and that can put you off, and sometimes the Nile wasn't flooding as it should do, so things were kind of iffy.)

(A: But these guys today, they're on top of all the problems before they even happen. They've got lots of stuff to implement to make it all work, right. Oh yeah, yeah, that's right, well they didn't think to ask you to vote for them, because they have to get things done fast and save you, you see. If they let you know what was going on you might haggle and argue, and we'd all die. We'd all die, 'eh? Mm. And they might have to use some of their profits for their own businesses, instead of public-private using your money to fund and run it for all their businesses.)

The Opportunity

Research shows that SEAM solutions can contribute to sustainable mobility. However, with the rapid pace of technology change, the appropriate enabling environment remains unclear. Therefore, we see an acute need to co-develop awareness and policy (A: They're good at that, mind you, they can codevelop awareness of things that didn't even exist, and policy...) jointly with decision-makers (A: ..the folks that are going to rule you, over things that don't exist.), private sector companies, researchers, and other stakeholders. (A: …the high priesthood, you see. So there ya go.)

A coalition comprised of an active and diverse multi stakeholder community (A: Meaning big corporations...) is better positioned to drive a balanced and credible transition (A: This is the age of transition, for the century.) to a more sustainable transportation future via SEAM, than individual actors.

(A: In other words, if you did it all yourselves, instead of this big club that you can’t join, it just wouldn't work out the same way, you know. It would be a lot cheaper. Yeah. Well, you get what you pay for, you know.)

Also, too, the same World Economic Forum, right, okay…

What is an immunity passport …

Thank God these folks are on board, they're on top of everything here, 'eh. We don't have to do anything at all, except watch fantasy on television.

What is an immunity passport and could it work?

weforum.org / 19 June 2020

(A: So, they've got the World Bank, and the whole bunch of other organizations involved. It says…)

Weeks into lockdown and with economic indicators signalling a deep global recession (A: No, it's a depression.), governments around the world are searching for ways to get their countries back up and running. But emerging from a cocooned state could risk a second spike of coronavirus infections as people start mixing once more.

Among the measures being considered by governments including Chile, Germany, Italy, Britain and the US are immunity passports (A: Thank goodness that they're all on top, you didn't know they were doing all that on your behalf, did you? Oh, my goodness, you thought your government was a lazy bunch of sods, didn't you? You really did. All this time they've been working with the WEF, etc., and big tech, using your tax money, to get immunity passports. Okay, okay, they get paid well for all that, those companies. But they deserve it, keeping you safe, right.) – a form of documentation given to those who have recovered from COVID-19.

a form of documentation given to those who have recovered from COVID-19.

(A: Now, Canada and all these countries had articles and documentaries out in the 90s, with the Wendy Mesley show, where Canada was way into the biometrics long before anybody else, you know, fingerprints, eye scan, the whole thing. And here you go. But here they're telling you it's really, whoah, the latest thing is Covid 19 to make people get it, you see, all the holdouts. It says…)

In Chile, which looks set to become the first country to put such a scheme into action, the so-called “release certificate” (A: ...as they call it. They're calling it a release certificate, like you're in prison...) would free holders from all types of quarantine or restriction.

(A: Well, there's your way out of it, buy your way out, folks, you know and get a complete bio immunity passport. It's shared by governments and government agencies, of all countries, and high-tech companies, you see, they all share it, you see, for your own good, obviously. Then you can go around freely, 'eh. And they'll take their cuts of monitoring you, watching you and studying you, and banning you from whatever. It says...)

But the idea has proved contentious, with the World Health Organization (WHO) among those voicing criticism. (A: They always have a branch that will all pretend to oppose them, on behalf of you, without you even asking them.) The root of the concern for many is the unknown degree to which past infection confers future immunity.

(A: Now, here's your key to it all. Remember, Fauci said at the beginning, oh no, he says, you've got to get the vaccines, oh yeah. That was on the cards before you even heard of Covid 19 or even he heard of it. It was all planned this way. Because you see, you always get herd immunity or you're done for, the whole world would be done for. That's how it's been up until the present. Now they're saying, oh, you know, we don't know, this might only last for a month or two, your own immunity, right, so you need to get retested every three months, even though you're immune right now, you might lose your immunity in three months. This is to be for ever and ever amen, folks. I hope you're getting the picture, 'eh. But they planned this before you even heard of it.)

(A: You see, getting your own herd immunity is not profitable. And it doesn't confer authority onto the ones who already have grabbed authority over you. So, it's... But again, you have the World Economic Forum, the richest folk on the planet, richest corporations on the planet, and richest bankers on the planet, have all decided to help you, you know.)

Stakeholders, communities, governments, business and individuals understand the emerging risks and follow on affects generated by the impact of the coronavirus.

(A: They don't know themselves. Don't wear a mask. No, wear a mask or you'll get fined. Don't go outside unless you're allowed. Why are you outside? Don't go on a walk. Well now you can get a walk for today, about 20 yards more. Don't go with anybody. Don't be any closer than 6 feet. Oh, that's okay, let's half it in two.)

(A: And here they're pretending to tell you your own immunity might be gone in two or three months. We don't know, they say, but it's better to be safe than sorry, let's do a complete bio scan and get an immunity passport for you. This is a lifelong passport; you can't go anywhere and do anything without the passport. You can't even get into a store. I mentioned this in the 90s this would come. I said, you'll go into a store even to get food and alarms will go off if you haven't got your tattoo or your chip with all your vaccinations on it. Life is kind of boring with déjà vu, 'eh.)

In Chile's case, (A: After going through it all, right, we've got to make sure it's repeat business for the big corporations that have got all this technology and so on, it says…) the certificate will expire three months after a confirmed infected person has recovered. After this point, they will be considered to have the same risk of infection as anyone else. (A: [Alan laughing.]   You can't win, folks. You can't win, 'eh. This is as good as it gets. They've got it all figured out.)

Even though other biologists and biochemists and the whole bit have come out, that work at these labs, and saying your own immunity will last generally two or three, three years generally for any particular Covid or any other kind of Covid variety strains, and even longer. They've done tests for stuff even for folk who had SARS and still got antibodies 10 years later, you know, things like that.

Anyway, this is the whole agenda, folks, for sustainability. And if most of you can't, they'll just say, well there's been too many folk traveling this month, it's not sustainable, and it's putting too much carbon into the atmosphere, even the cyclists that are breathing heavy, and other folk too that are breathing heavy, even though they're not supposed to be doing that during this pandemic, you know, we're just going to lock you all down, to fulfill our quota, and get the quota back to normal. Well, you know, CO2 reduction.

World Bank: COVID-19 recession (A: Again, the same group, 'eh. [Alan chuckles.])

is expected to be twice as bad as the 2009 financial crisis - blogs.worldbank.org / 15 June 2020

So, you lost 40%, right, of the value of your currency because of the last big con. They plundered, things don't disappear, folks. Things don't just go bankrupt. Real businesses, real machine shops, all these things are real, they're taken over by the folk that cause the crash, I hope you understand. That's how they do it. There's nothing new about that. This is from the World Bank's website, you know, so you can read it for yourselves. There ya go, so it's going to be twice as bad as the 2009 financial crash. Oh, you might get a few cents left at the dollar. But sustainability and austerity, that's how you bring folk down into poverty. Austerity, you see. Well, they're forcing it, folks. It all happens for the greater good, you know. But that's coincidental.

Then you have this one here too. It's quite amazing. You had the whole thing with Epstein. Again, they had to get disappeared really quickly, or it was just too hot to handle with intelligence agencies and blackmail, and all that kind of stuff, you know, etc. etc. etc.

900 suspected pedophiles arrested (A: 900 of them.) as 'darknet' child porn kingpin jailed for 30yrs

rt.com / 6 May 2017

(A: This was May 2017 this came out, this story, but I thought it was interesting.)

Nearly 900 members of a global 'dark web' pedophile ring sprawling Europe and the Americas have been arrested following a two-year investigation, the FBI and Europol reported after the website's founder was handed a 30-year jail sentence.

Shedding light on the scope of the operation which is still active, the FBI revealed that in the US alone, 350 arrests were made as part of a wide-ranging investigation into Playpen – a secret website that is being referred to as possibly the biggest child pornography online dump that ever existed.

(A: So, they're patting themselves in the back for it and all the rest of it, right. This was worldwide…)

The arrests and other law enforcement actions related to the investigation were carried out “in countries far and near”, including Turkey, Peru, Chile, Ukraine, Israel and Malaysia, according to the FBI.

Europe accounts for the major share of arrests and convictions with 368 suspects being charged. A total of 870 arrests were made in connection with the case, according to Europol.

Over 300 children who had suffered sexual abuse at the hands of Playpen members have been identified or rescued.

Here's the kind of money they put out on this, right. This is worldwide, right, and the FBI is at it and the whole thing. Now, they've got total access to everybody's data. Look at all the folk who have been looting the stores, you've seen it, 'eh, it's up on YouTube all over the place, stores getting broken into and hordes of folks just going in there and ransacking, very quickly too, very efficient, stuff, computers and god knows what else, and TVs, yada, yada, in these stores, you know. Do they really think in this day and age that they don't know who's doing it? Do they really think that?

Do you remember too a few years ago they came out with NSA programs, and ones they were using for China, and they said it didn't matter if folk wear a mask or not, they could tell by, because they had measurements, it's all automatic, between your eyes, and eyes to the bridge your nose, and the temples, all that kind of thing. It's instant, you actually see it in some of the modern stuff they show you. China showed some great stuff initially with glasses getting handed out to police at railway stations and airports. Everybody coming off trains and so on, immediately had little, their ID would come up around them, and these printed up versions of who they were would come up on the screen. And instantly, instant official ID and recognition. Even if there was 50 in front of the cop, everyone would just pop up, in the glasses. We've got it too of course.

So here you are with, so here's folk still breaking into places, and burning cops’ cars. Which are paid by the community. In one of the states they burned 20 of the cop cars, they said it's all going to get replaced by the taxpayer. Hm. Public-private partnerships, 'eh. Anyway, so yeah, it says here they sentenced the main guy, Steven W. Chase.

This is the kind of stuff that again, we're supposed to be really concerned about, this kind of stuff. But meanwhile the thousands that happened at Britain, remember, were ignored for, what, 15 or 20 years, these gangs that were grooming them and hooking them on heroin and cocaine and sending them out as prostitutes at 12 and 13 years old. But that was… And no one wanted to touch that, 'eh, because it was Britain, you see. M-hm. It was just too politically sensitive. So, it's okay, everything's politicized today, and folk suffer. And if you're in the wrong country and the wrong people, you're really going to suffer. No one's going to help you. Nobody. So, there's different values depending on what country you live in, on the life of the people who live there. Different values.

And as I say, yeah, they can go after a worldwide operation, right. But yeah, folks think that they don't know who's causing the trouble or who are the leaders for revolution, the violent revolutions. This is, when they get into a violent stage, folks, it doesn't stop there. If they can go the next step further, they'll go to the violence. And believe you me, a lot of the mob, when tempers are up and emotions go crazy, will go crazy, that's what they want really. You will see it in your lifetime. It won't be that far off, actually.

And it says…

Media Raises Hysteria Over Trump Tulsa Rally After Celebrating Mass Protests

thefederalist.com / 19 June 2020

(A: Facts don't matter, as you know.)

On Saturday, President Donald Trump announced plans to hold his first major campaign rally in Tulsa, Oklahoma since the start of the novel Wuhan (A: It says Wuhan...) coronavirus pandemic.

As Tulsa prepares for the rally, the Trump campaign announced it had received more than 1 million requests for tickets (A: But of course, the media there are trying to stop it all and saying…)

The media however, is spiking fears that the large gathering will be a deadly “super-spreader” for COVID-19 even after celebrating the mass protests (A: [Alan chuckles.]) that took over the nation’s cities and even drew participation from woke politicians.

So, everything's politicized. Facts don't matter anymore, as you well know. It's awfully important of course that they get what they think is left wing in. And the left wing will be completely on board with everything the WEF, the richest folk on the planet want. Completely on board. Sustainable, yeah, and for the environment, sure, sure, yeah, yeah.

Atlanta cops continue to call out sick' after scores were a no-show yesterday as city claims it can handle 911 calls and every officer is given a $500 bonus for civil unrest shifts - dailymail.co.uk / 18 June 2020

Would you risk your life for $500 bucks? Knowing that if anything happened, and you even have to defend yourself, you are going to be in the wrong, and your bosses aren't going to stand up for you? Well of course, you wouldn't. Of course, you wouldn't. The military won't either. If they're not, if you don't get a strong command from the ones above you, from those in charge, they won't do it. So that's what's happening. Naturally. Yeah. $500 bonus. I tell ya. It's not good. Some places like Detroit they don't even go into anymore, long before this happened. That's pretty well normal there. Another one…

Atlanta Police Officers In Multiple Districts Walk Off Job - lawofficer.com / 17 June 2020

I'll put that one up too. And it says here…

Belgian police

You got the same protests across the world, you think it's all just happenstance and spontaneous? [Alan chuckles.] Sure. Dream on Disneyland people. So…

Belgian police throw down their handcuffs in mass protest against media 'hostility' and accusations of racism, fascism and homophobia (A: The same things, 'eh? racism, fascism and homophobia…)   in wake of Black Lives Matter demonstrations - dailymail.co.uk / 19 June 2020

The whole thing was commandeered by the real [Alan chuckles.] the real antifascists, which are fascists by the way. So yeah, the cops have just given up there. Just, you know, that's it. What else can you do? What can you do?

I'll put another one up too that's to do with, as I say, there's no secret about Black Lives Matter was taken over a long time ago and set up really by a Marxist. Again, using the networking, when they bring in all disaffected groups, even creating some of the groups that weren't even groups before it happened, you see. They have to get folk with beefs that can’t fit into society, all kinds of things like that, and use them. So, I'll put them up too.

A Short History of Black Lives Matter - therealnews.com / 23 July 2015

And this is a good one too.

Hundreds of households in Berlin are locked down after dozens of people test positive for coronavirus

dailymail.co.uk / 16 June 2020

Authorities place 369 homes under quarantine after outbreak in German capital

It involved households in seven locations, some with 10 people living together

Officials urge locals to use a new contact tracing app which was rolled out today

...the day that they found all of them. [Alan chuckles.] Just coincidence, that the tracing app was rolled out and they wanted mandatory testing, the same day that mandatory testing came out. Well, the more you test, the more you're going to find folk have either got coronavirus or had it. If it's a swab test, they're pretty well useless so I wouldn't even give them any credence at all. And for the blood tests, other types of coronaviruses might show up positive too.

A lot of viruses, d'you realize you can have thousands of viruses in your system, different kinds, you know, and some of them are, you're born with some of them, that you get some of them from your mom, a lot of them, and they're called harmless carrier viruses. Folk are terrified, they don't know, maybe a little bit of knowledge is a dangerous thing. So, they make sure you get a little bit of knowledge, they won't tell you all the rest of it. So, whenever you hear, oh my God, that's terrible, I've got a virus. [Alan chuckles.] You've got stacks of them they don't do any harm. And even the ones who do you harm, it's something if you're really of advanced age where you've got other problems too, or your own medications that lower your immune system. Unfortunately, a lot of folk on cancer treatment, you see, especially radiation and chemotherapy, they really are in danger of getting any kind of bad disease because their immune system is shot for a long time, until it starts to come back again.

(A: So yeah, isn't it a coincidence they rolled it out the same day, making sure they are going to have this, oh... To validate the fact that they're going to make it mandatory that you all get tested, and again, along with that will come the app, you see, you'll have to have the app.)

Early government suggestions to use mobile phone tower information and GPS co-ordinates for the app prompted a swift backlash. (A: ...the folk didn't quite swallow it right off the bat. They will eventually though, that's part of it, you see. They always do... oh well. It's amazing that they get used to things, just over time… oh well, okay, you know. They're using...)

...Bluetooth technology that is standard in modern smartphones.

(A: ... to track and trace everybody right now, 'eh.)

It's amazing, I mean, Germany got, East Germany especially got rid of the Stasi, you know, the secret police that were all through society, and everybody was informing on everybody and blah blah blah. And here you have the same damn thing again with the government, oh, it's to help you. Well, so was the last lot, to help you, and to preserve the system. [Alan chuckles.] What's the difference, folks? This is worse, actually. Yep. N-n-n.

Another one too by Ron Paul and it says…

Is The 'Second Wave' Another Coronavirus Hoax?

ronpaulinstitute.org / 15 June 2020

Just a week or so ago the mainstream media and thousands representing the "medical community" told us we must throw out the "stay-at-home" orders and go to the streets to protest the death of George Floyd at the hands of the police. The Covid-19 virus will not bother people who are protesting this injustice, they said. The virus only attacks people leaving their homes to protest the stay-at-home orders.

(A: [Alan laughing.]   You know something? You're really under tyranny, you need humor. You really need humor when you're under tyranny. Yep.)

Now, after thousands of businesses – many of them black-owned – have been reduced to rubble and innocent people in the inner cities no longer have anywhere to shop for the basic necessities of life, the mainstream media has backed off of its non-stop coverage of the protests. Suddenly last week they all simultaneously (A: and it's true, all at the same time...) embraced a new fear story to terrify the masses: a “second wave” of coronavirus was among us.

Yeah, sure, you see, that's how it's done. Then they go into the different states that are really pushing it. It's just coincidence it's everywhere that Trump was going to talk, 'eh. Yeah, it's just coincidence. Very politicized, these viruses, 'eh?

And this article is from a Canadian newspaper, one of the big ones I think it is. I never read much of the Canadian papers, I must admit. Because they're so PC. Again, there's so far beyond left, it's just one system really. There's no left and right, really, it's one system but very pronounced in Canada. And…

Bio-warfare experts question why Canada was sending lethal viruses to China

nationalpost.com / 8 Aug 2019

(A: Well, that came out ages ago. That was August 8, 2019, right. This is not new, you understand. It broke out too with some of the scams that were going on. It says…)

In a table-top pandemic exercise at Johns Hopkins University last year, a pathogen based on the emerging Nipah virus was released by fictional extremists, killing 150 million people.

A less apocalyptic scenario mapped out by a blue-ribbon U.S. panel envisioned Nipah being dispersed by terrorists and claiming over 6,000 American lives.

Scientists from Canada’s National Microbiology Laboratory (NML) have also said the highly lethal bug is a potential bio-weapon.

But this March that same lab shipped samples (A: This is last year remember...) samples of the henipavirus family and of Ebola to China, which has long been suspected of running a secretive biological warfare (BW) program.

(A: Are they kidding? Suspected? I mean Fauci, remember, okayed a lot of this stuff to be sent to China and worked with, and even funded some of it. Come on here. Anyway…)

China strongly denies it makes germ weapons, and Canadian officials say the shipment was part of its efforts to support public-health research worldwide. Sharing of such samples internationally is relatively standard practice.

(A: But it's gain of function here, right.)

But some experts are raising questions about the March transfer, which appears to be at the centre of a shadowy RCMP investigation and dismissal of a top scientist at the Winnipeg-based NML.

(A: And it's true, there's Chinese scientists, a woman, was working in this top lab in Canada. And she was still, I think belong to some of the top, the People's Liberation Army I think they call it in China, she was still a member of it. They go into it was worrisome in a few fronts, the very fact that they were doing that and..).

China’s growing investment in bio-science, looser ethics around gene-editing (A: ...and it's very true...) and other cutting-edge technology and integration between government and academia raise the spectre of such pathogens being weaponized, he said.

(A: Well, that was all with the collusion of the US and Fauci, and all the other organizations that are associated with him too.)

And another one…

Canadian lab immersed in RCMP probe sent Ebola and another deadly virus to China: health agency - nationalpost.com / 2 Aug 2019

So, there's two on the same story basically. And again, last year. And of course,…

Chile plans controversial COVID-19 certificates - thelancet.com / 9 May 2020

For those who haven't got it through their heads yet [Alan chuckles.] they're going to make sure you all get this, these electronic certifications of being free from infection. And you have to keep going back to get retested, retested. And then of course they'll have, you know, you have to start taking these other booster shots for the previous vaccinations and yada, yada... yuck. It's so predictable. So predictable, isn't it?

I remember mentioning too at the beginning of all this, I said, I really think China and the West is on board together to really push this whole terror idea of this virus. Working together. I mean, look at all the stuff they turned out from China. Oh my God, look at those big, big trucks going down spraying massive, you know, spraying behind them this strange misty stuff and going into stores and offices and doing the same thing. And oh, such activity and horror looking and yada, yada, ya. Then we followed suit after being told of course by Fauci that it probably wouldn't take off in America, [Alan chuckles.] you have nothing to worry about, he says. Until his bosses really said, now we've got to use this, you know, don't let a good crisis go to waste.

And here's Beijing at it again, right, and China at it again. They locked down the cities again because about 100 odd people they said, they tested, it doesn’t mean they are sick by the way, they’ve just tested it, you’ll constantly find folk that all test positive even though they have no symptoms. And false or not, it makes no difference if you’re using the swab test. But yeah, you’ll constantly find more and more folk, you see. And they keep saying they’re cases. No, they’re not. They might have got them but they’re not valid cases, they’re not patients, they’re not sick. [Alan chuckles.] You understand?

Beijing residents are rounded up and put in quarantine as the city goes back into lockdown schools are shut and travel bans are reintroduced to stop 'extremely severe' new coronavirus outbreak blamed on 'European salmon' - dailymail.co.uk / 16 June 2020

So, 100 odd people, out of a population of Beijing. Beijing population at 2020, the current population it says here is 20,462,610. So, you're going to lockdown the whole city [Alan chuckles.] maybe the country because of a 100-odd people? And this is the farce of it, 'eh. Yep. I tell ya. It's really astonishing what we get fed here.

And of course Britain apparently had paid for some other company to do a tracing, contact tracing app, who knows how many millions they threw out to their pals there, and then change their mind afterwards, 'eh, once it's all, you know, they're working on it, they just changed their mind and now they've given it to Google and Apple that are working together now. So…

Google, Apple release coronavirus contact-tracing technology for apps

fox13news.com / 20 May 2020

(A: Yep. And this is, again, this is just the same as having a Stasi system without the folk necessarily watching you. They're going to monitor you electronically initially, then send the tracers out on you if you fail to comply, you know. And you gotta take their word for it, you know, you were in the vicinity of somebody that had this, you know, and they were within about 2 feet of you passing on the street. Well, I don't remember that. That doesn't matter, you know, lock yourself up, until we tell you. There ya go. It's quite something, isn't it, 'eh? And they try to tell you...)

The identity of app users will be protected by encryption and anonymous identifier beacons that change frequently.

Where have we heard all this tripe before? Since we first got the computer altogether, 'eh, hack, hack, hack. [Alan chuckles.]   Oh, we'll be very safe with your data. Oh yeah? And in with it will come all your DNA and everything in it, oh what a great boon for them all. Then it will branch off into, you know, we can tell you what you will be prone to get, you know, diseases and things, so maybe we should treat you before you actually get outbreaks of certain diseases or illnesses and stuff. Oh really, could you help? Oh yes, that's what we're here for. [Alan laughing.] Get 'em all out, 'eh? Aaah, so predictable.

We are a herd, aren't we? We're just a herd of animals to be used, really. Again, back to the FBI that tracked on all those pedophiles, 'eh, but they can't… I mean, the same system, that's worldwide, remember, they have offices of FBI in Canada, they set them up after 9/11. And they have them in Britain too by the way. Everybody, they all work together, all these organizations, and the old Interpol system that's Europol, yada, yada, ya. They all work together. I think they still have an Interpol as well as Europol.

But yeah, they know everything that's going on in real time about everybody. Everybody. Yeah. But they're very, again, it depends how sensitive whoever they are monitoring whether they'll do anything about it or not. And all these folk going rioting and setting cars, really thinking they're in the middle of a real revolution. And they've got facial recognition...

FBI tracked down white woman (A: I guess that's okay to say that, you see, because she's white…) who set cop cars alight by tracing custom t-shirt she wore at a Philadelphia demonstration to Etsy - which led them to her LinkedIn and Poshmark accounts

(A: She can afford a Poshmark account, 'eh? That's quite the communist, this one, 'eh?! So, her name is…)

Lore-Elisabeth Blumenthal, 33, faces two counts of felony arson for her role in setting ablaze two Philadelphia Police Department (PPD) vehicles on May 30

(A: [Alan chuckles.]   In the same article it's saying that...)

Black Lives Matter protesters and other peaceful demonstrators convened in the city to protest the killing of George Floyd

(A: Right. Peaceful demonstrators but she was here setting fires to the cop cars. [Alan chuckles.] Well, you know, there ya go. So...)

She faces a fine of up to $500,000

(A: She'll get off with it. She’ll get a metal, actually. I read too recently that a lot of them that got arrested for setting fires to the places and looting, they got a metal dished out, for some organization. But who knows, usually the same suspects, usually the ones, for suffering a night in jail and all. Like a proud thing to be, to show... You won't have children if you're really good sustainable people, but to show anybody down through your life that, I took part in that, yeah, it's a badge of honor.)

(A: But anyway, this woman had distinct tattoos as well, that they arrested here. I said years ago, you realize these tattoos are going to be used for IDing you? [Alan chuckles.]   And boom, there you go. They really are… Oh, what can you say?)

FBI agents used Instagram posts of the burned cars, along with 500 photos from various photographers, to identify the wording on the woman's shirt: 'KEEP THE IMMIGRANTS, DEPORT THE RACISTS,' the FBI agent explained in his affidavit, VICE reports.

Agents discovered that the shirt was custom made and sold on Etsy and found that a user - Xx Mv - had posted a review about purchasing the shirt. (A: [Alan laughing.]) The URL belonging to the Etsy was 'alleycatlore.' The page listed Philadelphia as being where the user lived.

So, they kept at it and at it and then they came up. They get everybody, they know who everybody is. They know who everybody, everybody is. Yep, I guarantee you. If they want them, they'll go for them. If they don't, they won't.

11 face felony charges from night of civil unrest; more charges likely in coming weeks, state attorney says.

fox13news.com / 19 June 2020

TAMPA, Fla. - Hillsborough County State Attorney Andrew Warren announced charges for 11 people stemming from the rioting and looting that occurred during demonstrations in Tampa in late May.

On the night of May 30, 40 people were arrested for looting and rioting in the University Mall area of Tampa. Now, 11 people have been formally charged.

"We have the first batch, 11 defendants, 15 felony charges...

And there's more to come, so there you go. Yeah. They are protesting the folk that own jewelry stores, says one here. So, they did wipeout, cleanout jewelry stores. It says…

"These are some of the people who were robbing, burglarizing, burning, gas stations, drug stores, jewelry stores."

(A: Burning gas stations too. Interesting. So there you go, yada, yada, yada, ya. Smashing windows, even took cash registers. Of course, I think they had a little video of a woman, Badda, whose store, Badda's Hair was broken into. She had 32's employees, now they're all out of work, they attacked her store.)

But again, that intensifies the problem, which is what communists do. They don't help the problem; they make it worse. That's to get revolution going. Sad stuff.

An article too, I've mentioned before that Gaddafi's Libya, from 2013…

Gaddafi’s Libya was Africa’s Most Prosperous Democracy - foreignpolicyjournal.com / 12 Jan 2013

And it was. The whole country, you know, he was bringing in a gold reserve for his country, and for Africa. They had to get rid of him, 'eh. And they did. They certainly did. But yeah, the most prosperous country in Africa.

Another article too is a book, it's actually a book about, it's called New Left Tyranny but it's about…

Gangster State Capitalism

paulcraigroberts.org / 5 June 2020

Historically, capitalism freed labor from bondage by making labor the private property of the person. Serfs who owed labor obligations to lords became free individuals. Free labor markets and emergent capitalism made productive by technological advancements created with time rising living standards and a free people determined to protect their independence by holding government accountable.

(A: Well, that was a good myth and dream, wasn't it?)

This system was eventually wrecked by banks that financialized the economy and diverted discretionary personal income to the payment of interests and fees to banks, (A: Well, now they are just throwing your cash money out to big corporations, that are here to help you and save you from Covid. [Alan chuckles.]   That's the same thing. Anyway…) and by global corporations that moved first world jobs to Asia, thus raising their profits at the expense of domestic consumer purchasing power and living standards. (A: Of course, the WEF was behind that big push too, along with the CFR.) The result was the concentration of income and wealth in the hands of a few multi-billionaires.

First world work forces were re-enserfed as part-time jobs (A: And that's true, if they give you a full-time job they have to pay your pension plans, insurance and healthcare. So, you put them on part-time. That was forced by the last crash, by the same WEF characters that are running the show today, 'eh, who owned all the corporations. So, you end up with part-time…) with no health or pension benefits replaced the security of a middle class existence.

(A: So, it's probably a decent read, I haven't read it. He goes into what's happening across the world and...)

Tyranny can be the only outcome.

(A: ... of what's happening.)

Democracy is touted, but everywhere in the Western World the traditional ethnicities feel powerless and unable to affect how they are governed. Dissent is censored by the ruling elites who have in place powerful means to control explanations and to implement agendas that the people do not support.

Isn't that the truth, 'eh, isn't that the truth? But even if you have a dissent, before you even think it, they already know you're thinking it. [Alan chuckles.] Pretty well. Most folk blab things out. And it really is, it's astonishing how much data they collect on every single person on a daily basis.

I want to just go into now this topic because it's important. It ties in with your bio this in bio that and the World Economic Forum again, you know, until it's almost a post-trans-humanist agenda. Don't forget too that Julian Huxley of UNESCO, that's Aldous's brother Julian, who again, he also was a cofounder of Planned Parenthood for reducing the population, you know, the wrong kind of people, etc. He was quite blatant about his form of socialism, which is the real socialism, the same socialism that they don't tell their little members at the bottom about, you know. It's, you'll toe the line, you'll do what you're told, or else, that's it.

George Bernard Shaw said it, you'll have to come to us and tell us why we should let you live and stay alive. That's what socialism, real socialism is. This is an organized authoritarian system. It's not to help the working class, if there's any working class left. They're all getting paid to sit at home right now, temporarily, mind you, but they won't keep this up forever.

But I did hear about, or read about, just casually you're reading through some articles and one was about this odd thing with the military boys, some of the military boys, the generals against Trump. It's interesting. I'm not involved in politics, really, I'm not. But it's rather evident that big things are happening, when the generals won't back up the supposed commander-in-chief, right, and make public statements, which really foment overthrow. That's what that's… That's why they make it public. Any disagreements that they would have as gentlemen as they say at that level, should always be done behind closed doors, and they can voice your disagreements, you know, leave their job or whatever it happens to be.

But when they actually stand up against their president, then you're looking for... And what are they going to replace it with? They'll say, oh yeah just… Who are they going to replace it with? Who do you think they're going to replace it with? Why would your generals, and you better stop and think it, why would the generals, the way it's portrayed in its simplicity right, be really pushing for what would become a totalitarian internationalist system to replace Trump? Which is really a form of communism, on behalf of the wealthy elite. As I've been talking about all night here.

And it suits them at the top to have a form of communism because in a communist society centralized systems run everything. That's what Justin Trudeau talked about, he said he admired China dealing with Covid because they didn't have to bother going through democracy and persuading the people to go along. They just told them to go along, and they did it. You see, it's more efficient.

Well, when your generals are pretty well advocating the same thing for different reasons, you have to say wait a minute here, you know. And one of them, of the generals, have been asked what he thought of Mattis. And, he's a good man, etc. honorable man, yada, yada, ya. This is, they're talking to General John Kelly, and yeah, he's a good man. And then they asked him if he thought much the same of what Mattis had been complaining about. He says, well yes, I suppose so. Right?

And I thought, why would the generals be going this far at this time? Well, it's not hard to find. I mentioned before how all generals, not just in the US, career generals or soldiers, they get recruited for all, for the military-industrial complex. Especially retired ones and semiretired ones. Some of them are semiretired and still getting payments from the military-industrial corporations, 'eh. So, I looked into Mr. Kelly and I'm sure he really is looked upon, up to by soldiers that serve him and so on in different places, I would think so. But here you are, I mean, you look into it, and this is what got me on this strange roundabout track here, and I'll go into it now, it's kind of important. It has…

Homeland Security Nominee General John Kelly Failed To Disclose Position At Lobbying Firm On Ethics Disclosure

theintercept.com / 11 Jan 2017

(A: This is from 2017 and it says…)

JOHN F. KELLY, the retired Marine Corps general nominated by Donald Trump to be secretary of homeland security, did not disclose his position as a vice chairman at a lobbying firm called the Spectrum Group on his federal ethics forms made public this week.

The failure to disclose the position may run afoul of federal law requiring Senate-confirmed nominees to reveal potential conflicts of interest to the lawmakers and the public.

“He came on as a vice chairman in the end of last year,” said Esther Lofgren, the vice president of the Spectrum Group, when reached for comment.

(A: I read elsewhere too in other articles that John F Kelly was a vice chairman, so I don't know where this one, who knows, maybe it came before or after. But it says...)

The Intercept could not reach Kelly by phone, and he did not return an email requesting clarification over the issue.

(A: Now, you have to really look into who on earth or what on earth is this particular group, The Spectrum Group? And it's awfully interesting. One of many. I'm sure, don't forget the military-industrial complex is massive. And CIA guys are recruited into it, if not directly and actually still stay in the CIA. And people from the Pentagon and top generals, and admirals and all the rest of it. That's what you use because they can get things done on behalf of corporations. They can get direct meetings with politicians that are put in charge of different divisions of government, you know. All countries do the same thing. It's very lucrative.)

(A: I mentioned last week or the week before I said, you know some of these massive contracts for the military-industrial groups, if you lobby for them, you might get a few million dollars, quite a few million dollars on each contract. It's big money. Yeah. But they're supposed to be out of the military by then, they're not supposed to be taking a paycheck from the military or an official position and at the same time working for the private company. This says…)

The Spectrum Group, however, is a “completely separate company,” according to Kasey Dezelick, the executive assistant at DC Capital Partners. Business registration records show that the two firms are distinct entities. And they are not remotely in the same line of business. DC Capital Partners, (A: which seems to be almost related to it.) which Kelly listed, focuses on “equity investments in middle market companies that provide differentiated and innovative service.” The Spectrum Group, which Kelly did not list, specializes in lobbying and government affairs.

But it's much bigger than that and I'm going to get into that as time goes on here. Before I do by the way I'll just touch again on global, the New Mobility Coalition by the World Economic Forum, and they're praising again, they dragged out that stuff they did from Holland years ago. Oh, look at all the bicycles in Amsterdam that's wonderful and healthy and it doesn't produce the carbon they said. Although you're breathing a lot of CO2 out the more you peddle, that's got nothing to do with it. But the fact is, this is what they want you all to do, go bicycling again? The same old stuff. Elimination of cars.

But that's the global new mobility coalition, 'eh, shaping the future of mobility platform. There you go. Isn't that wonderful. The same group again, your over Fuhrer's are going to be in charge of can you move and travel or not move and travel, yada yada yada yada yada ya. Hm. I'm telling ya. And do away with private cars. Agenda 21 again. Back to again, the Spectrum Group right. Now, let's look at this particular group, the Spectrum Group…

The Spectrum Group - Trusted Expertise - spectrumgrp.com

One of their areas is biomedicine. Now, you're dealing with a military-industrial complex outfit here, big time. They're involved in so much to do with, again, the military-industrial complex, for the military mainly and anything to do with the military. But biomedicine.   The whole idea with the bio labs for instance is to do with biomedicine. That's what they say they are there for, right. We want to make stuff, vaccines and stuff, and yada yada ya, and alter with gain of function things to be more potent and deadly. And of course that's why the military often uses them, as covers for getting to the same position, it's for the good of all, anticipating what nature would do in a few hundred years, we just speed up the process and make something which is pretty passive and harmless pretty deadly. This is what gain of function does.

This is not an exaggeration. This is what they do. So here you find a link within the Spectrum Group to do with it. And it all started again with John Kelly. Just because I wanted to know why he was not on board with Trump on certain things and he was backing up Mattis. And it could be completely different. It could be something else altogether. But then you find he's been compromised before, with the military-industrial Corporation that he worked for.

So here you have what it's about, from SynBioWatch it's called, and again, the same characters involved, right. And what's the military, apart from killing folk, [Alan chuckles.] what's the military really interested with genetic modification and engineering and so on of bacterium's and viruses and all the rest of it? SynBioWatch talks about Next Generation Genetic Engineering. And it also mentions that the Gates foundation paid $1.6 million...

Gates Foundation paid PR firm to secretly stack UN Expert process on controversial extinction technology - genedrivefiles.synbiowatch.org / 1 Dec 2017

In other words, to get good comebacks and follow-ups and writeups, etc. for something they are after. So, the Gene Drive, awfully important…

Military Revealed as Top Funder of Gene Drives; Gates Foundation paid $1.6 million to influence UN on gene drives - foe.org / 4 Dec 2017

The Gene Drive Files:

(A: Awfully important.)

Disclosed Emails Reveal Military as top funder of dangerous new genetic manipulation technique.

synbiowatch.org / 4 Dec 2017

(A: Gene Drive actually has the ability to alter a life form by altering its genes, knowing that it's going to spread to all of its own kinds' genes. And they used it to destroy, to try to destroy for instance healthy males in mice that would eventually spread through a population in a controlled environment. So, you can kill off a whole species of things by altering the genes of just one, of just a few initially, you see. It's a tremendous weapon, isn't it, 'eh?)

(A: So, if you can do with mice you can do with people. Or you can do with subgroups of people, like, we are all in subgroups, it doesn't matter, they've all put us into groups of this, that or the other, you know. And gene types. And the Human Genome Project, that's part of the purpose for it in the first place. [Alan chuckles.])

Over 1,200 emails released under open records requests reveal that the U.S. military is now the top funder and influencer behind a controversial genetic extinction technology (A: …and that's what it is, it's an extinction...) known as “gene drives” – pumping $100 million into the field. The trove of emails, obtained via open records requests, also shed light on a $1.6 million dollar UN gene drive advocacy operation paid for by the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation.

"Emerging Ag,” (A: It's for agriculture too, they can do it in any kind of life form including crops and so on, and mammals as well.) a private PR firm paid by the Gates Foundation, is working behind the scenes to stack key UN advisory processes with gene drive-friendly scientists, (A: That's standard stuff with all these characters.) and has recruited ostensibly independent academics and public officials into a private collaboration to counteract proposed regulations and to resist calls by scientists and conservationists for an international moratorium. Some of those recruited entered into the UN discussions without divulging their conflicts of interest or the role that paid political consultants played in shaping their inputs.

The files, dubbed “The Gene Drive Files,” additionally cast a spotlight on the central role of the shadowy U.S. Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA) as the key funder now accelerating gene drive development. For example, DARPA is now revealed as the major financial backer of efforts to develop gene drive mammals (mice) that are led by a U.S. environmental NGO, (A: [Alan chuckles.]   That's, oh we're just environmentalists, you know.) Although DARPA has no biodiversity conservation mission, raising questions about the defense agency’s intent. These revelations come on the heels of a public warning issued by a leading gene drive researcher Dr. Kevin Esvelt that current gene drives are too powerful to be used in conservation.

“Gene drives are a powerful and dangerous new technology and potential biological weapons that could have disastrous impacts on peace, food security and the environment, especially if misused,” said Jim Thomas of ETC Group. “The fact that gene drive development is now being primarily funded and structured by the U.S. military raises alarming questions about this entire field.”

“Gene drives could have profound global impacts, and these emails reveal a secretive attempt to game the system by gene drive proponents aiming to minimize essential regulations and oversight,” (A: In other words, do away with them, go around them.) said Dana Perls of Friends of the Earth, U.S. (A: The Friends of the Earth generally, some of the quotes from the top leaders of them, they're quite happy if the earth depopulated. So, there's no good guys anywhere.) “We need more transparency about who is influencing critical decisions about the future of global ecosystems, people’s livelihoods, or our food system.”

“In response to this news that the integrity of technical processes under the Convention on Biological Diversity (CBD) (A: Interesting too, the Convention on Biological Diversity, you may wonder what all that was about...) may have been compromised, civil society groups will urgently raise the need for better disclosure of interests within a framework for addressing conflict of interest at the CBD,” said Lim Li Ching of Third World Network.

“Mosquitoes containing gene drives are being proposed for malaria control in Africa. While claiming potential health benefits, any application of such powerful technologies should be subject to the highest standards of transparency and disclosure. Sadly, this doesn’t appear to be the case. Releasing risky GM organisms into the environments of these African countries (A: ...with mosquitoes…) is outrageous and deeply worrying,” said Mariam Mayet, Executive Director of The African Centre for Biodiversity.

(A: Don't forget, a lot of folk are getting terrible reactions to modified mosquitoes when they bite you. You can go into anaphylactic shock really with these damn things, some of them now that they're genetically modified. We're here to help you.)

Information revealed in the Gene Drive files includes:

The U.S. Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA) is reported to have given approximately $100 million for gene drive research, $35 million more than previously reported. If confirmed, DARPA appears to be the largest single funder of gene drive research on the planet.

Emerging Ag, a privately-held public relations firm, received over $1.6 million from the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation to work on gene drive topics and to focus on exerting influence on the United Nations Convention on Biological Diversity (CBD), the key body for gene drive governance.

So, it's quite interesting what's going on with all this. But this is just the start of it. Then you get into, this is an example, this is a good example right now. Genetic engineering in society it's called, right, and...

Genetically modified mosquitoes could be released in Florida and Texas beginning this summer – silver bullet or jumping the gun?

research.ncsu.edu / 3 June 2020

(A: This is June 3, 2020.)

On May 1, 2020, the company Oxitec (A: …a big company, one of these groups, you know.) received an experimental use permit from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (A: They're all, they're a big gang at the top, you know, the FDA and US Environmental Protection Agency, they are all connected, Food and Drug Administration, it's all the same, the same group.) to release millions of GM mosquitoes (labeled by Oxitec as OX5034) every week over the next two years in Florida and Texas. Females of this mosquito species, Aedes aegypti, transmit dengue, chikungunya, yellow fever and Zika viruses. (A: Isn't that wonderful, 'eh?) When these lab-bred GM males are released and mate with wild females, (A: Why can't they get that decent homely kind of character, you know, that wild females... but there you go.) female offspring die. Continual, large-scale releases of these OX5034 GM males should eventually cause the temporary collapse of a wild population.

However, as vector biologists, geneticists, policy experts and bioethicists, we are concerned that current government oversight and scientific evaluation of GM mosquitoes do not ensure their responsible deployment.

Coral reefs that can withstand rising sea temperatures, American chestnut trees that can survive blight and mosquitoes that can’t spread disease are examples of how genetic engineering may transform the natural world.

(A: But you see, they're doing genetic decoding and gene editing. It turns things on and off. You can do it in your brain too by the way, and your whole body, you can turn any organ on and off with epigenetics.)

Yet, as new advances in genetic decoding and gene editing emerge with speed and enthusiasm, the ecological systems they could alter remain enormously complex and understudied.

(A: Don't you believe it. They CAN, they know what they're doing here.)

...to yield inviable offspring or make them unsuitable for disease transmission.

(A: Right, make them sterile. I can remember reading articles years ago when [Alan chuckles.] China, the Chinese are way ahead you know with, the people in China, of what their governments have done in the past to do with sterilization and one child per family policies and things like that. I can remember when they were going on, it was a hullabaloo and the folk in the West were saying what's the problem with them. It was to do with eggs where the chickens had been fed with, was it cottonseed or something? But it was a seed that literally produces sterility in males. And they were feeding the chickens with it, on purpose, for maybe that purpose. But the people in China knew that, the ordinary folk knew that in China. They are ahead of us as to what their governments will and have done in the past, so they're on the watch for it.)

(A: But we're so simple and stupid, aren't we? And we're so used to being pampered, oh, we're taking care... Such great public relations, they're always there to help you, you see. They always do things to help you, and it's to save you, and it's for your benefit. Without you even have to even waste time knowing about it, or waste time finding out what they're doing, leave it to them, you trust them so much, you know that they're there to help you, hm. Boy, I tell ya, we're the easiest folk to manage. It's just astonishing.)

Recently, no group of organisms has received more attention for genetic modification than mosquitoes – to yield inviable offspring or make them unsuitable for disease transmission.

Although the EPA approved the permit for Oxitec, state approval is still required. A previously planned release in the Florida Keys of an earlier version of Oxitec’s GM mosquito (OX513) was withdrawn in 2016 after a referendum indicated significant opposition from local residents. Oxitec has field-trialed their GM mosquitoes in Brazil, the Cayman Islands, Malaysia and Panama.

(A: This goes on about…)

Time to reassess risk assessment?

It's just astonishing. These generals as I say too, I'm not saying that Kelly was directly involved in biowarfare here, but there's no doubt about it, he worked for a company that's definitely military-industrial complex. That's what military industrial complex are, ways of killing folk, or sterilizing them for long-term plans, remember, this is not a new thing. I hope you understand that.

The declassified governmental data from biowarfare companies working with governments during World War II and afterwards go into that whole scenario of how do you bring down, if you've got a population that's going to be at war with you forever, or you're occupying a country and every generation, they're going to grow more young children, more young boys to fight you, what do you do? Well, you've got to eliminate them. So how do you do that? Sterilization. There's many ways to get rid of young men. You radicalize them more, to get them to take more risks, and then supply them with leaders, and they become almost a kamikaze squad and help bring down their population quickly, etc, etc. Or you can put stuff in their food. Or you can literally sterilize them chemically through other means too which they are completely unaware of, you see. That's long-term planning. That's what you do in long-term planning with the military. And every military academy teaches that kind of stuff in this day and age.

So yeah, it's not unthinkable at all [Alan chuckles.] when doctors involved, to help you, you know, in biomedicine etc. and how to gene edit and turn switches on and off and all that kind of stuff. Don't forget too, you can turn switches on and off, that's how you sterilize people, and things just stopped working in your body hormone wise and blah blah blah blah blah. It's quite easy to do.

But we're living in a happy wonderful world where they keep telling you they're here to help you. You know that, so, this is paranoid suspicious conspiracy stuff obviously. Now, you can go into the next step of what are gene drives, right?

The Case for a Global Moratorium on Genetically-engineered Gene Drives

etcgroup.org

What are gene drives?

Gene drives are an experimental genetic engineering technology intended to aggressively spread a specific bioengineered trait among a species or population in nature.

(A: They're talking about crops and so on or animals.)

Normally, a genetically modified organism (GMO) released to the wild would pass on its bioengineered traits (e.g. herbicide resistance) to only about half of its offspring.

Gene drives are designed so that the bioengineered traits will be passed on to all or most offspring (even though they are unlikely to be one hundred percent effective).

If a gene drive were to be successful, the chosen genetically engineered traits would spread and become dominant in wild populations over a few generations of the species.

A successful gene drive could intentionally or accidentally alter a species or crash it to extinction. So far, these artificial gene drives are developed using the new 'geneediting' system known as CRISPR-Cas9.

(A: Then they go into what it could be used for, oh, remove weeds, blah blah blah, yada yada ya, right. But then you going to the next part…)

How quickly are gene drives being developed?

The first working CRISPR gene drive was reported in early 2014.

(A: And that's reported, right.)

Since then, hundreds of millions of dollars of private, philanthropic and military funds (A: Well, we like the philanthropies, you see.) and military funds (A: …let's underline that.) have been directed into accelerating gene drive development.

While some developers estimate that they are at least a decade away from being ready for an environmental release of gene drives, other proponents are proposing field trial releases of gene drive organisms as early as 2020. So far gene drives have been put into mice, fruit flies, mosquitos, yeast and nematodes.

(A: Sure, they will.)

(A: Interesting too, 'eh, how they've modified yeasts and fungi. [Alan chuckles.] It's just astonishing. And folk were getting all these strange fungus diseases. That's just coincidence though.)

The temptations of gene drives

Some policymakers may be drawn to gene drives since they seem to propose a simple silver bullet solution to complex problems. Technicians and corporations may be thrilled by the apparent technical power gene drives offer and the potential for increasing profit.

While technical applications may be marketed with ambitious claims as ready-made ‘solutions,’ failed experiments with such technological ‘solutions' in the past have demonstrated the need for precautionary approaches and deeper research into biological impacts.

(A: I know in the States in some parts of Pennsylvania there's problems with some kind of fungus overtaking farmers’ fields, because of some stuff that was sprayed by planes over them, and now this kind of strange fungus is overtaking other fields that weren't sprayed, it just keeps going. So, this is the kind of thing that can happen when you modify anything. But they're modifying insects too, right, and…)

“Safe Genes” and “Insect Allies.”

(A: ...they call it. Don't forget that certain things can then start modifying YOU. They used to say years ago there was a slogan brought out by big PR companies, no doubt, but it was, you are what you eat, you know. And to an extent that was awfully, awfully true, especially since you're not eating great stuff these days, when their growing vegetables in the same soil over and over without a break and there is no fallow period at all. So, adding just chemicals to it doesn't make up all the stuff that your body really needs. It might give you a big plant or big vegetable, but it doesn't mean it's full of nutrition. As you know. However, now you've got these particular [Alan chuckles.] invasive kind of gene drive systems, and they say that too, if one of them spreads in the wild, you know, a gene that they've introduced...)

If one spreads in the wild, the gene drive organism will be subject to mutation and evolutionary pressures, as will the wild species in attempts to ‘resist’ the invading’ gene drive. One way or another, the gene drive may fail to work, or the arising mutations may persist and spread through a population.

Yeah. Isn't that something? So anyway, that's just that part. But what made me think of, was your military, and here's the top generals, and I wonder how many of them are involved, and on the take? A lot of them are retired, remember, and they're allowed to be involved in all this kind of stuff. They always get approached to be on the boards, because it's big money if they lobby for them, for these companies. It does make you wonder, 'eh? Especially when, especially when the military is so involved [Alan chuckles.] with all of it and then you get Bill Gates as well. And then you get also the vaccines that Gates and all the rest of them are promoting, and Fauci, that literally are different kinds of vaccine that's going to alter the genetic makeup, the linings of your lungs perhaps, and the receptor sites in your lungs, modify them.

It's a different kind of vaccine from the old kind where they took viruses and either kill them or make them less virile so they wouldn't really spread or mutate in your body and multiply. And put them into you in the hope that your body will detect them and then form antibodies against them, because they were weakened cells. Well, this is a different type of thing altogether. It's literally going to alter the makeup of your cells for the receptor sites. This is the big danger. Where does it stop? Will it stop there? They don't know. Oh, we're rushing it through, and we have no option, it's to save the planet. Come off it. Get off it. Come on. This is a big agenda here. What else will it do to you, I wonder, 'eh? What else will it do to you?

Think about it. You already had the reports coming out the Covid itself, this oddball Covid 19 idea of, was causing sterility in some males in China. Because it not only affects the receptor sites, they say two receptor sites in the lungs, but it also would affect certain epithelial tissue, or epithelial like tissue, like the kind inside the heart, you know, but also the testes, this is what they're saying, and of course, in the intestine, where it will start to hibernate perhaps and live there. Well, so will the vaccines. They found that with other vaccines before, they can tell with certain vaccines, that they end up in some children's gut.

Because they specifically, they're detectable, since a lot of them are modified too in viruses. Well, this thing, this Covid supposedly CAN go into something similar. Which would mean, that even if they gave you the other type of old-fashioned kind of vaccination for it, by using weakened cells, virus cells with it and put them into your body, how would that make your body produce...? Because that kind was supposed to make your own body produce its antibodies, which it would do anyway, [Alan chuckles.] why would it make it do it any better than requiring the immune system yourself You see, it makes no sense what they're doing.

Something stinks behind it all. If your body can make its own antibodies against Covid, and they are admitting that, why would their vaccination, and I'm talking about the non-genetically modified type of vaccination, why would that be any better? If its whole intent is to stimulate your body to make antibodies against it anyway, and your body can make antibodies against it, why not just let it happen? It makes no sense at all. But something stinks behind it.

I know that they definitely want to bring out this two- or three-part vaccination series system that they're going to give you. And it's going to be something that's not even going to bother using the virus, it's going to literally modify you. And I really think you're going to get a terrible reaction to it if you come up against a particular virus down the road.

This is what you're supposed to test over years before you give it to the public. And supposedly they are, oh we don't have time to do that this time, we don't have time. Oh really? When human life is at stake, yeah, I think you have all the time in the world here. I really do.

And why should you trust these characters that have cried wolf for so long right down from shutting down the economy, when they admitted they wanted their complete reset a few years ago, and the same organization at the top is using it all again under the excuse of Covid. Hm? Lockdown, sustainability, the whole thing? Why would you trust them on anything, folks? Think about that, why would you?

Once again folks remember you can buy the books and discs @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. You can donate to me and you know how to do it if you bother. Because I've got a whole bunch of sites to keep going, and I like to keep putting out information as I go through all this stuff. I don't have any ax to grind, I don't have any political parties, I gave up on that joke a long long time ago. I just give you the information of what's really happening. For your own good. And maybe you can help yourself by knowing.

A lot of folk don't want to know truth. They can't handle truth. But other folk really crave it. They want to know what's behind things. It gives them a satisfaction by really understanding the big picture. As opposed to the media, oh, be terrified of this now, oh look at this now, oh look at that. No, you understand the big picture and you realize this is a continuation of an agenda, an old agenda, by those at the top.

And we truly are, we are kept like children. Just like the movie, as I said before, that movie called The Island with the clones in it, Ewan McGregor, kept very naïve, for nefarious purposes really at the top, that don't have your best interest in mind, especially when it comes to this word sustainability, folks. Hm. And with eugenics and sustainability, and believe you me, the left wing, that's one of their main things, eugenics. Really, for folk who don't know that. They think it's, oh it's all these right-wing nuts. No, no, no. Socialism brought eugenics in. You talk about Adolf Hitler was a socialist, remember. And the socialists really believed in a scientifically run society, by scientists and experts. That's what the Soviet Union was supposed to be, run by experts, professionals and so on. That's what it is, folks.

Keep things in the proper perspective and you can see why the elites like socialism. It works better for them. Like Justin Trudeau, you can get all things done, you don't have to bother with democracy and convincing folk, you can just tell them what to do and they'll do it. That's what the big elite wants, naturally.

So, remember, buy the books and discs @cuttingthroughthematrix.com, make a list of all my sites, and you can send a few bucks my way and keep me ticking over. And before I go, I want to mention two other topics, two or three other topics maybe. Now, that we're onto eugenics and so on...

University College London renames two lecture theatres and a building honouring Victorian eugenicists Karl Pearson and Francis Galton

dailymail.co.uk / 17 June 2020

(A: And then they go through it too...)

University heads took the decision over the two men's 'problematic history'

(A: ...problematic history, oh my goodness.)

The university said on Friday that the Galton Lecture Theatre had been renamed Lecture Theatre 115, (A: that's very socialistic, Yep, that's better.) the Pearson Lecture Theatre changed to Lecture Theatre G22 and the Pearson Building to the North-West Wing.

(A: That's very communist, Soviet, drab, 'eh? [Alan laughing.] Isn't it really?)

Victorian scientist Francis Galton coined the term eugenics and endowed UCL with his personal collection and archive along with a bequest for the country's first professorial chair of eugenics of which Karl Pearson was the first holder, the university said.

But it's just astonishing, the left-wingers too, who praised scientists, experts and so on, right, think about it, because just like, you know, the dream, the hero of technocrats, the technocracy movement, and some of them involved and descended from it. Tesla, right, Tessa believed in energy again and it fitted right into the whole program of the world run by energy credits and units. Tesla was a eugenicist. If you've read his different papers on eugenics and the folk that, what should be done to them, and done away with and all the rest of it too, for efficiency's sake.

You see, left-wingers are about efficiency, [Alan chuckles.] I hope you understand that, but so is right wing, because there's only one body of the bird behind the shield and it runs both sides, left wing and right wing. Nothing changes, folks. The same group.

But yeah, Tesla is okay, he's a wonder, oh he's a genius, you know. Well, where have you heard that rubbish before? Where have we heard that rubbish before? The man worked for the military-industrial complex. He created stuff that, weapons, he said, who could kill, maybe wipeout whole towns and cities using high frequencies and standing waves, like we now have the HAARP technologies. But yeah, I mean he was all for that kind of stuff. But, he also believed in superior types and inferior types. He didn't believe the inferior types should be allowed to breed or even exist. I hope you understand that. Of course, they made excuses for him too, well, you know, he had these genius problems, you know, like maybe he's slightly autistic or something, it was hard to tell. So, they're always making excuses for... the right people, you understand. You know. Because it was an electric system. And the car was named after him. It's quite something.

But yeah, very selective. Just like they're very selective on who they protest, or depends whose heads are getting chopped off across the planet. If they're going to say anything at all it's generally nothing. The leaders, I keep telling folk, the leaders are chosen for you. That's why they're so selective and they're so silent at times. Absolutely. It's rather obvious. But the followers never figure that out unfortunately. They don't, they get carried away with at all… We're on the winning team, it's our revolution now, you know, we're going to have utopia, you know, we’re working for a better tomorrow, for the common good. That's how it works out, isn't it? They never figure this out when it's all happening.

Also, you have the cyber-attacks and they're claiming China is behind it. Who knows? Australia's getting hacked apparently because they're, well, they're an ally of the US and the US is saber rattling, getting ready for Iran and China again. You need an enemy, naturally, if you're going to have a military at all, at least that's the belief of it all. I don't think they really do. I think if you're well prepared against any enemy, and you train consistently, then you're all ready to cope with it very quickly if you have to.

However, the US has been the policeman of the world for a long time. But it's also very lucrative for those in the military-industrial complex that can take resources, including oil fields in the north of Syria, as they have never let them get back into Syrian hands. It's not called theft, though, or spoils of war even. It's just, taking care of it, you know, just making sure it's all right, yep, that's all right, looks all right to me. And yeah.

I'll also put up a link to, since I mentioned Nikola Tesla, and again, the association to the car, word association. [Alan chuckles.] A comedian who put one up about an electronic car, how he looked good, you know, to fit the image of the do-gooder for sustainability and clean air and all that kind of stuff, he says, and actually do nothing, he says, just look good, look the parts but really do nothing to help the environment or help anything else. It's a bit of a comedy on it.

It's a good parody. I think it starts off with, oh the car is worth $160,000, because they must away show you how expensive and tell you how expensive it is, that's part of the status symbol of being a good environmentalist in this day and age, you know, for those that can afford it. And you can guarantee the folks that can afford it are not eating the poison food that you are. [Alan chuckles.] But that's how things really are, 'eh.

Pretend to Save the Environment While Looking Rich - youtube.com / 4 Feb 2020

We live in an amazing time of incredible mind management. It's all perception management. Everywhere you look it's perception management. Don't see it this way or think that, no, try and look at it this way instead. And that's how everything is supposed to be, until everything is just psychotic. If you believe them and do what they say, everything would be psychotic, you understand, 'eh. Wouldn't it? Wouldn't it really. But that's where we are today.

And we're already fed up with coronavirus, I won't even bother. I was going to put up the World Health Organization, the most recent stats on it, you know. And you get fed up with the nonsense and graphs and rubbish and they're fake, you know, everything is fake. To me everything is fake. And we've been through it all before with a political virus that can disappear when the right kind of protests are taking place, and no one gets in trouble for it all. Then it's immediately resurrected as, oh yeah, you've all got to get locked down, as soon as the protests are dying off. [Alan chuckles.] It's just astonishing times we live in, honestly, isn't it? It really is.

Coronavirus disease from WHO (COVID-19) - who.int / 18 June 2020

It really is. Don't you realize, if it's that deadly, and the whole economy across the planet is to crash, to save us, why would you not be going after folks who break, if it's that deadly, why would you be stopping, why would you literally stop it and then start it again, because of politics? Come on! Something is either deadly or it's not deadly. And if folk literally are breaking it all, this deadly deadly disease, you're going to spread it to everybody else and kill folk, well, that's pretty well negligent or manslaughter at the very least, so why aren't they all getting dealt with? Well it's not… Everything is politicized for other reasons. There is no reality to anything we're being told these days. Obviously. Don't wear a mask. Wear a mask. Oh, it's folk with no symptoms are spreading it. Or the WHO says now, folk with no symptoms probably aren't spreading it at all. Forget it, folks. Forget it. It's a big agenda. Sustainability.

World Economic Forum, massive organization. It's got bureaucracies and levels of it all bigger than some countries' bureaucracies. And they train folk for the whole planet, and they're already training their future child protégés that they will unroll in a few years. When the other ones are getting a bit older, they'll bring a few other ones out that will parrot the same stuff. Because they've done it before, you see, before now.

Anyway, for myself Alan Watt from Ontario Canada, remember, donate to me, send me a few bucks, @cuttingthroughthematrix.com, it's good night and may your God or your gods go with you. And keep your sanity.

Hi folks, I'm Alan Watt and this is Cutting Through The Matrix on June 28, 2020. I hope everyone's coming through the chaos, the planned chaos that we're going through, intact. Intact is as much as you can really hope for because things are getting pretty nasty of course in certain quarters. It's to be expected naturally, there's a formula to what we're going through.

I said before, we're living through a big script, so many times, we truly are living through a massive script. It takes years to plan big changes, many, many years to plan them. As I've said before, I met people in the 80s who were involved with the far left. They liked to portray themselves as really anti-war, but the real ones at the top of it all, the real core of it all, were really in for communism, pushing communism. They blended even the early agenda with sexual orientations, etc. to get more and more members on board. Then they went into different ethnic groups to try to get them on board, disaffected groups and so on. The whole point we're living through today is a combination of all of those and more that were added on by those who run the world.

The people who run the world, I have often said, the top Communists were always billionaires. [Alan chuckles.] Always. Even in the early days of the 20th century, that's what you find when you dig in deep enough. Some of them even had bank accounts, Swiss Bank accounts, some of the most famous of them. That's well understood and declassified too.

We're living through, again, big changes. And don't think the Communists are some separate group doing their own thing. I've always told you that there's only one, one, really, force at the top that runs all of this, all sides. That's how you direct and shape the world. Again, you can't stress enough that Carol Quigley talked about it that, he says, our group, now he was referring to at least, at the very least he was talking on behalf of the Council on Foreign Relations. He had taken over their histories of them, their archives to update them and so on. He certainly understood what was going on. The CFR, an American branch of the Royal Institute of International Affairs, they literally are the globalists. They are the ones who plan the future. They planned world wars. They admit that, they need wars to change the world, and as long as they can direct the shape and the course of the wars than they can bring us all to what they wanted, the outcome that they wanted.

They said themselves according to Quigley that you can get more done in five years of war than 50 years of peace, with social plans, social change. In peacetime you've got to really do a lot of work organizing and so on, as the Communists would say, and training and preparation. Even then it's very slow process trying to convince people to simply join you. But in war time you give up all your rights and the authorities can then force you to go along. And you do it pretty willingly too, to save your life. You'll all die if you don't comply. We've heard that so many times. And that's what it's all about, you see.

Quigley let so much out of the bag. Because he believed in the cause that the Council on Foreign Relations / Royal Institute of International Affairs was all about, and that their effect in history and changing the courses of history for at least 100 years, under different names because they eventually settled on the last names, but they used different names in previous centuries. He said that they had such a tremendous impact on history and shaping history that he thought it was time that the public understood it. He thought they would applaud it in fact. He certainly did himself, he was all for it.

You've got to understand that nothing happens by itself. I won't go over this ad nausea basically, repetition, but the fact is, they had their own private collection of archives of histories, of things, the real causes behind things. That's quite something, isn't it. We're all getting taught the naïve accidental view of history, things just happen by accident. Meanwhile the perpetrators and their offspring take over, because often it's intergenerational in fact, who get into these organizations. They’re taught the real facts and what really happened in history.

And we are going through it today. It's just astonishing to see again the naïve, the authorized version for the public to believe in, which is meant to keep us rather simple and compliant, and not to blame anybody, of course, that's what they want. Meanwhile, co-existing side-by-side with, albeit a dwindling free speech on the Internet, of people who have got the other archives of what's really been happening up until now. It's really astonishing, isn't it, to live through and watch it happening and live-time sometimes when some folk are getting murdered, but you're not allowed to say they're being murdered, and many newspapers just omit it altogether.

It's a fascinating time to live through and actually see it and experiencing it knowing that when we get out of it, the system that then evolves or is pushed out of it, will have all this expunged, you know. It will be a seamless people's revolution during, coupled with a massive pandemic they'll say, and that's what helped bring the changes about. Both of these things are false because the pandemic was planned before, years before at least, the whole course it would run. And of course the revolution too was waiting for the spike to happen.

I personally think it was all coordinated together. I said before too, even with the China thing, with China showing us clips of folk just dropping in the street supposedly. And in a country that can literally sensor everything in real time, they're really way ahead of some other places, some other countries. But they show you all that thing. Then they showed you the massive response they had to it of going, all the things that they were going to bring in here, they did in China in January, February and March. And publicized it. Including their home-to-home inspections and so on, door-to-door inspections and mandatory testing, down to the apps, mandatory apps on their phones to get into stores, etc. to prove they were safe to get in yada, yada, ya. The stuff we are going to go through, that was all planned even before China got it. As you know.

The facts don't matter. I said that so many times, that facts don't matter when there's big agendas in play. But they also showed us the massive mists of these machines, just blasting stuff hundreds of feet up into the air through the streets. That was meant to terrify everyone in the West. And the West sat and watched it, oh, terrified, terrified. Then Fauci himself said early on, I don't think it's anything really for the US to be worried about, chuckle-chuckle. Then you find out that Fauci himself was heavily involved in the Wuhan laboratory and the setting up of it with the Covid virus, that was sent to them authorized by him, and money given to them. This is incredible the stuff that goes on. This is… I mean...

And yet the guy is back on TV apparently spouting, now that the riots are kind of dying down and the protests are kind of dying down a bit, he's back in TV, you know, telling everybody to lock down, oh, do your social distancing. This nonsense, this ffff.... delusion that was put out that we're all to follow, that 6 feet apart will stop the virus. Even though it's a computer model that was invented in 2003 by a schoolgirl because her daddy worked for the military industrial complex, the name of Glass. And hhhhh, it had nothing to do with reality. It never had been done before.

And yet they made this new computer-generated thing a law, like a law from God. Because the computer technically is a front for the new God, the scientific rationale, and so science says that… therefore you can't get any more scientific than a computer, that's what they tell you. I used to have a tape recorder that could give you better answers than the computer. But that doesn't matter, does it. Again, facts don't matter. You're all to behave in a very bizarre way as we go through the big, big revolution. It's just amazing.

And it's a political virus, isn't it? It can just be switched off because you say, switch off now virus there's a, because we have a political protest to take place. Even the folk that had us all locked down joined in the protest, shoulder to shoulder, no 6 foot anything. But that's okay then you see, because they told the virus to go and halt for a little while, hibernate for a little while. And once it started to die down, die back again, here we go again. I said this would happen even in January and February, I said you know, here's how it will work.

Because Fauci had said from the beginning, this will go all the way into vaccinations and vaccination passports. Because they had discussions on this, way, even in 2017 and before, the same group of people that we already know, what they would do with the big vaccine companies, etc., right down to the names of who would get the contracts. But again, facts don't matter. And these are facts, these are not speculations.

So here you have it, you know, we're watching, we're going through this stage play. Only we're like the Shakespearean plays where Shakespeare, and Straford-Upon-Avon, the way the stage was shaped, it would kind of go off into the audience at one point to an extent. The whole thing was to involve the audience in the play. It was very effective at the time. Well, we are in the audience, but we are participants in the play at the same time. Very similar. It works awfully well, doesn't it?

So Fauci said at the beginning that eventually we would have immunity passports and you'd have to have vaccinations before you're allowed out again into society and mix freely in society or go to work. That hasn't changed. The tune hasn't changed at all. There was no consideration whatsoever at the beginning of natural immunity like you do get with viruses, with everything basically. It was already decided that this vaccination program is imperative. Not just this vaccination, but every vaccination, and every booster that they've got planned for you, annually, for the rest of your lives. I'm not kidding you. So this is an old agenda, but they brought it back in force this time. Quite fascinating to actually live through it, isn't it?

I thought at the time too, well maybe China is on board, being a globalist society and the model state for the world according to the CFR itself. Then maybe they are all on board with it and it's the whole public that have to be terrified, of the planet. The whole population of planet, I should say, should be terrified of it all, maybe that's the agenda. Are they all playing their part in it? Are they?

I think we're going through an awful lot of theater right now, with top actors you might say. That's what they call us all, mind you, if you're involved in anything to do with what happens in the world today politically or socially or whatever, you're an 'actor', according to the United Nations. But the real actors are the ones at the top who are front people really, the ones at the very, very top, they're front people for this big global agenda. And it's so convoluted to most folks minds that they can't follow it. It's deliberately obscure to them.

They're used to being, they've been trained since childhood that, listen to the news, their authorized news that's somehow legitimate and above board and above question. Otherwise, why would they lie to you? …these private corporations? Many of them [Alan chuckles.] owned by the government agencies that run spy systems and so on. [Alan chuckles.]   Why would they lie to you? It's quite fascinating, isn't it. They've trained the people to be so naïve that when they see people come on it, they think everybody with the title of professorship or whatever it happens to be or doctor this, that or the other, must be genuine and they would never ever lie politically to bend or skew a thought or some real point of science. And that's how simple it really is.

Fauci is completely politicized. And so is Birx as well. They've made, they're career bureaucrats really. And CEOs of some corporations too, some of them. But yeah, that's how it really is run, isn't it? Big agendas. And it's a global agenda.

I keep mentioning, or I used to keep mentioning the old television comedy series called MASH with the intelligence officer called, I think he was called Colonel Flag.

MASH: The Wind - youtube.com / 7 June 2015

Colonel Flag. I'll try and put up the link, if it still works, to one of the MASH episodes where you actually see Colonel Flag, this kind of CIA operative come into the camp and try to explain what he's there for. Every so often in the comedy, this kind of pseudo-comedy, it would have this guy, he would burst in all clandestinely and so on and be hiding, and he would be found by Hawkeye or somebody, one of the doctors. This Colonel would say, you didn't see me, I've never been here. Then when they got him talking of course then he would say what he was really there for. He was there to confuse the enemy by implementing this to that, to this to that, like a chess game. And before he got more than a minute into the techniques of deception, everybody was completely bamboozled and lost. Because you couldn't, you just couldn't fathom the logic of it. But that's how it really does work.

Deception is just that. Some nations have mottos about deception, [Alan chuckles.] how they use it in their intelligence agencies. Because that's what it's all about. The best intelligence is always to mix, make, actually make the public think that you're invisible, that you don't exist. It's kind of like the devil, you know. They always used to say that Satan would win when he convinced the public that he didn't exist. Well, that's how intelligence agencies operate. Their job generally is to foment revolutions of one kind or another for their own political purposes, and to dominate and take over territory and resources and things like that. Or even just political power. It's much easier too when you've got a, put a tyrant in place. They've done it in Latin American countries when it suits them. And they dethroned them too when it suits them. That's how they work. But the great thing too, is to get nations fighting each other without ever figuring out that you actually organized and set up them to fight each other. That's deceptive, you see. That happens all the time. Very old technique as well.

Britain used it. Or London. I hate to say Britain because the British folk are just as out of it as everybody else down through time. London is a completely different kettle of fish, a very old system of money, power and the techniques of power and acquisition of more wealth. That was always based in the City of London going way, way, way back to do with commerce and merchant bankers, mercantile bankers. They owned the merchandise, the trading routes and so on, and they were also bankers to the Crown, and then eventually to the public. That's how it operated. Very old technique. Way before even Britain was Britain. So it was no surprise to me that they can build up empires when it suits them, using a base when it suits them, and jumping off to another base when it suits them too, and using another country or even a group of countries like the European Union. This is how systems really work in this day and age.

They always like to say that, oh, so-and-so did this, and so-and-so did that to this country or that country. No, no. They might use those countries to force things upon other countries, like they can get the troops in. You can always get troops from the working class, folks. In any country. I don't care who they are. And they always give the same technique, you'll have respect if you put on that uniform, you'll be somebody. And that's what happens. In EVERY nation across the planet. And across Africa too by the way. India was the same thing. You'll be somebody, somebody. And it actually helps when it's a really heavy class system because those at the bottom, like the untouchables in India, suddenly have got some kind of respect, you know. That's how it's done. And you go off and you're cannon fodder for an enterprise which you'll never figure out, it's not meant that you figure it out. Because for the troops themselves you're always given the most basic propaganda as to why you're doing whatever you're doing.

What I'm getting at here is how the real big system works. I've mentioned it before that the fastest way to unify a country is to introduce a foreign enemy into it. That's what happened with Vietnam. They had all these tribes fighting each other traditionally for centuries. And how do you unify them? Oh, you bring in America [Alan chuckles.] and to subdue it, supposedly, or to protect the South. Before you know it, you've united, that's united all the different groups that used to be fighting each other, and now they're going to unite to fight the US. So you get centralization of authority very quickly. That's what happened there.

The same thing happened in the Soviet Union of course. You had, oh, you've got to get all the people on your side, all the peasants and the serfs, you see. And you'll stand in your spokes, and you'll be a spokesman for them. But of course the group that were advising them and training them and managing them had different plans for themselves. You know, only about 200 families took over running the Soviet system, and their descendants continued in it for a whole generation. They lived awfully, awfully well, at least as high in the lifestyle as the Czars did. It's quite something else. But facts don't matter, does it, when it gets down to brass tacks.

So yeah, you literally are living in a system where there's lots of these Colonels. Behind the machinations of the top intelligence agencies – and they really are layered and compartmentalized, a need-to-know basis, and you don't ask questions depending on your rank – it's quite easy for them to run this massive chess board to get to an agenda that most folk will never figure out. Really, never figure out. Because as I say, we've been trained to see things in one direction, in tunnel vision. That makes it much more easier for them to run rings around us without us either knowing, or noticing, or understanding why things are actually happening. That's what happens on a daily basis basically nowadays. It's so precise.

And long-term planning works awfully well when you've already worked out every, and incrementally, every possible stage of the implementation of parts of agendas. It's just astonishing the meticulous work that goes into it all. Including how the public will react, and different segments will react in different ways. They've got it all worked out before they make a move on any particular part of an agenda. It's pretty well perfect.

I always think of David Rockefeller when it comes to revolutions. His agenda was part of an ongoing revolution that had gone on long before he was born. He talked about it, David Rockefeller talked about the omelette. He says, it's like an omelette, the agenda itself that he was involved in. Steeped in, in fact, his family too were completely steeped in. He said, it's like an omelette and the fallout, meaning people who would die and so on, like revolutions and all that, not just inside the US but elsewhere across the world. Because he was involved in the CIA as well. You have no idea, the CIA is also meant to really bring America into the system that you, that the Americans all paid for, they don't know they all paid for the present situation of the world, and once they've paid for it all and implemented it all and supplied the cannon fodder for it all and the funding for it all, then they must be taken down as well. I gave that talk back in the late 90s, that very talk. And here we are.

The last people to really figure it out are the ones who are [Alan chuckles.] stuffed at the end, the victims themselves that paid for it all, supplied the military, etc. They are the last to see it. Because they were, you don't, when you're using someone, you praise them to the eyeballs. You give them lots of good publicity for their own troops, for their own system and how good we are, etc. Even though the general public never really understand what's really going on or the reasons behind it all. Of course you don't. What did America have to gain, for instance, by going after Iraq. Never mind the fact that they funded a lot of the modern system of Saddam Hussein, they funded it into existence, and then they take it down once it's used, served its purpose basically.

But the average American couldn't figure out, and why should they, or Britain either for that matter, why Britain and America should be involved in taking down Iraq? ...that had nothing to do with 9/11. Because that was always the big agenda the PNAC group talked about in the 90s, before 9/11 happened. Here's a list, and Iraq was on it so, it's as good a time as any to take it down under the cover of 9/11 and oh, Saddam was involved. Which of course he was not involved with it at all. Facts don't matter as I say.

We're living through an amazing agenda and the fallout from it too, of displacing, once you bomb countries into the Stone Age, they knew darn well that under the UN policies, which they also own and run by the way [Alan chuckles.], would then export the fallout, the refugees into Europe and so on. All worked out way ahead. They called it blowback, before they started the blow. And there you go, we're living through it. So the fallout, the fallout, the fallout. This will do this, this will do that, and this will hit this and make this happen. That's how it is, you see.

Right down to what's happening today. Look throughout Europe and Britain even, lots of those people who came in at the time after 9/11, the refugees and so on since then. Even though they had nothing to do with the war a lot of them too, they weren't even in countries involved in wars, it didn't matter. They’re now the young guys that are protesting and even tearing down statues. Being led again with, with a, very European looking, um, activists. And there's no mystery to that too, the different intelligence agencies that they work for.

They're multilayered as well, you have to get to this and to that and to that one to get to the boss of them all. But you always find the CIA at the very, very top, and the same foundations that Rockefeller worked for. Or definitely worked for, he was the head of some of them, at least the chairman sometimes of these organizations. But as he said, yeah, you can't make an omelette without breaking eggs. Breaking eggs is destroying societies. Breaking eggs is destroying lives and collateral damage abroad and at home. I hope you're getting the picture.

It was such a cozy relationship with David Rockefeller with the intelligence agencies. Because the intelligence agencies came out from World War II from the OSS that was run by the same group in Britain, the Royal Institute of International Affairs. In fact, the headquarters of it was based in their building, you know, and it never changed for a long, long time in fact, that was their main headquarters. In the US, their department for the OSS worked there as well during World War II.

Even afterwards the US side of it when it became the Council on Foreign Relations, it's head was David Rockefeller, you know. Often a lot of the different operations they had on the go had to go through some kind of bookwork and requisitions for money to get things on the go and working and to speed things up. They said some of them, I've read their memoirs and so on, they used to go straight to David Rockefeller. He would come in and out of their headquarters quite frequently and they would ask him for money for this project. He was completely and intricately involved in them all, this great philanthropist, you see, with the big foundations that he owned.

The Rockefeller foundation that's still on go today, still running the show basically for the US. It's already got the, naturally, got all the completely drafted agenda for coming out of Covid, which will take, literally you'll have no rights at all. You'll be a pincushion for vaccine companies, and you've got to be registered with it all before you'll be allowed into the... This is where it's all supposed to go.

CIA, CIA, CIA, color revolutions, CIA. There ya go. I might touch on some of that tonight. And you have to get into it. It's not a conspiracy theory. It's only a conspiracy theory to those who will refuse to crack a book, and they don't crack the books from the memoirs. A lot of these guys who worked as agents, you know, put so much in their memoirs, and they would be classed as declassified stuff. Very few folk read that. Because it's kind of boring too, naturally. Folk aren't really involved in what happened in even the recent past, in that era. It still seems old to them, even though it's maybe the 1960s, 1970s, 1980s, it seems old to them. But really, that's nothing in history. And it's important to know that kind of stuff to get, find out where you got from there to the present day. It's all important.

But most folk, as I say, can't and don't want to. They want to be told in a few sentences what to think, like Brzezinski said. Unfortunately it's here. And you do, you do it, like Quigley said, you know, five years of war versus 50 years of peace and indoctrination. So here we are in our umpteen years of war, and then they've brought in Covid with it, complete lockdown, along with what's meant to appear as a revolution inside the nation. And it has all the appearances of that too. It's an organized, it's not just accepted revolution, it's been devised by the powers that really rule the US and the world. Not from the grassroots but from the top. Absolutely. No doubt about it. Meant to be.

And it won't have the effect of what those at the bottom think and are running it all, want. They'll get a little show of that for a little while. But believe you me, what's to come into this system is going to have no favoritism eventually at all. We're all going to suffer massively because of it. They know that. That's how things really work.

When you have the ones at the top who are eugenicists, who own the world's wealth, who command nations to rise and fall according to the investments they can either pullout or even bail out countries when it comes to that, but it comes with a tremendous cost, these are the characters who run everything, who are all on board with this supposed revolution. Can't you figure this one out here, ‘eh?

And there's nothing TO figure out. When the WEF, the World Economic Forum said that they'd have to start bypassing the usual democratic processes to get the job done for sustainability, because the public were ignoring them. Well, here you go, bingo! How do you think they're doing it?

And isn't it strange that what appears to be this anti-fascists Black Lives Matter movement, etc., all well-funded, and well organized, and you can trace the funders, you can trace the organizers too, and intelligence agencies involved with them… But here they are pushing all the, and they're all involved with the same thing, population reduction, that's pretty well in their plans actually because you see everyone's an enemy of nature, which is destroying the planet, and it's not good for sustainability… They're parroting the same stuff the ultra, ultra elitists have been saying for years, and businesses should not open up unless they're sustainable and they're proven sustainable and they won't pollute, hm? Etc. etc. Here you go. The whole agenda is here. And folks think it's all to do with a spontaneous rebellion beginning in the States. There's nothing further from the truth.

The WEF are happy about what's happening. So too the multibillionaires are happy about it. And the Club of Rome, the big think tank that works for, who came up with the idea of blaming humanity for climate change, it's all your fault, therefore let's implement sustainability, because sustainability was the goal in the first place. How do you get the folk to give up all their rights? Well, you're killing the planet and all that, yep. Here we are. It's quite an agenda really.

Most folk can't figure it out because they're kept in the dark. If you keep tuning into television every day, I'm sorry to say, you won't have a chance in hell. TV is not spontaneous. Anything you see on TV, even your newscast is worked out by experts in advance, you know, for each day, how to put something across. Psychologists can get brought in, and neuroscientists, and behaviorists, on how to advise them, how to write a particular part of a script for the newscast and so on. That's how it's done. What to tell the public, what not to tell the public. There's more not to tell the public than tell them these days. Absolutely. Absolutely.

You're seeing the fallout, as they say, the broken shells of the omelette everywhere now. And a lot more to come. As you go into it, I'm telling you, and this is not to cause fear mongering, but they're definitely going to manage us, and the managing, when it gets bad, and even worse, if you listen to the media, they’re going to, they’re there to tell you to deny your own sensibilities and your own observations. That's their job, to manage the chaos as we go through it. Regardless of the fallout. They'll tell you that things are still just, you know, just going along and there's still folk protesting, and still this and still that, and the Covid is bad, blah blah blah. But they're not going to tell you any truth on anything.

They have formats for every particular instance that can happen of terrorism even. You don't get terrorists now internally; you get folk who are mentally ill. That is the standard agenda, that's what you will always be told, you see. And you're supposed to accept it. Oh well, what could you do, some people just go crazy all the time and that's it. As they have a semi-plausibility for the public to swallow. That's where we are today. But things are going to get worse in a lot of directions.

Before I get into the subjects in any deeper way at all, I'd like to just mention that I really go through the emails that I get sent from all over the world from people who give me their opinions and what they see personally. You see, that's real history in the making as it happens. That's the only way, can be real history, is what you see and experience yourself. Not what you'll read in 10-20 years time when it's all been cleansed and filtered and authorized and so on. That's always how it really is in the Western societies. So you have to keep note of things.

But it's good to share it, of your own personal experiences. No one is little, there's no such thing as a little person in this world. We're all just as equally important, believe you me, when it comes to getting through this system that's insane at times, and sharing what you're noticing and experiencing as we go through chaos, planned chaos and putting your own thoughts to it. Because that's, as I say, is what matters, your own interpretation of your experiences and what you see. So keep sending the information to me. Because it truly does, it opens up a world and that's how you can connect things. When you see the same things happening across the planet about the same time, in sequence too, different kind of incidents that will happen across the world at the same time, that doesn't happen accidentally. Of course it doesn't. That's organization.

I think it's important too for folks' own mental health to share what they know. Because I said before, the hardest thing in this world, the hardest thing, if you understand, you don't have to know everything or understand everything, but understand enough of how the world is working, in a world where you're not meant to be able to think outside the box, you've been kept in the dark so to speak, you've been trained to stay in the dark so to speak. You know, that's what Bertrand Russell said too, he said education, according to Fichte, was meant to keep people dumb actually and make them dumber. That was the intention of it. He was all for that of course. Except for the elite class, he said that himself. Two kinds of people eventually, the elite class and the rest of the public. They said the differences would be like two different species of mammals basically. That's what he said in his own books. Lord Bertrand Russell. Again, another Lord that played this strange left-wing agenda. Because left wing is the agenda, it's much more efficient, because folk can't argue with you under a democratic rights, you just tell them what they're going to do, or else, and that's it.

So anyway, that's what we're living through today is a system, an amazing system, very long term. And much of it was planned before you were born. Definitely the conclusions were all mapped out as to where they wanted to take the world. And we're rushing through it right now.

But yeah, keep sending me your emails and let me know how things are happening. I'll tell you something that's comical too. I've noticed this for years. I would do talks and within about three days I'd start to get emails coming back to me with links to stories I should look up and look into. And these are the ones that I put out in the first place. [Alan chuckles.] It happens, it still happens yet. Folk, they will hear other folk grabbing this stuff and repeating it, you see them putting it out. Then they send it back to me in this circular... [Alan chuckles.] They don't realize that I put out before the rest of them, it's where they came from. I don't mind that at all. At least it shows you the speed that things can get around and information can get around.

Occasionally you get a chuckle too because recently someone in the States had told me that there was a guy, there are ways that you can actually get shows, radio shows on your phone apparently, you know, you can, as long as you've got the phone you can listen in through your phone. Even land lines, if you can dial them up, some of them, and you can hear shows. A guy had been listening to shows, and he thought this guy was pretty good, you know. Eventually, he kept forgetting the name of the fella, eventually he got in touch with me and he said, this is his name. So I looked the guy up. And this fella in the States had listened on the phone, you see. The reason it's on the phone is because he's Mennonite and they're not supposed to go any higher than a phone line basically for technology in the particular group that he's in.

Anyway I looked into it eventually and got the guy and his website and all the rest of it. And hhhch, he was doing my shows verbatim, every week, this fella. And without ever mentioning where he got all the information from. I guess what he was using, is now they're using programs that can literally take your talk and it will put it instantly into the printed word, and he would read it off his computer. But it was verbatim of my shows. Right down to what he said, I think last week or the week before, oh, it was going to take longer this week, probably four hours. I swear he would do four hours with each talk I did, VERBATIM, without ever mentioning where he got the stuff from. So I was getting this circular stuff of my own links coming back by his stuff, by people who listen to it and sending it back to me. Quite amazing, isn't it, ‘eh? [Alan chuckles.]

So that's how things work. I'll wait and see if the guy gets the word to perhaps either be a bit more decent to send a few bucks my way. Because I'm doing all the work for him, you see. And others as well. But I'll probably never get a penny from him anyway. But at least he should have the decency to say where he got it from. That's a rather low handed… That's the kind of society we're in, you see, where everything is so corrupt and there's no decency left in people. It's true, isn't it?

We're at the end of an era. There's no doubt about it. It's everywhere you look. Where governments are totally corrupt, and they have been forever. And it doesn't matter too, it doesn't matter how you remake government, corruption is in society. Especially in an atheistic society. I'll get hammered for saying it but it's the truth. Because in atheism, you aren't even taught as a child moral rights and wrongs, it's just not there. In fact, in modern society and pure materialism, it's getting to the top that's worshiped.

You understand, the so-called celebrities you're taught to worship, would you actually follow them if they were on 15 bucks an hour? Would you? Of course you wouldn't. But you worship them, oh, because look at the fame and the money they've got and yada yada yada yada. That's why you do it. Well, with that attitude how can you have rights and wrongs and fairness in society? You can't. Of course you can't.

But it's right down to the bottom level, like I said, folk will just use your stuff. Right down to verbatim. You know, right down to the four hours that I put out and copy it and then regurgitated, verbatim, word for word, line by line, without changing it [Alan chuckles.] and never say where it really came from. But that's what we're living through today. It's quite a society indeed.

And it wouldn't matter if you had 10 revolutions, because folk have that built into them now, without any restrictions that you GET to the top your career, of whatever it happens to be, just GET to the top. There's no rights and wrongs, there's no moral codes, as I say, that's how it is. So it will always be corrupt. Unfortunately. It really will.

And you know, hhhch, [Alan chuckles.] the truth of this world with its intelligence agencies running the show, is that everything that's happened today was planned before you had the intelligence agencies to implement it all covertly. It's an old agenda. And it is willing fools. It knows exactly what to use in the fringe element. The fringe element are the ones who are really radicalized, a lot of them are very disturbed, you know. They said that we shall release the nihilists and the atheists, and Mazzini talked about it. Mazzini of course is the protégé of Albert Pike for world revolution. He was the head of the World Revolution Society which became the Communist Party under Lenin eventually.

And folks think that masonry is just a, you know, just a philosophical thing that helps men, like a self-help program, you know, where they can share their problems and help each other out. They can certainly share their problems and help each other out to an extent. But in the process, they forget the history of Freemasonry, which was always revolutionary. Of course it was. When the main enemy was, say, Christian church, at least in the West it was Christian church.

They had no problem really in England because early on England had been taken over from its original Catholicism to the Church of England through Henry VIII. So it was much easier with the crown or the monarch being the head of the Church of England to govern, especially since the monarchs eventually all became Masons themselves. But then they use Freemasonry to go across the rest of Europe to eliminate the Catholic influence elsewhere. It's well documented in certain history books. It's not speculation at all, of course it was done.

Again, Trotsky himself, if you read his own books like My Life, he tells you that he really fell into masonry big time when he had done his mandatory, you know part of your initiation into true communism was to foment revolution and get put in prison for a little while, where you met other revolutionaries, that was like a badge of honor. Interestingly, they reasserted this, or reintroduced the same kind of idea by giving folk who got put in, from the protests, even some of the rioters too, in prison, or in jail from it overnight, they're giving them awards they can wear actually like little metals, etc. Very similar. There's nothing that happens that's brand-new at all, is it.

Anyway, Trotsky mentioned that he became a Freemason while in prison and that eventually he started to write books, you know, copious tomes really on the wonders of Freemasonry, which is so essential for bringing in the world socialistic system. If you look at the banners that were carried by unions for instance, in Britain and across Europe and elsewhere, you'll see the Masonic symbols everywhere you look. Antifa itself, it's part of the doctrine by the founders was to communicate with symbols, if you understand that. You know, starting with the fist, which of course was a communist one. But starting with the fist and then a whole bunch of other symbols too as a form of communication that would go over the heads of people who were just studying them.

So before I, as I say, go into this again, remember you can go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com website and help yourself to the shows that I put up there. I hate calling them shows, they're not really shows. They're talks. Because a show is, smacks of entertainment, doesn't it? And I don't do entertainment these days. So help yourself to that, you'll learn an awful lot. Most folk do. You'd be surprised how many folk are using that. There's even some folk making their livings off it. You can help me out by buying the books and discs @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. I've got stacks of them printed recently, as I say, the stuff's going out. It will take a while to catch up. Not too long hopefully, so be patient. As we are all being taught to be patient, we can't get what we want immediately anymore.

Up here in Canada by the way where I am, you can't even get yeast in the stores for bread. Well, the bakeries are still getting it because they churn out their loaves and so on, there's no shortage. But I don't live in the city, I'm outside and there are no stores around me to buy bread, so I make my own bread. But you can't get yeast now up here. Quite something.

So as I say, go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com website. Buy the books and discs and help me tick along. You can donate to me too; you'll find out how to do it. Cash is fine even, and checks are fine, and PayPal, etc. You can send, you can get the cash to me somehow so I can tick along with all the sites that I have. Believe you me, this is not something, I said this before, why I came out in the first place back in the 90s to talk about this stuff, it wasn't because I really wanted to. It's because I had to.

I saw what was going to happen, I could smell it, I knew it. I listened to what was called the alternative media at the time on the radio back then and I realized that they were right on some of the things, but the so-called patriot radio had no idea of the big world agenda. So I came out to explain to them what was really happening. I kind of rocked the boat a bit because, again, intelligence agencies tend to run all sides of everything. They really do. This is no, this is not speculation. I went into the history of even radio, shortwave too, where the CIA had funded up some Christian organizations back in the 60s to combat the influence of communist broadcasting, so it made sense at the time. But they never let go of a lot of this stuff. You've got to remember that too. It's still the same today.

I came along and kind of rocked the boat by eventually showing what was really happening. I came out with the CFR's agendas, the world agendas and so on, and much, much more. The other ones that existed were kind of authorized, had to start following me for a while. I did rock the boat, there's no doubt about it. I had the usual offers to get on board, etc. but I didn't do it. So yeah, you'll suffer for sure. But you have to do the right thing in life, even if it's only for yourself. You really do. If you lose yourself, what's left? Come on, what's left?

So you've got to do it for yourself, and by doing it for yourself hopefully you do it for enough people that are decent out there, decent good people. And there are decent good people out there, lots of them. They are generally isolated. And just like I say, you live inside your head because it can be unsafe at times to talk to people around about you who are perfectly well indoctrinated, and their indoctrination has taken, it's worked on them, you see. It can be unsafe at times to voice your thoughts. Now of course you're getting to the stage where it will be imperative that you live inside your head.

Because when you go through revolutions that are authorized from the very top too, especially, most of them are actually, have always been that way really. The old Bolshevik one was too, I'm pretty certain of it. Especially when they had the funding coming from the US and Britain, and London and so on. But it eventually becomes rather ruthless, and the new dogma is a religion, it's always a religion basically. You have to recite all the different communist, or Karl Marx tenants, etc., children have to prattle off at school, Mao Tse Tung in China had the same thing, The Little Red Book for the Chinese children. You might see some clips today if they're still up there, where you see the school children waving their little red books and all chanting in unison, by verse, just like the Bible, you see.

That's what you get, you have to prove your loyalty to this new system. And socialism demands complete loyalty. You're given no choice in that at all. You have to be one of them or not at all. And if you're not one of them, you're dangerous. And even if you are one of them, you often can't prove it enough for them, you have to keep being so politically correct. And virtue signal, I call it preening, because you got to preen just like a big bird, you know, in front of the other birds and they preen themselves, they stick out their chest to show how beautiful they are. That's what you see today.

That's what you see with all revolutions. The ones at the top want the attention. They eventually fight each other for attention. But as people pull out of it too, sometimes you find that, if they slaughter, if it gets into the slaughter stage which revolutions unfortunately often go into, especially when the governments are allowing it to happen, you know, some of the people start to get really cocksure themselves, they really think they're the bosses. They really do, and they can go rather nasty and berserk.

You'll find too that people get fed up with it too, say, their own kind of lockdowns as an example, either in barricades, barricaded areas like they had in France, in the past, you know, in their revolutions, and they had a few. Or in the States at the moment, their autonomous areas as folk get fed up with it and try to pull out, or the shootings inside get worse, or whatever it happens to be, they can turn on them. The ones who are more adamant in the leaders can turn on them viciously as traitors, you see, for not going the whole way and suffering with the rest, etc. You've got to suffer in these religions, that's part of it. But you always suffer for the good of all, the greater good of what's to come, you see.

If old David Rockefeller was alive today, he'd be glorying in it, he be absolutely bathing in what's happening today. Because he and the CIA and the organization the CFR that he belonged to, and don't forget the CFR is also just like any other intelligence agency, it’s literally, as I've said already, it's compartmentalized. But the ones at the top have a better understanding of where the world is supposed to go, and they always get their own cash out way, way before any financial crashes or changes in regimes, and they’re told where to put it which is guaranteed to be okay. Because the ones at the top are the ones who are financing all the revolutions, etc. It always works out that way.

Nothing is ever as it really seems. It really isn't as it seems. We live through years of them going through ideas of getting us to stop having children. They're quite open about it now in fact. I've done lots of talks on it too. It's not speculation. It's not paranoia. It's not a conspiracy theory. It's fact. Bill Gates himself is one of the eugenicists, and from a lineage of eugenicists, like many of them actually are, whose parents and grandparents all knew each other too because they all worked in the same organizations. But it's quite amazing to see it continue and continue, and still with the intention of bringing down populations.

Folk always think, oh, we're not breeding much, so they don't mean us. No, the West was the first ones that they tried all this stuff on. Bertrand Russell talked about that years ago. But we do live in an amazing system. It's like it’s a maze, that's why it's amazing. There's many different directions, it goes off in dead ends, etc. Very well-designed of course. But if you designed it from the top, from above, you can see it, it's easy to find out what it's all about. The general public are not supposed to think their way through certain things. Even what they want you to think through is, they've got all kinds of diversions along the way to drag you here, there and everywhere, and then all kinds of directions that are dead ends. Until you give up. Or else you sound crazy.

Counterintelligence is many things, it's very effective. What they've done for years is put out people with incredible stories that would take you off into the bizarro. Although the world is bizarre enough mind you, all of this is bizarre, what we're talking about is bizarre, what intelligence agencies get up to. Of course they've also used people to come in and make stars of them that will drag you often to Lala land. Then of course if you stick to the basic facts, they'll compare you to the ones in Lala land and actually say, oh, you're one of them that believe in blah, blah, blah. Part of counterintelligence. Very effective.

Even if you expose some of the characters they'll say, well, they put out some good stuff too, you know. Folk like them, they like them. They put up good stuff as well though, it's not all, you know. You say, yeah, but that's the poison, you know, take 95% or 98% of the facts that are churned out, they grab that stuff, then the add the 2% poison until it ridicules all the rest of the true information. That’s how it works. Very, very…

Do you really expect of such a powerful organization that most, like the CFR is one example, don't forget too the same organization that created them created the Trilateral Commission, it's all one big club, you see, and many other specialized branches as well. Including the think tanks that then supposedly advise governments what to do in different kinds of policies, all kinds of policies and social policies and military policies and so on. It's all one big club. They're all related, all these characters, to the same clubs. That's how you run the world. You don't let things happen that's outside your control. That's the beauty of them really in a sense. It's macabre and it's sardonic as well and rather evil you might say.

But when they, it's an old technique too, why let things happen by itself? Why would you let revolution happen by itself by just ignoring it and ignoring it until it bursts out? Well, what you do is you give, for instance you give the working-class their leaders, as an example. Then you guide them. The leader will apparently be very successful at times too in getting demands for some workers and this. But that's the trick that they use. They always will eventually, because after a while they literally have, completely 100% own these negotiators that talk on behalf of the workers. Then you have the negotiations, right, and they have the dialogue of arguments of how much you're going to give the workers, etc. Then of course you bring in Marxist policy into the unions, and it's taught openly, that this strange policy of, okay, we're going to have a completely different system....

I'm chasing mosquitoes in my house here. [Alan chuckles.] Hold on.

Now, the whole idea of this revolution, with its religion, will have a few basic tenants. We are all equal, except some are more equal than others. That's the Orwellian policy too. That's what you find right off the bat, some of them are more equal than others. That's what you're being told now. And those who claim to have been persecuted in the past so much should be ruling over the rest now, as a form of punishment. That was also promoted through the United Nations and the so-called healing, um, hhhch, circles that they had in South Africa. I used to watch that. You'd see people who, and different tribes as well and different factions within different segments. Very tribal in Africa. And very ancient anger, hatreds for different things that happen in the past between the different groups, etc. Even families that were really big families, were really in a sense tribes.

But they have these talks, these circles and they'd argue out who had done injustices to whom, and what they would do about it and so on. It never worked out very well at all. They really didn't. Because they tend to bring out the hurts of the past even more so by airing them again and never coming to any agreement really. But they never stop trying it. So, you’re seeing the same thing happening in the West as well. Because it's the same CIA type organization with the color revolution that's managing this one inside the States. It's rather evident.

America’s Own Color Revolution - globalresearch.ca / 17 June 2020

Again, we float through society. We float through time, our own time in our little bubble in our existence for so many years on this planet. We float through it. Most folk again are so concerned about just surviving in their little bubble with however much they can get. If they're ambitious they tried to get a big bubble and be above all the rest of the little bubbles. But a lot of folk just get by with maybe a family, or maybe themselves even and try to have a little bit of security. They're not too ambitious. They're often very nice people, [Alan chuckles.] because they're not ambitious, so ambitious, they don't want to dominate anything. But they have a hard time existing as well.

Because everything that matters in life is outside your control. Invisible people who you don't even know, you don't even know if they exist actually, but you never meet them for sure. They run economies. They run what the value of your currency is day to day and how much your currency is going to buy, how many tins of beans it will buy this week compared to last week, because it goes up and down. And you have no say in the matter at all. It's like magic. Because it is magic, it's not based on any reality anymore. It's been completely commandeered by those at the top.

But they go through their lives hearing little blitz and bits and pieces about color revolution. It is really doesn't make much of an imprint on them. Because if the media doesn't tell you to really, now, stop now and think about this, and make a big deal, then they won't. Because they do expect, like Brzezinski said, the media to do their reasoning for them. That's how it is now. They came to expect it and it has happened. If the media doesn't tell them to be...

I can remember when they made a big deal with a prostitution ring in Africa. I can't remember if it was Nigeria or wherever it was. But it was young girls that were getting really grabbed and put off as slaves somewhere else and sold off. We were all told to be soo concerned about it, soo concerned and soo concerned about it. It was a mantra in the papers for a few weeks, maybe even months.

But meanwhile, as other groups are coming into Britain and setting up prostitution rackets there with young 12-year-old girls, ‘eh, getting them hooked on drugs. Very organized. Hooked on drugs and then pimped out as young addicts and so on. Thousands of them actually involved in this. The media and the governments were turning a blind eye, completely a blind eye to it all and pretending it didn't exist. In fact, everybody was so terrified of losing their jobs if they mentioned it. They'd fire folk that would bring up the subject, isn't that amazing, rather than do anything about it. But you're supposed be worried what happened in...?

Understand, media is not there to help you. It never has been. It's intentions, you'll never figure out what its real intent happens to be. It's rather astonishing what's been happening here.

Now, hold on a second while I find this article I'm talking about.

Now, getting back to, like I said before, the test for sterility, or, sterilizing the West was already done. It was already done in Britain before it was done anywhere else. Now, here's a few things that Bertrand Russell said. I used to read from his books on the air at times. Someone sent some of the stuff back to me that I had done years and years ago, I guess. It's worthwhile going over because when you, you have to go into the history of Bertrand Russell and who his father was, and grandfather was. Way up there of course.

One of them in fact was brought in to be in charge of the relief corn and food from America and other places, but mainly America to Ireland during the famine. Of course we know what happened there. A lot of it was just stopped or refused or diverted to other places. You wouldn't believe the things that went on in the past with the great authorities that looked after you. Looked after you, right? Looked after you? [Alan chuckles.]

But yeah, Lord Amberley was a title that his father got, Bertrand Russell's father. His mother was Katherine Luisa Stanley, and she was a suffragette of course and friends with world revolutionaries such as Mazzini. I think Mazzini and a couple of other ones were the godfathers of Bertrand himself. It's just astonishing how, why would the British Lords, right, who got their start a lot of them, especially the Russell’s, by confiscating Catholic property at one point and church property and the land, etc., and who even went into moneylending, once they had done that and broken ties with the Catholic Church, they said, well we can also do moneylending, etc., and they did that too. They became very rich and staunch supporters, naturally, of the crown and they were involved in it, they were notability. So there you go. I mean, yeah and here they are with an open house basically for world revolutionaries. You can't, can't you see there's something that just doesn't jive there? Why would the top Lords, [Alan chuckles.] who were helping run a British, ah, or, I would call it the London Empire of the world at the time, be involved with revolutionaries? There is, there's a much, much bigger agenda, you see, behind it.

Anyway, he was a British mathematician, philosopher and adamant internationalist. Again, internationalist you see. He wrote some books and I used to read them on the air, as I say. But again he was also a member of the Fabian Society and the Royal Institute of International Affairs. Naturally. Which is a private club. That's the granddaddy for the CFR and the European branch of the foreign affairs that runs the parliamentarians in the EU parliament, then the Far Eastern Pacific rim group as well. I've been through the history before. But anyway, here they are involved in ALL these things, that you would think that is the opposites of what they're actually up to. But no, they run it all, all sides of everything, you see. What he said, Russell, was...

Scientific societies are as yet in their infancy.

It may be worthwhile to spend a few moments in speculating as to possible future developments of those that are oligarchies. It is to be expected that advances in physiology and psychology will give governments much more control over individual mentality (Alan: D'you understand, individual mentality…) than they now have even in totalitarian countries. Fichte laid it down that education should aim at destroying free will, so that, after pupils have left school, they shall be incapable, throughout the rest of their lives, of thinking or acting otherwise than as their schoolmasters would have wished.

(A: Now, I'll say that again. I know some folk can catch it right off the bat. But most folk are not, they're not used to having to think about things, especially a paragraph like that. They get little bits and bytes in statements from newscasters and that's all they're supposed to ever dwell on, as long as the newscaster is talking, don't even remember his last sentence, it's done in such a way. So here you are…)

Scientific societies are as yet in their infancy.

It may be worthwhile to spend a few moments in speculating as to possible future developments of those that are oligarchies. It is to be expected that advances in physiology (A: …physiology, eh…) and psychology (A: He’s talking about your physical system too and your mind, two things here.) will give governments much more control (A: …control, right, advances that have to do with control…) over individual mentality than they now have even in totalitarian countries. Fichte laid it down that education should aim at destroying free will (A: That’s the philosopher.), so that, after pupils have left school, they shall be incapable, throughout the rest of their lives, of thinking or acting otherwise than as their schoolmasters would have wished.

(A: Okay? Now, just take a breath there and think now. Look at everything that's happening now and has been happening for a long time. I said, they've been raising a generation for revolution here. Where do they get started? Starting off at school, right off the bat and right through their school, from junior to high school into college. You've got completely educated revolutionaries who literally think that what they're promoting is their own ideas. Hm. Think about it. But advances, he's talking about scientific advances, and their physique as well, physiology, right. Look at the shape of... WE're changing, folks! [Alan chuckles.] And psychology, right, much more control over individual mentality. I've said this so many times, that eventually it's like a mantra out there and lots of folk use it...)

Diet, injections, and injunctions will combine, from a very early age, to produce the sort of character and the sort of beliefs that the authorities consider desirable, and any serious criticism of the powers that be will become psychologically impossible.

(A: Hm? Think about it. Think about that. Psychologically impossible. Then he says…)

Gradually, by selective breeding, the congenital differences between rulers and ruled will increase until they become almost different species. A revolt of the plebs (A: …the plebians…) would become as unthinkable as an organized insurrection of sheep against the practice of eating mutton.

(A: That's his sarcasm kicking in.)

In like manner, the scientific rulers will provide one kind of education for ordinary men and women and another for those who are to become holders of scientific power.

(A: …scientific power, you see.)

Ordinary men and women will be expected to be docile, industrious, punctual, thoughtless, (A: ...that's your entertainment and so on.) and contented. Of these qualities probably contentment will be considered the most important. In order to produce it all the researchers of psychoanalysis behaviorism and biochemistry (A: …OKAY...) will be brought into play.

(A: There ya go.)

All the boys and girls will learn from an early age to be what is called cooperative.

(A: This is the new normal, you see, cooperative. That means no bullying, right. I mean, don't stand up, if someone punches you in school don't fight back, rut-dut-dut and dut. Right. So you'd all be cooperative, that is, to do exactly what everybody is doing, meaning what everybody else is doing.)

Initiative will be discouraged in these children.

(A: That's true, it's all groupthink now. Don't think for yourself. What do you mean, John, you won't go along with this particular conclusion on this topic? No, I don't, I don't really believe. Well, you're shunned, you see and the whole class is meant to shun you, etc. So…)

Initiative will be discouraged in these children. And insubordination without being punished will be scientifically trained out of them.

Okay? Scientifically trained out of them. There you go. That's what they've got now. There certainly is, when especially the young boys for, whoa, many years now, 20, 30 years, 20 odd years, 25 years, maybe 30, have been given, really, amphetamines. Amphetamines! Speed! Which makes you hyper. They've been given that and other drugs too if they show that they're really leaders, have any leadership qualities at all and they're intelligent enough to vocalize their own opinions about certain topics that they're getting taught, etc. They're a problem. Or maybe even restless in school.

Boys are not girls, at least they didn't used to be, in school. That's why they had to take regular breaks. [Recess.] As soon as you got out when you were young, between five and 12, as soon as you go out on these breaks you'd run like the wind. You would, you'd run all over the place and chase each other and get rid of that energy. That gave you the ability to sit for another one and half, two hours in school until the next break. That's how it worked, folks, and that's why it was there.

Hhhch, but now you're supposed to be quiet and docile, and they drug you if you fidget or whatever. That was all intentional. It had nothing to do, and all these fake and new diagnosis that came in, were all literally that, fake. They were run by the Psychiatric Association and drug industry with a much bigger agenda in mind, folks. Of course it was.

All the boys and girls will learn from an early age to be what is called ‘co-operative,’ i.e., to do exactly what everybody is doing. Initiative will be discouraged in these children, and insubordination, without being punished, will be scientifically trained out of them.’

Second, as regards population. If there is not to be a permanent and increasing shortage of food, (A: He's Malthusian, you see.) agriculture must be conducted by methods which are not wasteful of soil and increase of population must not outrun the increase in food production rendered possible by technical improvements.

To deal with this problem (A: …too many folk, right.) it will be necessary to find ways of preventing an increase in world population. If this is to be done otherwise than by wars, pestilences and famines, it will demand a powerful international authority.

(A: Hm? Powerful international authority? And what's the WEF prattling on about this too, and the Club of Rome, same thing, ‘eh, we need a powerful international authority. They've already said in the last meeting for the climate change agenda, at the climate conference, they had a Conference Of Parties they like to call it, they said that it's time now to go the next step and start demanding that we reduce the population, like mandatorily. Like, who can breed and who won't be. That was an old agenda. But these are always used, the same agenda hasn't changed, that's why it's old and new always at the same time.)

This authority should deal out the world's food to the various nations in proportion to their population at the time of the establishment of the authority. If any nation subsequently increased its population, it should not on that account receive any more food. The motive for not increasing population would therefore be very compelling. What method of preventing an increase might be preferred should be left to each state to decide.

(A: Now, I'll just say, you are going to see mandatory [Alan chuckles.] and definitely promoted famine of some kind or another. That's part of what we're going through now. This isn't just a Black Lives Matter thing. This is also the Covid idea, the world health authority, the CDC in the States, all these different organizations that really are part of the intelligence agency, and they're going to make it, you're going to see rationing. You will see rationing. So they want a global organization that will be in charge of all the food of the planet. There you go.)

Each state, each country is interested.

(A: So yeah, it's the same agenda written in the 1950s and became a part of Agenda 21 for the 21st century, and 2030, etc, etc. It's the same agenda. It's something, ‘eh. He also said...)

Our members who are so important, that for their sake we should patiently permit this state of affairs to come about, surely not. What then can we do? Apart from certain deep-seated prejudices, the answer would be obvious. The nations, which are presently increasing rapidly should be encouraged to adopt methods by which in the West the increase of population has been checked.

(A: So I'll say that again...)

Apart from certain deep-seated prejudices, the answer would be obvious. The nations, which are presently increasing rapidly should be encouraged to adopt methods by which in the West the increase of population has been checked.

(A: ...HAS BEEN CHECKED... You see? In the West the increase has been checked. Now, what do you think he meant by that? What's the biggest problem in the West? Infertility now. [Alan chuckles.] It's quite something. So there you go.)

Educational propaganda with government help could achieve this result in a generation.

(A: ...with this indoctrination.)

There are however two powerful forces opposed to such a policy. One is religion.

(A: The socialists always have to destroy religion, because it makes you think, I've got rights from God, not from you.)

The other is nationalism. I think it is the duty of all who are capable of facing facts to realize and to proclaim that opposition to the spread of birth control, if successful, must inflict upon mankind the most appalling depth of misery and degradation and that within another 50 years or so.

(A: So degradation within about 50 years or so, he says. So there you go. It says, again…)

I think it is the duty of all who are capable of facing facts to realize and to proclaim that opposition to the spread of birth control,

(A: Now, birth control, they're talking about abortion as well.)

if successful, must inflict upon mankind the most appalling depth of misery

(A: You'll all be taught that the whole world is going to be awful if there's too many of YOU basically.)

and degradation and that within another 50 years or so.

(A: Now, it's all been done about the year 2000. And we're not all crammed together. Most of the European population is only, it's not even quite stable but it's mainly through mass migration. So you're thinking you're doing good by not having children, well, it's not good enough, no, now we've got to bring people in. So you can't win, you understand.)

(A: There's another agenda behind all of this. And it's always been transhumanists of Julian Huxley, their world and how they would bring it into the technological age and how they would run and rule their own world without all of the people being around. It might take them years to reduce and reduce the population, but it's to be the population of the PLANET they want reduced, you see.)

(A: And you won't go along with it if you really didn't bring masses of migrants in, and you're complying with depopulation. You'd say, well why are you forcing this on us, our population is already dropping, we're awfully good, we're doing what you're telling us. Well, that's not good enough, you see. It's for a whole global agenda. Then you seem to be overrun with too many folk in your own countries, only because of mass migration. You must feel that this is the whole world. It's not the world. [Alan chuckles.] It's forced to be upon you as though it is the whole world, and you go along with that, you see. He also said here that...)

I do not pretend that birth control is the only way in which population can be kept from increasing. There are others which one might suppose opponents of birth control would prefer. War, as I remarked a moment ago, has hitherto been disappointing in this respect.

(A: It's got what I said before, here, it’s taken from one of my talks. It says... I'll repeat that for the hard of thinking, that's what I always say...)

And war as I remarked a moment ago has hitherto been disappointing in this respect.

(A: Don't forget too, that at the end of World War II there was, it was really classed as a world meeting for, and it was a royal, it was held by, I think the chair was the king of England before he died. The whole meeting was a mass meeting about depopulation. They said that the war had not killed enough people off. Anyway, he admitted that they use war to kill off people, and of course, grab resources, etc. And that's all you get in Britain was one war after another. That was taken over by the US since at least, well, at least World War II, the US has had nothing but one war after another themselves. They’re still going at it too, even as they go down to an extent. He also said…)

If a black death could be spread throughout the world once in every generation, survivors could procreate freely without making the world too full.

(A: So there you go...)

If a Black Death could be spread throughout the world once in every generation survivors could procreate freely without making the world too full. There would be nothing in this to offend the consciences of the devout or to restrain the ambitions of nationalists. The state of affairs might be somewhat unpleasant, but what of that? Really high-minded people are indifferent to happiness, especially other people’s.

(A: But he also means too, really high-minded people, like themselves, are indifferent to the misery or the slaughter of other people's that they find are useless. Useless eaters, ‘eh? Think about it, folks. So, indifference to other people's happiness.)

However, I'm wondering on the question of stability which I might return, and I must return.

There are three ways of securing a society that shall be stable as regards population. The first is that of birth control, the second that of infanticide or really destructive wars, and the third that of general misery except for a powerful minority.

(A: Well, I think they're using a combination of all these right now, aren't they? It's rather obvious.)

I'm just going through this again because it's time to do so maybe. When you realize that, infanticide too, and they've got forced post birth abortion on the go. Meaning, killing babies as soon as they come out and have gone to full term. It's all here. Everything was planned a long time ago, folks. Bertrand Russell wasn't a solitary character with oddball ideas. He belonged, he was part of the group put in charge of creating a post-World War II culture for Europe and a good part of the world. He worked with the Frankfurt school, he worked with the Macy group, that were given permission by the president at the time to literally create a whole new culture.

It wasn't just creating a culture. It was, they actually worked it out so precisely, the different parts, like from here to here, right up to the miniskirts even, to promoting sex. They got free love which they were trying back in the late 1800s. Then they tried in the 1920s, roaring 20s, and the miniskirt again, and the Charleston dance. Then they brought it back in the 1960s along with drugs and pop music, and then it became rock 'n' roll. The fallout of it too, well, there's too many unwanted children. Well, let's help these poor girls out and you end up getting abortion. And of course you give them the pill too.

There's nothing that's not worked out step-by-step, how do we get from here to there? You have to go from here to there to there to there to there to get to that second place you want to be. You might have 50 different things you have to do, you know, to make it happen. And that's how they plan these things. Then once they get to a certain stage, then they bring back the long dresses or have pants for women. Then they alter even the attraction of sexes into, well what's wrong with this, what's wrong with that, until they change a whole idea of that. And marriage too of course. So it's all planned that way long ago. And never for the reasons that you think.

It's not so... Let me just say, they're completely indifferent to folks happiness, other people's happiness. It's not to make folk happy, who you can marry or whatever. No, no, no. It's different agendas on the go. We're living through a script as I say, literally worked out a long time ago. A long time ago. M-hm. Quite something.

Now, I want to touch on something. There's an article, it's quite good actually, on why facts don't matter. It's kind of important. This article here is, because I said it so many times, it's good to have folk who are using the phrase now, because I said, facts don't matter anymore. I've done poems about it too I think, on facts don't matter. It says…

Why Facts Don’t Matter to People

aier.org / 24 June 2020

Frustrated with COVID-19 restrictions on daily life, a friend said to me, “I just want to know the truth.”

(A: It's like that song, all I want is the truth, all I want… Who was it, Lennon sung that or somebody sung that in Lennon's day, all I want is the truth. Yep. But this article is from, I can see the whole name of it. It says, AIER, financial. It's quite a good, have some good little topics they pick on. So, why facts don't matter to people, right. So yeah…)

Frustrated with COVID-19 restrictions on daily life, a friend said to me, “I just want to know the truth.”

Like many people, my exasperated friend, and others I know, are mesmerized and frightened by daily news reports on the number of COVID-19 cases. You can cite all the data you want, (A: And he gives the links…) such as these from the U.S.:

It’s good news all around. But you turn on the television and get a different message.

(A: And it’s so true, you see the, if you go into facts, you see that the Covid thing was plummeting even in April of course. But the media keep hyping it because they’re told to. It’s a big agenda. Fauci would say one thing off the cuff and then he would say a completely different thing on TV.)

But you turn on the television and get a different message. People worry about sending their children to school this fall.

(A: Because now they're trying to say, oh children might get this too now. I mean, it's amazing how they keep adding to it, ‘eh, [Alan chuckles.] to try to terrify folk to comply. Especially in the mums, you know, because mum's will try to protect the children, and oh yeah, our children might be at risk now, oh my goodness. Even though children are not getting it pretty well at all. Doesn't matter. But again, facts don't matter.)

Some display authoritarian views as they excuse politicians for destructive errors merely because they showed “strong leadership.”

If you’re wondering why so many people don’t see the world the way you do, engage them in conversation. You will find they are as well-intentioned as you are, but they are looking in a different direction. Beneath their opinions and fears, beliefs are shaping how they see the world.

Because of different beliefs, your villains may be their heroes. They may look at the world of effects while you are looking at causes. They’re hoping a better leader comes to power, while you’re considering how the presidency became so powerful and destructive.

Until their beliefs change, they will never consider how politicians and experts with too much power turned a pandemic into a catastrophe. As Einstein put it, “Whether you can observe a thing or not depends on the theory which you use. (A: …to look at it basically.) It is theory which decides what can be observed.”

The “clear guidance” politicians claim to dispense and “the truth” my friend wants to learn are not rooted in the principles of human flourishing. My friend is waiting for a government official to blow the all-clear whistle. My friend doesn’t want to believe experts are as fallible as he is,

(A: And that's true, they want to believe in experts. By the way, that's also what Bertrand Russell said in the 50s, he says, we're training the people to be unable to even comply with the basic thing for everyday living without the advice of an expert. He said, eventually they will be unable, unable to think for themselves, they'll need experts. We're here now, ‘eh? So back to this article he says…)

My friend doesn’t want to believe experts are as fallible as he is, and that the prevailing scientific consensus may be false. For me to explain to him why “defining risk is an exercise in power” would bring a blank stare of disbelief.

In her book, Without You, There is No Us, Suki Kim tells the story of teaching English to elite all-male students at Pyongyang University of Science and Technology in North Korea. Kim, who was born and raised in Seoul, immigrated to America with her family when she was 13.

Yet, there were encounters over meals at the University where some candor occurred.

(A: And they go through different thoughts on...)

…“The Song of General Kim-Jong-il.”

(A: How literally the students believed that he was brilliant, that this leader was brilliant and everything that happened was, he was all-powerful. He was like a god actually, you see, because this is how they train you. That's what Suki Kim realized was that, how they were all trained like uniformly, and they all believed uniformly, there's no individuality at all basically, that's what they're trying to say.)

Students did fervently believe lies, such as North Korea is the “most powerful and prosperous [nation] on the planet.”

(A: Well, Bertrand Russell said the same thing again, didn't he? He said that every country, every country would tell them they lived in the best nation in the world, and every country will tell them that they have the best healthcare system in the world, and yada, yada, ya. That's what he said, you know. So all governments do that part.)

They constantly lied too about basic facts of their daily lives. Kim writes, “Lying and secrecy were all they had ever known.” She asks, “In a country where the government invents its own truth, how could they be expected to do otherwise?”

(A: That's a good little statement...)

“In a country where the government invents its own truth,”

(A: We're living in a truth fluid culture now, right. A country where they tell us every other day, and literally will never, they'll always deny they ever told you a lie [Alan chuckles.] as they do it themselves. Anyway it says…)

Kim was at a crossroads for further conversation with her student. Was the student a spy trying to trap her, (A: …because they will do that by the way.) or even worse, would the student end up in the gulag for merely discussing the limits of power? Kim responded, “Our country is not for the president but for the people. The president is just the face, the symbol, but the real power belongs to the people. The people make the decisions.” (A: When she was asked about that from a student.)

If only what Kim said was true. Have you noticed how many Americans are thinking like North Koreans? They seem reassured and relieved when their favorite politicians behave like North Korean despots issuing “field guidance.”

When North Korean despot Kim Jong-un visits a factory or farm, he makes pronouncements for improvements. Such pronouncements are called “field guidance” or “on-the-spot guidance.” No matter how nonsensical, the pronouncements of the despot are revered and obeyed.

In North Korea, there is no path forward that doesn’t begin with 100% obedience. There is nothing to be discovered, only edicts to obey. To serve the despot is the only purpose of life for North Koreans.

Andrew Cuomo is a beloved politician, despite having issued “field guidance” sending thousands of nursing home residents to their deaths.

(A: Things are said so casually here, and you've got to understand too that this is an incredibly important thought here, you know, and fact as well. Again, facts don't matter, [Alan chuckles.] as the title says. But Cuomo, don't forget he did put infected patients in the nursing homes guaranteeing it would spread like wildfire. And it did, and it added to the numbers of Covid deaths. You have to say, well no one is that stupid, it wasn’t intentional. It WAS intentional.

It says…)

Even in May, after news of his disastrous nursing home orders were widely available, his approval rating was at 81%.

(A: This is AFTER it happened, ‘eh, after it became known what he had done. It just shows you, you know, the beloved politician, you see.)

Today, voices in opposition to the field guidance of politicians and experts are still being heard. But don’t take this for granted; tolerance for communicating opposing views is shrinking.

(A: Is it ever, eh! Hm. I’m telling ya.)

A March 2020 poll of Americans (A: …and it’s got the link to it too.) with 3,000 respondents showed strong bipartisan support for criminalizing speech.

(A: A lot of polls are faked to start with, that’s true. That was part of the reason polls were invented was to sway public opinion. Because folk will jump on the bandwagon, oh well if so many percent are all for this, then I should be for it too. It’s a majority thing, you know, that’s how it works.)

About 70% of those surveyed supported government “restricting people’s ability to say things” deemed as misinformation. Nearly 80% endorsed the conscription of health care professionals. Government seizure of businesses and property was supported by 58%. Over 70% supported the detention of COVID-19 patients in government facilities. The majority of those surveyed did not change their opinion even when told their views may violate the Constitution.

Often Facts Don’t Matter

(A: It goes through other ones too…)

We have all experienced the truth of John Kenneth Galbraith’s famous observation: “Faced with a choice between changing one’s mind and proving there is no need to do so, almost everyone gets busy with the proof.”

(A: They go into confirmation bias too…)

Due to confirmation bias, "we embrace information that confirms [our] view (A: …your present confirmation…) while ignoring, or rejecting, information that casts doubt on it."

So there's confirmation bias, etc. Again, there's always psychologists involved because we're so well studied, right, they know how we tick and what we think and how to make us think or make us want to do what they want us to do. [Alan chuckles.] Quite easy to do. Not a bad article though. I'll put that one up. And the path forward, it says in it too, like Dr. Fauci, they believe the path forward is OBEDIENCE. There you go. Obedience, folks, as they say. That's a good enough, a good article actually on it, obedience.

You've got to remember too, when you bring in chaos, and this is what you do with revolutions, planned revolutions, that really are not meant for everybody, obviously. Because you can see who gets promoted and pushed and who's going to be the victim in it all. No, this is really, and it's not just retribution either because most folk haven't done anything wrong [Alan chuckles.] to anybody else either. Most folk don't behave like that. So there's been a great lot of hate taught and fomented in the training of people over many years to attack other peoples. There's no doubt about it. That's standard stuff. You can do it within a homogenous society too by just creating political factions, or religious factions, and encourage them to hate each other. Then elevating one to slaughter the other ones and justifying why they did it. This is old stuff, you know. Or you can use the ethnic groups against the others and elevate another above another, etc. etc. That's what you're seeing at the moment. This is old stuff as I say.

Plato talked about it too when he was talking about different kinds of governments. He talked about what we would call communism, it comes in after democracy. When democracy becomes stale and stagnant and bloated, and corrupt, then you find that the next step is generally communism, a form of communism they would call it in translation. Which is a totalitarian system again, you see, you obey and do what you're told. It's not fair at all. It has many wonderful, nice sounding phrases about equality, etc., but really nothing is fair in it at all. As George Orwell talked about it in Animal Farm, etc. That's the system you get.

Then to sort it out, because it ends up in chaos and stagnation when nothing is efficient everything falls apart, and incredible corruption, and the Soviet Union did the same to an extent too. Then in comes what they call the fascist type system to clear up the mess and get back on track. You see the same thing in ancient Rome when, and it was built into their particular laws in Rome that, when generals would literally have to step in and become tyrants. Tyrant wasn't just a nasty word. It was an essential role at times when their own Senate was so corrupt, they were putting farmers out of business, the farmers that fed you, then taking over the land for resorts for themselves for holiday places and so on. Total corruption. And in would come a general generally to restore order and get the place, the country fed again, etc., and back on track.

That's how it was done.

Nothing really changes with that. Except the people who [Alan chuckles.] follow revolutions are being used. The ones who foment today and lead them are generally paid rather awfully handsomely by outside sources. And they're well-trained. They're forms of mercenaries actually some of them. But well-trained for their parts, and organizers, etc. So there you go on that part there too.

Now, this article here is quite a good article about, and it's from Global Research. I know that Global Research really is run by [Alan chuckles.] higher Marxism too. But they've done awfully good articles, you've got hand it to them for putting out articles and being fair in some sense too. It may be surprising to many that it's coming out from this source but, they've gone into color revolutions in pretty good depth in the past. This article is about…

CIA Backed Color Revolutions

globalresearch.ca / 1 Oct 2017 / William Engdahl

Many readers likely never heard the name of the remarkable Serbia-born political operator named Srda Popovic. Yet he and his organization, (A: This is one I've mentioned before in previous weeks…) CANVAS, have played a lead role in most every CIA-backed Color Revolution since he led the toppling of Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic in 2000, at least fifty according to last count. (A: …revolutions across the world, 'eh. Don't forget, the CIA are the ones above it all, mind you.) Now he has turned his sights on Hungary and Hungary's popular and defiant Prime Minister Victor Orban. (A: That was in 2017.)

On September 8, the professional regime-change specialist Srda Popovic came to Budapest and joined with the anti-Orban opposition groups in front of the Hungarian Parliament. It's clear that Popovic was not in town to promote his Hungarian book on nonviolent regime change (A: …that's what they called it.) but rather to give aid to the anti-Orban parties before Hungarian elections in spring of 2018.

Because of the manufactured aura of "hip doer-of-good-deeds" surrounding the personality of Srda Popovic, it's useful to look closely at who sponsored his remarkable career since he founded a tiny Belgrade student opposition NGO (A: …nongovernmental organization…) called Otpor! in 1998 with its now famous clenched fist logo. The career of Srda Popovic from 2000 until today suggest a remarkably dishonest manipulator in the service of foreign intelligence agencies and governments, despite his vehement claims otherwise.

I just want to mention before I go right into this one. I'm sure it's the same group that put out, the same characters to run, or to interfere with the globalist meetings, anti-globalist meetings that were peaceful at the time. It was in the newspaper, a few different newspapers at the time of it happening, in the late 90s and early 2000 onward. The globalist meetings took part in North America, some of them anyway. They had massive opposition to them because it was really to do with free trade. The guise of free trade was to, for our countries to sponsor big corporations to move to China and the Far East for cheap labor. Through these agreements we'd lose, have less national sovereignty and our standard of living would go down. We all knew that at the time, it was well discussed and well promulgated amongst academics at the time, those involved in globalism and what it was all about.

But remember too, that they started to get these guys dressed in black, you see, with the masks on too who suddenly appeared and would start throwing Molotov cocktails at police cars, during these peaceful demonstrations, to try and get the whole thing... And what it did, it didn't encourage the rest of them to riot. What it did was make the folk turn against them, and made the authorities almost go out with the riots squads. Which it seems is what they wanted to happen. But some of the newspapers put out eventually tracing it back to one of these nations, you see. They found a training center for particular radicals who were going to countries and overthrow them. They would use mass populism basically of protesters against different organizations, they would use that, they would jump… just like the Bolshevik revolution technique, they would jump and piggyback on their back and then try and guide them into mass rioting, for their own causes, then they would take the lead, you see. That's how the Bolsheviks took over. The Bolsheviks needed masses to take over Russia, and that's what you do. So they jump on a legitimate reason or demonstration or protests, and you subvert it for your own causes, you see.

But this article here is talking about the fact that these are color revolutions. The most famous organization for toppling governments, in this day and age, is the CIA. It used to be MI6 and they had a name before it for the Secret Service and so on for Britain. But the US took that over long ago, that role.

Just off-the-cuff before I get into it too is that, there was a movie that was put out with one of the James Bond characters, Pierce Brosnan in a movie called No Escape. I don't know where it was done but... I don't know if it was supposed to be in Thailand or where it was, but it was somewhere over that area, bordering Vietnam. It's about really a nation, or country, or even an island where an American corporation or British Corporation, American/British had literally gone into the, just like that character who talked about, I was an economic hitman, it was that kind of technique. They had agents in the country that would encourage the politicians and buy them off and so on and so on. Get them little loans to get water distribution system set up and things like that, and energy, knowing they couldn't repay them, because they would make sure things would happen that would detract from the payments by causing disasters or whatever it happens to be. Then they would take over the island and have the whole island in debt until they own the resources of the island, or the country. That's what the movie is about.

Pierce Brosnan was one of the agents, it's quite interesting how he explained it, hurriedly, to a guy who had, he and his family got caught in this revolution without, it had nothing to do with them. He says, yeah, we started all this, we wanted their resources and so on and this is how we did it. We got them into debt, we help them out by encouraging them to set up systems of energy and resources, and water systems, and we'd end up owning it all, and then they couldn't pay it, the interest-on it, so then we take over the country. That's literally what, that's the system. But it's quite a good movie actually in that kind of respect. They show you how it's done and why folk get awfully fed up and take up arms to kick the foreigners out. [Alan chuckles.]   That's how it happens.

But yeah, that's where we are with these color revolutions. They're not just spontaneous. The folk who follow anything are the useful idiots, they call them. I hate to say it. And you might think you've got high-minded philosophical ideas and moral ideas, but you're all being used. You won't know that until maybe a year or two or a few years down the road. But the way things are going with this thing, with the slow down, with the Covid thing, it works perfectly well with revolution and into total austerity and rationing, and lockdowns, permanent lockdowns under this socialist system as they bring you in.

I've noticed that some countries already are locking you down with a passport, your passport. It isn't just your, not vaccinations, it's your complete passport too, even for your own community and you won't be allowed outside your community. They've already tried that in some of the far eastern areas. This is all marked, planned out long before this all happened, folks.

So this goes in again, this article, back to it, how...

Popovic first came to international notice as the founder of the Belgrade student political activist organization Otpor! which means “Resistance!” in Serbian. In October 1998 Popovic founded Otpor!, initially as a student protest group at Belgrade University dealing with student grievances. That was soon to change. He and other Otpor founders were trained in the methods of US regime-change specialist Gene Sharp founder of the Albert Einstein Institute (A: Awfully important organizations, these.) in Cambridge Massachusetts and by US State Department soft coup specialists such as Belgrade Ambassador Richard Miles and other trained US intelligence operatives, including election specialists and public relations image makers.

Guiding Otpor!’s Miloševic ouster operation, US Ambassador to Serbia Richard Miles was a specialist in regime change (A: The CIA, right.), far more so than in classical diplomacy. He orchestrated the CIA coup in Azerbaijan that brought Aliyev to power in 1993 before arriving in Belgrade, and after that went on to orchestrate the CIA coup in Georgia that brought US asset Mikheil Saakashvili to power.

The US Agency for International Development (USAID), (A: That's the big one that spreads the funding.) widely known as a CIA front, had channeled the Serb Otpor! Millions of dollars in funds through commercial contractors and through the US-government-financed NGOs: the National Endowment for Democracy (NED), (A: And this is all part, these are all branches, specialized branches in this cluster of the CIA.) the National Democratic Institute, and the International Republican Institute. The Open Society Institute of George Soros was also funneling money into Popovic 's Otpor! for the toppling of Milosevic. I have yet to find a CIA and US State Department regime change or Color Revolution in which the "democracy-building" foundations of Soros were not in a kind of harmony with the Washington State Department and CIA agenda.

(A: And isn't that the truth, 'eh? So they all work together, right… the US Agency for International Development (USAID). Some people have been in touch with me who worked for them, by the way. Hmph. That's how they get into the CIA, some of them. It's almost like an apprenticeship into one of these organizations. But USAID is a well-known one. They pick up the process of helping them across the world, helping people, and they start to catch on to how it works through funding and then manipulation of the funds into demanding money back, or demanding policy changes within the countries in exchange for aid, etc. etc. Until you've changed the whole culture maybe, etc., and the system.)

The US Agency for International Development (USAID), widely known as a CIA front, had channeled the Serb Otpor! Millions of dollars (A: MILLIONS of dollars, right.) in funds through commercial contractors and through the US-government-financed

(A: Remember that one, it was supposedly blown up in, north of Syria, an American contractor. Then they blamed the Iranian troops that were working with the Syrian government, so they eventually killed a general, an Iranian general in retribution. Remember that? Well, get back, think about it, you see. The guy that they killed supposedly, that this general which they claimed, and I doubt the general was behind it, it was a sporadic thing with the contractor in North Syria who was working for the US government. It's the CIA we're talking about here again. Yeah. So that's what they do…)

NGOs: the National Endowment for Democracy (NED), the National Democratic Institute, and the International Republican Institute. The Open Society Institute of George Soros was also funneling money into Popovic 's Otpor! for the toppling of Milosevic.

(A: And many other ones by the way. They're all part of the Color Revolution. Of course the media's on board with it too, right.)

The NED with all its affiliates was a project of Ronald Reagan CIA head, Bill Casey, in the early 1980's to conceal CIA regime change operations around the world behind the front of a "private" democracy NGO, the NED. Allen Weinstein, cofounder of the NED admitted to the Washington Post, "A lot of what we do today was done covertly 25 years ago by the CIA."

(A: You see, so these are really, they're disguised assets as they call them. But they're still CIA. Well, it's not the CIA now, no, no. It's NED we call it [Alan chuckles.] and it's USAID and blah, blah, blah.)

According to Michael Dobbs, who was foreign investigative reporter for the Washington Post during the Milosevic ouster, the IRI paid for Popovic and some two-dozen other Otpor! leaders to attend a training seminar on nonviolent resistance at the Hilton Hotel in Budapest in October,1999. There Popovic and the other handpicked Serbian students received training in such matters as how to organize a strike and how to communicate with symbols, (A: How to communicate with symbols…) such as the clenched fist that became their logo. They learned how to overcome fear and how to undermine the authority of a dictatorial regime.

The principal lecturer at the secret Hilton Hotel meeting was Gene Sharp's associate, retired US Army Col. Robert Helvey, a former Defense Intelligence Agency analyst who trained and then used the Otpor! activists to distribute 70,000 copies of a manual on nonviolent resistance in Serb translation. Helvey worked with Gene Sharp, founder of the controversial Albert Einstein Institution, teaching techniques to the US government to conceal its coup d'états under the guise of nonviolence. Sharp was described by Helvey as "the Clausewitz of the nonviolence movement," a reference to the renowned Prussian military strategist.

(A: Mind you, they have the, they always have what they call a passive wing, or nonviolent wing. This is what you'll find, and communism always have that too. Then you'd have their advanced one where they're literally, they're hard… The IRA had it too, mind you. They'd have their Sinn Féin leader and then they'd have the active IRA, you see, to deal with the real physical stuff. You find organizations inside the US in fact had the, still have the same organization, some of them were actually terrorist organizations in the 60s and 70s, that are now advising the FBI. Quite amazing, isn't it?)

Popovic and his Otpor! NGO were recipients of a major share of over $41 million US government money for their "democracy-building" campaign in Serbia. Dobbs describes the US involvement:

Behind the seeming spontaneity of the street uprising that forced Miloševic to respect the results of a hotly contested presidential election on September 24 was a carefully researched strategy put together by Serbian democracy activists with active assistance of Western advisers and pollsters… US-funded consultants played a crucial role behind the scenes in virtually every facet of the anti-drive, running tracking polls, training thousands of opposition activists and helping to organize a vitally important parallel vote count. US taxpayers paid for 5,000 cans of spray paint used by student activists to scrawl anti-Miloševic graffiti on walls across Serbia.

In short, Popovic began his revolution-making career as a regime change specialist in an operation funded by the CIA, US State Department, US Government NGOs including the infamous NED and the Open Society Institute. The question is what did Srda Popovic do after his first helpful service to Washington in 2000?

(A: And after that, what did he do, right…)

After his success in getting rid of Milosevic for his US Government sponsors, Popovic created a new organization called CANVAS. He decided to globalize his business model that worked so well in Belgrade in 2000, to make himself an international "go to" person for making US State Department fake democracy regime change.

CANVAS or the Centre for Applied Nonviolent Action and Strategies calls itself a non-profit, non-governmental, "educational institution focused on the use of nonviolent conflict." According to Wikipedia, CANVAS seeks to "educate pro-democracy activists around the world in what it regards as the universal principles for success in nonviolent struggle."

Popovic and CANVAS claim that at least 50% of their obviously substantial funding for this philanthropic (A: [Alan chuckles.] They're philanthropists really.) work comes from Popovic 's Otpor ally, Slobodan Đinovic, co-chair of CANVAS and listed as CEO of something called Orion Telecom in Belgrade. A Standard & Poors Bloomberg business search reveals no information about Orion Telecom other than the fact it is wholly-owned by an Amsterdam-listed holding called Greenhouse Telecommunications Holdings B.V. where the only information given is that the same Slobodan Đinovic is CEO in a holding described only as providing "alternative telecommunication services in the Balkans."

Leaving aside the unconvincing statement by Popovic 's CANVAS that half their funds come from Dinovic's selfless generosity from his fabulous success as telecom CEO in Serbia, that leaves the other roughly 50% of CANVAS funds unaccounted for, as Popovic declines to reveal the sources beyond claiming they are all private and non-government. Of course the Washington NGO is legally private though its funds mainly come from USAID. Of course the Soros Open Society Foundations are private. Could these be some of the private patrons of his CANVAS? We don't know as he refuses to disclose in any legally auditable way.

(A: It goes on and on and on. And how they've been used, they've been used in...)

… Ukraine, Georgia, Zimbabwe, Burma (actually the legal name since independence from the British is Myanmar but Washington insists on the colonial name), Ukraine, Georgia, Eritrea, Belarus, Azerbaijan, Tunisia, Egypt and Syria. Popovic ’s CANVAS was involved as well in unsuccessful attempts to start Color Revolution regime change against Venezuela’s Hugo Chavez and the opposition in the failed 2009 Iran Green Revolution.

(A: Busy, aren't they very busy characters, these, ‘eh. It goes on to…)

Goldman Sachs and Stratfor

(A: This is important too for folk who have heard the name Stratfor, [Alan chuckles.] nevermind Goldman Sachs.)

Even more interesting details recently came to light on the intimate links between the US “intelligence consultancy”, Stratfor—known as the ”Shadow CIA” for its corporate clients which include Lockheed Martin, Northrop Grumman, Raytheon and U.S. government agencies including the Department of Homeland Security and the Defense Intelligence Agency.

It was revealed in a huge release of internal memos from Stratfor in 2012, some five million emails provided them by the hacker community Anonymous, that Popovic, after creating CANVAS also cultivated very close relations with Stratfor. According to the Stratfor internal emails, Popovic worked for Stratfor to spy on opposition groups.

Revealed in the same Stratfor emails by Wikileaks was the intriguing information that one of the “golden geese” funders of the mysterious CANVAS was a Wall Street bank named Goldman Sachs. (A: [Alan chuckles.]) Satter Muneer, a Goldman Sachs partner, is cited by Stratfor’s then-Eurasia Analyst Marko Papic. Papic, asked by a Stratfor colleague whether Muneer was the “golden goose” money behind CANVAS, writes back, “They have several golden gooses I believe. He is for sure one of them.”

Good article though, and it goes into this in pretty good detail. They put their disclaimer at the end that they're not responsible for any inaccuracies that they don't know about and so on. To me it's a good starting point for a lot of people who don't understand how intelligence agencies actually work. They're so, they're so, aaaawh, they're involved in everything, I hope you understand that. You've got to get out of this idea that the CIA is, for an example, and MI6 in Britain, that have worked together since World War II and then onwards, are there to protect their countries. Nothing is further from the truth. They have completely global agendas. And completely different agendas for every facet of society, cultural, everything to do with society, economic, you name it, YOUR societies.

Literally, I mean, if they want you to walk backwards for some strange reason, they'll make you do it. And you go along with it. It might take them 20 years to get the money together and to finance it and force it onto you all, but eventually they'll get you there. Look at all the other things you've accepted without, you know... Hhhch. Think about it, folks. N-n-n. I'm telling you.

But it's not a bad article to give you a starter in a lot of these things that have been happening in your lifetimes. Folk get little bits and pieces of it, and it will ring bells with them, but they forget the main stories that happened during all of this. We've been living through overthrows our entire lives by organizations like the CIA. And the CIA is a totally global, it's a global project, folks.

Another article here is to do with the Federal Reserve…

Households Lost $6.5 Trillion In March, But The Decline In Average Americans' Wealth Has Only Begun

forbes.com / 19 June 2020

The Federal Reserve's latest data show that household wealth (A: …in America.) dropped by $6.5 trillion from the end of 2019 to March 2020 as the coronavirus pandemic started to take its toll. All of this loss came from a sharp drop in stock prices (A: …no kidding.) and happened before average Americans saw unemployment soar to levels not seen since the Great Depression. Taking other data on how average Americans have been doing since March 2020 suggest that the real pain to household wealth has only begun.

It goes on to give you more financial information and so on. But believe you me, I mean, [Alan laughing.] what's coming down the pike is being managed for their complete austerity sustainability program. That's a fact, folks. You can take that to the bank, it's planned this way.

There's no doubt in my mind that the whole Fauci/CDC/WHO organization, this whole Covid thing, is a big, it's really the big pusher of the whole world agenda right now. Along with the supposedly spontaneous [Alan chuckles.] sure, Black Lives Matter/Antifa action that's going on right now. It's all working together. It was planned before all of this. They just wait for the spike to make it happen, that's how they work it, and bingo, there you go. And …

Cultural Revolution: New Lenin Statue Erected as Washington, Jefferson, and More Fall

breitbart.com / 22 June 2020

A statue of Bolshevik communist despot Vladimir Lenin has been erected in Germany– as statues of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, and other historic figures are torn down in the United States, the United Kingdom, and the wider West.

Lenin, born Vladimir Ulyanov, was the inaugural leader of what later became the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (USSR), or Soviet Union, after his Bolshevik faction failed to win a democratic majority in the All-Russian Constituent Assembly but came out on top in the brutal civil war which they plunged the Russian Empire into in 1917.

Despite posing as a champion of national and ethnic minorities and their right to self-determination in the early period of his revolution, factions which attempted to govern themselves autonomously in the Ukraine were ruthlessly crushed, and he later invaded neighbouring countries such as Azerbaijan, Georgia, and Poland.

Nevertheless, the long-dead foreign dictator is being honoured in the German city of Gelsenkirchen with a statue, a 1950s relic of the former Soviet vassal state of Czechoslovakia — even as statues of historic Westerners are being torn down across the world amid the now-global Black Lives Matter unrest.

“The time for monuments to racists, anti-Semites, fascists, anti-communists and other relics of the past has clearly passed,” declared Marxist-Leninist Party of Germany (MLPD) chairwoman Gabi Fechtner in a triumphant statement.

“Lenin was an ahead-of-his-time thinker of world-historical importance, an early fighter for freedom and democracy,” she claimed.

(A: [Alan chuckles.])

The new monument stands besides a large MLPD billboard which alongside a stylised image of Lenin’s face, declares “give anticommunists no chance!”.

(A: M-hm. I wonder who is paying her?)

But yeah, it's just astonishing we're living through this kind of stuff. I've said it before, whatever works for the elite at the time, they'll use the system. If it’s fascist, they'll be fascist. If it's Nazi, they'll use it Nazi. And if it's communist, they'll use communist. And call it socialist if it sounds better or softer, you know. Whatever is very fast to get parts of the agenda through, they'll use them. Because they're totalitarian, they don't care about democracy. It's just too slow, isn't it, having to ask folk what to think about this before they make laws? Come on. Come on. It's more efficient when you have a totalitarian government, eh.

New Bill aims (A: …can you believe it?) to help Scotland ‘keep pace’ with EU laws after Brexit

pressandjournal.co.uk / 19 June 2020

Constitution Secretary Mike Russell said a new Bill at Holyrood will mean that on devolved matters, Scottish law can keep in line with those in Europe “when appropriate and practicable to do so”.

The Scottish Government says its UK Withdrawal from the European Union (Continuity) (Scotland) Bill will provide for continuity of provision that would otherwise be lost with Brexit.

Scotland literally is a vassal now of the EU. Just like Ireland is too. So they've got their, [Alan chuckles.] let's fight for freedom to end up with a bigger vassal, a bigger master than the one that already ran you. [Alan laughing.] What a joke! But what can you say, ‘eh, trainspotting indeed. Also in Scotland with all the Black Lives Matter and all the rest of it, and they had [Alan chuckles.] massive demonstrations, in little ole Scotland, ‘eh, a tiny population and the whole thing. It says…

1 American Among 3 Killed in U.K. Terrorist Stabbing

people.com / 22 Jue 2020

A 25-year-old man was arrested after police believe he acted alone, stabbing victims in a public park on Saturday

(A: This is so common now in Britain.)

The stabbing incident occurred at about 7 p.m. local time on Saturday at Forbury Gardens in Reading, England, leaving three dead and three others injured, according to Thames Valley Police. Authorities arrested a 25-year-old man suspected of murder, as the case was soon declared a terrorist attack.

Before that too a little girl was killed in a park in London as well. She was about eight years old or something like that, it was very young anyway. It's very similar too, by a possible terrorist as well. Another article too…

Glasgow stabbings: Activists warn of 'toxic environment' inside hotels used to house asylum seekers during lockdown

independent.co.uk / 27 June 2020

Activists and campaigners in Glasgow have warned of a "toxic environment" inside hotels used to temporarily house asylum seekers during the coronavirus pandemic, after six people were injured in a knife attack on Friday.

Shafik Mohammed who runs (A: Here you go...) asylum-seekers housing project (A: ...right...) for refugees in the city of Glascow, knows residents placed in the park and (A: They're using hotels to house a lot of them in.) said the company had created a toxic environment where people are clearly going to be affected.

Squeezing hundreds of people mostly young men (A: ...young men, you see, they're bringing in.) mainly with mental health issues (A: ...many with mental health issues. Why have so many of them got mental health issues?) and also there's others from the war-torn areas who have posttraumatic stress disorder (A: They're bringing them into hotels and cooping them up with nothing to do for three months.) was a recipe for disaster he argued.

(A: Is that really the problem? It's big business for some organizations, big business, big money, you know. There's folk getting rich on this kind of thing. In Ireland too, I know that as well.)

One charity worker in Glascow who didn't want to speak on the record told the Independent, they had heard from residents in the park that the suspect of the knife attack had already been the subject of complaints over his aggressive and erratic behavior. But despite evidence of mental health problems, little action was taken.

According to the BBC the suspect had told another resident that he had planned to hurt people the day before he launched his sudden stabbing spree. "I want to attack them, they're against me, they hate", an eyewitness reported the man saying.

Some of the residents came from countries in conflict with each other, Mr. Mohammed said. While others were offered food which was culturally inappropriate, he had been told.

I tell you, it's something else, ‘eh? Anyway, six folk got stabbed. I don't know if any of them have died yet or not. The cop was also stabbed in there too. Eventually they had to send the police in and they went in and shot the guy. I guess they just must know their way around it. So hhhhh, yeah. Of course they won't classify it probably as, that's the in thing, they never classify them now as terrorists. They always mention that they're just mentally disturbed. They're all told to say the same thing, across the world now. This is interesting too, it says…

Meer's handling of the lockdown had earlier come under scrutiny after an asylum-seekers died in a Glasgow hotel in May.

Mr. Mohammed said it seemed to him the firm is driven primarily by turning a profit out of housing vulnerable people.

Big money, though, you know. That would be another NGO group, you know, we're here to help them and we need so many millions per month of dollars or pounds. Again, what you're seeing, as I've mentioned before, with Rockefeller and his ilk, of the CIA and the CFR, etc., you can't make omelette without breaking eggs, and these folk that get stabbed and killed and all that are just, just like collateral damage, like the rest of them across the world, the same thing, you can't make an omelette without breaking eggs. There you go. That's the eggshells. There you go.

All the fallout of these constant wars across the Middle East and elsewhere, ‘eh. I-yi-yi. And it's the same characters that are changing the world inside your countries, you see, that give you the wars. Here's an article here…

Iran: The Next Domino?

foreignpolicyjournal.com / 22 Feb 2011

“Revolutions are often seen as spontaneous. It looks like people just went into the street. But it’s the result of months or years of preparation. It is very boring until you reach a certain point, where you can organize mass demonstrations or strikes. If it is carefully planned, by the time they start, everything is over in a matter of weeks.” — Ivan Marovic, ex-instructor, Center for Applied NonViolent Action and Strategies, Serbia.

(A: Right, that's the CANVAS again, the same group I mentioned earlier.)

With the staging of a second attempt at a "green revolution" in Iran in the wake of the overthrow of the regimes in Tunisia and Egypt by groups primarily sponsored by the National Endowment for Democracy, International Republican Institute, Open Society Institute, Freedom House, USAID and a myriad of their fronts; the question might arise as to whether the turmoil inflicted on Egypt and Tunisia was intended as a prelude to the major target: Iran.

Iraq, Iran and Syria were targeted years ago as priorities for "regime change."

(A: Again, that was the group that was put out by the PNACs in the 1990s.)

The now well-known letter addressed to President George W. Bush by the Project for a New American Century should be recounted. PNAC outlined a plan of action that was put into affect, starting with the elimination of Saddam Hussein. Iran and Syria were next marked for elimination under the pretext of the "war on terrorism":

(A: I've done all this stuff before. I don't know who wrote this one here but it says…)

We believe the administration should demand that Iran and Syria immediately cease all military, financial, and political support for Hezbollah and its operations. Should Iran and Syria refuse to comply, the administration should consider appropriate measures of retaliation against these known state sponsors of terrorism.

Among the numerous political and foreign policy luminaries who were signatories to the PNAC letter was Frank Gaffney who, as stated below, is on the Advisory Board of The Foundation for Democracy in Iran.

America's post-Cold War doctrine for world hegemony was outlined in a comprehensive PNAC document, Rebuilding America's Defenses. The post-Cold Warriors outlined their plan for a new "Cold War" or "clash of civilizations" that involves not only Islam but all regimes, cultures, religions, traditions and ideologies that do not fit into "a new American century."

(A: Is it starting to make sense, 'eh? I'll say that little bit again, it's said so quickly and simply and easily.)

The post-Cold Warriors (A: He’s talking about the post-Cold War warriors…) outlined their plan for a new “Cold War” or “clash of civilizations” that involves not only Islam but all regimes, cultures, (A: ALL, what part of ALL don’t you understand/) all regimes, cultures, religions, traditions and ideologies that do not fit into “a new American century.”

(A: You see, it will be a different America, but it’s for the world, you know, including America.)

Having led the West to victory in the Cold War, America faces an opportunity and a challenge: Does the United States have the vision to build upon the achievement of past decades? Does the United States have the resolve to shape a new century favorable to American principles and interests?

(A: And on and on it goes, ‘eh. It repeats a lot of the stuff I mentioned before from the Global Research article too about the different organizations that work and do regime change, and who funds them, NED, Soros, IRI, etc. They did the same thing in Egypt too when they elected their president, remember. And the West wasn't happy, they kept saying, well, it's not secular enough. So they want it to be an atheistic guy who, because then you can buy them off as much as, you can buy them off when they're atheistic, you see.)

Soros’ Open Society Institute funds the Arabic Network for Human Rights.

(A: And all the other organizations that help overthrow these countries. Wonderful sounding names, for human rights, you understand, you know. It goes into…)

The cable states the US Embassy “supports and approves” of the funding of six proposals submitted by Iranian contacts in the UK that also involved those taking part in workshops at Durham University.

M-m. It just shows you how… You can’t keep up with this kind of stuff, folks, you really can’t. That’s why even intelligence agencies have their different foreign sections, you see, different countries and each country is subdivided into all special areas and parts and so on. Because one person really has to deal with this one area of each particular part of it and couldn’t even cope with it all. There’s so much manipulation going on it’s just astonishing, and money getting funneled all over the place. Quite amazing. That's how the world really works. Yep. I'll put this link up as well for those that want to see that one.

Now, I'm going to touch on an article by Peter Hitchens that was out on 14 June. It’s pertinent, very pertinent to what’s happening now. He mentions…

Peter Hitchens: As the Left now controls every lever of power, we face nothing less than Regime Change

hitchensblog.mailonsunday.co.uk / 14 June 2020

As the Left now controls every lever of power, we face nothing less than Regime Change

That is why these strange crowds have begun to gather round ancient and forgotten monuments, demanding their removal and destruction.

They do not know what they want, or understand what they are destroying. But that no longer matters. They think their moment has come, and they may well be right.

This is why the memorial to Winston Churchill, and the Cenotaph itself, were shamefully boarded up on Thursday night – an act of appeasement if ever there truly was one.

That is why police chiefs kneel like conquered slaves to the new gods of woke, and the leaders of the Labour Party do likewise. I have seen it happen before, but only when things were moving in the opposite direction.

(A: Peter Hitchens saw the toppling and the fall, or the dissolution of the Soviet system.)

Then, as the Soviet Empire fell and an evil thing was swept from the world, it was a matter for rejoicing.

(A: I’ll interject here, but here they are, we’re trying to reestablish the same things, because it’s going to suit the same elite that runs us now, because it will be a faster way to get things done, ‘eh, totalitarian.)

The bloody mass murderer Vladimir Lenin, (A: …the one they’re putting the new statues up for.) and his equally gory secret police enforcer Felix Dzerzhinsky,

(A: And Dzerzhinsky, he was something else. Dzerzhinsky. [Alan chuckles.] He said that, he gave a very, um, I can’t go into it into much depth for different reasons. But Dzerzhinsky despised the common people. Absolutely despised, hated them. These characters that ran this equal system, equality and brotherhood of Sovietization/communism HATED the average people. And Dzerzhinsky, he says, people, you can beat them, you can starve them, you can do all kinds of terrible things to them. He says, do they turn around and fight you? You know. He says, no, they’ll just turn around and eat each other, you know. They won’t fight back, he’s getting at the fact that they won’t fight back, you see. That was, that attitude was put into the movie called Fight Club actually where they show you in a kind of comical way how they'd soaked passersby with water sprays and hoses, anything to get them riled up to try to retaliate. And most folk won't do it. They won't... They'll argue and they might shout a bit but they don't physically back it up, you see. But Dzerzhinsky, that's what he said, yeah you can starve them to death, you can beat them, and will they fight back? No, they'll just eat their dead, you know. These are your great leaders. Anyway so he was a secret police enforcer…)

… and his equally gory secret police enforcer Felix Dzerzhinsky, were pulled from their pedestals by a people sick of being ruled by their heirs.

(A: That’s what happened before they pulled them off their statue, off their boards of their foundations.)

The boarding up of Winston Churchill's statue in Parliament Square was act of appeasement if ever there truly was one.

The monument to the wartime Prime Minster now stands heavily boarded, to deter possible attacks of vandalism from protestors in the coming weeks

This time, as ignorant armies seek the final abolition of Britain, it is very frightening. I would not like to say where it will end. I cannot claim to have known this would happen but I will say that I had an instinctive fear of very bad things to come when the country began its mad, wild shutdown in March.

(A: …and this is important, because I think a lot of us had this…)

(A: It all goes together.)

I have learned over many years to trust my instincts, to take that train, to make that phone call, to turn that corner. When I have heeded them I have either benefited or been saved from bad things. When I have ignored them I have been hurt. It may be inherited from our forebears, or learned by decades of experience. It may be a mixture of the two.

But on crucial occasions we know more than we think we do. And as the cities began to darken and empty, and the world as we knew it started to close, I feared that we should never again see the lights lit again as they had been before. It was like the start of a great war without limit, made more perplexing because there was no obvious end to it, ever.

(A: That's what you were told, oh, it's never going to go away, it's going to keep coming back, keep coming back, and we can't go back into life as it was before, yada, ya. That was Fauci, you know.)

This was not just about a disease and a wholly overdone response to it. It was like the death of Princess Diana and the fall of the Twin Towers gathered together into a single great mass of unreason and panic.

The Diana episode had been a Dictatorship of Grief, (A: And it's true, it was a big managed event.) in which even the most revered parts of the establishment had bowed to the mob. 'Show us you care!' shouted the headlines. And woe betide those who did not.

Then came September 11, 2001, and a Dictatorship of Security. No argument could withstand the claim that safety was paramount, and we willingly made a bonfire of our freedoms, wrongly persuaded that we could trust our governments not to take advantage.

And now we have the Dictatorship of Fear. It is not the largely fictional 'R' number which governs the behaviour of our feeble Government, which is only just beginning to grasp how much damage it has done and how hard it will be to repair. It is the 'F' number, the number of people scared into pathetic timidity by the slick but false claim we were all at risk from a terrible and devastating disease.

The numbers of dead are grossly inflated by an incredibly lax recording system, which does not distinguish between those who died of Covid-19 and those who died of other things but may have been infected by it. Many who have died of Covid-19 are almost certainly victims of the Government's failure to protect those who were in fact most vulnerable – the residents of care homes.

The Cenotaph too was boarded, as signs now point to Britain facing mass regime change

The sad but unavoidable fact, that the disease is little danger to most young and healthy people but is especially deadly to the old and ill, is also now beyond dispute.

(A: This is a fact. But again, facts don't matter, 'eh.)

The initial claims of Imperial College London, that half a million might die if strict shutdown measures were not taken, have been devastatingly dismantled by other experts, who believe its methods and codes are, to put it mildly, hopelessly wrong.

Yet Imperial's chief spokesman, Professor Neil Ferguson (caught ignoring his own advice with a girlfriend), has the double nerve to claim the rules he flouted should have been introduced even earlier.

(A: Ha. There's your psychopaths talking, 'eh.)

By contrast, Sunetra Gupta, Professor of Theoretical Epidemiology at the University of Oxford, says that the shutdown should be lifted immediately.

Thanks to the barefaced dishonesty and unlawful bias of the BBC, and also the pitifully bad coverage of several newspapers, millions are unaware the whole basis of Government policy is now completely exploded by scientific experts.

(A: Getting back to that article by Bertrand Russell, how you would be unable to do anything without the advice of an expert.)

Even the truth about Sweden, which did not shut down, is obscured by incessant hostile reporting.

Sweden followed Britain in one thing – failing to protect care homes, (A: The old folks homes.) and so it has had a higher death toll than it should have done. But even so, its experience – along with Japan – shows clearly that there is no link between shutdown and the number of deaths suffered.

(A: So you could stay open, you see.)

The ceaseless assumption of the Government and the BBC that the shutdown 'protected' the NHS is simply not borne out by any facts. The NHS was never going to be overwhelmed. Covid deaths in this country peaked on April 8 – an event far too soon to have been caused by the shutdown announced on March 23 and begun the following day.

(A: And isn't that the truth.)

In fact, the country with the highest number of deaths per head is Belgium (843 per million). Yet Belgium introduced one of the tightest and most severe shutdowns on the planet. Sweden, without a shutdown at all, has suffered 472 deaths per million.

(A: It goes on and on and on. But yeah, you're seeing a revolution, and this is part of it. Including, it's a revolution and Fauci is part of it too, folks, and the WHO, World Health Organization, it's all part of the same revolution. Sustainability, too many folk, blah blah blah. Can't go on again, can't open up again, not without permission. And they have to look into your books to see if you pollute at all, you see, because if you pollute in any way at all, in your business, then it's unsustainable and you can't open up again. That is the Club of Rome and the World Economic Forum, etc. etc.)

(A: But anyway, he goes on and on and on and he talks about Minneapolis, and he says, which is true, isn't it? I mean, you see this across the whole planet, and he doesn't believe either that a spark in America caused it basically.)

As it happens, it was the death in Minneapolis, a city most British people will never even see, of George Floyd. Seeing the surging crowds, the rioting and the looting in the USA, the British radical Left grew jealous.

They imported the protest, converted it into outrage against some mouldering statues, and set the streets alight. Last week I attended one of these demonstrations, against the statue of Cecil Rhodes in Oxford. I have lived in Oxford for more than 50 years and I went out of interest, not because I care especially about this mediocre sculpture of a questionable man.

The event was utterly incoherent, moving from vague rage against the long-dead Rhodes to concerns about the oppression of West Papua (A: That's Papua New Guinea.) to shouts against colonialism. As far as I know, China is the only major colonial power left. Peking is certainly raping Africa on a scale Cecil Rhodes never dreamed of.

But such people can't quite bring themselves to attack that particular regime. Sometimes I think the radical Left are more nostalgic for the British Empire than any retired Indian Army colonel ever was.

(A: He's making a little dig there of course, the fact that they never complain about Peking expanding all over the planet. [Alan chuckles.] China.])

They (A: …the rioters.) need it, to hate it. Its utter deadness is a nuisance to them. I became briefly famous because, when the crowd were invited to sit down for eight minutes and 46 seconds, with fists clenched, to commemorate Mr Floyd, I did not join in. One of the protesters accused me of refusing to 'take the knee'.

It is true I would have refused to do so if asked, but in fact they were 'taking the buttock', a slightly different thing. The important thing about these protesters, lauded by the Labour Party and deferred to by police chiefs, is that they help to strengthen the new establishment and destroy the old one.

They have already helped to make it very hard for traditional, normal, Christian conservative and patriotic opinions to be expressed at all. By using social media as a form of discipline, they have made everyone – including the Left-wing multimillionaire author J.K. Rowling – fear them.

Anyone, as she learned last week, can now be 'cancelled' – the new radicals' chilling word for the obliteration they like to visit on their victims.

(A: You're cancelled. What does that tell you, you're canceled? It's like you're terminated, what does that mean, 'eh, what does that mean? [Alan chuckles.])

She has been pursued for saying the wrong thing about the transgender issue. In fact, there is no right thing. (A: There is no right thing, yeah.) I have known for years it was futile to try to respond with fairness and reason to the new orthodoxy.

However carefully and generously I might argue, I would still be denounced for thought crime. You cannot be right, nor can you know if you are right. That is a large part of the trick.

No actual debate can take place in these conditions. And where there is no debate there is no freedom. I have also pointed out for years – without effect – that the police were long ago infiltrated with radical Left-wing thought.

(A: They're also indoctrinated in it through their schooling before they get to be a policeman, or woman, and they're indoctrinated through their training as well into it, of course they are. He goes on about…)

I warned of Cressida Dick in 2004, noticing her early experiments in 'negotiating' with demonstrators rather than reclaiming the streets from them, and predicting that she would be the first female Metropolitan Police Commissioner.

(A: Which eventually she was.)

I pointed out that Labour's smoothie Mandelsonian and Blairite (A: Tony Blair.) Eurocommunists,

(A: And they were by the way. Tony Blair, the guy who brought Britain into the damn wars across the Middle East too. It's always left-wing that does it, 'eh. [Alan chuckles.]) were far more dangerous than Jeremy Corbyn's crude and obvious Marxism.

So there you go, and he goes on and on and on about other things. It's quite a good article actually. It spells it out and it's rather sad because he doesn't see in it, and I agree with him, there's no, I can't see optimism in this thing at all myself. Because it's so well, what you're up against is massive intelligence. I mean, some intelligence agencies have multiple thousands of employees, and multiple thousands of specialists in all areas of societies. How can you combat that? And what the elite want, what they want, they get what they want. They'll use any system or -ism that they want, that will suit them at the time, if it's more efficient at the time. Then destroy it.

Black Lives Matter leader states if US 'doesn't give us what we want, then we will burn down this system and replace it

foxnews.com / 24 June 2020

(A: That was on Fox news, someone sent me a clip of it, but I've got a transcript of it.)

"I said," Newsome told the host, "if this country doesn't give us what we want, then we will burn down this system and replace it. All right? And I could be speaking ... figuratively. I could be speaking literally. It's a matter of interpretation.

He want to argue that historically violence is the way his community has been able to get results.

I tell ya. It's quite amazing. A lot of cops been killed too by the way. But they're rapidly taking down the little clips of it happening. There's also a guy trying to get through the crowd with his vehicle, it was a disabled vet as well in the States. A guy who was one of these protesting or rioting, I'm not sure if he was protesting or rioting. He was a white guy. As the family passed, he shot through the back window and shot the guy in the head. It's getting, it's absolutely insane and there's a lot of rather insane folk on the fringes that are used by the way, or they want to go all the way with it. They really think that it's their world now and, hhhch, they have no idea that after these things are over, even if those who have used them get what they want, which is a much higher authority than the ones you'll see, they then eliminate the ones who are on the fringes, they've served their purpose. Because now they’re dangerous if they don't get what they want, you see, the utopia.

Deadly shooting near George Floyd protest as looting, arson grip Minneapolis - foxnews.com / 28 May 2020

Glasgow stabbings: Activists warn of ‘toxic environment’ inside hotels used to house asylum seekers during lockdown - independent.co.uk / 27 June 2020

…etc. etc., six folk that this one person stabbed. I don’t know if any of them are dead yet. Another thing too, the folks have had enough, everywhere, of the lockdown. You know that too. That's why there's a, isn't it amazing how it all went silent, about Covid, when all the protests and the rioting too was happening. It went silent. Because it just stopped. It's a very politicized virus, you know, and I guess it was just told to stop for a while, you know. Then out comes Fauci again as soon as it's over and, oh my God, it's spiking like… No, they're doing more and more tests like crazy, and the more tests you do, the more you're going to find out folk have had it. That's called herd immunity. Viruses sweep through all of society, there's no way to avoid it. So folk are getting out to the coast in England…

Major incident declared as people flock to England's south coast

theguardian.com / 25 Jue 2020

(A: There on the beaches and so on, and some of them have had enough. Of course the Health Minister in Britain is Matt Hancock, the guy who let it slip that 10,000 folk die a month in Britain normally, anytime of the year. Then you tally up the numbers and you say, oh my God, you know... So anyway…)

Matt Hancock, the health secretary, said on TalkRadio that he had the power to close the beaches if people did not respect social-distancing rules.

(A: …even though it’s a farce, the whole thing. It was based on nothing, the social distancing. As I say, that girl whose daddy was trying to make her famous so she can get into Harvard or somewhere, by, hhhhhhhchm, helping her with the computer program that decided that, oh yes, 6 feet is the best way to distance, to be. Based on nothing else except the computer.)

This article is so true, it's so true as well. Lots of articles have bits and pieces of truth, and some can't go far enough. Some don't know to go far enough. That's the way it is with so many agencies involved in the riots and the fomenting of the world revolution, to suit the elite. The reset, they call it the WEF. Now...

Everywhere Statues Are Torn Down By The Mob, People Are Next

thefederalist.com / 23 June 2020

The promise of bloodshed coming alongside or following shortly after is an historic certainty. The symbols of a people never satisfy: People themselves must always come next.

WASHINGTON, DC — For millennia, King Mob (A: …the mob itself, right…) has targeted societies' icons with varied goals and to varied ends, and few things are more foreboding than his desecration of civic art. Just as the targets have ranged from rulers to clergy, from tyrants to helpless, and from the guilty to the innocent, the outcomes have ranged from victory to defeat depending on the society's strength and will. The promise of bloodshed coming alongside or following shortly after, however, is an historic certainty. The symbols of a people never satisfy: People themselves must always come next.

In 1790, mobs looted and pillaged Paris's treasured Notre Dame. To the revolutionaries, the cathedral symbolized everything that was wrong with France's history and society — a history of kings, tradition and religion, and a society beset by royal injustice and systemic inequality.

Over the next three years, the 12th-century church's riches and artifacts were stripped, stolen, and destroyed, their remnants hidden by the faithful and sold off by the faithless. Statues of the Virgin Mary were removed and statues to the Goddess of Liberty took their place on desecrated altars.

At nearby Sainte-Chapelle, the revolution pulled the apostles from the pedestals where they had stood watch over Christ's Crown of Thorns. The 12 statues were vandalized and buried — half so badly they are still undergoing attempts at restoration. As the destruction of religious art unfurled, priests who did not swear allegiance to the new order and those who aided them were sentenced to death.

(A: That happened too in the Soviet Union, folks. And even during the Spanish war, Civil War, they did the same thing then there as well, nuns as well. It's always the same agenda, 'eh.)

Back at the cathedral, the revolutionary government mistook the 28 statues of the kings of ancient Judah for French kings (rich old men and all), dragging them into the public square for decapitation. Their buried heads were not rediscovered for nearly 200 years.

In the Place de Louis XV, the large statue of the square's namesake was torn down and the plaza renamed Place de la Revolution. A guillotine was raised, and the "liberated" space would see the execution of more than 1,200 prisoners, from King Louis XVI and his wife to the executions' ringleader himself, Maximilien Robespierre.

Seventeen hundred years before, Pliny the Younger described Emperor Domitian's golden statues "rudely battered down, and made a sacrifice to public joy" amidst his toppling and assassination.

It was a sport and pastime to humble those [statues'] exalted heads, to make them prostrate and kiss the ground, to maul them with hammers, to hew them with hatchets, as if at every stroke blood and pain had been to follow. None was so moderate in the venting of his raptures, none so sober in his overflowing joys, but that he thought it a luscious piece of revenge to see their mangled limbs, their dissevered joints, and finally their grim and ghastly images divested of all their borrowed majesty, and thrown into the flames to be melted down into better use and service.

In the United States, mob vandalism began in 2017 with a statue of an unnamed Confederate soldier, escalating to Confederate officers and Gen. Robert E. Lee

(A: ...etc. etc. And yeah, they've even had hangings of statues again in the States as well. The same old stuff, 'eh. And then…)

Sacred religious statues depicting Christ as light-skinned (A: [Alan chuckles.] You see, you can't have that either.) "are a form of white supremacy… Tear them down," race-baiting activist Shaun King wrote Monday afternoon. (A: It gives you the link for it too. It goes on and on and on.)

Policemen and reporters have been attacked, while mayors and journalists have defended the riots as "mostly peaceful." (A: Hhhmph.) When an historic church across from the White House was set ablaze, its leader welcomed the mob and decried the president. She was joined in her outreach by Washington's Catholic archbishop, and the mayor named the street after the mob.

…the mob has declared the mayor's street their "autonomous zone."

(A: Again, they're given the chance now, it's really to do with what's coming next. It says here that…)

…King Mob to victimize and terrorize small business owners and each other at will.

(A: And attacking an awful lot of them. You can actually see little clips of them.)

“Does anybody here know what happened to the people who did not get on board with the French Revolution?” a member of the mob shouted into a megaphone a week prior.

“Chopped!” the mob chanted its violent response.

(A: Have the heads chopped, ‘eh?!)

These are the times that make you want to walk away from society. It's just too well-managed and too well understood how to get lots of useful, useful idiots they call them. We're all useful idiots if we join any kind of mob, even if you think you're standing up for the right thing at the time. Those who have cunning at the top, the true psychopaths, they have wealth and power and cunning, they really, they could run rings around you for schemes that you would never even catch on to their schemes before it's too late. It's just instantaneous with them. They're born schemers. That's how they do it.

Seven shot in four separate incidents overnight in Peoria pjstar.com / 27 June 2020

(A: It just goes on and on and on, ‘eh? The first one was…)

…a 20-year-old woman who was shot in the leg.

People shooting at cars and then running off. It's just a bit of mayhem, you're going to see more and more mayhem. A lot of shootings in New York City itself, now that the cops aren't responding to all the calls anymore, because they know if they maybe do their job, and it will maybe cause another riot. So why bother when your own government is not going to back you up? When your own officials and your states won’t back you up? So no one's going to be foolish enough to risk themselves doing their job and then getting the mob coming down to lynch them. [Alan chuckles.] So you'll have lawlessness for a while. And it will escalate too.

To show you too how literally racist everything is, ‘eh. Don't look for logic in anything. You're, it's supposed to, you see the mob will be fed and fed and fed by their leaders as long as they're useful. But you don't even need logic in it. This is a Newsweek magazine, right…

Oregon County Exempts Non-White People From Mandatory Face Mask Order

newsweek.com / 23 June 2020

(A: So, if you're not white you don't have to wear a mask, hm. Because wearing a mask is just to…)

…counter racial profiling. (A: …they say.)

Last week, health officials declared face coverings would be required in public settings where individuals may come within (A: [Alan chuckles.] Again that’s silly 6 feet that that little girl came up with and her computer.) six feet of someone outside their household after the county saw a spike in coronavirus cases.

On Tuesday, the county said "people of color who have heightened concerns about racial profiling and harassment due to wearing face coverings in public" will be exempt from the order.

(A: I think the only other exemption was children…)

…those under 12 years of age, those with medical conditions …

Everything is politicized. Even the virus itself is politicized, ‘eh. [Alan chuckles.] Quite something. Quite amazing isn't it. Ahhhhhhh. And also...

2 dead, 12 injured in shooting at North Carolina block party - policeone.com / 22 June 2020

I don’t know if any cops even turned up. I don't know. It isn't safe to turn up to do your job. It depends who's doing the shooting. If you do injure someone who's... who's elevated at the moment, well, it's liable you'll be crucified yourself for doing it, by your own government, ‘eh. So why would you risk it?

Now, as all this is going on, I've always mentioned this before in the past when major things were happening, like 9/11 and various other things that would happen, even the flooding that went on in New Orleans some years back too. I always say, you know, when you see the agendas of the elites, their published agendas like their 2030 program and so on, but that was not the go, it was actually on the go under Agenda 21, BUT the different parts of the future all planned out there, staked out. When the governments themselves are making new plans way beyond the catastrophes or financial meltdowns, it tells you, that nothing stops the plans. Nothing stops the planning, or the plans, regardless of what you think. Your world might be in upheaval if you lost all your money during the last bank, I hate to call it a crash because it was a planned thing in the first place. But for those at the top, nothing stopped, there was no halt. There was no slowdown in the turning out of the agendas for the future.

That's what we've got today as well, isn't it? You've got the appearance on TV - I guess, I get little clips sent because I don't watch TV, and I can't watch many of the clips because my speed is so, I get really punished for [Alan chuckles.] what I do. My speed goes way down. The thing is, you're living through something where you would think that they would put certain things on hold, or there's a slow down here and a slow down there, as the impression of cities burning, that's what they put out there is on the television I suppose and on the news all the time. And again the financial chaos and trillions being dished out, supposedly borrowed money, but it's borrowed from nothing. But you have to pay it back with real goods and real physical tangible some things. That's how this corrupt system works. But nothing slows down, ‘eh?

Known Traveller Digital Identity - Advancing Secure and Seamless Travel

I mentioned this last week. Remember, I mentioned it too that Wendy Messley had a show on in the 1990s in Canada and she did one of them on the preferred pass or something. It was like you’re authorized, or a pass, you would get fast pass through airports and so on if you go through the whole digital and biometric programming system on a new biometric passport basically. And you would be a preferred type customer, you see, you always get that little snob appeal if you're goody-goody, to get folk into it. She went through the techniques they used: iris scans, thumbprints, all the rest of the stuff. But here you are, and it's the same thing. It shows you how far they plan things, right, from the 1990s, here's 20 odd years later... to help government and industry leaders facilitate seamless and more secure international travel.

(A: It’s going to be not just international, folks. [Alan chuckles.])

Together with a community of travel security experts, (A: Oh, I love that word experts, the new priests in white coats and so on.) policymakers, businesses and international organisations, the project will achieve this by:

Piloting the KTDI concept in a cross-border context:

In collaboration with a consortium comprised of the Government of Canada and the Kingdom of the Netherlands, Accenture, airlines, airports and technology providers, the Forum is currently piloting components of the KTDI concept in a real-life, cross-border context.

Advancing safer travel in the face of COVID-19 impacts: (A: There ya go.)

(A: Look to the computer and technology for aaall, for anything to do with diseases now, you know, and they'll tell you how many is going to die. Millions, millions says Ferguson. And again how far apart to be from someone, which is 6 feet according to the computer that that girl used, that her daddy from the military-industrial complex helped her with. Their God predicts it, the computer! It's so scientific, don't even try to understand, you lowly little human you. You see? Hhhh. So…)

Advancing safer travel in the face of COVID-19 impacts:

(A: Hhhh, there ya go. So it’s got biometrics again…)

… (i.e. biometrics, blockchain and digital identity) is now more crucial than ever. The Forum will facilitate multi-stakeholder dialogue to gather insights and develop actionable strategies to promote more secure travel through improved border and health screening, touchless passenger processes, and more effective use of data.

(A: DATA, everything is data, data, ‘eh.)

But yeah, you’re going to have a passport all right, for even to go outside your own community for any length of time.

This is an interesting article because, and it's great for conspiracy theory. Everything that's happening is great for conspiracy theory, right. Here, in the middle of the supposedly a massive killer pandemic, you get the same people in charge of some of the US states suddenly stopping the Covid thing, joining protesters in the streets, shoulder to shoulder, and then going back to trying to lock you down again. It's astonishing ‘eh. You see that happening, and then you see this complete lack of the backing of authorities in the US, to backup police or National Guard or anybody actually that would try and get law and order restored. There's absolutely no backing whatsoever, that I can find anywhere. Little comments from Trump is not law, it's not executive orders. [Alan chuckles.] It's little comments.

What you get too is some of the generals, I mentioned it in last week's talk, some of the generals are definitely on the payrolls of big corporations from the military-industrial boys. They are really lobbyists for them. I'm not surprised with some of them saying they wouldn't back Trump basically with his policies and how to deal with this, well, chaos isn't it. And folk in the States are left to try to defend themselves. That's what it comes down to. Don't look to government to help you when government backs off of its responsibilities or of its oath of office. That's what happens.

But in Canada apparently a lot of Canadians have been disarmed, at least by, I don't know if it's all firearms or what it is actually. But it was to do with that shooting I mentioned before just briefly in Nova Scotia of a man who I think they said he was a dental hygienist, the guys who make the dentures I suppose. But he had two police cars that he had bought at auction, used police cars, and he was dressed like one when he went out on a shooting spree. It made no sense to anybody how it was put across. But the government jumped on it right away and tried to and pushed forward laws to just ban stacks of firearms across Canada.

At this time with Covid and riots, and folk threatening certain other members of society at the moment, um, they're disarming people? So think about that. I mean, this is, is this all coincidence? Is it? At the same time as this is happening? But here's the thing, it was interesting, it struck me at the time with the guy with the ex-police cars and so on...

Families of 22 victims killed in Nova Scotia shooting demand swift federal inquiry amid speculation gunman was an undercover agent for the RCMP or had ties to organized crime

dailymail.co.uk / 22 June 2020

(A: Well, often you'll have both, folks. It could be CSIS as well. It could even be CIA because we have CIA members operating inside Canada as well. So…)

Gabriel Wortman murdered 22 people during a rampage in Nova Scotia in April

More than two months later the victims' families are still seeking answers to why Wortman carried out the attack and why it took so long for RCMP to stop

Nova Scotia attorney general Mark Furey has repeatedly promised that a federal-provincial inquiry will be announced soon

A potential break in the case came last week (A: This is important here…)

when video allegedly showed Wortman (A: This was the guy who did the shootings.)

withdrawing (A: Now listen, you have to listen very carefully

$475,000 from a Brink's office days before the shooting

(A: Brinks, at least as far as I know they don’t have banks. They have security and safety things for big wealthy, wealthy organizations or corporations and so on, right. So he withdrew…)

$475,000 from a Brink's office days before the shooting

(A: They have video of him in there where they have the boxes, you know, the boxes and the money in it and so on.)

Police sources say the withdrawal matched the method the RCMP (A: Royal Canadian Mounted Police.) uses to send money to confidential informants and agents

The RCMP has repeatedly insisted that it had no 'special relationship' with Wortman, who was killed by police following the attack

Others speculated that the money could have come from Wortman's alleged ties to organized crime

Authorities are said to be investigating his relationships with people linked to a Mexican cartel, La Familia, and to the Hells Angels motorcycle gang

(A: This is from the Daily Mail by the way. It says…)

Gabriel Wortman, 51, launched his deadly rampage across several small towns in Nova Scotia on the night of April 18, lighting fires (A: Well that’s [Alan chuckles.] lighting fires…) and shooting people at whim with four unlicensed semi-automatic weapons as he drove around in a replica police cruiser.

(A: I think he bought them at auction I think, I read that somewhere else. That may be true or not, but however it will be, he must have painted them up or something or else they were already painted, if he bought them used, ‘eh.)

For 13 hours he evaded capture by the RCMP before he was shot dead in a confrontation with Mounties at a gas station in Enfield, 60 miles (97 km) from where the rampage began in his hometown of Portapique.

By the end of the spree Wortman had claimed the lives of 22 people - 13 who died from bullets and nine who died in the fires.

More than two months later the victims' families are still seeking answers as to why Wortman carried out the attack and why it took so long for the RCMP to stop him.

(A: So, Maclean's Magazine, you know...)

…news magazine Maclean's unearthed video which allegedly showed Wortman withdrawing $475,000 from a Brink's office 19 days before the shooting.

Law enforcement sources say that the massive withdrawal matched the method the RCMP uses to send money to confidential informants and agents - and would not have been possible for a regular citizen.

(A: So he definitely seems to be working for something. If it wasn't the RCMP, was is CSIS?, was it, which agency would it have been? Interesting.)

While compelling, the latest theories have done little to placate victims' loved ones (A: Naturally.)   who are demanding to hear concrete facts.

'The amount of information being kept from us is deplorable'…

Most of what is known about the shooting was released in the days after it occurred, with little information released since then.

We really don't know as to why he went totally on the rampage. It's just, everything is so secretive in Canada when these things begin, these inquiries. But definitely there is, something stinks when it comes to, going into the Brinks place. You know, the average citizen can't get into Brinks and withdrawing $475,000 in cash. So it's on video anyway. It will probably stay in limbo forever because in Canada you just don't get much information at all. Np.

Also, I've mentioned before from the WEF, World Economic Forum, when they say…

Now is the time for a 'great reset'

weforum.org / 3 June 2020

(A: These are the terms, you've got understand the terminology you're hearing as well. It's a reset. Not just financial, economic systems but of ways of living. It's the whole agenda, folks. And a lot of topics to be put out of the public regarding, even having children, or even having the right to have children, yada, yada, ya. You know, the new society. Interesting terms they're using, the WEF, like reimagining the future. You find Bill Gates saying reimagining education when he worked out, or, his company has apps for all the different educating at home or through centralized computer systems with teachers on the other end somewhere. Reimagining, everything is reinventing and reimagining. This is all planned this way, this conformity of language that they're all in with, all using and agreed to use the same terms on everything obviously.)

COVID-19 lockdowns may be gradually easing, but anxiety about the world's social and economic prospects is only intensifying. There is good reason to worry: a sharp economic downturn has already begun,

(A: No kidding, what happens when you lock down the country and there's no work, and lots of small businesses are out of business altogether now, they're gone. I mean, small businesses, maybe a couple running businesses and so on depended on that money coming through. They have their own bills to pay off and probably their own debts as well for the company and for themselves. And when it stops, well, that's it, it won't come back again.)

Responding to the Covid 19 pandemic requires global cooperation among governments, international organizations and the business community.

(A: [Alan chuckles.] Well, not the small business, you know, just the big ones, 'eh, they all get bailed out.)

The platform was created with the support of the World Health Organization. It's open to all business industry groups as well as other stakeholders aiming to integrate and inform joint action (A: ...it says...) for unprecedented global health emergencies.

Well, none of us asked for the WEF to do it all. And we don't vote for them anyway. But they seem to run our lives. Because those who run it all at the very top of the WEF are the world's ultra wealthy elite. [Alan chuckles.]   They are THE ones. It's quite something.

But they've got it all worked out. Again, the Rockefeller foundation is churning out stuff that you wouldn't believe. But in reality, they're just taking them off the shelves, these scrolls, and dusting them off because the plans were made years ago for all the things that are happening today. That's how things happen. They pretend it's spontaneous, we're dealing with it on the spot and in real time. SURE. Sure, they are. Yeah. I tell ya. Quite something, isn't it?

I'll put these articles up for those who want to see. And...

Global New Mobility Coalition

weforum.org

(A: The great mobility, again, the program, and coalition is awfully important. Now they're going to have…)

The Global New Mobility Coalition (GNMC), curated by the World Economic Forum, is an active and diverse community of over 150 globally renowned experts,

…experts, again, oh these experts. Where is this big place where they churn out these experts, 'eh, and these high priests that rule our lives now? You know, if it rains, it could be raining today, you should all go outside with umbrellas. No kidding, 'eh. Or they have oil skins on TV, they used to have oilskins on, dumb things like that to tell you… That you can't think for yourself, eh? Hmmmm. Okay. Or, it's going to be warm today, don't over dress because you might overheat and have sunstroke. Hmph. Okay. And if you do feel yourself getting too hot, take something off. That's why you need these experts, that's why they get paid such big money.

And some folk, you see, you know, some folk need them. [Alan laughing.] I don't know. [Alan laughing.] It is true. I can remember many years ago when I used to watch TV, they had a program, just on safety, and they interviewed different people who manufactured things like stepladders. They had to cover them with different warnings about, don't stand on this edge of it just by itself, don't stand on 1 foot, if you've gone up on the top rung and you're trying to paint the ceiling or something, don't do this, don't do that. Because there's so many idiots that WILL do it, you see.

And you expect that, you'll always get the folk that will do it. But they'll sue, you see.

Here's the thing too, oh, someone's lawyer will get a hold of, well, we can sue them, you know, they didn't have enough stickers to warn you. That happens. So yeah, I guess some folk need the experts to tell them what to do and what not to. But that's not everybody. Let's be honest, that's the minority who really can't think for themselves. Or, they truly believe that they should always get an expert to tell them everything to do. Everything, you know.

But anyway, that's the new mobility coalition. I'll put that up for those who want to live in healthier cities, you see. This is to do with...

…accelerating the shift to Shared, Electric and Autonomous Mobility (SEAM) …

I mentioned it before, so you're going to share cars. You're not going to have so much cars running around. They want to get rid of the gasoline engine, as you know. Again, that's Agenda 21 anyway. We're on our way, we're on our way with all this stuff. Another one too, again...

There is no scientific evidence to support the disastrous two-metre rule telegraph.co.uk / 15 June 2020

(A: I've been through this before. Here's another one saying the same thing.)

Queuing outside shops, dodging each other once inside, and not getting too close to other people anywhere: social-distancing has become the norm.

(A: Isn't that astonishing, something that was a complete made-up thing with a girl and her dad and the computer.)

The two-metre rule, however, is also seriously impacting schools, pubs, restaurants and our ability to go about our daily lives.

(A: Even the Lancet said it. It's in here too, that...)

Their review provided evidence from 160 studies in support of physical distancing at 1 m or more. This might sound oppressive, but all the studies were retrospective and suffer from biases that undermine reliability of the findings.

But I know that some of the top, again, virologists that have come out and said that you know, half that way, half the 6 feet would be fine. So you would be down to 1 meter and even less. It's just completely bogus, folks. And hey! That would be a miracle indeed, if a virus just went in a straight line out of your mouth, boof, and stops at 6 feet. Where did this bogus voodoo come from! Not in nature, believe you me, it doesn't exist in nature. It's quite, it really is something, isn't it? Iyy. But facts don't matter. Facts don't matter, I've got to keep reminding myself about that too.

ER visits for heart attack, stroke and high blood sugar levels fall by nearly 20%

(A: It doesn't mean, folk will read that and some will think, oh, that's good it's doing that, it's falling, there's not so many visits, I guess it's better.)

as Americans scared of catching COVID-19 avoided hospitals

dailymail.co.uk / 22 June 2020

(A: …that's the reason. It's not because they're not having heart attacks and strokes and stuff. They're scared to go to the hospitals, you see. And that's from the CDC. Which they knew too. Since they couldn't get in any way, they closed most of those things down. And the folk were dying. Even ambulance drivers were not taking them to hospital at times, you know, that's been in the papers as well. So how many folk have been really killed by the fact they can't get treatment for things which they could have been treated for? It's disgusting what's happened here. You have pretty well empty hospitals at times, but there's nobody in the ER or anything else to take care of people who are really sick.)

Visits for heart attacks fell by 23% for strokes, fell by 20%, and for uncontrolled high blood sugar levels decreased by 10%

(A: I wonder how many folk died here, 'eh?)

For hyperglycemic events, the largest decline was seen among the 18-to-44 age group, which fell by 12%

So these are life-threatening conditions that decline because folk couldn't get into hospital. N-n-n. Nevermind all the other elective surgeries and cancer treatments. You know, if you've got a tumor and they spot it in its early phases, 'eh, and it was like a singular tumor, and they'll say once those things start spreading, those things spread like by the hour once they start spreading. You could have wiped them out on time individually, here's the first one, here's the primary one, but they couldn't get in for treatments or anything. So by the time they're called in it has spread all over them. This is a death sentence, folks. What's been happening with this big farce, this con, it's just astonishing. The hospitals were anything but overrun. In most cities and towns. Terrible. Absolutely terrible. N-n-n-n-n. Absolutely terrible. And it doesn't give you a follow-up on how many of the poor folk died with this, you know, because they couldn't get treatment. Terrible, terrible. So there ya go.

Now, just to make, just to make you cheer up. And it's true, you've got to cheer up once in a while. You can't live in gloom and doom, you know, even though that's all you're getting fed right now. But, don't you look up to scientists that are going to rule your lives and manage it? It saves all that heavy thinking stuff, you know, of worrying. Scientists are going to make sure they can manage your lives for you. Through computerization and monitoring and spying on you they'll be able to keep you perfectly safe. Maybe even wrap you in cotton wool in case you fall and hurt yourself. And maybe they'll get a program that will predict when you're going to fall, ‘eh, and stuff like that. We'll just take care of you, because obviously you can’t take care of yourselves.

But it makes you feel so wonderful when something breaks out, that terrifies the whole planet, then they tell you it comes, let's be honest, come on, they said it was within the distance of the Wuhan lab and we know that Fauci and the rest of them had given certain viruses, Corona type viruses to the Wuhan lab and yada, yada ya. So that sort of terrified people. But science really is on your side. No matter what you think. I mean, that atom bomb thing and all the ones they let loose in the Bikini Islands years ago, that spread radiation around the world, etc., those were just, you know, they were just little fads that they went through, you know, that's just fleeting fads, you see. So we should just forget that and think of all the positive things that science is giving you. You know? Like a totally surveilled society, spied on and so on.

Genetically modified mosquitoes could be released in Florida and Texas beginning this summer – silver bullet or jumping the gun?

research.ncsu.edu / 3 June 2020

(A: Isn't that amazing? I had touched on this one before.)

This summer, for the first time, genetically modified mosquitoes could be released in the U.S.

(A: That’s not the first time at all.)

On May 1, 2020, the company Oxitec received an experimental use permit from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to release millions of GM mosquitoes (labeled by Oxitec as OX5034) …

(A: I think I mentioned that last week. But doesn't it make you feel better that, forget about viruses that might be man-made in the laboratory and just concentrate on the good things that's coming, like these mosquitoes that are modified as well, you know. It says…)

When these lab-bred GM males are released and mate with wild females, their female offspring die. Continual, large-scale releases of these OX5034 GM males should eventually cause the temporary collapse of a wild population.

(A: There ya go.)

Genetic engineering for disease control

(A: That’s why they’re doing it, you understand? They’re going to create genetic things that can carry diseases, to control disease, for disease control.)

…mosquitoes that can’t spread disease are examples of how genetic engineering may transform the natural world.

(A: Isn’t that wonderful.)

As new advances in genetic decoding and gene editing emerge with speed and enthusiasm, the ecological systems they could alter remain enormously complex and understudied.

Hm. So… [Alan chuckles.] It's quite... You're living in Frankenstein's world, ‘eh, and you're taught that it's wonderful and it's great and the whole thing. I know they had dengue fever in Florida for years and I think some of the things were released there at one time to try to do away with that. Bill Gates is in all that stuff as well of course with his different funding to... help humanity. It doesn't mention it with this one, but it wouldn't be surprised if he was. Because there's very little he doesn't have his finger in, very few pies he doesn't have his finger in, maybe none of them actually. But that's what we're living through.

Genetically engineered mosquitoes. Don't forget, that's the oldest modification. Before they were just modifying and interbreeding different types to get big heavy mosquitoes for loading doses for transmitting diseases for the war industry. But here, these ones here, are going to help you. There you go. Maybe when you hear that bzzzzzzzzzzzz coming towards you, and you've been in the military, you say, halt, friend or foe? You see? Find out what it is, is it a friendly mosquito, normal, or a modified one, ‘eh, that's rather nasty? Yep. And you’ll be even more shocked if it answers you.

So I mentioned that one last week anyway and you can go into it. It's longer than I read here. It goes into the side effects, maybe problems to do with genetic engineering and the fact that folk might get, have bad reactions when they get stung and bitten by these mosquitoes. Because you can get prophylactic shock because of its, it's a different type of mosquito, you see. Just little things like that, you know, for the greater good. There's always got to be sacrifices for the greater good.

Government wants to ban cast (A: …a choir…) from SINGING (A: …right…) when musicals return to the West End (A: …in London.) says Lord Lloyd Webber because of fears that it spreads coronavirus

research.ncsu.edu / 19June 2020

(A: I guess they can mime, ‘eh. I guess, just do what they used to do with the groups in Britain on Top of the Pops, they could get on there and just mime quite safely because they’re not forcing their breath all over the place, you see.)

The composer reveals he has had talks with Culture Secretary Oliver Dowden

Lord Webber, 72, says he is unimpressed with current government advice

Theatres have been closed since the coronavirus lockdown began in March

(A: Amazing how you can go into a supermarket, but you can’t go into a theater, ‘eh? But that’s a special virus though, it’s a 6 feet thing as well, you know, it’s just… [Alan chuckles.])

Lord Webber revealed his plans to test hygiene technologies needed … (A: What do you mean, hygiene technologies?...)… to be showcased in the first week of...

(A: Maybe they could attach certain things like ultraviolet in the mouths of the singers so that when they send out and the breath came out and all that, it would sterilize any viruses in the molecules of water vapor, you know, from the breath. I shouldn’t have said that, someone will get a patent on it right away, you know. There you go. Even though I think they had something similar to that in the original Star Trek series. I think it was the one too where that woman, she was a princess who is being transported for marriage, not willing either to go for the marriage that would cement the friendship of the two planets that were always at war with each other, that's what it was. Some of them in there, you'll see them with this little thing around their necks, they were kind of blue faces they had, and two pointed, not pointed ears, it was almost like um, um… almost like two probiscus on top of their heads, as well as their ears. But they were blue faces, and they had this little thing around their neck that gave off a vapor in front of their mouths and noses. Maybe they could come out with something like that, ‘eh, and you could sing, the cast, and you could hear it gurgling at certain points. Gurgle, gurgle, you know, just water vapor stuff. Just a thought. So anyway it says here…)

But he revealed he was not impressed with some of the safety provisions

(A: …blah blah blah.)

The Government has advised theatres to ban singing when musicals return to the West End in London, according to Lord Andrew Lloyd Webber

(A: [Alan laughing.] It's so... [Alan laughing.]

'One of which is a brilliant one for musicals, which is that you are not allowed to sing.'

(A: He was referring to singing on the stage specifically. I guess they can sing in the bath perhaps, ‘eh? Well, maybe that's what they should all do, they should all go into the cubicles in their bathrooms and just amplify onto the stage with their singing and that would be safe than, ‘eh.)

Experts have warned that singing is particularly dangerous in terms of spreading the coronavirus

(A: Experts again, ‘eh? I wonder what kind of experts they are, these ones? These are singing experts, ‘eh. Or maybe they're aerodynamic ones, they can tell the patterns of the viruses. But if they're singing on stage and they're 6 feet away from the folk, what's the danger? ‘Eh? And the folk in the audience are way more than 6 feet away for goodness sakes. Or is it all voodoo and magic anyway? Well of course it is. And you don't need an expert to tell you that.)

Lothar Wieler, the head of Germany's RKI diseases institute, says the droplets can 'fly particularly far' when singing.

(A: I guess he gets paid a lot to come out with this kind of stuff. Because he’s an expert, you see.)

Several states in Germany have banned choir singing in church services, even as shops and restaurants have reopened.

Speaking on BBC Radio 4's Today programme, Lord Webber said it has already been proven that theatres can reopen safely in South Korea.

(A: Yep. That doesn't matter. Facts don't matter now.)

Believed to be the only large-scale English-language production anywhere in the world, the show's world tour has been attracting large audiences to the capital's 1,600-seat theatre.

(A: I guess it's, is it the Phantom or not? Or what is he running here, Phantom of the Opera, yeah.)

The show had a mandatory three-weak break in April after an outbreak of Covid-19 among staff, but has since run without problem.

There ya go. That's how dumb it's all getting. And silly. But it will get a lot sillier than this. Everything is silly, isn't it. Even demonstrations across the planet, hm, and you're thinking this is all to do with one person being killed in America? Come on. Come on here, ‘eh. And then that part dies down, then you've got the other groups wanting to riot and to go further for a communist revolution? They openly say that. Hhhhh, I don't know. I don't know, it's pretty nasty and pretty silly as we go through chaos into the mouth of madness. Maybe even from the mouth of madness.

Now, I'll tell you too, I'm not finished yet, mind you. I should remind you again before you forget, because folk will forget very quickly, to go into my website @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Make a list, always do this, make a list and save the list of all the official sites I have listed on the cuttingthroughthematrix.com website. These are my official sites. Anything happens remember you can always go in there and go to the .com site on Sundays and download the talk. Because there's different things that can happen occasionally, problems, especially now with the Covid and everything else going on and the slowing down of Internet and different things like that. So if you get problems or anything getting pulled from other outlets you can always come back to the source @cuttingthroughthematrix.com or one of my other sites listed on that one.

Remember too, you can buy the books and discs @cuttingthroughthematrix.com and how to do it is also on the site. You can donate to me and help me tick along here. Because believe you me, it's a lot of work to put this stuff together. It's widely used by other folks who, hhhch, make their living on it. It's not lucrative by any means at all. And I don't sell T-shirts, I don't sell anything except just what I've mentioned, books, discs. What I give out there is lots of information.

We're living through an incredible time. This is history, I said that from the beginning, this is history in the making. It's the kind of thing that if you have grandchildren one day they'll turn to you and ask you what happened back in so-and-so. What are you going to say to them? We just had a disease, and someone got killed and there was massive riots and things. Is that all you're going to say to them? Or are you going to have the facts there. Because you have to know.

The truth always must go down through time, by a few at least. Truth, that's how it comes, that's how at the present time some of us know. Not everyone passes it on. But there's always occasionally the little, little groups of people down through time who keep a hold of the facts and the truth. Not just the official records which are always skewed, but the things as they actually happen. As I say, it's so important too, as I said earlier, that I hear from people with their own, their own observations on things. It's awfully important.

Nobody is exempt, no one is unimportant. Because you're living through it, real history. You're experiencing the real history. Don't let it go to waste and disappear to be left with official ridiculous books. Just stick to, you know, stick to getting your own facts across there and send them to me. Lots of folk do, as I say, keep in touch with me. It's awfully important to do. Others can get in touch with me for the first time even and let me know how they're doing and what they're seeing across the world. Because that IS history. What's happening NOW is history.

So again, donate to me you can see how to do it @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. It's very much appreciated and utterly necessary. This is not to buy me second cars or something. Even though the old junker is kaput. And my house certainly does need repair, even basic repairs. But what I do is not, it's never been for the money, or I would've done something else, believe you me. I could have, quite easily. So @cuttingthroughthematrix.com and send me a few bucks.

Now this one here too…

Coronavirus: UK needs to borrow more than £400bn over two years, IMF warns as it abandons hope of V-shaped recovery

independent.co.uk / 25 June 2020

(A: Well, that's the whole idea. Don't forget, the Royal Institute of International Affairs that was simply the group called the Lord Alfred Milner group and Roundtable Society, that ran the and set up the British Empire, or he took it over at least and really push it further and it became the Royal Institute of International Affairs, a private group which also has its American branch, the Council on Foreign Relations, etc. They also set up the World Bank, the Bank for International Settlements, the International Monetary Fund, the United Nations eventually, they set up that too. Everything that's anything, they set it up. And they run it all. It's one group of private banks, believe you me. So…)

UK needs to borrow more than £400bn over two years, IMF warns as it abandons hope of V-shaped recovery

Now, the IMF, International Monetary Fund, that's like the collection agency for The World Bank, you see. They come into a country when you can't afford to pay it back and they slash your social programs to the bone, to make sure they can get the paybacks, you see. That's how it works. So they bring in austerity. So there's Britain, definitely on the road to austerity. They're totally, way over their heads in massive debt. But so is every other country because of this Covid nonsense. Here's another article and it says…

UK debt now larger than size of whole economy

bbc.com / 19 June 2020

The UK's debt is now worth more than its economy after the government borrowed a record amount in May.

The £55.2bn figure was nine times higher than in May last year and the highest since records began in 1993.

The borrowing splurge sent total government debt surging to £1.95trn, (A: …trillion [Alan chuckles.]) exceeding the size of the economy for the first time in more than 50 years.

(A: And listen to this nonsense…)

"The best way to restore our public finances to a more sustainable footing is to safely reopen our economy so people can return to work.

(A: I guess some genius said that, ‘eh. Hm?)

"We've set out our plan to do this in a gradual and safe fashion, including reopening high streets across the country this week”…

(A: Why go through this farce when you’ve had massive protests across the country, that ignored all this lockdowns and everything else? Come on, come on here. Hm.)

Income from tax, National Insurance and VAT all dived in May amid the coronavirus lockdown as spending on support measures soared.

A lot of money is going into big pockets too mind you. The same in the US and Canada and elsewhere. It’s… That’s corruption runs our systems, right.

David Cameron (A: ...the ex Prime Minister of Britain, who was really left-wing even though he was supposed to be, pretended he was right wing…) says the World Health Organization ‘failed’ in its coronavirus response by being too slow to react and too worried about upsetting China as he calls for new international ‘pandemic force’

dailymail.co.uk / 24 June 2020

(A: So, they're all in on it. So here's an ex prime minister...)

calls for new international ‘pandemic force’

(A: … on behalf of the same masters, ‘eh.)

Ex-PM called for the WHO's current pandemic role to be given to a new body

Said it was too worried about worrying China and too slow to warn the world

Urged G20 to discuss new Global Virus Surveillance Organisation in November

(A: There you go.)

'The current system fails in two ways. The WHO relies on countries telling it about emerging viruses. Then the world relies on the WHO telling everyone else,' he wrote in an article in the Times.

'But countries are often reluctant to share for reasons of politics, pride and capacity. And the WHO seems slow to react, mostly for the same reasons.

The WHO is totally complicit [Alan chuckles.] with China and with Fauci and all the other characters that work with the biolabs, folks. I mean, that’s, and Bill Gates, ‘eh, that massively funds them. That okay now too, a good portion of its cash comes from Bill Gates. I think he owns it now. And is further left than Karl Marx was, you know, the whole organization at the United Nations and the WHO.

Here's the thing, here's something that really, really matters to do with all this tracking and tracing and signing up for this and signing up for that, and you have to get your tracking bracelets if you've not got a cell phone, you see, with the right app on it, etc.

Not on the list? You're not coming in! Drinkers might have to register online before visiting pubs when they reopen on July 4, says Matt Hancock

dailymail.co.uk / 21 June 2020

(A: Ohhhh, you might have to register, ‘eh? Hm. It says…)

The Health Secretary confirmed the options are being considered as ways to make it 'safe' to reopen the hospitality industry.

Mr Hancock insisted that the government is 'on plan' to get more sectors of the economy up and running on July 4.

But he made clear that there is little chance of bars and restaurants getting back to business as usual any time soon.

Asked on Sky News' Sophy Ridge programme whether drinkers will need to register before going to the pub, and order using an app, Mr Hancock said: 'That is the sort of thing that we are looking at for how…

(A: They have no imagination, these guys, ‘eh. Oh well, a computer, an app, it has to work, you know, how else can we do it... Throw it out the window and let the folk mingle! Hm! Let them mingle. That's what they did in Sweden and elsewhere. And then you, most folk don't get sick from this, you know. They don't, they don't even know they've had it. You've got to get herd immunity. You've got to get it. N-n-n.)

(A: But of course the big agenda is to make sure you get the vaccine regardless of your own immune system. You know, they can always make it better through science, you see. And even then, he says, it might not last very long even with theirs, you see. But the problem with the RNA type treatments is that it's going to change your epithelia system in your body. The lining in your heart even, ‘eh. And it affects the testes, just like the virus itself does apparently. And it also will change the linings, the composition to an extent of your lungs. It will genetically modify them. Ooooooooooookay. M-hm. So here you go, you have to register for having a drink now. Isn't that amazing. Oh, here you go...)

The step - previously taken in countries such as New Zealand - would allow for easier tracing of customers if someone who went to the venue is found to have been infected.

(A: They're talking about the contact tracing.)

Mr Johnson now looks certain to halve the social distance - as long as other protections such as face coverings are used - in a crucial moment for the coronavirus battle on Tuesday.

(A: So they might go down to 1 meter rule. I guess they have to tell the virus, now, you have to self-destruct at 1 meter, the old 2 meters is gone, the six feet one is gone, so it's down to half that, you see, so self-destruct at 3 feet, there you go, around that distance, ‘eh.)

The next phase of lockdown loosening from July 4 will also permit hairdressers to roll up the shutters in a boost for thousands of barbers and millions of shaggy-haired Britons in need of a trim.

(A: There you go.)

Although Downing Street insisted no final decision has yet been taken on restarting the £130billion-a-year domestic tourism industry...

[Alan chuckles.]   Oh, God, I tell ya, I tell ya. Yep. Why not just open it all up and call it a mass demonstration and forget all the rules and everything and let the folk make money, hm, and see what happens then. That would be all right, wouldn't it? That would be all right, it might just work, wouldn't it?

I'll also put up once again the link to the documentary Seattle is Dying. It came out about a year or two ago showing you it was all happening with the incredible tent cities, drugs, everything. An economy that had completely altered and was stagnant with the service economy from imported goods from abroad. That's across the country too, mind you, across the world that signed on to the free trade deal. The fallout comes across the board to people who used to have work, factory work and so on, all gone with free trade of course. Planned by those who run the world system at the WEF. I'll put that up again, that link. It's worth watching.

Seattle is Dying - youtube.com / 19 March 2019

Remember too that the Irish Sentinel is back up again, and I'll leave the link there for those that want to go in and see what the latest topics are. You can read the articles by Helena Handbasket.

The Gates Of Hell Unlocked - theirishsentinel.com / May/June 2020 / Helena Handbasket

That's really about it for the day. I could have gone on too with more in-depth stuff. But the thing is, I understand most folk really don't want too much in-depth information on it. Some do, but at least I put the articles out there and you can look things up for yourselves and study them. Because when you get a glimpse of how intense and how detailed everything that happens is, and how everything that happens is completely interconnected whether its demonstrations, whether it's riots, at the moment, is to give you the impression of the necessity for a complete change in government systems. That's what it really meant to do.

And the Covid thing, the lockdown, and coming back out, right after [Alan chuckles.] mass protests, it's okay to lock folk down again, you know, no mentioning of the fact what happened during it and [Alan chuckles.] any kind of spread at all during protesting and stuff like that.
So yeah, I could go into it in more and more depth but most folk don't really want it, they can't really handle it, too long. Some people do. But at least the information is out there for those that want it.

Remember, don't depend on government to tell you what to do for yourself. You'd better start thinking for yourselves, quickly. A lot of folk are. Because we've never seen a time when government backed off all, like at once, at once, uniformly, prearranged obviously, prearranged, folks, to all step back at the same time and allow this kind of thing to happen. It's rather, don't you get it, prearranged. That's massive organization, again, everybody pretty well on board with it. Just step right back and let things happen. Because you're bringing in a new system and it's not the rioters' system. They might think it is. It's a complete, it's to suit those who already rule over you and have ruled over you for an awful long time. That's what it's for. And that's who it's by.

For those who have a small support group in their area, maybe family or friends and so on, that's all the better. You definitely should be working together to keep each other going, and fed at the very least, helping each other out to get groceries in and that kind of thing. Maybe even preparations for even worse scenarios if they happen to be fomented with the authorities way above us. Because they will certainly allow it if need be.

You better start taking care of yourselves in different circumstances and figure out things to do under certain circumstances, etc. Very important, folks. Don't sit and wait for things to happen. Because when you've seen generals step back, members of the military industrial complex who are there to fill their own pockets, that are supposed to help the country, stand back and allow things to happen and even saying that they wouldn't backup the president and go and do anything, then you've got the police situation where they won't to anything either because it's not safe for them to do it because they can't get backing either from superiors and politicians, no one is going to lose their job over upsetting certain segments, at this moment. And that's plain to see.

So you have to take care of yourselves. This could turn into a horror show, very quickly, with another incident if that is what the big boys want themselves. They certainly want the regime change. But it's not going to be what you think it is. This is the same change, the post-Democratic system that the Club of Rome, which is part of the WEF has been talking about for years. Post-Democratic system, they've got to ram it in, and this is their way of doing it for those who haven't figured that out yet.

So anyway, hang in there, and keep in touch to the folk out there. It's very important as we go through this scenario. And it's not finished yet as you know. This is to bring in a new system that was planned a long time ago, and it's a way to do it.

For myself Alan Watt from Ontario, Canada, it's good night and Mayor God or gods go with you.

Hi folks I’m Alan Watt and this is Cutting Through The Matrix on July 5, 2020. And what a time we're having, eh? [Alan chuckles.] You often wonder where to start with it all. But the fact is, we're going through a very old plan, obviously. I've spent years talking about it coming, including the preparation for a generation of the anarchists and rebels that will be turning on the adults, etc. and blaming them for all the ills of the world, and the fact that they’re, oh, it's not the fact, but they've been trained that it's a fact, the planet is this dying by misuse from capitalism and the parents, they did nothing about it, you're all responsible. An old technique of course the communists have always used is to train a generation and then use them against everybody else to bring in this system which is preordained by those in charge at the top. The ones that actually push for it at the bottom never figure it out until it's too late.

It really is amazing to watch it all happening, isn't it? Because at the time when you're telling people what's happening, what they were teaching them in the schools and brainwashing them, because they always use your tax money to brainwash your children so they can use them against you, people don't want to hear it. Again, most folk become liberal, you see, when there's a kind of the peace in their society to an extent. There's never total peace in a society. If there is, then you're under a tyranny obviously. But you get a kind of semblance of quasi peace, and you can survive, etc. When you tell them the bad news, what's happening, when they could prevent it all, they don't believe it. Or they're liberal, and even the conservatives are liberal to an extent too, ah well, you know, they're just children.

Well, those children are burning your cities down and smashing and looting and trying to overthrow the whole system on behalf of something which they have no clue exists even way above them. Of course they'll never fathom out at all that those at the top, the very top, the ones from the World Economic Forum, the richest folk on the planet, the real capitalists are getting them to push for exactly the same agenda of sustainability, depopulation, who can breed, who can't breed, etc., and austerity for you at the bottom, rationing, all the rest of it, as we start to die off. They can't figure that out, eh? Of course they don't. They can't imagine anybody doing it. [Alan chuckles.] Even though they're helping it along. It's quite something else.

All they've been trained to do really is just destroy. As I said before, they always get used in the communist system. The communist system, again, is run by the richest folk on the planet at the WEF. Folk can never figure that out either. They see them on television, they read their articles… Because they're all made into stars by the big machinery, the star making machinery. They make these businesspeople into stars even though they're often fronts for much a bigger organization behind them. That's how the world really is run.

But those at the bottom, and the youngsters and the children, have been radicalized just to hate and want to destroy, and they can't really, they'll never see ahead of it all, what's really happening. Even when it is happening. They're the first to get removed by those who take over, the people they're pushing to take over actually. They're the first to get removed because you can't allow radicals to continue in the next phase of the system when they have won, you see, when the elite have won, and they got them where they want them. They've used them to bring it in, all the children have spoken, they've demanded yada, yada. Then of course the ones at the bottom say, well we thought everyone would be free and we'd have our utopia and free sex and everything supplied to us, and it's not happening, and the food would just be magically appearing, it's just not happening here. So they start to riot again and that's when they get removed by those that used them in the first place. They never figure this out. That's what Yuri Bezmenov talked about too.

So yeah, it's easy to radicalize children. You can train them to believe anything. As I've said before, look at the old, old, I don't know if you can even find them today. But look at the old documentaries of China when they were worshiping Mao Tse Tung, the great leader, and they had their Little Red Book. It was a joke in Canada and in Britain at the time of the Liberal party, John Chretien used to waive his Little Red Book about, and that was a little mockery of the [Alan chuckles.] ignorance of the people in Canada who didn't understand it. The Little Red Book of course was a communist book and the children in China would recite it like the Bible. You'd hear them all saying it in unison and chanting from the book as they waved it and praised Mao Tse-Tung.

The same thing is going on today. Don't forget too that Lenin said the same thing. He said that we shall rule and win by using slogans. That's all that they can chant, slogans that are actually given to them. That white folk are evil. Even the white folk are shouting, the youngsters are shouting that. They've been taught to hate themselves. They don't even understand what's behind it, most of them don't that are shouting it. Because it doesn't mean just white, it means the system of capitalism. And they call Blacks white as well and should be destroyed along with the whites. What they mean by that in communism is capitalism and any kind of freedom and small government. That's all classed under the guise of whiteness, you see.

Rather than use just the anti-capitalists phrase… That's the technique of socialism. Remember what they mean in socialism and communism, is that as they change and cover the meanings of what they're after, when they get exposed, they simply change it to another title. Behind that they will always qualify it by saying it's for the revolution, that's what they mean by it. So all these titles are just the revolution for the same old agenda, the overthrow of capitalism by those in charge to put themselves in charge and to rule it the way that they want to rule it. Which of course we saw what happened in the Soviet Union when it...

The Soviet Union remember too, didn't totally collapse either. It was an agreed-upon event. This is awfully interesting, this agreed-upon event, because you'll find, and I think I mentioned it last time too, that Peter Hitchens talked about what happened when he was in the Soviet Union when it supposedly fell. What he means is by seeing similarities, similarities in what's happening now, is this strange standing back of those in authority and kind of letting it happen. It's kind of like an agreed-upon event. And that's exactly what you are witnessing. It's an agreed-upon event. And when I say agreed-upon, it's from the ones at the very top, those who rule over nations, like those in the WEF and the International Banks and so on, the World Bank and all that. It's agreed-upon.

It's like when I've talked before to people who are in the banking industry, the higher, even in Switzerland, and they'll tell you that resetting money to a new value, like 2007/8, it didn't have to happen. Yes, the system was utterly crooked and corrupt, it always has been. [Alan chuckles.] And it won't change under any form of communism either, that was also proven with the Soviet system. They simply created a new system of stores and shops for themselves in the Politburo that the general public couldn't get into; they even used American currency. But that doesn't matter. Facts don't matter these days.

But the fact is, [Alan chuckles.] the fact is again, [Alan chuckles.] here's a fact. That the reset really was an agreed-upon thing on behalf of those who already ruled. It didn't have to happen in 2007/8. That ties in with what Greenspan said years ago. He said that America doesn't ever have to go bust because we can just keep printing cash. You see, just printing it up. And if they're not printing it, don't forget, this substitute is to just put it into computers, into accounts in computers, it's the same thing really. That's what we're living through today.

If you just look back upon it, what folk are really amazed at, maybe, at the bottom, is that this sudden agreement across the board, even with Covid, something that was declared a pandemic when they… didn't even qualify itself under the qualifications and rules for declaring a pandemic, it was way, way down, and they called it a pandemic. We've been through all the farces, and there's a lot of farces involved in this one, believe you me. But we're not allowed to talk about that. Only the experts.

The experts have all got their hands, in fact, a lot of the experts are part of the Pharma vaccine industry. These are private businesses, folks. They're totally compromised. But they have taken over along with the media, who is going to be allowed to say anything at all. So you're looking at true, for those who are rioting, you're looking at true fascism now when your government is colluding completely with private industry, big, big industry that that's got an awful record for colluding this way and getting drugs and so on through, in the biggest event that the world's probably ever seen with trillions and trillions of dollars at stake, of profits, over stuff that hasn't been tested or anything else. Never mind the passport, the Covid passport you're going to get and all that kind of thing and all the technology that's going to rake in billions of dollars, and is already doing it, under something where you're not allowed to have an opinion on because you're just a little puny nothing and you don't belong to the big cabal at the top, [Alan chuckles.] the big mafia at the top that are colluding together.

If you've got an honest society, why would they be so afraid of other opinions? When they can, if they could dish out real facts, verifiable... Don't forget it's supposed to be based on science and that's quite easy then to dish out real facts that you can check up and all the rest of it. Or people can re-experiment and come up with the same, that's how you do it in science, especially medicine, peer-reviewed, etc. If they can't get the same results from the same testing of the same experiments, then it doesn't pass, you see, as scientifically feasible. It should always be reproducible by others basically, the same results.

But they're not going to even have that. I looked at articles today from the WHO and they've got these massive, massive surveys on, and they were having it two years ago by the way to start up a whole, a whole pogrom to get everybody out of the way that stood against any kind of vaccination, who was even on the fence on it, huge surveys they were doing in all the different countries. They have a list of the countries and they give them a list of questions. It was nothing based on science. It was all about, and here's the word, BELIEF. Do you believe that vaccines help, eh?

Now, instead of saying, wait a minute here, here's a bunch of vaccines, how about giving you questions on each one of them? Some folks have had bad experiences with certain vaccines, other ones have got the illness after they get the vaccine. Like you get mumps, that was quite common that when I was a youngster too and lots of them, lots of children that I knew in fact, I think they all got it, we all got mumps after we got the vaccine, so it didn't prevent it. Even the children says [Alan chuckles.] maybe it gave it to us, who knows, eh? That's how bright children are, a bit brighter than… they don't really believe in shutting up, you know, when they're told to. Which is a rather healthy way to be.

But today, the collusion with big, big social media, having huge world meetings with all the biggies in the WHO and all the rest of it, and all the vaccine companies and med companies, and you won't find a doctor who attend these things who's not involved in profiting from all these different medications and so on. It's a massive very lucrative business. So here they are colluding with government to ban anybody from saying anything about it, or even questioning anything. Even asking questions about it. Well, just do what you're told and accept what we're going to do! to you! [Alan chuckles.]

This is true, for those that are rioting, I hope you're understanding, you're looking at true, true, the definition of fascism. Hm. That's what it is. Huge business, capitalism if you like, involved with government to get their own way through for big profits, against even, not even the wishes of the people, but even the INQUIRIES of the people. Outlawing inquiry? And banning and punishing folk for inquiring about things? Whoa! Whoa! Whoa! Whoa! This is the greatest example.

I wish folk could really wake up and see it. If you're tuning into television every day, I haven't watched television for many years and the little bit I get is all from the Internet as little clips and so on. But I don't get the brainwashing from TV. I used to do talks about television and media and how they put things across to the public and that everything is worked out carefully by experts before you hear the newscaster real off the stuff, whatever it's going to be. That's why you get the same, if you just scan through the channels at news time, you'll get the same headlines given to you and the same opinions, like one-liner opinions on each one, oh, that's by conspiracy theorists and dut-dut-dut, and they'll all say the things in the exact same way. This is uniformity of media and that's not free media, that's not true media. That's uniformity. That's really monopoly you're listening to.

But experts, again the experts in psychology and behaviorism worked to put out those scripts and so on for the people to read. It's just like school. School today is a great engineering system for engineering a citizenry, that's what you want. As I say, like Fichte didn't want people to be intelligent and philosophers and so on. He believes school was there to dumb you down so you would be good citizens and do what you're told, that was the idea behind it. Bertrand Russell agreed with that, and he went further talking about scientific methods of indoctrination.

Today you have toolkits, and the teachers are all trained to use these toolkits in groupthink, so if the children ask questions, and they're all sitting in a group, the whole idea is to bring them all to the designed, predesigned answers that they're all going to be given by the teacher. And what do you think so-and-so? Well, I'm not quite sure about that. So the teacher goes into Plan B, C, D, E and so on with individuals, to get them to conform to the pre-required opinion, the preset-out opinion that they're going to be left with. It works awfully well with them.

They'll try to praise the occasional person who asked the question and doesn't quite want to agree with it. So you praise them and say, oh that's very clever. Of course it gets to their ego, and they want to be, they like getting ego padded. Of course they'll say, is it impossible you can just go along with this at the moment, just presume that it's all correct? And they'll say, okay. That's how you bring them into the fold. But then there's other ways too of really, and it's astonishing how successful these techniques are, group consensus. And this is the key to it, it's not individual opinions. [Alan chuckles.]

If you truly live in a free society, you'd have many different opinions of the same topics. But when you see teachers become hostile, this is awfully important, teachers become hostile with that cartoon type face that you see, drawn and hostile expression to the children, then they'll never forget that. They'll feel they've done something terribly wrong, and they'll feel guilty for, just for having an opinion or a thought of an opinion [Alan chuckles.] or inquiry that's politically incorrect. This is the danger that we're in today, it's been done for years now, this technique, and the children have all been taught to conform. Right down to arguing in debate about whatever the topic happens to be, can be put down as bullying, you see, and being forceful and clever about it means you're a bully. So you might even get put on Ritalin or something like that to dumb you down and shrink your brain.

So anyway, it's an amazing system. We've been living through this for years, remember. You have no idea the scams, again, with the big medical authorities. I've got the documentation too of the characters that first came out with the wonderful idea, if the child was a bit hyperactive, and that's very vague as well isn't it. When I was a child almost every boy would be classed as hyperactive, we had energy. Young boys like to run and climb trees and things, and when they go to sleep in the afternoon or night or whenever they get home, they konk right out into unconsciousness. That's how it use to be, that's normal, that's called normal, you see. That's why they had so many breaks in school, it was so they could run around. And they did run around, run all over the place and climb walls and so on. That made them, that gave them the ability to then sit in the classroom for another 1 1/2 or whatever. That's how it really was. But now, big medication is into that, the whole education system. If a child, especially males, are a bit restless, etc., they can be put on these different drugs, like Paxil and all the rest of it, that really, really bring them down.

And we watch this. Do you realize the passivity of the general population, how they've been trained, the parents have been trained and trained and trained through countless articles, paid by the big medical industries and drug industries, how wonderful these medications are? And documentaries galore. With wonderful sounding names.

It isn't just the American Medical Association, and the American Psychological Association. These are private institutions. It's like the Federal Reserve, there's nothing governmental about it, you know. These are private institutions. Really. They might be accepted by government as private institutions, but you understand, they're private. Bernays talked about this. It's funny, I heard a guy talking on the radio last week, with my old talks on Bernays.

But Bernays talked about how to set up front companies, or fronts for your companies, your private companies, to give credence to your company, especially for some expert type of system to where you need experts that would really... Like this, the snake oil salesman you'd see in the old movies doing really good snake oil parts of how to sell their elixirs and so on. Or battery acid in the booze, like the Bronfman’s did at one point [Alan chuckles.] when they leached the booze out of the casks from Seagram's. But again, that was snake oil, you know, used by quacks and so on, in medicine that is. It's interesting to see the same techniques set up.

Because Bernays said, you can always get a little front, a little office somewhere, it could be almost the size of a closet, it didn't make any difference. You give it a fancy title, American Society of Blah Blah Blah. Then you put up a letter head, get it drafted up and so on and printed, and cards and all that. Then you put out bits of news, propaganda pieces in newspapers. And you've got four or five different names for doctors or specialists in whatever, that never have to appear anywhere, they just put their, they're paid just to have their name on the letterhead, they get a stipend every month or whatever. Now it sounds very impressive, doesn't it? The American Institute for Blah Blah Blah, with experts, top experts in the field of blah blah blah. That's how things really go along.

And we hear this all, and because we keep hearing names and terms like here's the names of organizations, we all say, my God, well that's the FDA, the federal drug agency, oh wow. Then you've got all kinds of different institutions. And every country has got the same groups actually, that all work with each other in other countries. But they're private agencies really. Set up that way.

I was rereading today just out of utter boredom of what's going on in the world, [Alan chuckles.] a book on a lot of the history of the American Medical Association. I had heard the guy doing it who put out some of his books years ago, and he had a good sense of humor, he could really give a good tale you might say. But he put the facts out there as well of how a lot of the institutions came into being. He had one on the Federal Reserve, a long time ago, before others grabbed his stuff and published it and never mentioned his name. That was Eustace Mullins. He was hammered as a racist and God knows what else because he wouldn't buckle under and shut up. He literally was known in the Federal Reserve. They used to, they had his books there too, they used to buy all his books, they were so interested to see what he was writing about them. So they knew him, and he would visit once in a while.

I can remember him giving a talk about the Rockefellers. Now, the Rockefellers, there's no doubt about it, belong to a strange organization, very important organization that sent its front people across the world to monopolize energies and supplies and resources and things like that. Monopoly men is one of the terms used about them. So whatever humans would really need in, say, a nation, and then eventually the world, but in each nation what they would need, food, water, heat, or even cooling, but energies of all kinds. Like Technocracy was involved in it too. But energies of all kinds. In fact one of the top members came in to see old man Rockefeller a long time ago and Rockefeller adapted the principles of Technocracy into his monopoly game.

Don't forget that Rockefeller was, he was the man who said that competition was a sin. He meant it. He wasn't being flippant or sarcastic. He really meant what he was saying that competition in his particular, I would call it, theological group of top businesspeople and British lords from Britain and so on, really believed that, that they should be in charge, like technocrats said it too, they should be in charge of the world's wealth, in all of its forms, whether its raw resources or whatever, all of its forms, they should be in charge of it, not just given to anybody. They made it their duty, a select band of them made it their duty to take over the supplies of the world in so many of the things that you need and use today. That's why they created Standard Oil as well, Standard Oil that took over the oil industries within the US, especially. It wasn't a happy little takeover company. They literally, [Alan chuckles.] it was warfare. They burned down rings of other oil-catters, etc., they burned them all down and took over, drive them out, and killed a lot of folk by the way. This is what happened.

Don't forget that the Rockefellers put themselves in charge of these organizations that were set up as front companies for the takeover of America. Long ago. They colluded with their parent company in Britain. Rockefeller was the top chairman for the Council on Foreign Relations for years, and vice chairman and many other things too. He worked with them in London in England, he worked with the parent company, the Royal Institute of International Affairs, another private company, that had been in the business of taking over the world resources long before with the Lord Alfred Milner group. So you've got to understand that this is the real so-called secret society, the one that Carol Quigley talked about. He was in it, and he belonged to it, and he was all for it. Long stories, but you've got to realize that this is how the world really runs. Total monopoly of everything.

Mullins talked about the takeover, the creation of the American Medical Association. It was really astonishing the story he gave of how one man, and he names the guy, literally, who had no qualifications, in those days you could buy your qualifications by mail letter, which the guy did in fact! There was another one, started up the AMA, the American Medical Association, so this particular one set himself up in Chicago and he called himself the Chicago Medical Association. He was an awfully good journalist really, before he gave himself the title of a doctor.

Eventually he became head of the American Medical Association, because he was a good writer. He was awfully good at promoting himself. That's all the AMA did was promote itself for years until it became what appeared to be a real iconoclast expert, the place to go for any advice at all on medical issues. Of course eventually, it blended eventually with the drug industries. Because they became the ones who told you what drugs to use and which ones not to use. So unless you pay them a fee you wouldn't get noted or they'd give you bad write up and told folk not to take your particular medication. Completely corrupt from the beginning. Honestly it was.

Rockefeller himself was involved in that too. They decided with the American Medical Association that they would eventually train, or decide what kind of training doctors would get to become a doctor. They eliminated all other courses to become a doctor, until you only had to use their course and nothing else. That reduced the doctors down to a much lower level, amount I should say, which increase their profits. They didn't want, again monopoly men don't like too many folk involved in profit industry, you see, their side of it. That's what they did with the AMA too. Eventually all the treatment to be approved by them. Often owned by them. Nothing is changed up to the present day.

I thought about that today, I was reading all this stuff about all the drugs, like Gilead [Alan chuckles.], again the contract by Fauci. [Alan chuckles.] I knew it was going to happen long before it was printed in the papers. I knew he was putting off, giving any kind of nod to any other medical treatment because he was obviously in on what was going to happen. But I thought about this medical type Mafia, which is fascism as I say, true fascism, totally colluded with those in government, and the money they give to every politician to run for office, eh. ...and how they can sink any, don't forget, this is a massive multibillion, it's really, it's almost in the multitrillion dollar industry, eh, in the drug industry and vaccine industry because it's across the whole planet. If you're going to upset their applecart for their profits in business, they can destroy anybody. Anybody at all. It doesn't matter who they are. With the money they've got to put out bad press whatever it happens to be, or set up whole teams, like a few thousand folk to harass you, quite easily, that's nothing at all, and get rid of you anyway.

But here they are colluding under the Covid idea. [Alan chuckles.] And with all of its warm-ups to the Covid idea as well, Event 201, etc. If you mention that now you're a conspiracy theorist, Event 201, eh. Isn't that amazing, what they publish, [Alan chuckles.] it's all from their own sites, [Alan chuckles.] but if you say it, you're a conspiracy theorist. But you're looking at all this, and the whole idea with the immunity passports was agreed upon in 2017 I think it was, and who is going to get the contract, yada yada ya, and all the big business companies with their apps for surveillance, etc. on the population. It's just, ah, all done waay ahead of the Covid breaking out. But that's just coincidence. That's coincidence theory, you see. It's their conspiracy theory so I guess coincidence is just what you're supposed to believe in.

But again, your governments haven't got any, any question at all. I haven't heard anybody in government saying, wait a minute here, we have a responsibility to the public, maybe we should bring the public in on this and see what they think about all this. Maybe we should really inform them of facts as opposed to this EU agreement and WHO of, what do you believe about this and what do you believe about that, and do you believe this vaccine actually could help you, do you believe, do you believe?

Instead of just saying, here's the facts, eh, here's the studies, here's the tests, here's what we can verify, etc. Instead of treating us all like we're morons, eh? But again, if they did that, we might say that they have nothing to back up what they're saying when that's all they've got is, do you believe...? Hm? Do you believe? And then they'll punish you if you don't believe it.

Belief used to be just for religious reasons. You know, do you believe in a deity, do you believe in a…? You see? But they're using this to try to get their whole plan through with their so-called polls on the general public. This is the closest you get to anything, is to be involved in a poll study. Hm. Do you believe that this might help you? What does Joe public have a clue about any of this stuff at all? Never mind the time, if you could even get access to the multi-, the voluminous, massive, massive stack of information and study after study after study, from all countries, on coronaviruses, as a beginning. [Alan chuckles.] But you won't even get that, anywhere near, not even a condensed version, you see.

No, you just get, do you believe, what do you believe? And if you don't believe it's going to help you, you're going to be ostracized and you can't move or travel or go to work. Because of what you believe. Now, if you believe correctly and says, oh absolutely, absolutely massa, I believe it boss, hm… you might get to go, as long as you do what you're told and take everything they're going to give you.

There's never been a time in history where this has been done like this. Never. Never, ever, ever. I could go on forever about this particular topic in itself, just on the coronavirus, but there's no point. Because now they're all on board to punish you. And they really punish you. When you look at the Events 201 with how they would go through, and it's a few hours actually that I've got here on video of them talking about it.

They go through the different, like stage one, two, three and four of how they're going to go after folk who ask questions, or the wrong kind of questions, or won't shut up. They start off just by shunning you. Then using other social media, and they'll have thousands of trolls out there, millions of them probably now across the whole planet. I've talked about the 77th Brigade in Britain that literally has thousands of people who attack who they're told to attack on behalf of the government. It's owned by the military, you know, in Britain. So hhhch, but later on they cut you off from making any money. They'll have you banned from getting the word out anywhere. There's freedom of speech for you, we'll just ban you from saying anything.

But all these youngsters that are out there rioting and smashing down and burning things, are going to help bring all this in. Oh, they'll get sustainability, meaning poverty, after this, folks. You'll get an allocated so many credits a week or month like Bertrand Russell said in the 40s and 50s, because this is an old plan. [Alan chuckles.] You'll get your meager rations. And you'll be taught what to eat, and you'll be tested on what you're eating by the way because it's to be expertly run and coordinated and so on. You'll live the miserable boring existence until you die. That's it. All preordained.

They're going to say, but they're going to bring in sustainability and they're going to stop climate change by getting lots of money to stop it. I guess they're going to, I think, I said this years ago, they'll just get big, like these big bomber planes that they use for putting the water out for forest fire, eh, that are huge planes. You'll see them with this big like crane things beneath them that drag along the water and that, they can drop billions and trillions of dollars into the atmosphere, because money is going to stop climate change. Now there's a belief system, eh?

Nothing to do with, mind you, the UN said that the sun has got nothing to do with warmth and heat or climate change, nothing at all. Do you believe, do you really believe the rubbish we've been taught our whole lives long as they give out the statements and we're supposed to… because they're experts? No, these are folk with agendas, folks, big difference. BIG difference. Big, big difference.

Al Gore and all these characters, the guys, I remember reading the articles where he wanted to make money off these carbon exchange banks. He went in business with the company [Alan chuckles.] and his business partner was, [Alan chuckles.] honestly, you can't make this up, [Alan chuckles.] was called Blood. So the company was called Blood and Gore. Honestly. I mean, look it up and see. I've got all this stuff in my archives, mind you, and you can go into it @cuttingthroughthematrix.com and see them, everybody else does. You can't make this stuff up. He's back out again and saying, we've got to rush out and save the world, etc. Hm? And youngsters haven't fathomed it out that these are the guys that want them to riot and all that to bring it all in so's they can go into poverty and austerity. Because if they think they're going to have any upward mobility in a new social Soviet type system, well, there's a belief system eh!? There you go.

Some of the leaders will, mind you, because the leaders in these riots are well-trained Marxists. The global elite love Marxism. They prefer it. They had meetings about that, what kind of society, you know, if we are in a Marxist system as the Club of Rome said, you know, with a nondemocratic system run by experts, like Technocracy, then we can get things done very quickly. We wouldn't have to bother about justifying it to the general public, whatever it happens to be they want to do, just tell them to do it and get on with it. Justin Trudeau in Canada said the same thing, he really admired China because it didn't have to waste time and use publicity in trying to persuade, no, they just tell them what to do and they do it, in a communist system. Isn't that wonderful.

So all these folk that are rioting in the streets to end what they say is, think is capitalism, are bringing in [Alan chuckles.] the plan [Alan chuckles.] from the World Health Organization, the United Nations, the World Economic Forum, the Club of Rome, a post democratic system of austerity and total control, of everything and all resources. [Alan chuckles.] They'll never figure that out. But as I say, the leaders will, they'll get well paid for it, they always pay their leaders awfully well. And they are well-trained. And they are leaders in it too.

Don't forget what Carol Quigley said, for the organization like the Council on Foreign Relations. He says, oh, we have dictators who are members, we have fascists, we have communist, we have capitalists, we have all kinds of people, we don't mind what they're persuasions are. He says, they're all welcome to join us, we work with them all. Don't forget that. [Alan chuckles.] Don't forget that.

You always use the youth. But you train them first to be radical revolutionaries. It doesn't matter if they understand it. You give them basic simple things that are utopian, and you tell them who the enemy is. You indoctrinate them into hating the enemy, which is often their parents in a different generation and so on. It's been done before you see, many times over. You tell them why to hate them, and they really, then you pump them through it until they're vitriolic and you can set them off quite easily because the hate comes out. Hate is a huge emotion. It's easier to hate folk than love them. Hate is easy to induce in people, and bring them into victimhood and say, we're all victims of this terrible system yada yada ya.

I'm not saying it's a great system at all, don't get me wrong. The ones at the top are changing their system for themselves. They already have the last system, or the present system, they're changing it into the next phase, this is the new system for the elites. You understand, it's their revolution. It's not, they're not going to get overthrown by this. They're going into the next phase of a total controlled society. Sustainability is a code term for their dominance over everything. I hope you understand that. But most folk will really quite get it.

They're bringing down the past. Because what you do when you use communists systems is destroy the past and you start off at year zero. This is year zero, you know. That lasts a while as they start slaughtering people. Because that's what they always do, they start off at the statues and then they go on to real people. You'd better get these ideas through your head that this is what this is all about, with guillotines they're putting outside places and so on. And they're being allowed to do it.

Don't think for a second they don't know who's doing it. Everything is under surveillance today. Especially in front of wealthy folks homes, as an example. There's nothing you can do, a mouse couldn't poop on the lawn without getting noticed. You know, so they know who's putting up what, where, why and when and all the rest of it.

Very symbolic of course, beheadings. They even beheaded a statue in Sudbury for goodness sake. Now, Sudbury is a University town, so it's probably, maybe originated somewhere inside there, who knows. But they actually destroyed statues of the Station of the Cross, stations of the cross up on a hilltop in Sudbury. Of course the police kept it quiet for a month before they said anything. I'm sure they had a Council meetings, oh, let's not upset anybody about this and we don't want to get the public angry about anything. This is how we're treated today. It's like the movies. The first thing you see in any movie including disaster ones, oh, don't tell the public, what will we tell the public, mayor, oh we'll tell them blah blah blah but don't tell them the truth. That actually is real life, isn't it? Isn't it really?

Why would you vote for folk [Alan laughing.] that are going to lie to you, and your entire life?

[Alan laughing.] I don't get that at all. It's quite something. In fact, if you accept the fact they do lie to you, once or twice, and they probably will lie to you for their entire lives, then you're acquiescing to the fact you’re run by liars and it's your own fault then, isn't it? Of course it is.

But anyway, yeah, they beheaded some of these statues and that's very symbolic again. Of course they go for the Catholic Church. They've been taught to hate, hate, hate, you see, and what to hate, and who to hate and so on. But let's be honest, in the Sovietized system of communism, and this is well documented too by those involved in it, that the whole idea of Marxism IS a religion, it has the tenets of religion and manifestoes, know its purpose, etc. The same with the Humanist Manifesto, the same, that's totally incorporated into it too. Once you accept that, then you have to expect there are superior types of humans, you see, that are superior, experts to you, and you must obey and get ruled by them. There you go.

When they rule you, there's nothing you can appeal to because you've already kicked any God out the window. Whatever your God happens to be, it doesn't matter, they've kicked it out the window. That's one thing that they are afraid of is religion. You've kicked it out the window so when they're coming to slaughter people or just euthanize them, oh, you've lived until you're 60, you should be dead by now, take this pill and die off quietly please, like the professor in Australia said a few years ago.

What are you gonna say, I've got rights? Well see, once you're in a humanistic system, they tell you what your rights are. Hm-hmph. You don't have anything to appeal to and say, well God gave me rights. No, we don't believe in that, in that silly, no, we're not taking that. Or, you want to be exempt for any vaccine. Oh, we don't believe in that, so they can pump you full of this stuff, you know, that's untried, untested. But at some level they'll know what it's going to do.

This is the system you're in, folks. All under the guise of saving you. It's always, the founding fathers in America said the same thing, that your rights are always taken away from you for the good, it's always for a good cause they have to take your rights off you. Well it's a temporary suspension of blah blah blah, eh. And then when they put chains upon you, like taxes, oh it's a temporary war tax, or it's a victory tax, you know, and it stays forever. [Alan chuckles.] But there you go.

The corruption within the Soviet system is PHENOMENAL. Because then you're in a total atheistic society based on dialectic materialism, and they still, they still got, and when you've created a system of austerity and a form of inequality when the bulk of the population are equally poor, you see, no one wants to be, so the desire to get up the ladder to get more goods and so on for yourself is even greater, and so all the worst types of psychopaths crawl their way up into these positions to get all the different goodies and so on.

And it's depressing. It's depressing, absolutely depressing. When your gods become humans, you're done. I hope you understand that. Done. All our ills come from ourselves in humanity, and greed, etc., and when you glorify human experts, then you're really, really, really in trouble. Really in trouble.

Don't forget that the eugenics movement is completely part and parcel with those at the top, at the WEF. The whole Planned Parenthood in its long history and all that, eugenics, eugenics, eugenics. Eugenics isn't just about breeding. It's about breeds of people. Not just breeding. They've targeted and they know who they want eliminated. Now they're trying to bring it into all the different groups of course, to bring down all the populations. Except the elite within every population.

Of course that was the same thing with Rockefellers, the good American, perfect American Family Association that they had, where they had literally contests and write ups in their magazines for the better families, who had chosen their partners wisely, who were wealthy, etc., and were more stable for a few generations. That's how they married each other, so their offspring had more of the chance of being stable too and successful, yada yada ya. This didn't stop, folks. Margaret Sanger and all these characters belong to this society.

Another thing you'll never do either, once folk have been radicalized to hate, whoever they're given, even if they're given, it doesn't matter who, you understand, you're always given heroes. And when you've been given heroes, and then you find out nasty things about them, it makes no difference to these people. They will never, they can't think this person could have, you must be just bad for saying what you're saying. So facts don't matter either again. You know, if you have books put out about the people you're talking about, by the people you're talking about, it wouldn't make any difference.

Once they're taught to hate, they're totally radicalized. That's what the Soviet system talked about. They radicalized them and then they'd have to eliminate those who were ultra radicalized, because they were now contaminated with radicalization. So you use them. You radicalize them, you use them, then you must eliminate them, or they'll keep rioting even when you bring in the new system because they're not getting this vague utopia, because it's always vague and emotional. Not factual. That's the truth of it, you see.

Getting back to Peter Hitchens, when he… What he noticed, the similarities, and others and I noticed it too, this is strange, of stand down attitude. Which is a big clue. Because the Soviet system didn't just collapse. Those at the top phoned around all the different Soviet bloc countries, the leaders, and they told them to stand down on this date and if you want to prepare to move or stay it's up to you, and they'd even get advised whether to stay or not in fact if there were other jobs they would take over. A lot of the Soviet Politburo simply moved into new political groups, like social Democrats and things like that. But they're really still the same communists.

Don't forget the terms of belonging to something are really ubiquitous to them. They can shuffle them like cards, they don't care. They can put on a new face and call themselves whatever you want them to be called, they'll do it and say it, as long as they profit themselves from it, you see.

But anyway, it didn't just happen. It was decided upon. What's interesting, you'll often get little bits and pieces from folk who belong to subversive groups. It's interesting. And it's not because they're all totally evil. It's because they often have psychopathic traits, and they can't help but boast about certain things. Sometimes you get the greatest truth from a psychopath. Because when they've stopped pretending, because the game is up and they've been caught out and so on, whatever they were after, they'll be quite, quite boastful about their part in how they managed to con this and con that and do this and do that. They're very honest about it. Because they're basically egotistical people.

Malachi Martin. Malachi Martin was an amazing character. He was on different shows on television, shows with William Buckley Junior and so on. But he was in the CIA. [Alan chuckles.] And so was Malachi Martin at one point too who talked about his connections of the Jesuits for instance with the CIA during the Cold War. Because their members were all over the world and so they were a great intelligence collection agency really, even behind the Iron Curtain where often they were persecuted.

But Malachi Martin himself sold out the Catholic Church at one point as well and took the pay from people who wanted to destroy it, paychecks from it, and he was helped along with his book industry as a reward. But nevertheless, a lot of folk liked him. He was an awfully likable character. Psychopaths often are very likable people. He did do some strange things, you know, inadvertently perhaps. He talked about exorcism, that's what really brought him to the entertainment industry you might say, about exorcisms and so on. He would talk about it, and he was well educated as all Jesuits are. It was enthralling to people at a time when people were bored stiff. They're looking for meaning in life and all the rest of it and he gave them what even the Catholic Church had been losing, steadily, since Vatican II, and that was the belief again in the true supernatural. You know.

That's what religion had been losing, especially in the Protestant religion. Protestantism attacked anything supernatural as just evil and then, then eventually with its merging over years with science again, they became, I'd call them cultural Christians, they just attended because they were born into it, but they really didn't believe. Science was their God really and science, they'd quote science all day long. But when it came to the supernatural, oh, that can't be blah blah blah, that's an aberration in the brain blah blah blah blah blah, etc.

But Malachi Martin for a while brought back something, probably inadvertently, that was sorely needed. Because you do live in a world [Alan chuckles.] that really is pretty evil. When you look at what happens with the slaughtering of the Hutus and the Tutsis, it was about 1994 I think the Rwanda genocide occurred, one of the many that they've had there. 800,000 people were slaughtered in 100 days by the Tutsi army from Burundi. It was mainly the Hutus that were slaughtered in this particular genocide. Things like that, you can't really put a human description on it. Was it just purely human evil?

No, something took them over. Of course the scientists would jump in again and you have those who study the different ethnic groups, and anthropologists, and they would try and figure out why these folk just went bad and that's it and so on. But days and nights all you heard was chopping of machetes. You could hear it in the roads. When the journalists were trying to get through in big heavy armed vehicles to protect them, you could, literally these, it was like a massive army of chomping away all along. Just as though something had taken them over.

Very akin to the idea that was put across deliberately again through entertainment long, long before that in the Quatermass group of movies, the Quatermass in the Pitt from the 1950s I think it was. It will give you an idea of overpopulation. This is how it's put across, that's how it's often put across, overpopulation, these things break out, that's what they often teach them in anthropology too, is these things break out when there's too many people yada yada ya, and that's what's promoted.

But no, it doesn't make sense like that. We know that aberrations can happen when folk are forced into cities, that's why you always get incredible deviancies of all kinds break out in cities and all kinds of crime proliferate when you cram folk into small spaces basically. Just the same as animals. The rat tests, etc., and how many you can get in a cage of this size, you know, that 10 feet by whatever, until there's too many of them and they start turning on each other and doing all kinds of strange behavior to each other. That's what happens. But that's what they try to presume that humans do, exactly the same thing.

We know it's not normal to get crammed into cities. But that's what the agenda for the whole 21st century wants. Get the folk out of the rural areas. That's along the communist/Marxist lines again, they always get them off the land, except the ones they deem are necessary to supply the food for the people. That's what Agenda 21 is about too, sustainability, and of the private ownership of cars and vehicles that you need for traveling if you live in the country. It's all coming together now.

So all these folks that are radicalized right now and burning places down and destroying things, have no idea, they'll not be able to cope when all these things come to pass, and they haven't got this strange utopia that they've imagined. Because it wasn't a really taught to them as such. It was always for a better tomorrow, which could mean anything at all. But it's really a better tomorrow for those that rule over them. The real specialists, you see, the specialists, the ones that will tell them what to believe about the environment, about the climate and about everything else, and why they must suffer and starve, you know, as well through austerity and rationing to save the world and the planet, etc., etc. Old stuff but repeated over and over.

I've said before too, that people to get into a state of, and they have gone into a state of lack of purpose. Which the elite have talked about too. You don't realize that often what you do to fill your time, like work for instance, is the purpose, whether you like the job or not, it gives purpose. It gives some kind of pride to yourself that you earned that and that's yours. And it gives you the ability to realize that you do matter, and that because you do put your time in your work, that you should have the right to do with that money as you want to do. And you want to keep as much of it as you possibly can as well, it's yours, isn't it, you worked for it. But that's a bit of a fallacy too, since so much is taxed off of you directly and then indirectly through fees and taxes on goods and so on that you have to purchase.

Anyway, the folk have no idea how bad it's going to get. Because when it goes down to Technocracy, everything you purchase, to energy, to produce, and it's all going to get taxed back off you because that's part of the carbon taxes and energy taxes. It isn't just carbon. Carbon is an idea, like a unit to put down all energy on, you see. And you'll all have to comply. To save the world, you know. You couldn't travel to international parts because you won't be allowed. Like today, you know, it's been getting that way for years. But never mind, you can have your little hobbies inside your cities, little things, little Marxist conventions that you have to attend, by law, or else you're a bad citizen, you see. I gave these talks back in the 90s that this would all happen, and here we go. Here we go. It's quite something.

Now, the elite know too, all those who are rioting need purpose. They also know, and they knew this, by the way, like 30 years ago, even before that, when they brought in a form of free trade, then all your work would go to other, like China and the Far East for cheap labor, you see, to suit those that you worship at the top. You know, the good businessman that have got star quality through the star making machinery that you all think are wonderful, who talk about the environment and things like that, who own all the big industries and so on. And who are all for reducing the population of the planet and going into their Fourth Industrial Revolution as they call it. [Alan chuckles.] Which they own as well.

It's fascinating to see the people haven't really got a clue. They're short-term thinkers. They want instant rewards for things, even the rioters want that. Of course they won't get it. So they'll be dealt with by those at the top. Who they presently worship and thinking they're all working, you know, for the same agendas, the same goals, etc. That's what's unfortunately going to happen.

Because the elite are getting what they want one way or another. They've admitted that through the Covid idea, the total lockdown, the destruction of society and small businesses and private enterprise through the total destruction using Covid as an excuse, then all their goals will be accomplished. They're going to open up businesses like the multinational chains, which are already open of course, and weren't even locked down during all this. They will be the ones standing at the end. 43% I think it was, that was last month, 43% of all small businesses that had gone under, or closed down during Covid, are gone permanently. All preplanned until you're left with the big ones.

I gave, again, it's like déjà vu, to me, it's like looking back and repeating stuff you've done before. Because I said there'll be nothing left except the big corporations eventually, international corporations. That's what you've got. Then they have to be sustainable. So they'll get rubberstamped as being sustainable because [Alan chuckles.] they own them at the top, they've got their shares in at all. But you won't get that. You won't get that. Oh no, you know, your little mom-and-pop store just won't be sustainable, you know, you're destroying the environment. D'you know how many ants live under your doorway there, that doorway and that pathway that's going to your door in that little store there. You're crushing them, you know, you're crushing the life out of them each time you walk over the threshold, eh. Try and argue with that. You see, facts don't matter. [Alan chuckles.] But you're not sustainable. And what you sell isn't sustainable or necessary. They've deemed, under the Covid excuse, they've already deemed what is necessary and what is not necessary, hm, what is essential and what is not essential. [Alan chuckles.] What a scam. And the folk think it's all just happening by itself, you know, it's spontaneously in response to a nasty disease and... N-n-n.

Then they couple it again with rioting and all that. Out comes Al Gore, right. Yes, we know why these children are upset, yut-dut-dut, and youngsters dut... Well, these are the same guys that gave you free trade and took all the work away. D'you realize that one time Canada and the States was booming with factories all over the place? The countries could make everything they needed for survival. Even knives and forks, cutlery, cups and saucers, everything you needed, scissors, everything. Now it's all, you won't find anything made in Canada anymore, you know, except debt. It's all made outside the country. And they called that interdependence.

Which was a lie from the beginning, they knew darn well where they... What's happening today, with being totally dependent and China, was worked out before they signed all the agreements with China. That's what I've often said, why do people bother to vote? Why do they vote?

Sir James Goldsmith gave an incredible talked to the Senate on free trade, at that time it was with North American free-trade and with Canada, the States and Mexico. He said what would happen then. It was a precursor he said to losing all your industry. And that's what has happened, folks, right after that they went off to China as well. But he gave a great impassioned speech, well documented, every topic he touched on to do with it. But the Senate passed it anyway, and a lot of the people lost their rights inside America right there. They've been losing their rights ever since, 9/11 onwards, right to the present time.

Ongoing wars. Then the mass migration of peoples, who have no reason to love you, after getting their nations destroyed with all the different Middle Eastern wars. Then you're mandated to bring them in, and you've got a ready-made nasty army. You know, it's not their… They hate you. I'd hate you. Wouldn't... Yeah, if you blew up my place into the Stone Age, I would have no love for you. Why? How could you have any love for you? Hm?

This is a domino, this is a prearranged strategy of intelligence work, agencies working together, if we can get this, we can use the fallout from that, the blowback with mass migration to destroy what's left of Europe, and again massive welfare system, what a drain, yada yada ya. Then that will be the excuse for anti-terrorism where everyone has to get monitored and yada yada ya. That was awfully successful, all the way through to Britain. You can't have your rights and freedoms, there's terrorists in our midst now, yada yada.

[Alan chuckles.] Astonishing stuff, isn't it. We live through it and watch it but most folk just think, I think they're confused, at the very least, as to why it all happens. Really. Even now under the Covid thing, we've got all these articles about different people getting put up in hotels in Europe in Britain and elsewhere and in Scotland. They're recent refugees who have come in from all these countries during the whole Covid lockdown. You see, nothing, when things don't make sense, there's not much real sense to be made on the story that you're being given. Hm?

It's the same with the lockdown for, because if some think the disease is a killer, everybody would have to be locked down, you wouldn't be bringing in migrants right now. Again, you wouldn't suddenly forget about Covid during mass demonstrations along with others that are doing rioting. When even those in charge of States in the US, the governors are joining them shoulder to shoulder, suddenly it's okay to forget social distancing. Very politicized disease indeed, eh! And as soon as it starts to die down a little bit there, they're right back to telling you to stay 6 feet apart, stay indoors and aarrgh, come on, and lockdown your businesses again.

Do you understand what you're living through here? It's the greatest show on earth. Truly. The greatest show on earth. All the strategies, and all the parts of the strategies are put out by folk on incredible salaries which you all pay for, and all the intelligence agencies that work in these things, the NSA, the CIA, all part of this whole big pantomime that's going to make you suffer, to change the system forever, on behalf of those who already rule you at the top. Hm?

Now, before I get into the actual articles themselves, I hate to say stories. Although much of the stuff you get obviously are stories, eh, we're given stories. Histories are his-stories. But that's all we have to go by today as they try to fathom out truths between the lines, and again, dissecting different parts of articles and paste them off onto other ones, and then you start to get really good pictures of what's really going on, what's behind the scenes and so on.

Today you've never had such a great example of collusion of big powerful organizations, the true, the real fascism which is never mentioned today. Because you're used to it, you think that's normal, [Alan chuckles.] these are normal fascists, you see, that run the world at the WEF, etc, and the WHO and all these things, these private companies and groups. It's quite something.

But anyway remember folks before I get into it, I should remind you to go into my website @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Look at the sites I have there and take note of them in case any of them go down. Remember too you can always see the latest post, even if it's not put up by others right away, you could hopefully get it @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. I try to get them all up on the Sunday. Or you can get it from the other people who put them up, and you're used to it, you know who they are, etc. It's up to you.

But make a list of them anyway because things are happening in a great speed today and you've got a complete intolerance on a wartime strategy footing in fact, against dissenters with this whole agenda right now. Or even people who question it. You don't have to, actually questioning and just asking questions, it makes you a dissenter, right. You're supposed to be an obedient little comrade, you see, and do what you're told and believe, or else, or you're just bad for even asking questions, you see.

They're intolerant at the top, because everything, the whole, their whole future for this whole new Fourth Industrial Revolution system, helped along by the little Marxists at the bottom that haven't got a clue really what's going to come out of it, it's not what they want, that's for sure. But the thing is, they're getting helped by them, to bring in a new system, where they just can't go on in the old system, here's the new one. And it's the one as I say that's post democratic. It's the one they've been talking about for years. I've done so many talks about it for, it's just ad nauseam to me.

But here you are going through it and that's to bring in a new system. They really are intolerant. They've closed down so many people already for asking questions. Or even stating the facts that they've put out themselves. Well, what they claim are facts by the ones at the top and just repeating them. Then if you repeat them, you’re bad for repeating them. Only they, being the experts, can say what they say, but you can't say what they said. [Alan laughing.] Quite something. That's complete intolerance of course.

It's mandating on an obedient society for what they've got in store for you. To keep you all safe you understand. In fact there's an article out, I'll mention it later on, where they actually mention that at the WHO, there's two ways this can go, you know, our way or the longer way to our way, and it won't be pleasant, pretty well. That's what they're saying in a different phraseology, but not too far from what I just said.

So remember, go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com. You can buy the books and discs I've got for sale, or you can donate to me. You can find out how to do it on the website. I'm going to bring in more payment methods shortly too, hopefully. Half of it for me is finding out how to do it. I don't, I'm not really into this whole idea of tech savviness. Because technology bores me now. It really bores me. Sometimes you like a bit of peace and quiet than constantly adapting as they call it in Darwinian terms, oh, you've got to adapt or die, to do the next gimmick they're going to bring out and the next gimmick. It's all preordained anyway. Everything that they're doing right now in the technological field was planned years ago, including the types of technology that's getting dished out now, was used years ago by the higher groups.

So buy the books and discs. Donate to me. It'll tell you how to do it. Checks are okay by the way, at the moment anyway. And you can still send even cash. PayPal, etc. can be used. It's up to you. Because it helps me tick along. Because believe you me, there are going to be fewer and fewer people who are going to be able to say the truth as time goes on. You'll be left with opposition monopolies. That's what I call them, the ones who are authorized to be the real opposite, to be the opposition. Everything else is being eliminated and eliminated you see. You think they're still speaking for you, but they are really fronts for the agenda and political parties.

I personally see the whole agenda right now, with politics, differently than what's being portrayed. I mean, I knew that politics was a con game a long time ago and there's only one group running the show. There's no doubt in my mind about that. I've said before that they give you the illusion of freedom and choice by giving you parties to vote for. Quigley said it himself, Carol Quigley who literally trained state departments for their roles in helping rule the world. He said the same thing, that the political parties, those at the top of political parties, may be the first ones, the president, the vice president and so on, maybe three or four, maybe five, from ALL parties, they're always members of our organization he said. Always. He didn't say usually, he said always. And he says, they have been for at least 60 years, and he wrote the book in the 1960s. Nothing has changed since then. That's how it is.

So they always can steer the world along the agenda that they want to bring it to. They use the dialectic technique with parties. But you have to really look at the different parties and where they want to go. Up until now we've had no reason to think that all parties weren't colluding on the same course on the major issues, with the United Nations, with the ongoing wars, the perpetual wars. Like they said in the military magazine years ago that I read out, you know, the idea is to have perpetual wars. It's astonishing to go through all this and to witness it happening, and folk still can't quite get it. They think that politics is going to all, it's all real to them.

You would not be in the mess you're in if it wasn't for politicians. Generations of them. Thomas Jefferson, to kind of paraphrase something he said. He said that when you see the same agendas carried out, when changes in the house, meaning the party, the same agendas being carried on, he says, know you are under tyranny. Because agendas are a sign and a symptom of the disease of tyranny, you see.

When you sign, they've all signed onto these globalist ideas, long ago, long ago, you know. The US actually helped, and that's no coincidence, set up the League of Nations with Woodrow Wilson at the end of World War I. That was the precursor to the United Nations, you see. Then you have the United Nations, and they have a military wing for the West called NATO at the United Nations. Then you have, you've got a Soviet bloc for a long time after World War II at the United Nations and had the Warsaw Pact countries, that was their pact, Warsaw Pact for the Soviet group countries, that was their military group.

Through it all, through the Cold War the agreement that they reached at the beginning actually was the one in charge, the one who would be in charge of the military aspect for the United Nations, who decided things and so on, would always be a Russian, [Alan chuckles.] a Russian military guy. That went right through the Korean War and the Vietnamese war and so on. There was a Russian in charge who was way ahead of every step the Americans would make, if they went through the United Nations under the agreement and tell them what they're going to do, they always let it be known what was going to happen, the Russians passed it on to China or Korea and so on.

So much folk really haven't a clue about, eh, and probably never will. But again, they keep voting, eh, keep voting. The same with free trade. Oh, that's free trade. What is free trade? Free trade is technically, it's do away with the barriers of importation and exportation. Well, that would sound wonderful if all countries were in on it. They say we'll get a balance of trade. Well, the balance of trade is all your, you pay for everything coming into your country, and you're not exporting anything [Alan chuckles.] eventually because you've got nothing to export except money. That's what happened of course with it. It was all planned that way. All planned that way.

How on earth could you, in the West, compete with the cost of living for basics, right, for basic living in the West, how could you possibly compete with China with the rate of Chinese labor, hm? Of course you could never ever do it. It's impossible. Impossible. You would have to earn way more, like months and months and months of their salaries just to pay your heating for the week in the wintertime, that alone, you know. But again, facts have got nothing to do with it. It's all free-trade and it's wonderful.

But eventually you get to a stage where you owe so much, and you're exporting very little, and then they don't want what you've got to export anyway, if you've got anything at all, and you can't even pay off your debts. Then the elite have already built their, a big monopoly across the Far East with their own banking towers in some countries and all that, to take over. Because they'll move, you see, eventually as they drain out the last vestiges of their system in the West. I really mean that too. They will. That's what all this present Fourth Industrial Revolution part of Technology is all about really, what it's all about.

Don't forget, do you really, [Alan chuckles.] if you really think about it, in a globalized system they don't need to even base themselves in your country anymore, when they have the whole world completely tied up for themselves, your whole NSA, the CIA, all the other institutions that have literally city sized, literally hard drives for collecting all the data on everybody, and all the technicians employed, they could move them off, all of them, to India as an example, or somewhere else. If they wanted to. They don't need to be present in your nations to do anything.

That's what the Fourth Industrial Revolution is about too. The new nomads, you see. They're the ones that they use, the technicians and those in technology are to be nomads who travel across the world going from city to city when the job is there, and they do what they're told. They can't stay in a place too long, their boss will tell them, the company, the executive will tell them that they won't ever have permanent homes basically in their lifetime. That's what they've been trained to do eventually. Also, they have no loyalty to any country anyway. Which is part of the New World order. It's a global takeover. A standard...

I used to wonder about the Soviet system and Marxism. The first thing in Marxism was centralization of power. First thing. It didn't matter which size country or continent or civilization. That's what the EU was for, centralization of power over all the other nations in Europe. That's what it was for. Based on Marxism. Marx talked about that in his lifetime about a united Europe, with a centralized system, in a trading block basically. But he also talked about an American one would be set up eventually for the Americas, and that's what NAFTA was part of, you see. Then one for the Far East/Pacific Rim. It's all been done as well. We're living through it. Old agendas, written, drafted out in the 1800s and implemented through the 1900s and in the 21st century. We're living through it.

And you think it's all to end up where? Do you still have countries? No, you don't. They don't plan on having you, countries are just little, they could've put numbers on the nations which they would quite happily do, number, you’re number so-and-so. That might come one day if it's necessary, for bureaucratic purposes. Who knows? That might be.

But most folk as I say, as I've said before, they glide through life. I won't say float, unless you're on drugs. They kind of glide through life getting bits and pieces or bits and bytes of information. As Jacques Ellul said, through osmosis almost, not through really thinking things through, learning and studying, but little bits and bytes from the controlled media. Of course media is controlled.

Look at the monopolies of the Rockefellers and the group that he worked with, the Council on Foreign Relations, doing surveys way back in the 20s and 30s to find out how many newspapers and magazines they'd have to control to standardize the news. Again, Marxism, standardize the news. Folk cannot equate Marxism with the richest folk on the planet. When the richest folk on the planet will use any technique that's efficient for them. Of course as I've said before, it's far more efficient now to change it into a post-democratic system, so you have to obey and do what you're told so they can ram their agendas through on behalf of themselves. Not for you. [Alan chuckles.] That's what you're living through. Quite something.

So let's look at some of these articles here, right. Here's the EU one and it says…

2022: A Vaccination Passport. The EU Keeps Quiet Over Suspicious Documents

strategic-culture.org / 28 June 2020

Surprise, surprise, the European Commission (EC) had a “Roadmap on Vaccination” ready months before the COVID-19 pandemic broke out.

(Alan: Well, we knew about this one last week, but I’ll just reiterate this again.)

The Roadmap should lead to a "commission proposal (A: I love these commissions.) for a common vaccination card / passport for EU citizens by 2022".

Last updated during the third quarter of 2019 (A: …when this was all done for the EU, and the WHO together, right…), the 10-page document was followed, (A: I'll put the links ups by the way for those that want to follow it or redo it on other shows.) was followed, on September 12th, by a "global vaccination summit" jointly hosted by the EC (A: …the European Commission.) and the World Health Organization (WHO).

(A: Now, it's so wonderful really, the European Commission is an unelected group that runs the European Union. They're unelected, eh. Commission, that's how you get the word commissars from, it was modeled on the super Soviet system. Dissidents from the old Soviet bloc came out openly years ago, I remember putting the articles up, criticizing it for being a form of SUPER Soviet system. And that's what it is, the European Commission, right. So here it is, it's really a nondemocratic system the EC, the European Commission, and the World Health Organization, again another system you don't vote for. It's just allocated this power over you, by itself. [Alan laughing.])

Under the header "Ten Actions Towards Vaccination for All – Everyone should be able to benefit from the power of vaccination", the summit manifesto laments that:

(A: Isn't that wonderful. It's all to do with you benefiting and getting your share of it, you understand. It's not a company flogging it's good.)

…the summit manifesto laments that:

"Despite the availability of safe and effective vaccines, (A: There's a statement right off the bat, safe and effective, eh…) lack of access, vaccine shortages, misinformation, complacency towards disease risks, diminishing public confidence in the value of vaccines and disinvestments are harming vaccination rates worldwide."

(A: So you understand, the big corporations, this massive business, [Alan chuckles.] it's just not getting the profits that it should be by making these things mandatory and so on.)

And with them, arguably, the pharmaceutical companies' profits.

In July 2017, for example, Italy made 12 vaccinations compulsory for children. In the aftermath, the prices of these very vaccines went up by 62%: from an average price per dose of € 14.02 (A: Euros.) up to € 22,74.

The global vaccination market is currently worth USD (A: US dollars.) 27 billion a year. According to WHO estimates, it will reach USD 100 billion by 2025.

(A: Because they've got a lot of stuff they want to give to you. [Alan chuckles.])

Since the (A: European Commission.) EC-WHO global vaccination summit (A: This is what they do, eh.) also discussed a renewed immunization agenda for 2030, (A: That falls into the big plan, 2030 here.) the big pharma's shareholders need not worry for the long-term performance of their stock.

One ought really not to "harm vaccination rates worldwide".

(A: There ya go.)

The manifesto of the global vaccination summit goes on to list 10 "lessons (…) and actions needed towards vaccination for all".

Each "lesson" is a gem of what the Italian neo-Marxist philosopher Diego Fusaro calls "the therapeutic capitalism".

The wording is peremptory and leaves no room for nuance and debate. Adjectives such as "all" "everyone" "indisputably" abound. Statements in the conditional mood are absent.

More than a cautious, scientifically inspired and open-to-doubt plan of action, the tone – "to protect everyone everywhere", "to leave no one behind" – is unsuitably messianic.

What about those who do not want to be "protected" that way? In Germany alone, roughly 10% of the whole population, or 8 million people, are strongly against a Corona vaccination.

But let’s look at what we can learn, so to speak, from these “lessons”.

(A: It goes through more and more and more. It's not a bad article actually. I'm sure it's completely verboten by now. They go through the different lessons as I say.)

Lesson 4, “Tackle the root-causes of vaccine hesitancy…

(A: It’s quite interesting if you’ve got the patience to read through it, I’ll put the one up from the actual EU, WHO, from their own website on it. It really is amazing. As I say, it’s all to do with belief. Do you believe this and there’s all these polls they’re doing and so on, all to do with belief as opposed to giving you facts on anything. It says…)

Lesson 4, “Tackle the root-causes of vaccine hesitancy, increasing confidence in vaccination,” looks like the blueprint for a major propaganda campaign, one that foresees – we read on the EU Roadmap on Vaccinations – the “development of e-learning training modules targeting GPs (A: General practitioners.) and primary healthcare providers focused on improving skills to address hesitant populations and promote behavioral change”.

(A: So once again, they got the psychologists on, the ones who prompt you and all the rest of it. How do you get the folk to accept things that their common sense tells them maybe they don’t want? [Alan chuckles.] This is what it is. Science, science, science, eh, psychology and behaviorism and neuroscience and these prostitutes that have no qualms about changing your mind, for the greater good, and you never know that you didn’t even change your mind by yourself, it was all done for you.)

Lesson 5, “Harness the power of digital technologies, so as to strengthen the monitoring of the performance of vaccination programs”, raises, in times of tracing apps and electronic wristbands, legitimate concerns over the further encroachment of technology in our lives – and bodies.

It's really dictatorial. Meaning, the actual articles from the EU itself, the actual stuff that they put out from the EU, and I'll put it up as I say, In Vaccines We Trust, that's part of it too. This joint agenda from their own website. They had the head, they've got everybody who's anybody here on board with this thing, honestly. Jason Hirsch is the public policy manager at Facebook. He's there, completely on board, talking about the fact they're going to censor anybody who is against this or doesn't agree with it and so on. THIS is fascism, folks. This is real fascism. Multinational, multibillion-dollar corporations of the drug industry, everybody who's going to profit off of this, along with members of government, and social media, all their communications technology, all on board to make sure that you haven't got a say in what they want to do with you? This is incredible what's happening. This is just... And they're going to silence you for noticing it?

This is REAL, real tyranny, folks. Incredible tyranny. I wish folk could really understand that. Because this isn't going to, you understand, if you go along with this, this isn't going to stop with this thing here. It's to continue to other greater things as they say.

In their own website it says…

European Commission - Global Vaccine Summit 12 Sept., 2019 - background

ec.europa.eu / 12 Sept 2019

To conclude the Summit, the European Commission and WHO jointly published 10 Actions Towards Vaccination for All, setting out priority areas for future collaboration.

(A: So they're not finished yet.)

Commissioner Vytenis Andriukaitis thanked participants for their commitment to building an active community that can solve the problems identified during the Summit.

(A: Well, the problems are the public. This is what they mean here.)

'If we are serious about overcoming these challenges, we need to act as one.

(A: Well, there you get, there's your totalitarian system, we've got to be like ONE, y'know. We can't have you all thinking your own thing here. You're all going to, we're all going to work together as one. Where have you heard that before, eh? Hm? In tyranny. In tyrannical systems.)

This is only the first step. (A: No kidding, eh.) Today must be a watershed moment against vaccine-preventable diseases,' he said. 'If we fail to act, we are condemning the most vulnerable in our communities

(A: Ah, come on, come on here. The most vulnerable were absolutely put to their deaths with this latest nonsense of putting infected folk into old age homes and so on. Come on here. And then putting them on ventilators. Hm? The most horrible crimes are committed by people who are dressed in suits and ties, well dressed, who I call it reeking, they reek of wealth, and with their wonderful education, they can put things across, but it's all written for them mind you, and they never give impromptu talks or anything. But they can really charm, because they're psychopathic, they can charm everybody. But here they are, you know, it's astonishing what's in-your-face if you care to look at it. You're looking at tyranny, folks. N-n-n. And they always use all these bleeding hearts stories they come up with, that the reason, oh, we have to help, we're here to help. Raking in trillions of bucks, is that your reason for helping is it, eh?)

Joe Cerrell, Managing Director for Global Policy and Advocacy, Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation, discussed how the legacy of the Global Polio Eradication Initiative could be carried forward to advance global health.

Remember, Bill Gates before was still getting sued I think by India and other places for bringing a new type of polio out in the wild because of the oral vaccine that his group were distributing. Then they found out, no, they created literally a new wild untamable form of polio spreading. They never tell you the downside of anything, eh, or the effects on some people and so on. They never go into that. Never. Never ever.

But this is about how they're going to overcome and conquer the planet here. This is what this is. It's what it IS! For a disease literally, that they're admitting, even still admitting, and they can't squash it all totally, the fact that the disease literally doesn't seem to be killing folk like they first saw it all, the Covid itself. Don't forget, Covid is a variety, there are stacks of different kinds of Covids, they give them numbers and most of them are pretty harmless. This one here supposedly was harmless until it got out of the lab. But again, we're not supposed to mention that anymore either. Even though you've got the data of what lab first got the thing, and then using its gain of function made it into a more, supposedly a more lethal variety, more virulent variety. Even though they're putting down everybody who dies with it IN their system as dying OF Covid, even when the doctor says no, they're not. They might have covid in their system but they're not dying of it. But facts don't matter.

D’you realize, this is a whole big agenda. I've got articles back from the League of Nations, 1917, 1918 or 1919 that was, 1919 I think when they set up their preliminary, the early form of the WHO through it. Their agenda there was to literally vaccinate everybody from birth to death continuously for all new kinds of things, and boosters galore. Back THEN they said they would get it. Well, how would you get it? Well you need a big, big scare, folks. And terrify the public using all the sources, what they're talking about here, using all the media, a terror campaign. Don't forget the articles I read a couple of weeks ago, two or three weeks ago where it came out from Britain that the actual psychological units that work with the government, the nudge groups and so on, worked out strategies to literally terrify the public to get them to comply. Terrify them. And it says to exacerbate and increase anxiety amongst the public by telling them, basically by telling them, by making sure that horror stories were put out by the media. This is fact. This is not make-believe here. I've got the articles to prove it from the, from themselves. And here they are at it again in a bigger way to do it to the whole planet. It's just astonishing. N-n-n.

Quite astonishing.

But they have the right title, one of the articles here from, or one of the topics here, on the picture you see on the screen and it says...

Roundtable 2: The Magic of Science – Boosting vaccine Research, Development, and Innovation

Well that's what it's about, it's magic, folks, magic, when it's all to do with belief, you see. As opposed to here's the hard facts, good and bad. Hm, good and bad. They will not give you all the negatives either. But the magic of science it says, boosting vaccine research. There you go. N-n-n. Quite amazing. I'll put these articles up. Remember, I do put up these articles, that I don't just come off the top of my head with things. I'll put these ones up. They've also got…

COVI-PASS Immunity Passports

covipass.com

It uses state-of-the-art patented V code technology. Click play to watch the Covid explainer video.

EM Biotech is at the forefront of global health tech and has developed Covi-Pass to revolutionize the health industry with its digital health passport.

(A: There you go, a passports run by these big monopolies, these true fascists at the top that will tolerate no questioning at all, hm, completely intolerant, as true fascists are. So here they are, they've got all the stuff ready to roll out. Digital health pass. And of course you pay for it too, these companies don't do it out of the goodness of their hearts, to help you. They want money for research and development.)

During the pandemic the world is searching for a secure solution to hold test immuno response information and vaccination details, for now and into the future.

Covi-Pass has been developed to be the world's most secure digital health passport solution.

(A: Hhhhh. I just sometimes I go to my bed at night and just sleep silently, it's a happy sleep you go into when you realize that you've got all these thousands of big corporations that are out there helping you, it's so cozy that feeling, you know. And hhhhh, then you watch your taxes go up as you pay them all. But that's what you've got in this wondrous age, eh?)

COVI-PASS™? is equipped with military grade encryption and has more than 2.2 Quintillion variations of codes and is technologically superior to everything else.

(A: Mm. Wow.)

It can be scanned at distances in some uses over 100 meters applied and sizes it down to 100 microns, scanned within 170° angles, and features error correction where the code still works whether partially damaged.

(A: Wow.)

It could save hours for healthcare and businesses and social requirements.

What is Covi-Pass?

Secure digital health passport which displays your Covid 19 test history and immuno response and other relevant health information.

You understand, this is a lifelong passport and everything else you've got is going to be added to it. And all your mandatory boosters for everything. Forever. Hm? If your immune system can handle all this stuff getting pumped into you. So there you go.

I remember reading years ago, the actual articles, I can remember them, when it talked about the Cold War. Oh, the Cold War, my God, it's got to finish now and what are we going to do? It said, well all the research and developments that worked with the military-industrial complex will have to go into surveillance, you see, new forms of surveilling the general public and they had the best minds working on it. Well, bingo, 9/11 came along as well. Then you've got this as well. It's all research and development, same corporations, you see. They're all making money off of you, as usual. As they chain you, put you in chains with all their, oh you've got to have our technology or you can't move, it's illegal to move without our technology. But that's not fascism. That's not tyranny. No, no.

Mass-Tracking COVI-PASS Immunity Passports Slated to Roll Out in 15 Countries

mintpressnews.com / 26 June 2020

(A: So the Covi-Pass, all arranged I'm sure before you heard of coronavirus.)

COVI-PASS will determine whether you can go to a restaurant, if you need a medical test, or are due for a talking-to by authorities (A: …you see, so the authorities might just want to talk to you about your behavior…), in a post-COVID world. Consent is voluntary, but enforcement will be compulsory.

(A: There you are. So initially it's voluntary. But that's how all things start. Did you know driving licenses at one time were voluntary? So was vehicle insurance. Once you have a certain percentage, well, you see, let's just make it mandatory, most folk are going along with it, 60% accept it, what’s wrong with you? That's called democracy. Democracy is a handy saying the elite/tyrants use once in a while.)

Through the magic of Internet meme culture, most Millennials will be familiar with the famous opening scene of the 1942 film, “Casablanca,” where two policemen stop a civilian in the “old Moorish section” of Nazi-occupied French Morocco and ask him for his “papers.” The subject is taken away at once after failing to produce the required documents. The cinematic exchange has been used ever since as a popular reference to the ever-encroaching hand of the state, which is now on the verge of attaining a level of control over people’s movements that puts the crude Nazi methods to shame.

Don't forget too, in Nazism or in the Soviet system, the first thing they do is restrict travel. That's what all tyrants do, restrict travel, you need papers to move. Even to move out of your little area into the next quadrant or something, next section, you need papers and so on. And folk can't put two and two together. It's the same system, folks. And it's odd too, they never hammered the Soviet system for that, eh? Isn't it? The Nazis are always bad. The Nazi socialists are bad, but the Soviet socialists are good. That tells you who ran, [Alan chuckles.] who is running the other system actually. There's a lot more to it naturally.

I remember too Peter Hitchens talking about the Soviet system. He lived there when it was the Soviet system. He said that if you had a vehicle or you were coming into your own apartment, he said that the police would have to know why, who you were, where you were, where you had been, where you were coming from and all the rest of it, if you had a car there. He got out of the car, getting dropped off to his apartment building. The two cops were there. If you're foreign, again, it wouldn't matter if you even lived there, they would take your passports and your papers. As they did with him. Because he was standing up for himself, he wasn't arguing with them. I guess he didn't bribe them. Because eventually things would get so corrupted to bribe everything in a Sovietized socialist system to get things done. That's a fact, folks, even to see a doctor eventually you had to bribe receptionists and all that to get an appointment.

Peter Hitchens was standing there and the cop, with disgust just, it was raining too, just threw his papers and passport into the gutter. Then the cop says to him, and where you are going anyway, where do you live? He said, I'm going to that building there. It was the same building that one of the top political bureau politicians lived in. When they realize that, the cop picked up the stuff, tried to shake off the water, handed it back and walked away right off the bat. That's, that is totalitarianism, where everything is WHO you know. If he wasn't in that building, his papers would have lain in the street and disintegrated in the water. That's the system you want to bring in here. Of course we do it with a humane face, nice smiling face, done properly on television, you see, and is for your own good. Just obey. Just obey. For the greater good. We're all in it together.

A British cybersecurity company, in partnership with several tech firms, is rolling out the COVI-PASS in 15 countries across the world; a “digital health passport” that will contain your COVID-19 test history and other “relevant health information.” (A: Ha.) According to the company website, the passport’s objective is “to safely return to work” and resume “social interactions” by providing authorities with “up-to-date and authenticated health information.”

These objectives mirror those that Bill Gates has been promoting since the start of the COVID-19 lockdown. In an essay written by Gates in April, the software geek-cum-philanthropist lays out his support for the draconian measures taken in response to the virus and, like an old-timey mob boss, suggests the solutions to this deliberately imposed problem. Ironically, Gates begins to make his case for the adoption of mass tracking and surveillance technology in the U.S. by saying that “For now, the United States can follow Germany’s example”; He then touts the advantages of the “voluntary adoption of digital tools” so we can “remember where [we] have been” (A: Aaah.) and can “choose to share it with whoever comes to interview you about your contacts.”

Remember too that years ago and I put the article up that I think it was the woman Teresa Tam who was the head of Canada's health, an appointee, talked quite happily about the fact, years ago on an interview on television, that they could use identity bracelets, electronic bracelets that would track you if you, you know. Eeeeeeeee, this is, these, I just rolled off these people. These are all, these folk literally are really good bureaucrats in a technological society, a technological tyranny. They'd fit into any era, mind you, the same characters. Because they don't think, it never occurs to them that they have rights for the people. It doesn't even dawn on them. It doesn't even vaguely waft through their brain. It doesn't happen at all with them. Quite something.

There you go. It's really astonishing isn't it. It's astonishing. Hhhhhh, I-yi-yi. Hhhhh. Another article, it's quite interesting this one. It's from, it's Dr. Stoian Alexov, President of the Bulgarian Pathology Association. This particular version of that was put out by Global Research, but you can find the actual article put out by the doctor himself. The title is striking because it's slaps everything in the face, and I'm sure it will get pooh-poohed and all that. But he says…

"No One Has Died from the Coronavirus"

globalresearch.ca / 2 July 2020

Important revelations shared by Dr Stoian Alexov, President of the Bulgarian Pathology Association

A high-profile European pathologist is reporting that he and his colleagues across Europe have not found any evidence of any deaths from the novel coronavirus on that continent.

Dr. Stoian Alexov called the World Health Organization (WHO) a "criminal medical organization" (A: Yep.) for creating worldwide fear and chaos without providing objectively verifiable proof of a pandemic.

Another stunning revelation from Bulgarian Pathology Association (BPA) president Dr. Alexov is that he believes it's currently "impossible" to create a vaccine against the virus.

He also revealed that European pathologists haven't identified any antibodies that are specific for SARS-CoV-2.

These stunning statements raise major questions, including about officials' and scientists' claims regarding the many vaccines they're rushing into clinical trials around the world.

They also raise doubt about the veracity of claims of discovery of anti-novel-coronavirus antibodies (which are beginning to be used to treat patients).

Novel-coronavirus-specific antibodies are supposedly the basis for the expensive serology test kits being used in many countries (some of which have been found to be unacceptably inaccurate).

And they're purportedly key to the immunity certificates coveted by Bill Gates (A: [Alan chuckles.]) that are about to go into widespread use — in the form of theCOVI-PASS — in 15 countries including the UK, US, and Canada.

Dr. Alexov made his jaw-dropping observations in a video interview summarizing the consensus of participants in a May 8, 2020, European Society of Pathology (ESP) webinar on COVID-19.

The May 13 video interview of Dr. Alexov was conducted by Dr. Stoycho Katsarov, chair of the Center for Protection of Citizens' Rights (A: …that's a strange thing, Protection of Citizens Rights, it sounds rather alien, eh.) in Sofia and a former Bulgarian deputy minister of health. The video is on the BPA's website, which also highlights some of Dr. Alexov's main points.

(A: I'll put these things up. It's actually in the article anyway, the links.)

We asked a native Bulgarian speaker with a science background to orally translate the video interview into English. We then transcribed her translation. The video is here (A: So you've got the links here.) and our English transcript is here.

Among the major bombshells Dr. Alexov dropped is that the leaders of the May 8 ESP webinar said no novel-coronavirus-specific antibodies have been found.

And it should be. You see, this is a part of it if there IS a virus, right, and people have recovered from it, you get antibodies. By the way, it's not unusual, there are thousands of viruses out there, that you're completely oblivious of. Happily. Most of them don't do any harm. Unless they get them into these labs, and they put gain of function and make them rather dangerous. That's what gain of function does. But they go through your body all the time, all these different viruses. Regardless, even if they're mildly, mildly a problem, even an irritant, your body will find ways to destroy it, and create antibodies. That's normal. It happens all the time. You're in complete, it goes on all the time and you're completely oblivious to it, you see.

Just like the coronavirus, that they say, at the moment, that even though their rates are rising, it's because they're doing more and more testing on a daily basis. A lot of these test kits, by the way, give false positives as well, that's another story altogether. That's a fact. That's a fact, they're putting out, they're admitting that. But it doesn't stop them giving you terrifying numbers all the time. But it does not mean the folk are getting ill and going in the hospital. Most folk are not ill. You see.

So it really is like a test kit produced pandemic that we've got. It's a terror, terror, terror thing, it’s something that most folk don't even know they've had. Because it's a big agenda. Don't forget, everything hinges, they've actually said it at the WEF before this all happened, they would need to do something to make us all sustainable, because we were ignoring them and yada yada ya. And here it goes, they're using it all. Anyway, it says that, yeah there's no coronavirus specific antibodies that they can find in the blood.

The body forms antibodies specific to pathogens it encounters. These specific antibodies are known as monoclonal antibodies and are a key tool in pathology. This is done via immunohistochemistry, which involves tagging antibodies with colours and then coating the biopsy- or autopsy-tissue slides with them. After giving the antibodies time to bind to the pathogens they’re specific for, the pathologists can look at the slides under a microscope and see the specific places where the coloured antibodies — and therefore the pathogens they’re bound to – are located.

Therefore, in the absence of monoclonal antibodies to the novel coronavirus, pathologists cannot verify whether SARS-CoV-2 is present in the body, or whether the diseases and deaths attributed to it indeed were caused by the virus rather than by something else.

(A: …like heart attacks or strokes, or folk are dying of cancers too. You know, they’re dying of cancers, if they find it in their system with it, even with a very iffy test, they, it doesn’t mean that killed them, you see.)

It would be easy to dismiss Dr. Alexov as just another crank ‘conspiracy theorist.’ After all many people believe they’re everywhere these days, spreading dangerous misinformation about COVID-19.

(A: That's the last articles I've talked about, according to Facebook, they're all on board with stopping folk spreading dangerous information and misinformation.)

In addition, little of what Dr. Alexov alleges was the consensus from the May 8 webinar is in the publicly viewable parts of the proceedings.

But keep in mind that whistleblowers often stand alone because the vast majority of people are afraid to speak out publicly.

(A: And they really are. You're looking at a real mafia here. I mean a real, real monopoly mafia in that whole industry. That forbids you to even speak about it or even inquire or ask a question about it, isn't it? They tell you just do one thing, obey them. Obey what they want to do. To you.)

Also, Dr. Alexov has an unimpugnable record and reputation. He's been a physician for 30 years. He's president of the BPA, a member of the ESP's Advisory Board and head of the histopathology department at the Oncology Hospital in the Bulgarian capital of Sofia.

(A: It goes on and on and on. Another part of the same article says...)

…in a June 9 Off-Guardian article that the novel coronavirus has not fulfilled Koch's postulates.

(A: And these are like commandments in this field actually.)

These postulates are scientific steps used to prove whether a virus exists and has a one-to-one relationship with a specific disease.

(A: Right. That's how you can, otherwise it would all be, it's called A disease, there'd be different kinds, you know, you've got to find what kind it is.)

We showed that to date no one has proven SARS-CoV-2 causes a discrete illness matching the characteristics of all the people who ostensibly died from COVID-19. Nor has the virus has been isolated, reproduced and then shown to cause this discrete illness.

In addition, in a June 27 Off-Guardian article two more journalists, Torsten Engelbrecht and Konstantin Demeter, added to the evidence that "the existence of SARS-CoV-2 RNA is based on faith, not fact."

The pair also confirmed "there is no scientific proof that those RNA sequences [deemed to match that of the novel coronavirus] are the causative agent of what is called COVID-19."

Dr. Alexov stated in the May 13 interview that:

the main conclusion [of those of us who participated in the May 8 webinar] was that the autopsies that were conducted in Germany, Italy, Spain, France and Sweden do not show that the virus is deadly.”

He added that:

What all of the pathologists said is that there’s no one who has died from the coronavirus. I will repeat that: no one has died from the coronavirus.”

(A: You see, they might have had it in them, but it’s not what caused them, even though someone put it down, mandatorily, to be the cause of death, are told to put it down, he says that’s not what’s killing them.)

Anyway, I'll put this up for those who want to peruse it. Again it's not, every alternate point of view is just completely forbidden, eh. And I mean FORBIDDEN in this democracy, forbidden. You should all have the hackles of your hair up at this forbidden idea. And you're going to get punished for questioning something. Punished?! In democracy? Wait a minute here, eh?

WHO warns coronavirus pandemic is speeding up as countries ease lockdown rules:

I knew that would happen. I said that months ago, I says, they'll give you a little break in the summer from the lockdown, which they did, a little, very little, and then they'll say it spiked again and lock you down again. Because they wanted to do that for all, right off the bat Fauci said that from the beginning, you know, you'll be locked down probably right through into next year, at least. This is all agenda. They've got a big agenda to fulfill. Fauci is like the front man for a massive, massive multinational corporation, many, many organizations and corporations, that make their living in this kind of thing.

But again, he is also part of this big, big agenda of control for the WEF. Of course he is. Fauci is at the very least CIA. He's worked with all the big biowarfare IV labs, these are the warfare, these are biowarfare companies that work there too, folks. Oh, yeah, so we want to, we just want to see if this thing could evolve by making it evolve, you see, faster, and make it more deadly to humans to see what would happen. I said, that's what biowarfare is, after the treaties and so on, they got to call it experimenting for healthcare instead, you see, they can't say, well we're making deadly diseases to kill folk. He's in charge of all of this? He is also up there in the cancer industry, you know, with and he's also there too with the Maryland group as well, Fort Dietrich, definitely Fort Dietrich. I've got the articles here where he was actually allied with the cancer institutes as well, and that's where the articles lead to Fort Dietrich and his associations with them too.

No, you don't get to that level of control without being way up yonder in the intelligence agencies. You just don't. Because whatever you discover, and he's got lots of patents on different things, whatever you discover, it's got military use. Of course it has. You could not be allowed to exist without being one of them. Because otherwise you would get approached by outsiders and then you'll sell it to them, all the things you've, hhh-hm, discovered, right.

And who voted for Fauci? Does anybody get to vote for Fauci? Or Bill Gates? Or anybody at the WHO? Or the United Nations? No, you don't. So when you go along with them, you're accepting, legally, you're acquiescing to tyranny, folks. There's no democracy here.

Again, this article, CNBC naturally, it's got, going back to the terror, terror campaign, oh my God, the pandemic is speeding up...

WHO warns coronavirus pandemic is speeding up as countries ease lockdown rules:

‘The worst is yet to come’ - cnbc.com / 29 June 2020

No, they're getting more positives. But again, these tests are so faulty anyway. And these folk are not sick. Hm. That doesn't matter though. It doesn't matter. They'll never back down. It's like the Bush campaign with weapons of mass destruction. They all had to parrot the same stuff. They're all sworn to it, you see. All these folk that you're seeing, are sworn to this agenda. To the bitter end by the way.

Another article here, it's so amazing [Alan chuckles.] as they, what's the first thing that the Communists wanted? The elimination of the family unit, and religion too though, eh. End religion. That's the one, it doesn't matter if it's them or any other tyranny, it's always end religion. Because religion is an awful problem. The WHO said it too, a lot of, oh, their opposition was from folk who said that they wanted religious exemptions from vaccines. We have to eliminate religion. That's an awful nuisance, this thing that gives, that you say gives you rights, you know, this problem about rights. Aaach, who do you think you are, peasant? So here they go again…

Singing in houses of worship banned under new order from Newsom as pandemic worsens

sacbee.com / 2 July 2020

(A: And that's California. Naturally. Naturally. [Alan chuckles.] I said before that my mom used to say, that all cancers, and she was talking about social cancers, they all start in California and spread out to the rest of the world. It's like it's a testing base for what's next and PC and all the rest of it.)

...updated COVID-19 guidelines issued Wednesday by the state Department of Public Health required "churches and other houses of worship to discontinue singing and chanting activities."

(A: You see, there's more to this because I can remember in previous times, the folk, churches would discuss what was being done to them in the sermons. The preachers would mention what was happening and the folk would get informed, and then they'd start saying together, no, to whatever it happens to be, no. So what you can do, just ban them from going, or stop them from speaking or singing. If you stop them from singing, I guess you can stop them from, maybe you're supposed to go to church and mime, they could put a record on and they could mime, eh, to it, would that be okay? You know.... how farcical this all is. Don't forget these are the same departments that allowed all the massive protests, Black Lives Matter, right, and the anarchists and all that, no problem at all with all that. Suddenly no mention of Covid and social distancing. But this, back to the, oh no, you can't sing in a church. M-hm. [Alan laughing.])

(A: And here you go too, you see, here you go, if you can't get what they're digging at here, it says…)

In previously allowing religious organizations to reopen in late May, (A: …right, previously…) the state merely said (A: …then…) these institutions should “strongly consider discontinuing singing, group recitation, and other practices and performances.”

Health agencies such as the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention say shouting or singing can spread the coronavirus just as easily as coughing or sneezing.

(A: There’s also a lot of shouting going on with all these protests and I heard them singing out their different memes and mantras, and everything is slogans, right, that was okay though. It’s a very politicized disease, this, isn’t it?)

California’s health department agrees, and as Gov. Gavin Newsom begins tightening protocols during a resurgence of the pandemic, (A: [Alan chuckles.] It’s not disease, the folk are not getting sick with it.) it now says singing and chanting are outright banned.

(A: There you go. There's your tyrannies, folks. I guess you can still, can you still speak?

Maybe if they all learn sign language, hm, as your masters tell you. It's not meant to be logical, you understand. This is a technique that throws everybody off. It's not meant to be sane or logical. Again, I think it was Bananas, that movie that one of the comedians was in. He ends up joining some revolutionary army, it was a comedy. At the end the guy they were following when they win, the first law he passes is, right now everybody must start speaking Swedish, this is in Latin America, and wear their underwear on the outside of their clothing. It's not meant to be logical. It's meant to throw your brain off, out of whack. This is a technique by the way. This is really, in fact, this is a technique.)

“Activities such as singing and chanting (A: I guess chanting, if it's maybe just slogans for riots and stuff, maybe that's all right, eh? …singing and chanting…) negate the risk reduction achieved through six feet of physical distancing,”…

...that that schoolgirl came up with, with her computer. Because daddy worked with the military-industrial complex, and he must get his daughter noticed so she can get into Harvard or somewhere like that I suppose. Another computer module, modulation, ooooooooooh, my goodness, 6 feet of distance. Very, very mathematical diseases, eh? At 6 feet it hits an invisible wall and drops to the ground, bomff. There ya go. Regardless of breezes or doors opening and windows open. No. There ya go. Hhhhhh. There's magical thinking for you. This is all magical thinking. That's what magical thinking is. M-hm.

Do you realize that if someone, someone went a bit off, you know, a bit manic as they'd say, a bit hyper, bipolar, or schizophrenic, start doing odd behavior, right, and got noticed and brought to the attention of authorities, that they would write these things down to them, you know, and they'd say, listen Bill, tell us why you're staying 6 feet away from anybody? And he'd say, well, he says, there's all these germs everywhere and I've worked it out mathematically, and he'd pull out a big whack of numbers and things and formulas, and he'd say, I've worked it out that if I stay 6 feet apart, these particular diseases, you see, just, just hit invisible, an invisible wall and they come right down, right down, oh yeah. And you'd say, oh I see, Bill, okay, okay. Right.

We are all being taught to believe this. Because some schoolgirl came up with that and the military-industrial complex thought this was a great way to control folk, they jumped in on it and paid money for it. Aaah, let me see your computer, oh wow, that's fascinating there. I guess maybe Ferguson should use that same one as well. Maybe he's already doing it.

Magical thinking, folks. That's what will be put down, with the schizophrenic, magical thinking. He thinks that this particular, he thinks that there's a virus out there, that's not making him sick mind you, but he thinks if it's out there it can't travel further than 6 feet, so he's got to stay 6 feet away from you. There you go. N-n-n. Isn't that amazing.

And if you get it, every sign and symptom of it will cover every disease known to man. The common colds. Allergies. Fauci added that last week, was it. He says, oh, even sneezing, he said, or maybe having the sniffles, blocked sinuses or runny noses, one or the other, it didn't matter. He covered every base, in the middle of the allergy season. Oh, ho, that's just coincidence. That's conspiracy thinking, that, eh. You could also get it with constipation. You get it with diarrhea, you know. You get it with a sore stomach. You get it with a whole host of things, all these symptoms will come and go. And it doesn't matter, you've definitely got Covid. Yep. Or presumed to. Which will come down as a definite. Because that's what they're doing now, presumed goes to definite, and gets added to the numbers.

So if you ate something you shouldn't have just one night, a bit too much of something, you get a bit of problems with your bowels the next day, you see, that means your little bracelet or your app, your mandatory app is going to tell you, you'd better get locked down for at least two weeks. Quarantine. Because you're burping a lot. Mm, okay. Magical thinking. [Alan laughing.] This article is too good to leave alone though, isn't it. It says that…

‘WE RECOGNIZE THAT SINGING IS A CHALLENGE’

The new guidelines were released the same day Newsom issued his most dramatic reversal yet on reopening the economy, calling on Sacramento and 18 other counties to halt indoor restaurant dining and close movie theaters, card rooms, indoor museums and other venues. Sacramento County’s closures took effect Thursday at 3 p.m.

(A: I guess you can go in the streets by the thousands, that’s okay.)

Unlike the restaurant closures, Newsom said little about the new guidelines on houses of worship, mentioning them only in passing during a press conference Thursday.

It remains to be seen if, or how, the state or counties are expected to end singing in houses of worship.

(A: Can you sing in your bathroom anymore? I wonder if you’re allowed to sing in your bathroom?)

Churches were among the most aggressive institutions in pushing back on Newsom’s original stay-at-home order in mid-March.

(A: There ya go. Can’t you see what’s going on here? They’re getting rid of all opposition. If you go along with it.)

Several sued the governor to overturn the order, saying it violated their First Amendment rights, although none were successful in court.

(A: It just shows you the collusion and the corrupt system. So singing is a challenge. Yep, there you go.)

Another article too is again, and I really, you know the Rockefeller Foundation has been at the height of, again, technocracy, taking over resources, running and managing the American Medical Association, how they get taught, what treatments they're going to dish out, right down to the cancer treatment, slash and burn to the present day, you know. N-n-n. Monopoly. And what vaccines you use. And what pharmacology will be used, or what the public will have access to. It's a monopoly, total monopoly. So again, I'll put up...

National Covid-19 Testing Action Plan

Pragmatic steps to reopen our workplaces and our economies

rockefellerfoundation.org

(A: Well, do you vote for the Rockefellers? Hm? As they go through this whole idea of contact tracing and mandatory this and mandatory that and yada yada ya. And you all better just obey, yada yada ya. Hm.)

The Rockefeller Foundation exists to meet moments like this.

Is that really, is that why they exist, eh? M-hm-hm. Through philanthropy we can control everything. Who's going to question philanthropy. Well, look at the salaries of these philanthropist workers, eh. Whoa. CEOs and corporations and so on, hm. Yep.

Again too I get these, oh, peaceful demonstrations that are a complete joke, eh. Oh well, you see, there's good folk, but these folk... Well sure, Antifa took it over because they jump on the back, that's what communism does. They need the mob, they get carried away thinking they've got rights and they're going to demonstrate against something, then you jump on it, exacerbate it, and get it really going, trying to get the government to let the troops out on the streets. That's standard too. Lots, I've got books on this stuff from the Cold War. They try to get the government to act aggressively using the troops, and they say, oh my God, they set the troops on the streets, and then the folk join the communist group to fight it all. Then they all get used, so that the communist group can take over at the top and bring them into utter misery. That's how it's done. That's what Antifa is all about. They're peaceful, they're peaceful demonstrators so…

BLM/Antifa Rioter Shoots at Driver Trying To Escape Protester's Barricade

needtoknow.news / 1 July 2020

(A: Even going into New York, on some of the highways there, they were just jumping on the cars on the road and climbing all over the vehicles and so on, just challenging them to do something. Last week I mentioned a different one, a different demonstration where a guy managed to get his truck just past the crowd, and this other fella, who was a lawyer, protesting naturally, shot him in the head. Peaceful demonstrators, eh? And there's lots of video out there now of folk getting dragged out of their little mom-and-pop stores and beaten up and left for dead, in different places. They've got to exacerbate the problem. The communist do that, they exacerbate the problem to try and get massive backlash from government. Then that's to try to get people on board with them, because the backlash from the government is really overdone, that's generally what they're hoping to do, escalate the situation. So this is another one, it's in Utah…)

Utah: Jesse Taggart, 33, was booked into the Utah County Jail on multiple charges, including attempted aggravated murder and aggravated assault after he allegedly fired a pistol (A: You can actually see the video clip on it…) into an SUV attempting to escape a mob blocking the road during a BLM protest.

(A: No, protests don't stop vehicles from traveling, folks, and close down roads and stuff. That's different altogether.)

Samantha Darling, 27, was also arrested on charges of obstruction of justice and rioting. The 60-year old driver underwent surgery for non-life threatening injuries. BLM and Antifa have been targeting motor vehicles more in recent weeks as inner cities begin to push back against their violence. [This has nothing to do with race or George Floyd.]

…obviously, it's not. Shooting folk? They're shooting cops too and running them over as well, and there's lots of videos of that happening as well. You can see this guy firing, and then walking into the middle the road and firing as the car is trying to get away firing again. So it was definitely attempted murder, he wasn't just waving the thing around. Most of the stuff though you never see in the papers, everybody's terrified to even put out anything negative about what's happening. I'll put up an article to do with Sudbury...

Canadian Catholic diocese aims to repair defaced Stations of the Cross catholicnewsagency.com / 30 June 2020

(A: They cut them off, the faces actually, they were bronze I believe. This is all to do with this message of beheading, beheading, beheading. I hope you're getting the message, folks, this idea of beheading and guillotining, etc.)

The vandalism is not part of the recent spate of incidents in which statues have been toppled amid protests him…

(A: Well, how come they know nothing about it or what happened, but they can tell you it’s not part of the recent spate. This is just propaganda, PR, you see. Because these things had to be burned off or cut off with some sort of portable cutter, you know, a power cutter, something like that. But it’s got nothing to do with what’s happening of course, nothing to do with that.)

The Stations of the Cross were cast and placed in the early 1950s. The Grotto of Our Lady of Lourdes was built in 1907 by the region’s French Canadian community, and remains a place of pilgrimage and prayer.

(A: So it was French Canadians. There ya go. Apparently, they did one outside too, put a guillotine outside of one of Mr. Bezos’ houses in the States. But he wasn't in that one at the time.)

Now, everybody knows about, I hate to even mention this because it's such a... hhhhhh, a pre-worked out agreement with Ghislaine Maxwell, how she had been arrested and all that. I mean, the whole idea is they've been going through, and you know this, you all know this, this is such a big high-profile case to do with intelligence agencies, [Alan chuckles.] foreign ones really, and blackmail. With lots of important people availing themselves of the, of having sex with young females especially, I don't know if they had young guys too, but young females for sure, for politicians and important people in different governments in different countries. It's so hot that this could never get released into the press, who's all involved. Obviously. Obviously, your countries would fall apart including all those running maybe all this, aachem, [Alan chuckles.] this covid idea at the moment. I'm not kidding.

I mean, don't forget too, that Bill Gates was pally with Epstein as well, you know that. He was on his plane apparently before too. Ghislaine Maxwell whose dad was given full military honors and a funeral in Israel, was an agent for the Mossad and worked for them his whole life. He brought his children up and Ghislaine definitely for, to take over, etc. And she did. Even though it's come out too from an intelligence agent from the Mossad who said the first time he saw Ghislaine Maxwell and Epstein work together was in an office in Israel, and it was a Mossad office at the time. So this goes way back for many, many years.

I love that one of the articles, that they're preparing for the case, you see, and a friend of Ghislaine said she did it for him, everything she did was for him, Epstein, because she thought that one day he'd marry her. Who's... You see how they're preparing everything? The victim thing, she's a victim herself, you see, you know. No, this is way, way above all of that. You know, this is an organized, by psychopathic type agents to do their job, eh. It wasn't because the guy was just a horny guy, that's what they want you all to believe, he's just an incredibly horny guy. No, no. This was literally a massive operation. Not only just one, I know of other ones too by the way, across the world. They are not that uncommon.

Don't forget too that Ghislaine herself said that she's got photographs and videos and like thousands of these different things that happened there. Too much, there's no way that this is going to go very far. She will, she will testify to one or two people that she knew, she'll mention Donald Trump by the way, that's why she's, the actual year is set for maybe two or three years in the 90s, instead of ALL through the 90s and right through until Epstein's death. Why not? This is the agreement, they prearranged to agree to this, you see. She'll get a slap on the wrist and that will be it. There's too many important folk involved in all this. Way too many. N-n-n. So this is the agreement they've come to obviously.

It's such a big case. I mean, it's so amazing that, I think it was Farmer or one of the girls who actually did the paintings for Epstein, she painted the victims. She was interviewed by Whitney Webb as you probably know in a two-part interview, I think it has two parts. It's interesting to see that she knew Maxwell too and Maxwell seemed to be the one who procured the women, and trained them, helped to train them, break them in if you like, to be young prostitutes for all these very important people.

But she herself was kept as a, almost like a prisoner in the Epstein ranch down in New Mexico. It wasn't Epstein's ranch at all, apparently. She said in I think the first interview it belonged to, this is the name they don't want involved anymore, get it out, get that name away, Mr. Wexner. Because he seemed to be way above, he's the guy who set up Epstein in the first place. He's a big controller. But in the interview Farmer mentioned that big ranch there where a lot of it went on too, one of the many places it went on, not just the island of Epstein but this ranch as well, owned by Wexner. She said, this was the house that they used for the movie Eyes Wide Shut. Isn't that something. What a coincidence.

Therefore I'm pretty sure that's what the formula is going to be. It's all prearranged. She'll admit to, a little misdemeanor she'll admit to, you see. And maybe a few of the girls get paid off under conditions that they say no more ever again. And that will be that, you see. But again, if they go after Trump again, it would make sense if they go after Trump regardless. Because this is the time for reelection coming up in November, isn't it, and the more nails they can get into the coffin the better.

You've got to remember too that folk aren't really shocked about this. We're so jaded because this war using sex has been going on for an awful long time, to help destroy the culture. Obviously. How do you destroy the family unit? Make it impossible not to be turned on by all kinds of things and television movies, you're brought up with it. Of course you've got a generation raised with pornography now. It's pretty well guaranteed that very few folk will ever stay with a partner for any length of time.

It was like that in my day too, you know, when I was young. They were really pushing it then. It sped up and sped up until it's normal fare. Until literally you've got grandmothers and great grandmothers who watched the 40 Shades of Gray, is it 40 or 50, I can't remember. Which is S&M, introducing S&M, sadomasochism into sexual play supposedly, for entertainment. That's the mildest form that they can give you is entertainment in that TV type category.

But the whole idea of young, young, young is getting pushed as well. You've got movements now with, what was it they call it, it's not just young attracted to, its beyond just young it's like, it's pedophilia is what it is they're pushing for as well. They're joining the usual big group of it all, that's now their preference, and they're pushing for their rights as well. You can't really get the public who watched all this stuff on regular television movies today to be concerned about youngsters having sex or being forced into sex as adults. It's become what they watch for goodness sake. So you can’t get them to react to it. You just can't, you can't do it.

You understand, when children are not safe in society, and it's taken for granted that they can be used like this, there's nothing left to save. And your society has gone down the tubes fast. When a big business is made out of selling body parts of babies, I think we're pretty well done for. Don't you?

Now, this article came out in May I think it was, one of many articles since. CDC, the Centers for Disease Control, they control diseases there, they don't cure them, just control them.

CDC Confirms Extremely Low COVID-19 Death Rate

technocracy.news / 5 July 2020

The CDC now independently confirms recent research by Stanford University that COVID-19 has an extremely low death rate. This exposes the Technocrat hysteria as being man-made and not based on any real, verified data. ? TN Editor (A: That's Technocracy News.)

Most people are more likely to wind up six feet under because of almost anything else under the sun other than COVID-19.

(A: It's got the link to the report from the CDC itself here, so you know that it's not just hearsay.)

The CDC just came out with a report that should be earth-shattering to the narrative of the political class, yet it will go into the thick pile of vital data and information about the virus that is not getting out to the public. For the first time, the CDC has attempted to offer a real estimate of the overall death rate for COVID-19, and under its most likely scenario, the number is 0.26%.

(A: It’s actually lower than that now, since then. So yeah, I mean, most of these folk are dying out, they're dying anyway, eh. We all get there, folks. When this thing started, the way they put it out, you'd think folk never died before. There's people dying every day of the week, every week, every month, every year. That's what happens. As youngsters get born, folks die. That's what happens. But we've been so separated from looking after our own families as they die, etc., that that is getting to be a more remote thing, until it's your time to die yourself. Hm. Most folk die outside their homes now. They're taken care of in homes or hospitals or whatever, and then undertakers deal with all of that side of it too, it's all over and done with before you know it. And folk don't want to think about it. It's a scary thing, death, because one day you're going to die. It's a scary thing, so just don't think about it.)

(A: So some of the media comes out and you know, thousands of folk are going to die here. And we're all panicking, oh my God, we're going to die. Like it's all starting now, we've never died before, oh my God. That's how they turned this whole switch on, isn't it, with this type of scenario, by suddenly making you realize that folk are going to die. But there you go, I'll put this link up anyway for those who want to know and read it and so on. Again Stanford was involved in the study and so on and yada yada ya. It says…)

Until now, we have been ridiculed for thinking the death rate was that low, as opposed to the 3.4% estimate of the World Health Organization, which helped drive the panic and the lockdowns. Now the CDC is agreeing to the lower rate in plain ink.

(A: Again, this is a massive mafia operation. Honestly, it really is. Don't forget, Bill Gates funds a lot of, that came out too, officially, that Bill Gates supplies so much of the cash to the World Health Organization. Everything literally [Alan chuckles.] is contaminated, put it that way, you know, so much so that you can't, you've got a really look at it like, ooooo, I don't think so, n-n.)

It won't make any difference because facts don't matter though, you see. It's an agenda driven thing, isn't it, with big, big players in industry and they all know each other and they all profit from it too.

China has rushed through, again, it's a propaganda piece as well, right. China has come out with their version for a vaccine, and it says…

China Military Becomes World's First To Use Experimental Vaccine

ibtimes.com / 30 June 2020

The vaccine named Ad5-nCoV was developed at the Academy of Military Medical Sciences by PLA's (A: The People's Liberation Army. You know, I love how they always use, the same after Antifa, you have the communist organization that will, they always say on behalf of the people, most of whom never get a say in anything, it's always on behalf of the people.) Major General Chen Wei and vaccine company CanSino Biologics

(A: So there you go, the vaccine company, I guess they're sitting pretty.)

The PLA maintains a catalog of special drugs and if Ad5-nCoV gets added to the list, it can be used in the case of a major outbreak

Vaccines using alternate technologies are also being explored in China

The first phase is to give the trial vaccine to small groups of people

(A: They're doing the same thing in the States with something.)

In phase 2, the clinical study is expanded, and the vaccine is given to people who have characteristics (such as age and physical health) like those for whom the new vaccine is intended

Phase 3 is a widespread trial where the candidate vaccine is given to thousands of people and tested for efficacy and safety

(A: Well, that's impossible because it can take a few years as a follow up to see if any negative things happened, like, become hypersensitive to different things and allergic to things, as the immune system goes kind of haywire. That's what happened to mine a few years back in the 90s.)

Many vaccines will move on to a 4th phase, where formal, ongoing studies continue after the vaccine is approved and licensed

(A: It can take years. Which also means it's wonderful because then it means you'll need to have your bracelets on and your apps on your phone, and your annual boosters for years, you see, and studies for years, like a lab rat. Oh, you need more of it now, it's not working, the dose you got, so we're telling you to come back in and get an extra strong dose of it now.)

The World Health Organization (WHO) reported clinical trials are underway for 17 vaccine candidates, (A: There's big money, eh.) seven of which have been developed in China. At least one vaccine is being developed by Oxford University (A: It's amazing too, I've got the studies done by Oxford and even the people who work there, [Alan chuckles.] aaah, they'd work all these biolabs too, the same people.) and AstraZeneca is in its phase three studies.

(A: I've got so much, ooo, there's a lot of negative stuff you should dig into yourself on what these companies have been up to in the past. It's up to you if you want to find out. You'll find it if you want to look for it. It's scary stuff, a lot of it. Also…)

Vaccines using alternate technologies are also being explored in China.

(A: They're talking about the RNA type vaccines which are going to alter your cell structure in your lungs actually. [Alan chuckles.] It says here…)

A conventional vaccine can take months to go from the lab to the infected patient.

(A: Do you hear the wording, d'you see the wording here…)

A conventional vaccine can take months to go from the lab to the infected patient.

(A: If the patient is infected, you see, that means the system hasn't fought it off, if they've had the infection for little while, right, so the conventional vaccine would be useless to them. The conventional vaccine is meant to stimulate your system to attack it and let your own body produce antibodies. Well so if they're giving it to someone who's already infected [Alan chuckles.] by it, it wouldn't stimulate anything to produce, you've already got the thing to stimulate your body which is the virus itself originally, right. I-yi-yi. You're supposed to give it to the folk who haven't got the infection yet, that's the idea.)

They also involve growing the virus in large quantities which poses a bio-hazard risk.

(A: Oh, you think, eh? Hm.)

The RNA vaccines (A: Right, this is where the Gates stuff and all the ones in the West are going.) require only a small amount of the target virus used for gene sequencing and once this is done the sequence can be sent electronically via computer to anywhere capable of synthesizing the vaccine. This cuts the production time from months to as little as one week.

The world may have to wait as the vaccine race continues, but the spread of the disease has not stopped…

Well. The more they test, the more they find there's new cases. But you could find it if you picked other viruses too by the way, you'd find that millions have got it, if you wanted to test for other viruses that are harmless. So the more you test the more you, oh my God, you know. Have you any symptoms? No, no. Do you feel ill? No. That's how it goes. There ya go. With this one too they'll tell you it's mutated, you see. Before you know it. And it will keep mutating, and that means you've got, oh, every six months we've got a different virus, a different vaccine for you, eh. They can play this game forever. I hope you understand. It's meant to be used forever. And it will be by the way, if you don't just say, that's enough.

Welcome to the neo-Marxist 'Church of Holy Wokeness' washingtontimes.com / 26 June 2020

Welcome to the neo-Marxist 'Church of Holy Wokeness'. It's a church that places riots over revivals, conflict over unity.

At a Black Lives Matter protest in Cary, North Carolina, a white woman takes to her megaphone. “We repent on behalf of, uh, Caucasian people,” she shouts, as she calls upon the crowd to kneel before two Black pastors seated before them on a park bench. Several audibly weep as they bow in obeisance.

At a church in Atlanta, Dan Cathy, CEO of Chick-fil-A, genuflects before a Black colleague while shining his shoes in a ritual atoning for the collective “shame” of being White.

In Washington, D.C., thousands kneel at the foot of a monument to Martin Luther King Jr. in penance for the sins presumed to be endemic to their race. On the streets of New York City, a Black man approaches numerous White women and demands that they bow and apologize for who they are. Dozens comply as he videotapes their confessions.

Democratic leaders, wearing the priestly garb of kente stoles, kneel in religious surrender at our nation’s capital.

Evangelical churches, too numerous to count, post “laments” on their websites mourning the “unjust fabric of society.” They call on “those who have light skin to confess their sin of willful obliviousness” and plead indulgence for the assumed immorality that comes with their class and color.

Theological seminary presidents issue decrees that talk of “confessing, systemic racism,” (A: It’s amazing how these, you see the same slogans around the world at the same time, boom, you know.) and the presumption of evil that is resident in various shades of melanin.

(A: I guess that’s the atoning bit, that’s melatonin, you atone with the melin.)

Welcome to the Church of Holy Wokeness.

Welcome to a church that preaches collective blame rather than individual repentance, a church of enablement rather than evangelism, a church of riots rather than revival.

Welcome to a church of “collective guilt” rather than one that preaches personal sin.

Welcome to a neo-Marxist church that talks more about class conflict than the good news of salvation, a church of division rather than unity, one of us versus them, of the 99% versus the one, a church of the proletariat versus the bourgeoisie, of balkanization rather than the B-attitudes. Welcome to a church that has more in common with the Cultural Revolution than it does with the Cross of Christ.

Welcome to a church of racists pretending to stand against racism, a church that marches for “love” while fomenting hate. Welcome to a church that is shamelessly intolerant while it pretends to be tolerant, a “non-judgmental” church that rushes to judgment.

Welcome to a church that categorizes people by the color of their skin rather than the content of their character.

Welcome to an “affirming” church, a church that tells you you’re “born that way” rather than you must be “born again.”

Welcome to a church that bows before men while standing against God.

Welcome to a church that worships what it sees in the mirror while denying what it reads in the Bible.

Welcome to a church that has exchanged the truth of God for a lie, a church that worships the created rather than the Creator; a church that has been given over to a debased mind and reprobate heart.

This is the church of intersectionality over the inerrancy. Pay attention to its high priests. Listen to their words. Hear their liturgy: the virtueless virtue signaling; the dog whistles; the shouts to redistribute power and property. Learn their doctrine: the elevation of the group over the individual; the belief in government more than God; the parroting of Marx, Lenin and Mao; the ignorance of Matthew, Mark, Luke, John and Jesus.

This is America’s church. It is the Church of Group Guilt. It is the cult of “Holy Wokeness.” It is nothing short of a new religion; one that demeans men, degrades women, sacrifices children, elevates revenge and encourages blame. This is a church whose leaders’ minds are dark with confusion. Their theology is an inch deep with compassion and a mile wide with compromise.

Bow in submission. Pay homage to your gods.

It goes on and on and on. It pretty well sums a lot of it up, that's for sure. Because what's happening is way beyond what happened to George Floyd. Way beyond that. And again, we know that [Alan chuckles.] Antifa says they're just waiting for something to happen, they'll jump on the bandwagon. Let me see, there's an article here, and this will tie in with the last article.

Progressive Professor (A: …right. If you wonder why, that it's all happening spontaneously, nothing is further from the truth.) Urges White Male Students to Commit Suicide During Class diversitychronicle.wordpress.com / 18 Nov 2013

(A: It was Professor Noel Ignatiev, he was a third-generation communist, and his grandparents came from out of Russia I think, or the early Soviet era. He taught at Harvard, he taught this at Harvard. This article is from November 18, 2013, and it was an interview by Diversity Chronicle it was called. He says, this is his mantra in class and so on, right. And he himself was white, although he might not classify himself as one. If you're communist you wouldn't, you see.)

"If you are a white male, you don't deserve to live. You are a cancer, (A: This is what he taught.) you're a disease, (A: This is in his interview.) white males have never contributed anything positive to the world! They only murder, exploit and oppress non-whites! At least a white woman can have sex with a black man and make a brown baby but what can a white male do? He's good for nothing. Slavery, genocides against aboriginal peoples and massive land confiscation, the inquisition, the holocaust, white males are all to blame! You maintain your white male privilege only by oppressing,

(A: I think he's your, he's the guy who came up with these terms, by the way, invented them. White male privilege.)

You maintain your white male privilege only by oppressing, discriminating against and enslaving others!" Professor Noel Ignatiev, a tenured professor at Massachusetts College loudly proclaimed to his class last Monday, his final teaching day before retirement.

The good Professor's sound and reasonable words resonate with every enlightened and progressive mind. They are indisputable and no one can debate them. They should not be controversial in the slightest, yet remarkably a few far-right extremists object to Prof. Ignatiev's advice. The Professor however, reported receiving “a standing ovation” from his “largely white and middle class students.” Prof. Ignatiev’s critics say that openly calling for students, even if they are white males, to kill themselves was inappropriate and perhaps excessive. In this article, we will look at the other side of the issue.

(A: So this is from Ivan Fernando, the interviewer.)

Ivan Fernando: I understand that a few people objected to your advice to your white male students on your last day of teaching. Why do you think that is?

Prof. Ignatiev: I chalk it all up to white supremacist attitudes.

(A: You see, that’s what, this is the Communists talking. You always blame, anybody who complaints, you’re a supremacists, you see. [Alan chuckles.])

The goal of destroying the white race is simply so desirable, it boggles the mind trying to understand how anyone could possibly object to it. Those who object to my advice, knowingly or perhaps unknowingly, are themselves white supremacists. They wish to go on oppressing and exploiting other races and maintaining their own privileged positions of power. That is the conscious and sometimes subconscious motivation of all of my critics. That is why they object to destroying the cancer of humanity known as the white race. That ugly disease, which dares to call itself a people and a culture.

(A: Of course, this isn’t hate, you understand. No, no, no. No.)

Ivan Fernando: All whites, or just white males should commit suicide?

Prof. Ignatiev: Obviously, all whites need to be destroyed, but why not start with white males? They are behind most of history’s greatest atrocities. Besides, some of the brothers like to bang white women. Eventually white women can breed out, but my feeling is that if you are a white male, you should kill yourself now. If you are a thoughtful person, with a social consciousness who considers himself white, you will consider suicide. It’s the right thing to do. Let me read you an e-mail that I received today from a xenophobic white-supremacist.

(A: He goes into this email that says…)

"I'm not a racist, in fact I am an avowed anti-racist, I just think calling for all white males to kill themselves is extreme. When you say that every white person is bad or advocate violence against them, it sounds almost as though you are becoming a kind of racist yourself. You say it is good for everyone to be proud of their culture. Blacks, Mexicans and everyone else. Why should whites be the only exception? For the sake of argument, supposing whites have wronged many other races historically. Should we punish people today for their ancestor's sins? Today minorities have affirmative action and generous social welfare programs to protect them. Can we really say that most whites are racist now or that the government is? Should Blacks who descend from Blacks who owned or sold slaves feel guilty and be punished for ancestral wrongs?"

Prof. Ignatiev: I know, mind boggling. What an absurd and irrational line of reasoning. They just throw logic out the window entirely. It's impossible to dialogue with these people. Notice the blind and irrational hatred behind every word!

(A: This is someone who was just complaining about him, wanting to kill the whites.)

Notice the blind and irrational hatred behind every word!   No one has committed violence, genocide and dispossession on the level of white males.

(A: That's a lie too. That's a lie. If you read some of the black history of the Zulus and so on. Have you read about the Incas and the Aztecs and so on, different groups of them in Latin America? Where some of them bred tribes, they bred them as slaves. They bred them and used them as sacrifices. But let's not talk facts here.)

The whole purpose of white male culture is to perpetuate their privileged status and continue their oppression of non-whites. Whites don't have a culture like other races in which traditions and customs are preserved as an expression of a common identity. White culture is an entirely economic and social culture which is about shutting out other people deemed "non-white" as a means of preventing their social and economic advancement!

...etc. etc. This guy goes on and on and on. This is the guy who came up with all these ideas, you know. The thing is too, I think, it's explained in better detail actually, explained because... What you're hearing here too is communist speech where if you're... Because if you have black folk too getting called white, you know, by some of the Antifa groups and so on, the communist groups, but what they're referring to, you see this is the idea. If you accept any of the values of earning money for yourself, smaller government, deciding for yourself what you want to do with your life as an individual as opposed to collective, then they call you white. That's part of the communist technique. Because the revolution is everything. Terminology is fluid, you see. They can change what they mean by different words, and they keep the same thing as what they mean by using different words all the time, confusing you the listener. [Alan chuckles.] That is their verbal fluidity.

So anyway, again, I'll put up the article from, I think it was G Edward Griffin who talked about it, who talked about this particular professor and explains it all in better detail, for those who don't quite understand. Nothing comes out of the blue by itself here, folks. You're living through an amazing agenda. This article too goes back to Noel Ignatiev, when I was mentioning too about what he was talking about, white, white people should all kill themselves and commit suicide and so on.

The Origins of Black Neo-Marxism

needtoknow.news / 29 June 2020

(A: This is the article that explains it.)

Noel Ignatiev was a white American of Russian-Jewish origin and former Harvard professor who is considered to be the father of numerous radical black movements in America. He is the person who introduced the concept of ‘white privilege’ and who called for white women to ‘breed out’ while calling for white men to kill themselves. However, he wrote: “White” does not mean white. “White” in radical parlance means anyone of any race, creed, nationality, color, sex, or sexual preference who embraces capitalism, free markets, limited government, and American traditional culture and values.” Since the 1960s, all communist revolutionaries have known the maxim: “The issue is never the issue. The issue is always the revolution.” That is why the two wings of the Democrat party — the “white” Antifa and the “black” BLM — work together as one. They understand that race may be the apparent ‘issue’ but the real goal is communist revolution [under the banner of socialism].
-GEG

“White” does not mean white.

(A: Although he did mean that too, he really believed that.)

The Russian Origins of Black Neo-Marxism - americanthinker.com / 27 June 2020

Really amazing isn't it. You've got a whole generation growing up with this stuff. Indoctrinated in it. Using tax money to indoctrinate them, for this very event in this very time. The parents were also dysfunctional already with the war on the family, and the war on everything, the war on culture, that it's all happened, it's all come to fruition. It takes steps. This is the Fabian tactic, time, indoctrinate, time, stir up, destroy, time, and then once you've got the right generation, let it go. That's what's happened.

It's the global reset, remember, the reset for the WEF, to bring in their new system of sustainability and you know, true, true austerity where you have to get rationed, because they've got the coming famine and no work and all the rest of it, you see. M-hm. There ya go. Also I've got…

Poll Shows that Only 17% of Black Lives Matter Protesters Are Black

needtoknow.news / 26 June 2020

(A: 17%. That’s from Forbes.)

A new Pew Research Center survey found that out of the 615 respondents who attended a protest or rally related to race in the past month, the vast majority were young and 79% leaned towards the Democratic Party. The survey showed that only 17% of the Black Lives Matter protesters were black, while 46% were white, 22% were Hispanic, and 8% were Asian.

So it goes through it, and they split it into further categories as you read on there. But there you go. I mean, it's... Well, it doesn't surprise me at all. They've trained a lot of folk for years for this through universities and associations set up in universities to recruit them all. And out they come. They’re given the order to go ahead, and they go ahead.

Man who Crashed Gate Where Trudeau Lives Facing 22 Charges

military.com / 4 July 2020

TORONTO (AP) — A military reservist (A: This is Canada, right.) who allegedly crashed his truck through a gate on the grounds where Prime Minister Justin Trudeau lives was charged with 22 crimes on Friday, including weapons offenses and uttering threats.

(A: And apparently Trudeau wasn’t there at the time or his family either.)

Royal Canadian Mounted Police Deputy Commissioner Mike Duheme said Corey Hurren had several weapons when he was arrested Thursday.

He declined to comment on the motivation of Hurren, a 46-year-old on-duty member of the Canadian military reserves who also has a gourmet sausage business in Manitoba. The man had a bail hearing Friday and was remanded in custody until July 17.

He faces charges including two counts of possessing a restricted or prohibited gun, four counts of careless use, storage or handling of a firearm and four counts of possessing a firearm for a dangerous purpose.

Police believe he was acting alone.

Shortly before the incident, a post on Hurren's GrindHouse Fine Foods (A: This was his little company.) Facebook page showed a meme of a large outdoor party that would supposedly occur after the COVID-19 lockdown and it directed people to look up “Event 201,” (A: And listen how they word this here, it’s so interesting. There was an Event 201, right. It was published by the groups involved in Event 201, the Johns Hopkins University and the Bill Melinda Gates Foundation and it says…) a worldwide pandemic preparedness exercise run last year that conspiracy theorists sometimes use to suggest Microsoft founder Bill Gates is behind COVID-19.

(A: No, it’s just coincidence that he had these meetings and so on about a coming virus threat and all the rest of it.)

Police said Hurren crashed his truck through the gate at 6:30 a.m. Thursday. The truck was disabled and the suspect was spotted with a rifle before being contained in a greenhouse on the sprawling property in Ottawa. Police began talking to him and he was arrested two hours later.

It sounds to me like the guy's business took a dive because of the lockdowns and stuff. That’s what I would imagine, eh. I would imagine so. You gotta remember too as I say, 40% of the businesses that were closed down mandatorily are gone for good now in the States and Canada. Remember too, that's families, and maybe children too, and arguments in the families with the terror and fear of losing everything, and money, and how to get along and survive and yada yada, and the stress all that it creates. And folks go off. I'm imagining, I'm presuming this had lot to do with this guys particular business. Because why else would he be going after Trudeau? We'll find out, maybe. Canada's pretty bad for ever giving you the facts in these kind of crimes though. It can take years, and even then, often they won't tell you everything, or anything at all to add to it. There you go.

Nightmare in New York: How Covid-19, BLM protests and a liberal mayor are turning the city into a no-go zone as murders skyrocket, shops are looted and 500,000 middle-class residents flee

dailymail.co.uk / 3 July 2020

(A: There you go, there's one way of getting them to move, eh.)

Two bullet-ridden bodies lay sprawled on bloodstained concrete steps. Alongside, relatives of the victims are wailing and collapse to the ground. In another part of the city, a gang of youths use spray paint to disable security cameras before robbing a corner store. Later, video footage captures police officers sitting helplessly in their patrol car as a baying crowd hurls glass bottles at them.

This is lawless New York – a city that was once America’s glittering crown jewel, but which risks descending into mob rule.

Murder figures have skyrocketed and a combination of the coronavirus pandemic, Black Lives Matter (BLM) protests and weak political leadership is in danger of achieving what Osama Bin Laden never could: bringing the Big Apple to its knees.

The scenes described above took place last weekend. Chioke Thompson, 23, and his friend Stephanie Perkins, 39, had been gunned down on the steps of Chioke’s Brooklyn home. His schoolteacher mum Sophia wept as she said: ‘Even as he died, he was trying to shield her with his body. It makes no sense. Neither of them did anything wrong.’

With the gunman still on the loose and their families insisting neither victim had any links to drugs or gangs.

But there's a lot of it going on because the cops are pretty well standing down. If I was a cop, I'd be the same thing. If you don't get actual backing, that if you do your job, you're going to get backed for doing it, if you don't get that backing then you're going to get hung out to dry if you do your job. They know that. And it's all way up to the president as you know. That's what I'm saying, I personally think that Trump was put there for his role, and everybody, the left wing and the right wing, Pelosi, they're all playing their part like a stage play, you know.

As a say, comparing it again to Peter Hitchens article on being in the Soviet Union when it fell. There was that feeling in the air, yada yada ya, there was a feeling of something happening, even though you don't see it so much happening. There's obviously a lot of communication going on to stand down, for the Soviet Union. And that's the same thing you saw happening with this whole thing, that it was prepared, it was like preplanned as far as I could see. Yep. Trump says an awful lot, but he doesn't do anything. But that if he does do anything, regardless, if it's for Trump or somebody else in his place, that's what the Communists want as well, troops on the street.

The only time I saw troops on the street was before I came to the country here, it was on TV in Britain a long time ago. It was done by Pierre Trudeau, the dad of Justin Trudeau. Because a small, break away, more radical group, because the communication in communism is need-to-know on different levels eh, and they were doing their little communist thing, we'll do what we want and we'll kill folk and we'll kidnap folk and so on in Quebec. And they did it with some I think politicians or something. Pierre Trudeau says, I'll put the troops on the streets. On an interview they showed on television that was shown in Britain, he says, oh, you can't do that. He says, oh no? Watch me, he says, watch me. And he did. So it's so interesting to see that a guy who was the head of the young communists, you know, the Comintern for Canada in the 1950s, use that very technique to quell communism. Because he was already in charge of the country, he knew it would take the Fabian style, another 20-30 years to bring full communism in. It was much more successful that way because the folk drift into it not knowing that it's actually a communistic socialistic system they're into.

Don't forget that it's not, under communism or socialism it's not meant to arrive at a goal, and that's it, finished. Under the dialectical process, you start off with your ending, you know, you've got your thesis, you see, antithesis and synthesis. Once you get the synthesis, you've achieved your goal. Because that was your plan to get to there. How do you get there? You need an opposition blah blah blah. Then you get the synthesis. Once you achieve that you go into the next step and you start a new thesis, and the new antithesis, until you’re under constant change, constant, constant, constant, constant, constant change until you're so sick of it all.

That's what they had in HG Wells movie Things To Come, in the book form Things To Come. So that the descendants of the original masters, you know, the Freemasons of the Air they called themselves, the scientists that created the new society for the world and took it over and used science to go and progress and progress and progress. In the actual movie version you see the folk so sick of change, constant change, they want it to stop and have a breather or something. But nope. They want it to go on and on and on, this evolution, this forced evolution, that's what communism is.

Then this article, astonishing, Portland, Oregon. Now, Portland for years has been called a model city by the United Nations, for sustainability and bicycling instead of cars, and being goody-goody-goody and all that kind of stuff and doing all they can for the new equal society. So this article is posted July 4, right. It says…

Riot declared as Federal Courthouse attacked in Portland

koin.com / 4 July 2020

PORTLAND, Ore. (KOIN) — For the 3rd time this week, a riot was declared in downtown Portland when the Hatfield Federal Courthouse was attacked around 4 a.m. on the 4th of July.

The area around the Federal Courthouse remained an active situation for a time, authorities said. But by 6 a.m., the area seemed much more calm with a group of about 15 people dancing.

(A: [Alan laughing.] Is that before the fire or after, I don't know. [Alan laughing.])

Crews clean up mess left by riot in Downtown Portland July 4, 2020 (KOIN)

(A: So they've got a picture of the crews cleaning it up, it's all mess and so on.)

The incidents began when some demonstrators (A: …they were demonstrating…) launched commercial grade fireworks (A: You've probably seen these things, that come out like flamethrowers…) from the spot where the Elk Statue was (until it was removed earlier this week after damage from protester-set fires.) (A: The protesters, they just set fires. I guess protesters need fires.)
Then around 11 p.m. Friday demonstrators from the Justice Center marched to Waterfront Park, then back again 45 minutes later to the area of SW 3rd and Salmon and Madison, police said.

Shortly before 1 a.m., protesters began throwing rocks (A: Why are they going to call them rioters at the start, instead they keep calling them protesters.) at the Federal Courthouse and then firing commercial grade fireworks toward the Justice Center, police said. Some people dragged material and barricades and began to make a fence in the area of SW 3rd and Main, authorities said.

Portland police "stayed away from the demonstrators, as there was not an identified life safety risk," officials said in a release.

(A: So the cops are doing nothing unless folk are actually going to get killed or whatever.)

They said no tear gas was used.

(A: Remember as I say, they're a model state of goody-two-shoes, that state, so even the cops just don't want to interfere, they're all being goody-goody, you know.)

Wheeler calls for end to violence

(A: What violence? They're just protesting.)

Portland Mayor Ted Wheeler on Friday issued a public plea to end the violence that has roiled the city for more than a month. He acknowledged the reasons why the city is on edge: “An escalating global pandemic. The possibility of a deep and prolonged recession.

(A: No kidding. This Covid was to make the recession happen, a depression worse than the 1920s and 30s, folks, that's where you're going to end with it. That is the plan. That always was the plan. The last thing you do if you don't, if you want to deal with something you don't lock everybody down who's healthy and lockdown and literally stop the economy. It was all planned this way and the WEF has admitted that, this is their global reset, anyway, to bring all the agenda in.)

The calls to action by the “thousands of non-violent demonstrators” have been heard and, he noted, the City Council “has begun the difficult, necessary work of dismantling institutional racism.”

But he said he’s deeply concerned “groups who continue to perpetrate violence and vandalism on our streets.”

"They continue to hurt small businesses owned by people of color, instill fear in communities of color, and start fires in buildings with people inside,

(A: This is true, the setting fire, they're actually locking the doors, eh, so they can't get out. They’re protesting, mind you.)

start fires in buildings with people inside,

(A: This is the mayor talking.)

in one specific case, even bolting emergency doors so that they could not escape.

“These attacks undermine public safety in our community, and they harm the very people and businesses we need to be lifting up.”

(A: What about all the other businesses? Hhhhhhh. And this is how PC it all is in Portland, right.)

Wheeler said he is “keenly aware of concerns about police actions related to demonstration activity,” and wants “a full and thorough review of all use of force tactics and meaningful public transparency.”

The cops are just sitting back by the way, eh, I guess if they're do anything at all they're going to get investigated. So why not just burn everything down then, eh, that's what the rioters are thinking. N-n. Imagine locking the door…? There's murder right there, attempted murder. If they didn't kill anybody it's attempted. But just protesting it says. This is amazing doublespeak, eh.

Left-wing activist wants to replace the Star-Spangled Banner with John Lennon's Imagine - Washingtontimes.com / 3 July 2020

This is the terms used by Bill Gates. You'll see that at the WEF, and all these different ones working at the high-tech, you know, to imagine different futures. Bill Gates wanted to imagine, reimagine education he said, using all their programs, working at home rather than going to schools and all the rest, new education, imagine it he says, reimagine. So they want to imagine. I can imagine lots of things, you know, but it's gotta be along their agenda. You can't use your own imagination, like thinking getting back to any kind of normality and income, and staving off starvation and stuff like that. Yep. So...

You know, Imagine, imagine there's no people, and no religion too, you know, no earth below us, only sky below us and all the stuff. All wonderful business, it's just wonderful, we're floating. Maybe it's just LSD because John Lennon liked a lot of LSD. And he'd be the first to admit that by the way. He did talk about equality and rights of the people and so on, and how we should all share everything and stuff like that, you see. And not go to war, that was true, not go to war. For those who are burning, locking folk inside as they burn the place, he said don't go to war, as well, he meant governments as well mind you maybe. And he did believe, he really did believe in animal-rights and things like that. So much so that he bought a mansion with his wife

Yoko Ono, he bought a mansion for his wife to store all her furs and minks in, at a specific temperature and humidity to keep it all in pristine... Because it's worth a lot of money, that. But not that John cared about money. I mean, he really didn't. And you don't care about money when you don't have to worry about it. I suppose that's really what happens. But yeah, get rid of all religions and all the rest of it. The people just live in all happy and harmony together, eh? Living for today, eh? And we'll all live in a dream, the dream. Children of the dream. That rings a bell.

Anyway I'll put some of these links up for those that want to go through it. Most folk can't handle too much of this kind of stuff, mind you. And I understand that. I do understand that. Because it's rather, as I say, heavy, heavy man, it's very heavy man. Then you get this one here too.

By the way, I'll just remind you again to go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com. It's awfully important I keep saying it because I have to get through it as well, just like everybody else, and keep all my sites going, and replace equipment and so on that falls apart and breaks and overheats over time, that's what happens as we use it all. And it takes money just to live. And I don't live in any, any, I live way below the normal standard of most folk by the way. I mean, way below it. Way below it. N-n-n. Very few folk can live like I live actually in this day and age. But regardless, I need enough cash to keep ticking along here. So remember go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com and find out how to donate money to me or buy books and discs. You can find out how to get it to me. Hopefully then I can just keep on putting this information out for some time yet, we'll wait and see what happens. Because things don't look good at all, does it?

As I say, the WHO and the meeting I mentioned earlier, the WHO with the European Commission that they had at the beginning of the talk, they actually go through ways to shut everybody down. That also came out at Event 201, how to step-by-step shut people down and shut them up, maybe even arrest them eventually if they won't stop. You're seeing the totalitarian measures getting carried out. And these are totalitarian. This is the true fascism that seems to be missed by the folk in the streets that are rioting. [Alan chuckles.] They seem to be oblivious to what really is happening behind all of this, that's going to affect them too. Quite something.

So go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com and send some cash my way. It would be greatly appreciated. Thank you.

UN Reporting on Torture of Assange Banned from Corporate Media

raymcgovern.com / 26 June 2020 / By Ray McGovern

Nils Melzer, UN Rapporteur on Torture, belatedly learned that Julian Assange was being tortured. Meltzer came to realize that he had been misled by the “news” about Assange in the Establishment media, so he did his own investigation.

(A: He didn't believe when he started off that Assange was getting actually tortured, as such, right.)

“This Op-Ed has been offered for publication to the Guardian, The Times, the Financial Times, the Sydney Morning Herald, the Australian, the Canberra Times, the Telegraph, the New York Times, the Washington Post, Thomson Reuters Foundation, and Newsweek. None responded positively.”

(A: It just shows you how they’re all colluding together on the big global agenda. Oh, we play the left-wing, oh, we play the middle, we play the right-wing. They’re all in it together, folks. They’re all planning it together. They work together.)

The title given his op-ed in Medium on June 26, 2019 was Demasking the Torture of Julian Assange: On the occasion of the International Day in Support of Torture Victims. (See: https://medium.com/@njmelzer/demasking-the-torture-of-julian-assange-b252ffdcb768 .). Here’s a sample:

Beginning of text of Melzer op-ed:

I know, you may think I am deluded. How could life in an Embassy with a cat and a skateboard ever amount to torture? That’s exactly what I thought, too, when Assange first appealed to my office for protection. Like most of the public, I had been subconsciously poisoned by the relentless smear campaign, which had been disseminated over the years.

(A: That’s how it works, isn’t it? You see, you’re already given your opinions on what you think and what to like and dislike or who to hate, you know, by the media.)

Like most of the public, I had been subconsciously poisoned by the relentless smear campaign, which had been disseminated over the years. So it took a second knock on my door to get my reluctant attention. But once I looked into the facts of this case, what I found filled me with repulsion and disbelief.

Surely, I thought, Assange must be a rapist! But what I found is that he has never been charged with a sexual offence.

(A: Did you know that? You've all thought differently, haven't you? You read it elsewhere as being different. He was never charged with the sexual offense.)

True, soon after the United States had encouraged allies to find reasons to prosecute Assange, Swedish prosecution informed the tabloid press that he was suspected of having raped two women. Strangely, however, the women themselves never claimed to have been raped, nor did they intend to report a criminal offence. Go figure.

Moreover, the forensic examination of a condom submitted as evidence, supposedly worn and torn during intercourse with Assange, revealed no DNA whatsoever — neither his, nor hers, nor anybody else's. Go figure again. One woman even texted that she only wanted Assange to take an HIV test, but that the police were "keen on getting their hands on him". Go figure, once more.

Ever since, both Sweden and Britain have done everything to prevent Assange from confronting these allegations without simultaneously having to expose himself to US extradition and, thus, to a show-trial followed by life in jail. His last refuge had been the Ecuadorian Embassy.

Alright, I thought, but surely Assange must be a hacker! But what I found is …

(A: And it gives you by the way a link to all the rest of the stuff. And what he found is, what?)

(For the rest, click on (https://medium.com/@njmelzer/demasking-the-torture-of-julian-assange-b252ffdcb768 .)

Baby Steps in Truth

Expect to find almost nothing in the U.S. or other Western media about how a publisher (A: He's a publisher, right, he's not a hacker.) of authentic documents has been set up to spend the rest of his live in prison, but there were some glimmers of truth shining through German, Swiss, and Austrian media early this year. In February, one of the main German TV channels (ZDF) did a highly unusual, and instructive, interview with Melzer, focusing on the sexual allegations in Sweden.

Melzer is fluent in Swedish — a big help as he personally poured through the relevant documents, some of which had been "fixed". On hearing of the ZDF programs, Ray published "German TV Exposes the Lies That Entrapped Julian Assange": https://consortiumnews.com/2020/02/06/ray-mcgovern-german-tv-exposes-the-lies-that-entrapped-julian-assange/ , February 6, 2020.

(A: It's got links to it as well by the way, of all of these interviews, and how they expose the lies, right. This is the translation…)

His article begins:

Truth has broken through for those confused about how a publisher ended up in a maximum security prison in London with a one-way extradition ticket to court in the U.S. and the rest of his life behind bars.

One of the main German TV channels (ZDF) ran two prime-time segments on Wednesday night exposing authorities in Sweden for having "made up" the story about Julian Assange being a rapist.

Until last night most Germans, as well as other consumers of "major media" in Europe, had no idea of the trickery that enmeshed Assange in a spider-web almost certainly designed by the U.S. and woven by accomplices in vassal states like Sweden, Britain and, eventually, Ecuador.

ZDF punctured that web by interviewing UN Rapporteur on Torture Nils Melzer.

Both ZDF programs show Melzer being interviewed, with minimal interruption or commentary, letting his findings speak for themselves about how allegations against Assange were "made up" and manipulated to hold him captive.

The particularly scurrilous allegation that led many, including initially Melzer, to believe Assange was a rapist — a tried and tested smear technique of covert action — was especially effective. The Swedes never formally charged him with rape — or with any crime, for that matter. ZDF exhibited some of the documents Melzer uncovered that show the sexual allegations were just as "invented" as the evidence for WMD before the attack on Iraq. …

Melzer's indefatigable efforts to expose what Assange has gone through, including "psychological torture", met with some modest success

It goes on and on and on. You can read it, there's much, much more to it. But yeah, when they want to set you up, you'll be an absolutely the most evil character the world has ever seen. Most folk will believe it because you can't believe folk would smear somebody like that, there must be some truth behind it, you see. Quite something, eh. And it's a lesson too. The reason they got him was a lesson to everybody else, every other reporter out there, that if you don't stay behind your allocated little area, hhhch, they'll come for you too and do the same thing, and that's you, finished. Destroy your whole life, at the very least.

Another article, as I say, don't you get so sick of this relentless covid nonsense?

COVID-19 cases continue to surge in the South ahead of July 4th weekend as Florida hits 10,000 daily infections but death rates do NOT rise, while experts say the battle is not over in New York and New Jersey - dailymail.co.uk / 3 July 2020

Hm, imagine that, eh. The death rates don't rise. But more folks are getting tested you see so the more they get tested the more they find out folk have got it or have had it, one of the two. That's what happens when you keep testing more and more folk, you see. There ya go, that's how it works.

Also I want to mention too, [Alan chuckles.] I'm going to mention too that Foxy Fauci, I call him Foxy Fauci because the man obviously is so up to his eyes in compromised deals, etc., his whole life long with big companies, and his own companies as well, very lucrative indeed. They decide who gets contracts, who doesn't, and what's going to get pushed and who's not. That's a lot of power, folks, believe you me, for the big, big mobster companies that run the drug industries.

Gilead's remdesivir will cost $3,120 for patients with private insurance

michaelsavage.com

Gilead's remdesivir

(A: He promoted Gilead, right. Everything else he pooh-poohed until Gilead says, we're ready. It says, so it will cost, this is what it will cost the taxpayer for each patient, right, or patients with private insurance…)

Gilead’s remdesivir will cost $3,120 for patients with private insurance

(A: …for each patient, for a course of it, right.)

Patients who are covered by government programs like Medicaid will be charged $2,340 for a typical treatment course.

(A: Right.)

The amount that patients pay out of pocket depends on insurance, income and other factors. “We’re in uncharted territory with pricing a new medicine, (A: Ha, ha.) a novel medicine, in a pandemic,” Gilead CEO Dan O’Day said in a statement announcing the pricing for remdesivir.

(A: Mind you, they had great effects in other countries with the one made in Cuba. [Alan chuckles.] But no, that's just too cheap, and it doesn't belong to these big companies in the States. Or actually, Gilead is in a different country I think, although it did most of its testing in the States before. But there you go, eh, there you go.)

Remdesivir (pronounced rem-des-eh-veer) is an antiviral medication originally developed to treat Ebola and other deadly viruses.

(A: Now, whether it worked, we don’t know, eh. Now they’re saying...)

After an international COVID-19 drug trial showed that the medication helped some patients recover more quickly, the Food and Drug Administration gave the remdesivir authorization for emergency use in treating coronavirus cases. Gilead is charging two prices for the drug in just one developed country: The U.S., according to The Wall Street Journal.

So they've got two prices for it within the US depending on your insurance. Whoa, think of that per patient, eh! Think of that, eh. Big bucks indeed! Big bucks. N-n-n. And again, just like the AMA and that earlier article I mentioned by Mullins, he talked about them too, how it started up and how they eventually got the power in the AMA, once they merged with, an amazing story too, how they merged with the big drug industry, and they could advocate what drugs would be sold and which ones would be banned. It's quite amazing isn't it how they did it all. It’s still going on obviously. It's still going on, same thing. It's very lucrative, an incredibly lucrative area. Just like all lucrative areas like that, you've got one person in charge of giving the nod. [Alan chuckles.]   Ooooh, okay. M-hm.

Another article here is to do with...

Socialist 'dream' will be nightmare

washingtontimes.com / 2 July 2020

When "Democratic socialism" comes, we'll deserve forfeiting America's signature quality. Not just liberty itself, but our understanding that effort, pride, motivation, failure and success are as essential to the joy of freedom as the end result. With socialism, effort is secondary. Obscenely taxed workers fund communal support while politicians and lobbyists prosper.

(A: Yeah.)

Scandinavian nations aren't socialist, (A: Well I think Sweden is pretty well socialist.) but the Green New Deal absolutely is. It gives government total control of industries such as energy, transportation and health care. Joe Biden approves, vowing to eliminate fracking jobs. Architect Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez advises him. (A: [Alan chuckles.])

Rebrand it all you want, but socialism remains a failed Marxist manifesto that has only brought oppression and horrific loss of life.

America was meticulously crafted to give the majority of people the greatest chance at independent lives as possible. It's the purest application of liberty ever conceived by imperfect humans, ultimately ending entrenched slavery. Socialism crushes it, seeking cookie-cutter lives for workers, and wealth and power only for ruling elites.

Well, the ruling elites were all ready to go with the power, and they are the WEF at the top, at least working for them, a lot of them. And they want socialism. Because it's going to work faster and more efficiently for them to control all of us. In socialism you just obey, you jump, you see, you have no option. There's no, wait a minute here, you can't do that to me. Pomff, that's it. No, no, you just jump and do what you're told fast. That's what they want, efficiency, you see. That's true technocracy. Efficiency. Not these awful problems with people with their rights, rights, rights, nnnnnnnn, such a nuisance, such an awful nuisance.

Think about the folk, just think in this last six month or so, with the people who have lost their freedom with lockdowns, of the terrible violence in the house with drugs and booze, during this whole time, stress or money and things like that. Then not getting out. Then being shouted at by cops in countries like Britain, where they can really, just started swaggering, you can actually see them swaggering, you know, and telling folk they couldn't even go in their gardens and things like that. Just absolute madness, utter madness. On and on it went for months and months.

Then, oh, we're going to let you up a little bit, a little bit, a little bit, but wear masks and keep 6 feet apart, and… All this stuff based on nothing. Hm. And then the folk getting, who couldn't see the relatives who are dying, elderly folk and so on. Imagine being dying, and you're not even allowed to even see the ones to care about you, you know, and you are the victim of it. That's okay though. It's okay, these are the new rules, you see.

Then again, what was it they told you? The WHO came out and said it, I put up the links and you see the woman saying it at the WHO. Oh, she says, we don't think that the people who are asymptomatic are spreading the disease, very little chance of that happening. Huh?! After no one getting to touch anybody, go near anybody or anything else! Huh?! Hm? or going to see their relatives?

Another article in Britain says they have found out that a good percentage of the super spreaders in the hospitals in England, guess what? Did you figure out this? It was the cleaners, the cleaners and the porters and so on, the ones that do all the carrying and the cleaning and so on. Because they go all through the hospitals, they're not assigned to anyone little place. Well, you'd think during this whole quarantine idea, there would have been different people assigned to their own little areas, eh? But no. So they're going right through the whole hospitals back and forth, bringing food and stuff, you know, all the usual stuff, and spreading it. This is what they're claiming now through testing and different things. As they have to get blame on somebody, eh? [Alan chuckles.] Because it can't be the officials who planned it all, this whole idea of how to manage it, it can't be their fault. No, no. It's got to be the workers, naturally.

Then they found out too that I think 20% of the folk, who actually contracted it IN the hospital, because of ridiculous techniques of looking after the folks and so on, folk who are admitted not for that reason, eh, and coming down with it. Terrible indeed. It's just incredible what's been going on. And now they find out, well you know... Anybody who's got it in them when they die, even if their heart just explodes with something else or whatever, just put it down as a Covid death. They pad it all and then they try to say we've got to change our whole lives... our whole lives… our whole way of living from now on... to suit the WEF forever, because of, with fudged figures. Eh, that's good enough to change the whole system, all these fudged figures? Which is admitted. Even Dr. Birx admitted it in the States when she said that, we've got a more liberal way of doing it in the States, so presumed, folk with just some symptoms of whatever, even as I say hay fever, is good enough for it now, and be put down as presumed, and presumed becomes have, and that's it, that's official, you've got it. Even though you've not even been tested for it.

Then the stacks of tests that are completely faulty. Still, eh? Completely faulty. I said at the beginning of this whole thing, you'd be better just hiring folk that read tea leaves in a cup. Get some psychic women and have everybody drink tea leaves, you know, loose ones, not in a bag, and they can read it. Yeah, this person is going to, after this tea is going to walk out of the hospital free of everything, because I don't see any problems and obstacles in their path, you see. Yep. That's as good as anything, with all this magical thinking that's been going on. But again, it doesn't matter. There's a big agenda at work, isn't there, a massive agenda. Huge agenda. And nothing's going to stand in its way. Nothing. N-n-n.

Do you realize the planning? It took years and years to get to this stage, for the World Economic Forum who said last year the public are not listening to us for sustainability, they're still buying and consuming and so on, we have to do something drastic to stop them. Bingo! Bingo! That's just conspiracy thinking. It's coincidence they say, things like that, absolute coincidence. Definitely coincidence, no doubt about it.

Even though I've got articles from the WEF from even years before it when they said that they would have to somehow get us from the stage of democracy to authoritarian control, by forcing things through undemocratically. But that's coincidence as well. They didn't. It was just daydreaming. They were doing their own John Lennon imagine thing, how they could imagine a better world of running it all and having folk just jump and obey them. There you go.

Global Wake-Up Call

un.org

…COVID-19 to climate disruption, from racial injustice to rising inequalities, we are a world in turmoil.

(A: Now, if you look at this article here, it's the United Nations News with António Guterres, who's the ninth Secretary-General of the United Nations who took office 21 January 2017. Hhhch, this is his, it's like talk to the people of the world, you see, and with two visions of what might happen. One if you go along the way that they’re telling you to go along, and the terrible things that might happen if you don't go that way, you see, it's this or that. He's giving us, it's somewhat of a real threat in a way. [Alan chuckles.] He goes on about the 75th anniversary this year of the UN Charter.)

That vision of a better future …

(A: That vision of a better future, I love how PR companies make these speeches for them. It's

OUR shared, US, WE all the time, OUR shared challenge...)

Our shared challenge is to channel that collective spirit and rise to this moment of trial and test.

The pandemic has laid bare severe and systemic inequalities both within and between countries and communities. More broadly, it has underscored the world’s fragilities – not just in the face of another health emergency, but in our faltering response to the climate crisis (A: You know, the climate, oh, we forgot all about that.), lawlessness in cyberspace (A: Oh my God, cyberspace is full of pirates everywhere.), and the risks of nuclear proliferation. People everywhere are losing trust in political establishments and institutions. (A: …like the United Nations. Doh! It didn’t say the United Nations, that was me.)

The emergency is compounded by many other profound humanitarian crises: conflicts that are continuing or even intensifying; record numbers of people forced to flee their homes (A: …in New York City. That’s me, I added that wee bit.); swarms of locusts in Africa and South Asia; looming droughts in southern Africa and Central America; all amid a context of rising geopolitical tensions.

(A: Oh my… The sky is definitely falling, eh.)

In the face of these fragilities, world leaders need to be humble and recognize the vital importance of unity (A: Here we go with these terms, unity, one, right…) and solidarity. (A: They love this little communistic terminology.)

The pandemic, as horrible as it is, must be a wake-up call that prompts all political leaders to understand that our assumptions and approaches have to change, and that division is a danger to everyone.

No one can predict what comes next, but I see two possible scenarios.

First, the “optimistic” possibility.

In this case, the world would muddle through. Countries in the global North would engineer a successful exit strategy. Developing countries would receive enough support and their demographic characteristics – namely, the youth of their people – would help contain the impact.

And then perhaps a vaccine would appear in the next nine months or so, and would be distributed as a global public good, a "people's vaccine" (A: That's what he calls it, a "people's vaccine," in quotation marks…) available and accessible to all.

If this happens, and if the economy starts up progressively, we might move towards some kind of normality in two or three years.

But there is also a second, bleaker scenario in which countries fail to coordinate their actions. New waves of the virus keep occurring. (A: BOOM, BOOM, BOOM, BOOM!) The situation in the developing world explodes. (A: KAPOW!) Work on the vaccine lags — or even if there is a vaccine relatively soon — it becomes the subject of fierce competition and countries with greater economic power gain access to it first, leaving others behind.

(A: That's the fear mongering, oh, we're not going to get enough, and we'll all be left out. Maybe they didn't give you an option of no one in the first place.)

In this scenario, we could also see greater movement toward fragmentation, populism and xenophobia. Each country could go it alone or in so-called coalitions of the willing to address some specific challenges. In the end, the world would fail to mobilize the kind of governance needed to address our shared challenges.

(A: Ttt. Ahhh.)

The result may well be a global depression that could last at least five or seven years before a new normal emerges, the nature of which is impossible to predict.

(A: So in other words, one of the things is, you've all got to work together along the predesigned agenda, and it might only be three years, so there you go. And again it brings into it to all the other big corporations that manage our world, you see.)

We need a networked multilateralism, in which the United Nations and its agencies, the World Bank

(A: …which is private, right.) and the International Monetary Fund (A: …private.), regional organizations such as the African Union and European Union (A: Again, nobody wanted these unions.), trade organizations (A: …which are NGOs.) and others work together more closely and effectively.

(A: Right, so give them more power over us, right.)

We also need a more inclusive multilateralism. Governments today are far from the only players in terms of politics and power. Civil society (A: …which I guess is the communist movements. [Alan chuckles.]), the business community, local authorities, cities and regional governments are assuming more and more leadership roles in today's world.

(A: Eh. They never just ask the people what they want, right. Like, do you ever get a question about what you want? You might get a question saying, out of this and this and this what would you choose? But they never ask you what you want, do they? No. They give you the, they give you your, your so limited in your choices in everything.)

This, in turn, will help lead to an effective multilateralism with the mechanisms it needs to make global governance work where it is needed.

You must get the United Nations going, a truly united nations, a global governance for goodness sake, eh. Global governance. Remember that thing they keep denying and they keep bringing back over and over and over? You can't do it with individual nations, you know, you've got to all go under a new form of global governance. M-hm. There ya go. And they just happen to have it all worked out by, well the Rockefeller Foundation and different groups like that, they've already drafted it all up for you to follow. Yep. Of course democracy won't work because democracy, it's too cumbersome as the Club of Rome said, you just can't get things done efficiently. Ttt. Rights, rights, human rights and all that stuff, eh? They just never give up with the human rights. Hhhhmph.

Now this article here says…

Sobbing mother stuck in raucous BLM protest is told police will NOT respond to her 911 call because it is a 'sanctioned event'

dailymail.co.uk / 3 July 2020

(A: So she was on the phone for ages, stuck in her car with her child, when, you know, the peaceful protesters were running all over the car and jumping up and down and things like that. The police were told, the dispatcher said over and over that it was a sanctioned event so the police couldn't intervene.)

Eventually, she manages to drive through the intersection and away from the protesters (A: …and get away.)

There will be a little pretended inquiry into it, nothing much will come from it. This has been happening all over the place right now, you know. I was a bit skeptical at first when folks said that folk driving into New York City for instance were literally, you had swarms of them jumping onto the roads and then it was the cars, they were jumping on the cars and so on. That's a tactic they've been using.

What's happened now is that when they start jumping on some folks cars, especially when it's getting dark, the folk in the cars get terrified and will race the cars through traffic, and then the folk are getting knocked down. Wouldn't you panic too when you know what's happening? This is chaos and it's not being managed well. And everybody knows it's not getting managed well. It's been planned this way I think, I really do think so, with the collusion of governors and so on. Definitely some, definitely in a lot of states. And without the backing to back up any kind of police involvement. Right from the very top, from the president, you know. It's just astonishing. Plus all the people in the military who came out without being asked to come out or even do anything and saying that they wouldn't backup, ha-ha, any of basically Trump's orders if it came to that, if it actually came to the crunch.

But again I mentioned last week so many of these so-called retired generals are fronts for the big military-industrial companies and they're on the payroll and all that with the ones, some of them have got names of the companies that actually work for. Well rewarded and so on. They want to get the wars across the world really started. I understand too that what they'll see it as, with the strategists and so on, is that with the countries looking at America right now, you've got all the symptoms of indecision, from leadership, all levels of leadership, definitely, that's what you see. They're seeing weakness, when you see this kind of thing happening and rioters, well organized communist rioters, seemingly having their way, and governors joining the crowds and so on, etc. etc. Not just to attest against the cruelty to any different group, but to actually, to overthrow the system, is what they're joining in. They're communist basically, some of these governors. Again Covid comes to a total end, which means it's a farce. It's the most politicized disease ever, you know, it can just switch itself on and off depending on who's in the streets and what they're doing. That's how outsiders will see it, weakness, you see.

It's interesting, I must admit, that during this time China is making moves, as you well know, to show its strength militarily. Including with the borders with India, crossing borders to see how far they can get, then getting pushed out again, or leaving. But it isn't over yet. This is what you get when the main power, that's become the world policeman for a long time and lost its position through different agendas and not because it was weak. But when it actually appears to be weak then that's when other powers start making their moves, to show that they are ready to fill some gaps. That is true, that's what... It's just like bullies, you know, in schoolyards, who's going to be the chief bully and take over and everybody kowtowing to them. That's what countries tend to be like really. It's nature. That's what humanity is and that's what happens.

So it's not a good times, but when you see generals literally backing down, even when they haven't been asked to actually deploy troops against the rioters but pretending as though they had been ordered to, and they are refusing. This is how it comes across in the media, that's how it comes across to people outside the country. That's really bad, bad marks for, I don't care who you are or what general you happen to be or what military-industrial complex you're taking money from in your retirement or semi retirement, to put out that kind of message, I don't care who the head of state is for the country, that's bad, as I say, bad form. That really is pretty bad stuff. Regardless of who they are that's in. Really. That demoralizes those underneath them too. Naturally. It really does.

So we'll see how far it goes this time. You know, the old saying is, the road to hell is paved with good intentions. But also sometimes when the good intentions prevail, and you know you're going to hell, then you know it's a bit of a different agenda perhaps. But you read an article like this…

L.A. City Council Passes Motion to Replace Police with ‘Crisis Response’ for ‘Non-violent’ Calls

breitbart.com / 30 June 2020

(A: That sounds nice, you know. And you see a lot of sense in it at times as well.)

The Los Angeles City Council passed a motion Tuesday to replace Los Angeles Police Department officers with unarmed “crisis response” personnel to be assigned to “non-violent calls for service” such as “neighbor disputes.”

(A: Now every cop knows that [Alan chuckles.] nonviolent calls and neighbor disputes can escalate in seconds into nightmares. That's within homes and with neighbors, you know.)

The motion, introduced by Councilmember Herb Wesson and five colleagues on the 15-member council, would:

INSTRUCT the Chief Legislative Analyst (CLA) and the City Administrative Officer (CAO), with assistance from the Los Angeles Police Department and the Los Angeles Housing Services Authority and in cooperation with the Los Angeles County Department of Mental Health …

Now, a few years ago I did articles on how they wanted to bring mental health specialists in with police departments to check on peoples. They want everyone evaluated. That's YOU too, folks, you know, evaluated, from a young age onwards. In Britain they had GIRFEC for Scotland and one from England, a different one for England, a different name but the same thing. A government appointed social worker type would come to every child and basically grow up with the child, or the child would grow up with them with visits for years up to the age of, I don't know, well into their teens, to make sure that they have the right kind of thinking about all kinds of topics. They would be tested regularly to see, anything that was detected, like they weren't quite happy with this or that group or whatever, they'd have to go in for readjustment.

Well, that was part of it then, was the mental health. If they could just get the mental health to come in now. And that way, you see, they don't have to charge you with anything, if you've been a bad person, like politically bad or, you've said, you've maybe even thought something, you voiced a thought, eh. And you didn't have your facemask on, so they saw your lips moving, they could figure out what you're saying, to yourself. HHHHHHHHHHHH! There ya go. So then they could take you in for readjustment, you see, without having to go through a criminal court case. You see, mental health has got that bypass into the bin, you see. So here's another way to do it. Isn't that wonderful. Isn't it amazing how all the agendas were put on hold because folk complained, are getting introduced for a different reason but it's the same agenda, folks. The same thing is going to come out of it. Absolutely. Absolutely. N-n-n. So…

…and in cooperation with the Los Angeles County Department of Mental Health and other relevant government service providers, to develop an unarmed model of crisis response that would divert non-violent calls for service (mental health crisis, substance abuse, neighbor disputes etc.) away from LAPD to the appropriate non-law enforcement agencies.

Well guess what? I know in Britain when they were trying that a few years ago, they tried that, doing it with social workers and then mental health would go along with them. Behind them are always the police waiting to go in. [Alan chuckles.] That's how it really goes, folks. Psychology, psychiatry, all involved in bringing you up properly, to make sure that you're, you know, adjusted for the community with all the, you know, common things. You'll all think the same things about the same things in the same way and have the same conclusions. You'll all be like, oh, much like clones of each other really. You see, that's the perfect society, that. You know, collectivism. Collectivism, you have so much in common with everybody you know.

[Alan laughing.] You won't have silly conversations like, what do you think of this? Because you'll know what they think of it because it's the same as you. That's what Bertrand Russell says too, you won't even have to ask people about your, because he says, you'll all be the same anyway, you see. That's where we ARE. That's collectivism. It makes the ones at the top really happy because it's more efficient. Because they'll know that no one's going to object when they say do this, you'll all do it at the same time. You'll just obey. Isn't that wonderful? This brave new world, eh, just so wonderful.

When you've got a Covid thing that everybody's going to get, it goes through everybody until you get herd immunity. Most folk don't even know they've had it. They don't know, you see. It's like being guilty of something when you say that now, eh? Oh, I didn't know I had it. OH YES, YOU DID. Well, I never knew that. Mm. It's kind of like a guilt thing. Remember, you've got that in George Orwell's 1984, where he's taken into, was it the Ministry of Love that tortures you? It's always the opposite of what they say. Low and behold he meets his next-door neighbor, and his next-door neighbor says, you wouldn't believe what happened. He said, I must've been talking in my sleep, it was my daughter that found out. The children always turn on the parents, you see. Again, you always train the children to hate the parents and the older folk, in their cultural revolutions, you know. He said, she heard me, he said, I didn't know I was a criminal, a thought criminal. I said something and she, thank GOD, she found me in time, he says, thank God she just found out. He praised her.

It's the same with, oh, I didn't know I'd had the Covid. Wow. Imagine that. And you say, well, and you look at those little swabs that are stuck up your nose and the back of your throat, are these really accurate? And they won't answer you there, oh no. [Alan laughing.]   Oh no, it's such a shambles. A lot of countries threw those things out, you know, they were so useless. M-hm. It doesn't matter though, because false positives are awfully good.

Again too, it's a big agenda. When big agendas are at play, facts really, really don't matter. It's all preordained, you see. It's the elite who rule you already, as I say, the revolution you're going through, this fourth cultural revolution, or Fourth Industrial Revolution as they want to call it, is a complete makeover for everything. It's THE ELITES' revolution. It's the next phase of their own revolution. Not the ones on the streets that you're seeing. It's FOR the elites. They've talked about it for years. They've planned it. They've given it lots of details over the years where they are going to take it. And bingo!, here we go. The Covid is a handy way to get it there. Obviously. There you go, folks.

So I always tell folk, don't be really miserable and disappointed about things and depressed. Because the more you understand the more you can have a chuckle at things at the same time. When you really mature, it brings maturity to you, you realize that you have very little control over anything in this life, and in such a system as this. Your house can get taken away at any time for any reason they want, through environmental reasons, anything they can think of they can just take it from you. Everything you own can be just taken from you, just bommf, gone, you see, confiscated for whatever reason they want.

You have very little decision-making over anything at all. That's as you go more and more into the collectivist society. You don't have to really make decisions. A lot of folk they say will like to socialism that way. And they do like socialism because every decision is made for you. Under socialism you don't have to do much thinking. You see, you obey, do a lot of obeying and all that. But you don't have to do much thinking about things. Do you realize the toil of thinking, that wears you down, all these choices and decisions to make and so on, is taken from you and you can just be a child forever. Because the unknown betters that rule the whole world are making it all for you. They're taking that heavy burden of responsibility of making decisions for you and you can just go and play forever. If you had anything to play with, or money to play with, or a home to play in. I mean, it depends what they leave you with, you see. You know?

They might put you into big communal centers. They talked about that years ago, for sustainability. Like huge buildings that are long, long hut type buildings and a huge communal eating room. They talked about that, and I used to do the talks on that too when they came out with their articles. How they could have communal food and communally fed, a communal kitchen would feed you, make thousands at one time. Like a big canteen. We'd be all in it together for the greater good, you see. There you are.   Doesn’t that sound wonderful, eh? Walking in amongst, from a mass of people outside into a mass of people inside, like all the little insects together. And eating everything. And seeing the same millions of folk all slurping away in front of you as you're having your dinner. M-hm. It just makes you feel warm all over, you know. That's your wonderful austere program for the future. But hey, they're keeping us safe. Don't forget that, the vision for us all, safety. Thank goodness these folk exist.

Now, they'll be awfully, even richer than, and they're awfully rich now. But hey, they're worth it, aren't they? I mean, these folk came out of special wombs you know. You came out of common womb, but they came out of special ones. Guaranteed for fame and fortune. There you go, we should look up to them. And with the big star making machinery that all backs them up and tells us over and over, they’re such geniuses, worship them. Oh, we should be thanking our lucky stars that they’re here, right.

So remember folks go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Send a few bucks my way. Hopefully. I'll certainly try and keep going with the articles as best I can. I'll be doing actually shows shortly I think, going back into some radio shows at least. Over the years I've had stacks of offers, I generally kind of turned them down. But maybe it's time to go back into some of them at least. I'll try and do more.

Because time, these are very interesting times. This is really history in the making that we're living through at the moment. It truly is. You're living through it, and you should be writing your own experiences with it. Because it's so important. That's real history, not the stuff that will come out afterwards when it's been revised and authorized, completely different and fabricated.

So remember, send a few bucks my way @cuttingthroughthematrix.com.

I'm Alan Watt from Ontario Canada, so keep safe and don't give up whatever you do, it's good night and may your God or your gods go with you.

"Code of Silence" by Bruce Springsteen

There's a code of silence that we don't dare speak

There's a wall between us and a river so deep

And we keep pretending that there's nothing wrong

But there's a code of silence and it can't go on

Is the truth so elusive, so elusive as you can see that it ain't enough baby

To bridge the distance between you and me

There's a list of grievance 100 miles long

There's a code of silence and it can't go on

Hi folks, I'm Alan Watt and this is Cutting Through the Matrix on July 12, 2020. You may or may not hear in the background a fan going, because like most places right now at the height of summer it's awfully humid up here in Canada. We are surrounded by lakes everywhere, lots and lots and lots of lakes. The humidity is pretty, pretty high. That's how it's always been in this area. So, this really is a normal summer for this part of Canada.

Folk forget it, you know, because they think that things should be the same like clockwork every year. But weather has never been that way. But folk don't remember, they really don't. They do tune into their TV to hear what the weather is supposed to be a rather than just look outside or walk outside and look around you. It really is amazing how we're so conditioned, isn't it, to just obey experts. What's an expert on the TV telling you about the weather? Someone who's also reading the weather. I mean, the whole thing is a farce.

But so much of modern life is a farce and it's been like that for an awful long time. We have been trained like Bertrand Russell said to believe whatever experts say. All you have to say is, this is an expert. There's no proof that they are, or they aren't experts but that doesn't matter either, does it? We just immediately obey, oh, oh my goodness, this is an expert talking about the weather. How long have you lived on this planet? Walk outside and look around. Look up, 'eh, and look at those clouds if you can see them. You might just fathom what it's going to be yourself. You've got about as much chance of doing it, actually probably better, you're living in the area, right.

Now of course, when they came out with the Weather Channel, I did a show years ago on the Weather Channel and the history behind it. And a good book had come out about it too of someone who had been employed there. The whole idea was to start to change the behavior of the public, once again, so they wouldn't perceive weather as living through it, through your lifetime and so on. They would perceive what they were told to perceive by the behavioral experts. And sure enough. And who's going to sit and watch the Weather Channel for 24 hours a day, 'eh? I know there's obsessive-compulsive disorders out there but come on, 'eh, get a life!

The idea was to change, oh my goodness it's going to be a flood today, and you know, all you saw was a little sprinkle of rain. Normal, 'eh, but that became... And I tell you what I really noticed too, in Canada especially ever since the whole global warming farce started for climate change. Remember, climate change, the whole agenda for the new normal society, the new world order, and they said it themselves, hinges on convincing the public that everything's going berserk and it's all the public's fault. It's your fault, anthropogenic ‘global warming’, right. That kind of fell flat so they changed it over to 'climate change', because they can't fail then, whatever the climate does for a day or two or weeks or whatever is going to be your fault anyway.

We truly live in a make-believe fantasy world put together by behaviorists, well-paid people who decide what you're going to think. They even decide on ways that they're going to brainwash you into you adopting what they want you to think. That's really a perfected system by the way, including making sure that the children for the last 20, 30 years have been brainwashed into it, until they're ready to kill their parents off… You destroyed the planet, we've been brought up with that at school, they told us all the bad things you've done to the planet and it's all your fault. So bad that now you've got some environmentalists who come out who are part of the terror making machinery, admitting and actually apologizing for what they said and did knowing it was part of a con for massive change.

Again, you see there's only one agenda here, there's many ways to get it all happening and bringing it to the point of the one agenda, the end product. Of course, you get Covid going along with massive demonstrations on Black Lives Matter, Antifa groups running wild all over the place, across the planet mind you. And before that too you had all the, last year and the year before, massive demonstrations of all the youth. Now, the leaders know what they are there for, they know what the real agenda is. They're getting well-paid to do all this. The followers don't. They never do. They've been radicalized by their education system. But the leaders know exactly what it's all to… in fact, the same leaders try to take their flocks, the followers, into the Black Lives Matter group.

If you wonder what's happened to the Extinction Rebellion, well, they're all in the BLM and the Antifa groups now. They're all… This is a networking of communism, only this communism is a more efficient system for this time in history for those who rule the world. It's the same people, but they want to get really rushed ahead with technology in a new system, depopulation, all that stuff, much more quickly and they can't do with democracy and human rights. I've been through all the talks before from their own sources mind you.

Again, I know we live in a time when, in an age when facts don't matter. Because their brainwashing is far superior and consistent and awfully expensively done. Folk don't like cheap stuff; they believe the expensive lies. So, they tune into the mainstream, the big big talking heads, etc. Again too, why would the experts and professionals all lie to you? Well, it's for big bucks. And if you talk to them really, they're so politicized, they are all on board with eugenics, they are all on board with depopulation. They'll use every group and every ethnic category to get what they want. But they never lose track of where they're really going.

This is all standard stuff this idea of divide/conquer, divide/conquer, divide/conquer. Have them all fighting each other, making things dysfunctional, until the public PLEAD to be brought out of their misery by a system that's going to work. And they're only too happy to oblige you, you see.

But again, through technocracy, again, which was adopted to an extent, not, it wasn't perfected in the Soviet system, which had its massive share of corruption. Because in a socialist system, in a completely atheist system by the way, of materialism, you truly see the corruption come, there's nothing that holds you back. I mean, there's no moral conscience there when you worship people who are stinking rich, and you want all the goodies that's dangled in front of your eyeballs, and you get positions in power and over the general population, you get your hands in the cookie jar and you help yourself. That's how simple it is in true Soviet type systems, of equality, you know.

And here we are doing the same thing here with collectivism. It's the biggest trillionaires on the planet, the same people who already have run it for goodness knows how long, who simply are going into this next step, this stage of technocracy, technocratic control using experts from birth to death to guide us all, you see, birth to death, cradle-to-grave, deciding who will have children, who will not. That already came out too at one of the previous climate meetings they came out with. This has been an old, old agenda for them but they're voicing it rather more openly today.

So, with Covid, the whole Covid thing, which has never passed any [unintelligible] test for proving it actually exists as an actual distinct virus... And that's a fact, folks! I'll give you some articles tonight on that. But again, facts don't matter to most folk. Because they can't believe that these deadpan faces like Fauci comes on every day telling you to be very, very afraid and to be terrified, and to put your faith in them. And women are, it's mainly women, older women actually, really putting their faith in Fauci and shouting everybody down on his behalf. 'Eh? This guy who's got his fingers in every pie along with Bill Gates for this whole agenda including the big companies that are going to have vaccinations pumped into you, they're so involved with and compromised it's astonishing we're letting it go this far. Really.

But you can do an awful lot when you terrorize the public. As I said before, and many times since, it's just the stampede technique of using the cattle in a field, they're quite happy, quite happy grazing. Humans are the same, we like to live in the same spot generally once you're settled a bit, you don't want to move and you’re quite happy. Even though things get pretty bad, things are still familiar around you, you want to stay there. So how do you get them to move and to adapt to new normals? Well, you bring in the behaviorists that terrify you, get you stampeding, until you can't think straight.

That's the technique of course that others... Adolf Hitler said it, and he copied the top Soviets that had done it, said it before him, the best way to get the people to comply is to terrorize them, they can't think logically when they're terrified. That's why you get terror, terror, terror and people tune in every day, they tune in every day for a daily dose of terror. Even though all the last staff was debunked really, with the testing, the faulty testing, the faulty numbers, everybody who's dying is getting lumped in as Covid. They're doing the exact same things again. But you see, it doesn't matter, as I say, logic doesn't work with folk who are terrified. They'll go along with it when those that are stampeding them point the direction for them to go, and they'll go right into their little...

Well, when you do it with cattle, if you've ever watch cattle going through the pens as they run, the way they go between, it's like a corridor they go down, it's boxed in except for the top. Eventually they go single file and that's where the people inject the cattle or spray them sometimes. I don't know if you've ever seen it done, they spray them with a chemical that eradicates all the different parasites they have inside and outside their bodies, it literally penetrates the skin. Invented by the military-industrial complex for gas, nerve agents to bring, and that's the actual agent they use, is the same carrying medium that takes the agent through the skin, it permeates the skin. So that's awfully effective for the cattle. [Alan chuckles.] It's so powerful in fact that the cattle are not supposed to come out into the same fields as horses or other animals, because just rubbing themselves past them and contact can cause very quick death to the horse. It will kill the parasites in the intestines, so fast, it causes complete blockage and ends up with a rather quick painful death for the horse. But anyway, that's a different story. [Alan chuckles.]

But that's how you do it, you guide the people, them all, and you scare them. Everybody's carrying these sticks which they wave around, they don't hit the cattle with them, but the stick, it's to make them look bigger, and they yell and scream, and then they guide the cattle into that corridor. They go down the corridor one by one, they can't get through any other way. Well, that's how we get manage the same way, you see.

Now, the cattle eventually know, they won't go, they can see the other ones coming out at the other end eventually as they get their injections or whatever they're getting, and so they realize that the only way they're going to get into that field beyond is to comply. And we are the same. Oh, you won't be able to go out of your house unless you take your Covid shot, which may kill you. They've actually, Bill Gates actually said that, remember, 700,000 folk at least in the world will die just with their reaction to it. But that's acceptable, you know, in his way, his psychopathic way. And that's just the initial, the initial reaction for a lot of folk. Never mind the later reactions and so on and the destruction of your immune systems and things like that. They call it vaccination accident responses and so on. Long-term. It doesn't matter.

We're dealing with psychopaths, you see, and there they are every day terrifying you to comply. And if you want to get through and go to work, you have to have a passport. Electronic preferably. So, if you haven't got a cell phone, get one. Or you won't get out, you see. And that little app has to come up green for you, meaning you’re safe go where you're going. Or else you're going to get put in prison, for goodness sake. Initially, they simply aren't going to allow you out of your home unless you comply.

We are supposed to be adults, folks! But we're treated worse than you would treat a child in this day and age. Because children wouldn't put up with this. [Alan chuckles.] Really. But we will, you see, because threats work awfully well. Compliance, you understand, there's nothing they cannot do to you to get you to comply. Nothing. And if you say, well, you mean you're forbidding me to leave my own...? Not forbidding you to leave the home, you have options, you know. What's your option? Take the shot, get a passport. This is how the game is played, you see. Standard stuff.

It's like the whole carbon economy, which has nothing to do with what they tell you. It's one thing, monopolization for a few power companies to have all power for heating and the whole bit. Do away with coal, and then do away with oil and maybe even eventually do away with gas, you know. You're left with electric; you see. Then you've got to get brown outs as they share and ration it all. I did this talk years ago when it came out from the European Union that that was the plan for the future, the future austerity. Not just for the European Union, but for the world. It doesn't matter I'm telling you the facts. Again, facts don't matter. Most folk will tune back into their TV tomorrow to get the next dose of terror. And it's pretty sad that's what we're living through.

But yeah, a post democratic society, and every possible scam is being used to make it all happen. As I said, the Club of Rome came out years ago, many years ago, they were tasked with finding something that would, to make the folk comply with the agenda, you know, of giving up their rights and being guided by those in charge, you know, who will be appointed in charge. They said, well, yes, climate change and famine and drought and these kind of things, pestilence, that would fit the bill. So, humans would be the enemy, and that's what we'll teach. And they've done it. Awfully successful.

So, the enemy to the planet therefore is mankind. They thought of all other ways, even UFOs at one point, and that wouldn't wash either, so they settled on that, you see because who’s going to complain about the weather? Most folk have not much memory of the past few years, never mind 20 years or 30, 40, 50. It's very easy to manipulate memories, or eradicate them in fact. It really is. It's gas lighting, isn't it? You say, well I don't remember that happening, you know, 10, 15, 20 years ago. Well maybe I'm wrong if all those folks, experts are right, hm. Quite easy to do, isn't it? Doubt your own sanity.

I noticed it too, [Alan chuckles.] I even said when 9/11 happened, I think it was the night of 9/11, on the big agenda, on a radio show. I said, the hardest thing you're going to find you have to do… Because I knew the whole agenda was going to get unleashed with 9/11, it wasn't just going to be an antiterrorist thing. It's a complete new way of living, again, no freedoms, no real freedoms and no privacy and total surveillance of everybody. And sure enough, you know, before you knew it they were walking, and there's the stupid people, and that's how they see us all, we're all stupid people, complying, going through metal detectors at airports, no belts, holding up their pants with one hand and holding their shoes in the other, they've got their bare feet and the whole thing. What a farce, ‘eh? What a farce.

But the answer to that one was very similar as what's going to come with this one for Covid. Well, you do know you can get a quick passport, a quick pass through passport and preclearance, but it's a biometric thing. They showed us this in the late 90s on the Wendy Mesley show in Canada and how it would be done. Everyone was saying, well why do we need all this? Well, bingo, about two or three years later 9/11 happens and there you are, holding up your pants and being shouted at by people, you know, and them watching you naked [Alan chuckles.] through x-ray machines [Alan chuckles.] and the whole thing. And to humiliate you and make you feel small and stupid. But yeah, you can get that quick preclearance thing, biometric, you know and that's all you have to do. They already showed us two years prior to that or three years prior to it on the Wendy Mesley show. And there you go again.

And here it is, the same thing. You get a special passport and then you can get out of your house. All you have to do is become a pincushion for experimental drugs and vaccinations and things, owned by private corporations that are given blanket immunity for any side effects including death. That's all. That's all you have to do, you know. The same techniques, terror, terror, terror, 'eh? And again, I've already done talks, remember go into my website @cuttingthroughthematrix.com because I've already done the talks to do with this whole agenda and your passport and all the rest of it and where it's supposed to go and how they're going to implement it. From their own sites, how they're going to make you accept it and even persuade you into it, you see, through behavioristic techniques. The folk don't even know it's happening to them. They really don't. They honestly don't.

It's organized crime beyond anything you can imagine. That's what real governments are, they're organized crime. You can't get much more organized than that! And all these supposedly quasi-official agencies, they're not, you don't vote for them. They graft themselves onto governments as advisors, but you don't vote for these organizations, like the WHO. Or the FDA in the States. I used to do talks on that too, where the FDA, and from articles, people who, there's awfully good people out there who really study this kind of stuff and they put books out and they put out good articles. They showed you the revolving door of people in the big corporations for food, for instance, and the drug agencies and so on, the drug companies, and CEOs and people just below CEOs would leave occasionally and go into the FDA, long enough to get bills put through and forwarded, and they give their opinions and passed things as okay and accept them, then go right back into the drug companies where they came from. This is standard stuff, Bernays’ style.

Bernays talked about this. First you set up the agencies. You could even do it with, I've mentioned before, with a little office, little dump, even a closet would do if you can get a phone into it. Get someone to sit there and give them a little paycheck and answer phones. Get four doctors or whoever it happens to be, or professors to put their name on your, you know, yeah, we are part of the board for this company. Sounds awfully official, so anything that's scribbled up, it's on the stamp of the letter there, there's names, and it sounds awfully official. Bernays said, he actually helped companies do this kind of thing.

So to get back to 9/11 and that night when I mentioned it, I said, because I had already heard that nothing is going to be the same again, that was one of the first things, before the dust cleared, after they mentioned it must had been Bin Laden that did it, you see, Osama bin Laden. Immediately, things will never be the same again. There ya go. These are little code phrases, you know, that's to be used. We have the same thing too with his Covid thing etc. etc., it will never be the same again. You've heard it too with some of the riots and demonstrations, at the same time, going on around the world, we'll never be the same again.

This is the mantra you're supposed to, you've got to accept this. Because they mean it. This is to get you to accept the fact of massive changes which are coming. And some of you already see, get the whiffs of it already. But after 9/11 I said the same thing, I said the hardest thing from now on will be to keep hold of your sanity. Your sanity will be the hardest thing to keep hold of. Because it was a whole, it wasn't just 9/11, it was a whole agenda, right down to even watching the border change in the States and Canada.

I used to watch the long long lines of working-class people coming up for holidays, and they'd often haul little trailers behind them and things like that. That was how they had their, how they could afford holidays and get into Canada. Sometimes you'd see it, like nothing but lines of them coming up the main highways at times. With 9/11 and these massive holdups now at border checks, [Alan chuckles.] unless if you're coming in and you shouldn't be in the country at all you're going to get held up. And it turned folk off, naturally, all the hassles, hassle upon hassle upon hassle. Then the same hassle going back down. What a shame, you know, because these are just ordinary people, ordinary working people that couldn't afford to jet all over the place and they had their little trailers, and that was darn good. It was good business too for Canada and campsites and places that enjoyed having them. But what a shame. It really destroyed so much.

Then again, oh, terrorism everywhere. Meanwhile the mass migration we've seen since then that came across Europe right through into Britain mainly, that's where they're all wanting to go with all the better perks and so on. And so many of them now are used like an army, as we all know, this is a fact, many of us knew at the time that's what it would be used for. And bingo here you go. You're seeing it right now. This is all planned. You're looking at war strategies, and these are very effective war strategies in fact. Because you don't have any guard against it when it's happening. You're told not to think about as to what you see, think of it as the way you're told to by those who have control of your nations. [Alan chuckles.] No, they're just poor people looking for places and so on.

Even with the wars across the Middle East, these eternal wars, we forget before 9/11 happened we already had pretty well a 10 years' war from about 1990 onwards. As soon as the Soviet Union supposedly collapsed, the US was wanting a war and wanting to clean up some of its assets in the Middle East, on behalf of others [Alan chuckles.] and they wanted to get rid of Saddam Hussein, we know that.

There's a long story between, about Saddam Hussein and the fact that he did talk to the American consulates a few times and complained about the fact that this area to the north of them in Iraq, Kuwait, was using horizontal drilling rigs that can go miles and miles and miles underneath a border and tap into reservoirs. [Alan chuckles.] They were stealing it, you see. That was in fact put into different scientific magazines, I think maybe, I don't know if it was Popular Science, something like that also, I remember reading it years ago, one of the science magazines anyway. They showed you how these particular machines worked.

But anyway, Saddam had mentioned that he might have to try and do something about it. And he was getting nowhere. There was a show done about this in fact about someone up in-the-know from the State Department or ex-State Department member who mentioned that. He said that Saddam asked him, he said, is it okay if I just go up and straighten this out and the whole thing? So, he did go up there with his army and of course all hell broke loose.

Because immediately the media was ready to go into action, it was all planned that way. They made him out to be the worst guy on the earth and he was stabbing babies and throwing them out of incubators into the streets and stuff. It was all lies, naturally. That even kind of came into a movie eventually that was made, or it was called Wag the Dog, on how to get the media off the back of a president because the president was involved in going after little girls I think at the time, that was the story. So, they conjured up a war.

A lot of what they had in the movie actually came to be in the first Gulf War. The US sent in massive machinery to take down [Alan chuckles.] a nation that was unprepared for it. And Britain helped of course. And they helped divvy up the oil fields then too in some of the areas in northern Iraq, I think they had a no-fly zone over the rest of it. It was quite something indeed how many oil fills the allies set on fire, and you had black smoke for thousands of miles across the planet. There you go, big business, 'eh.

But everyone forgets that now anyway, that war was going on and had a no-fly zone for 10 years with Bush Senior being the boss. Then of course Bush Junior took over and continued it, with 9/11 onwards up to the present day. Obama also was congratulated by the group that had Bush Junior in it, the PNAC group. Rumsfeld congratulated Obama for continuing the same strategies and agendas, against the same list of countries, adding to the list actually, at least expanding the list. I think Obama had eight wars going in different places at the same time. So, he really did well, and he was approved and given the pat on the back.

You understand, the elite can tell you who they want at the moment as the fronts for countries and Obama complied awfully well with them. Because they had it in mind to bring in a socialistic system of control, where it's more obedient. It's more efficient, again, under socialism you do what you're told. Remember, socialism is a form of communism. Communism is a step up the, it's a bit more hurry to get to communism, but you always get there under socialism anyway. And that's what you're going through even now, socialism to communism. More efficient for your masters.

But, it's a 30 years’ war going on. 30 years for goodness sake. And they still want Syria finished off. I can remember reading the papers at the time, when they go around into Iraq, the US, and Bush is having meetings even with Israel, and Israel said to them "keep going all the way to Syria". And they said, well we can't, you know, we haven't found the weapons of mass destruction. This is in the newspapers, you know, just the general newspapers at the time. And he says, no, we haven't found any weapons of mass destruction. And they said, well, they've been moved over to Syria, so go all the way to Syria and get them. So, the US has been [Alan chuckles.] busy at it for an awful long time. And it's exhausted. It's exhausted.

I remember reading articles many years ago on some of the top authors who helped plan a lot of the system that we're living in today. Because think tanks, big think tanks, authorized think tanks run our lives, and they always have done, in our memory anyway, and our grandparents’ memory, that's how bad it is. But really since the 1800s I'd say at least, these official think tanks. They had other groups before that too, the 'concerts', they used to call them, now they call them groups. You had the Concert of Europe that was a kind of idea, a precursor to the League of Nations even. Before that was other types as well. And after that they came up with 'groups', just groups, and the roundtable groups and the Groups of 7, G7 and 8, 9, 10, 20, etc. They also have 'councils', you know, the meeting of councils. And sometimes they give the councils just a number for whatever it is they stand for.

But we don't elect any of these people. That's what runs our lives, financially. They draft up laws basically and bills for governments, put forward by politicians, or to governments by politicians that are then put into law. That's how the free-trade agreements were always done. They're done by private outside groups, like the CFR that drafts them up, hands it to the governments involved and tells them to sign it. Which they happily do. And that's all on behalf of huge massive business, you know.

But as I say, today we're living through a system where it's to be more efficient, and you can't get efficiency and get things done unless you really, really get rid of this idea of democracy. Which you can do in a wartime scenario, you see, it's much easier, oh, you're all going to die with this or you're gonna die with that… regardless, you're going to die of something, unless you comply and go along with us. You see, that’s how you do it.

Again, there's nothing new in this revelation. It shouldn't be a revelation because you know, it's only our own stupidity that we tend to decide to forget things. Because you think about Carroll Quigley, and many before him. I mean, Carroll Quigley wasn't the originator of many of these different things that came out of his mouth. They were ancient ideas, you know. But it's true, he said, you can get more done in five years of war, like on a social change system, right, with different techniques to be employed through war techniques, when folk comply with what you tell them. So, you can get more done in five years of war then 50 years of peace and persuasion and propaganda. That's what you're going through now, naturally. And you've been going through it.

It's no surprise to me, I've mentioned before that the schools were raising and creating a generation of revolutionaries. And it's for now, you can see it now. And they hate people, they hate most people. They even hate themselves, a lot of them. All they can think of doing is tearing everything down, and blaming everybody else for what they claim, what they've been taught to believe, it's a belief based thing, that the whole planet is destroyed because of you or folk who existed before you. That's the mantra of Greta, you know, is it's all your fault, you should all be ashamed, blah blah blah.

What you're looking at really, I hope you understand, but what you're looking at is the same, are the same faces and same expressions in a generation raised now, that these are not protesting, these folk want to tear everything down. It's the same faces you saw in the old photographs and even the early movie reels, of revolutionaries in Russia and so on that were going off to slaughter people across the country, the Soviet Union. And they did it with zeal, really believing they were doing it for the good of all. Slaughter, mass slaughter.

You understand, I think Peter Hitchens touched on this too. He said that, because he came out as a revolutionary when he came out of University, like many of his own at the time, a true Trotskyist/Marxist ready to kill. He says but what he's noticed with the present crop, that are ultra-radicalized, across the world remember, at the same time, that's even more so because they didn't have uniformity across the globe with the Bolsheviks. But they have it now on behalf of those who run the WEF, World Economic Forum and so on. But he says, there's no tolerance, they have no tolerance, they won't debate, they want you to get down on your knees and swear allegiance to them and their causes. And even then, there's no guarantee they're going to allow you to, to save you, to spare you. They are radical. That's how very… this is danger, you're looking at danger here, folks.

As I say, the folk that he had in the 1960s and early 70s would debate and they'd argue. But these folks don't even want to debate. They want to eradicate you, that's what you're seeing. And those at the top that gave them the current, the last, you know, I guess, the educational system, and it's with perfect techniques with behaviorist groups and professionals in psychology doing their courses for them, drafting up the courses and the tool kits for the teachers and so on, they can churn them out like peas in a pod, ultra-radicalized to do nasty things when they're all given the right command.

I hope you're understanding that, what you're seeing right now. This is not something to take lightly and think it's going to blow over. You've been leading up to this for quite a few years.

You've seen it with London especially, like, England especially and parts of Europe when they, it's easy to bus or even boats and even drive across the channel across Europe with the same groups, massive groups, that get together from all the countries. Again, led by the paid radical leaders, very well-paid and organized for it, and have meetings for different things. Including Extinction Rebellion, that wasn't spontaneous. Who do you think created all that and funded it all? And gets them moved from one country to the next for the massive demonstrations? Hm?

And again, all chomping at the bit to get let loose upon the public. Then you put them together with Antifa and other radical Marxist groups, well-funded again, well trained, well organized. This is not going to blow over. It's not meant to blow over. And it would never have happened [Alan chuckles.] unless it was decided upon TO happen and even to get created in the first place by those at the top at the World Economic Forum and the World Bank, etc., the ones who really run the world.

Margaret Thatcher said it years ago, and it was interesting to me. I mean, I knew about the Lord Alfred Milner group, I've given lots of talks on all this history. And also the philosophers going way back beyond before even Plato came along with his idea of the Republic and special breeding of different classes and professions, even soldiers would breed with soldiers, meaning men and women, etc., and different classes for special functions for special jobs, that kind of stuff. But all the way up.

And I thought, you know, the Lord Alfred Milner group really ran, they were like the big, big bureaucracy overseeing what was called the British Empire, and adding to it on behalf of people that a lot of folk don't even know their names. The ones who ruled it then in the City of London, the big, big financiers and so on, who also put their sons off to be Governors Generals standing in for royalty with the powers of royalty appointed over India and different places. Quite amazing. And all business came through their hands. And from those countries. Incredibly lucrative for them. Completely sewn up with the banking industry of the time.

They added to it by causing wars. Quigley, who was all for their history, their real version of history, why things happened, including who started the Boer War. And it was them of course, the group that he belonged to. He was kind of proud of them, how they managed to by subterfuge get a war started. Blame the Boers for attacking British settlements in South Africa, in order, in order, right, to get British troops mandated over to protect them. Then Britain would take over on their behalf, [Alan chuckles.] the corporations would own all the gold and diamonds, that lived in the City of London.

So, you start a war and you blame the other guys that you've just attacked, and you change it. They even brought in a writer, a woman from the Times I think it was and she wrote a version, in advance, of the Jamestown raid, and said that these terrible Boers had attacked these British settlements. Rather than the fact that Alfred Milner's group had actually set up a mercenary group to attack the Boers, it was the other way around, to get them to respond. Nothing has changed, that same technique is used today, isn't it? So, you get Saddam Hussein to retaliate, because his oil is getting stolen, and you paint him as a real demon, and then you grab, eventually you grab all his land, divvy up the oil for corporations. This goes on and on, the same techniques, 'eh.

That's why I say if you really have been radicalized, I hope, I can only talk to the occasional individuals. Most folk in them can't think for themselves. And they really do want to belong to the mob. They do. It's a collective mentality that they have, this temporary camaraderie that they have, that they're in it together, you know, we belong, we have a cause. Otherwise they have no causes at all. So this gives them a cause, and they've all been told it's for the greater good and it's for the best, etc., as all tyrants do too, even the folk who do the slaughtering will say that to themselves, at least in the early days.

I say, they're chomping at the bit to get going against all the ones that have destroyed their world. And I'm sure they'll do it, they'll do it when they're told to by, say, the Club of Rome, as an example. Who are rejoicing at this whole Covid idea and the complete shutdown of... all the stuff the... The World Economic Forum, folks, this is like all the top businesses on the planet, do you understand that? These aren't little Trotskyists at the bottom. No, these are the folk who are the trillionaires, multi-multi-multi trillionaires, you can't even comprehend. When they are not there their agents are there. But even the WEF isn't a little meeting place. It's like a massive country in a sense with thousands of bureaucrats and thousands again of training facilities to pick-up future leaders from childhood, they train them from childhood to rule you. [Alan laughing.]

Real technocracy, you see. It's all done already. And they are richest people on the planet, who own the wealth and resources of the planet. They have decided that communistic Trotskyist ideas and socialistic ideas and forms of governance, where you just obey and do what you're told or else, is the best way to get their agenda, this part of their agenda through. It will last maybe 80 years. And by that time a lot of folk will have died off. The present radical generation will not have children anyway, the ones they're using right now who are chomping at the bit to kill older folk. It won't matter about them either because they themselves, generally most of them won't have children. At least live ones. So that's the end of them too. Every group is used in turn for the ones at the top. And they never figure that out. Never.

But again, Maggie Thatcher, getting back to Lord Alfred Milner and so on... And I knew about the Royal Institute for International Affairs and its foreign branches. Now it's got a European group for the European politicians and those in the Commission at the top of the EU, the secret members that run it. [Alan chuckles.] And they have one for the Far East as well based in Japan. They've got members now in China and they rule Australia and New Zealand. They divvy up the world, you see, that's what they do, they divvy it up and they have the members running all of it, at the top. Governments obey them.

Margaret Thatcher said the same thing, she said, you know, she was asked about when she retired and she says, well now I belong to a group that's very important because we can get things done, she says, I don't have to, I'm not responsible to the public anymore or to the voters. We know what the problems are. We also are a society of people who have held power of all kinds as Prime Minister's, presidents and top bureaucrats for divisions, and generals and so on. She says, we all know each other, because they all worked with each other when they were in power, you see. We've met and we all know each other and we work together for a common goal, and she said, we can get things done without having to answer to the public, so we can get things done quickly and fast without any objections. Because most of the things they get up to don't come to the public table for debate, it's just done. So, she was the same, you see, she did the same kind of thing.

I knew they had The Elders and different groups as well. But yeah, these are the societies that really run, on behalf of those at the very, very top, how things are really done and worked and so on. Very old families at the top, very, very old families, that generally don't mess up, you know. These aren't the ones in the paper you see where after so many generations the children become decadent and make mistakes and screw up or have a debauched life or something and hit the media, you know. You don't hear of these characters because they're so particular on their breeding and who they breed with. And the education that their children are going to have, it's a completely different education altogether, as to reality. That's how things really are folks.

So as I say, you have to hang onto your sanity as you go through all the other changes, the ones I've talked about before, I've talked as I say, way back from many years ago, are all coming in to place now in fact. Because you’re living through agendas. Agendas don't have to be sudden. It might appear like that to the public at times but, no, they take years and years to apply. The same with revolutions, right, it took years to apply. The same with even the Extinction Rebellion, it took years to get to assemble them, get them trained and radicalized, the leaders that is. The followers don’t matter. The followers really, as I say, have no, they feel they have no purpose in life unless they are inside of a group. And the group teaches them to hate everybody else that's come before them. It's an old communist technique, you see. Communism is awfully well understood by those at the top. And it's awfully good to get their agendas through when it suits them as I say. Now is the time for that obviously.

Now, before I prattle on any further, again, go into my website @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. I wanted to say off the bat, I just posted a bunch, another bunch of books and discs. And I have one more, and hopefully the final one for a while to be posted off in the next two days. Hopefully that whole pile is gone, that's it. It's been accumulating for a long time. And I was out of discs for a while too, you see.

Because where I live, I can't order things in from Amazon. They won't deliver it to my little place, my little town. We are an unorganized township, I don't know if anything happens in the roads or whatever, I have no idea what their laws are, but they don't deliver here. I did have I think once or twice years ago, FedEx came once or twice but even they stopped that. There used to be a little gas station at the top of Estaire there that would accept parcels, but that's gone now. Everything's going under, you see. Everything's going under. But they would accept parcels so once in a while you could get things, a few years ago, dropped off there. But there's nowhere anymore left that does that.

UPS was one of the worst ones. UPS says, if you've got an address, we deliver. But no, they don't. So, don't ever send anything to me by UPS, whatever you do. They hand it out to a courier company once it gets to Sudbury, for instance, that definitely will not deliver out this way. And they won't even tell me something came in any way. I've had that before where I have stuff, I have no idea that stuff had been sent to me by people unless they sent me an email or something. If they didn't send me an email, this other courier company wouldn't even phone you or let you know or email you there was a parcel came in in Sudbury somewhere.

Sudbury, remember, is over 20 miles away so I can just run it to Sudbury, it's a forty mile our round-trip. And it's a lot of gas too. But anyway, as I say, the last lot of stuff that was waiting to get sent off, that's two batches out, and the next batch goes out in the next two days and hopefully that will be off. So, if anybody's waiting, don't worry, it should be there within about 10 days from postage.

And we are going into a kind of a lockdown; I can see it all. We knew that before. Come February I said they'll lock us down, they'll ease up in the summer a little bit, and then it's going to spike in the fall and lock us all down again. Because remember, they want you locked down for 2 to 3 years. 2 to 3 years means permanent, folks! Over 40% of small businesses are gone forever now, they aren't going to open up again. This is to bring in a whole new way of living, nothing to do with the virus.

They've killed more folk off by what they've done about it, as opposed to the virus itself. Look at the elderly folk that's been slaughtered. They were sacrificed, folks. Sacrificed deliberately to get the numbers up. That's what I think. Other folk are asking, saying the same kind of things. But that's really what it seems to be. You don't put in a contaminated people with uncontaminated people. But they were doing it. Look at New York, what happened there. N-n-n.

And we still don't know what this is, really, because even folk with, have you noticed any statistics on the flu season? Has it suddenly disappeared? No. Everyone is getting lumped in as Covid. Everybody. And the ones who are dying off, if they've got any trace of debris of Covid, any debris particles in the nasal passages when they're tested with the ridiculous swab test, which are pretty well useless as we know, I'm not just making this up, there's stacks of information, official information about how inadequate these tests are, the actual test is for particles, the RNA or DNA, like from dead particles and bits and pieces of them, you'll test as positive. But they're also saying if you've got a runny nose from a cold or flu, you'll test positive as well. You see, they're all members of the Covid family.

But again, facts don't matter, right. Because this is, everything hangs on us complying with this whole thing. And the farce of testing and testing. When you look at where they've been, oh, there's so many thousands that have been found, it's because you've now tested thousand for the first time in this area or that. And you're going to find folk all over the planet, or your own area, that literally have no symptoms at all, that have got fragments that will test positive, but they are NOT ill. This is not, CASES does not equate illness.

You've got thousands of viruses going through your body all the time from birth to death. You're oblivious to it, until now. [Alan chuckles.] Because everything hangs on this being brought off, you see. Everything. A whole new way of life. You won't open up unless you're sustainable, yada ya, or, what they mean by that, is NECESSARY. Do you understand that? That's what they mean by sustainable. It isn't just eco-sustainability, it's also necessary. Are you starting to get the picture?

So, go into my website @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. List all the other sites I have in case anything should happen to anyone of them you can get the talks. And other folk take my talks and put them up as well in other outlets. And I'm looking for other outlets as well.

Because we're in the middle of an incredible war. This is to change life forever as we know it on the planet. Really. And it was planned long before. Like every revolution, it takes years to plan all this, years. We've got stuff going back to 2010 from the Rockefeller foundation talking about this kind of stuff, we'll put them all up, facts, facts, facts, you know, if a pandemic was to happen, yada ya, and then the future of technology as they takeover, yada yada ya. They're talking about the complete elimination of paper, as you know too, the term now, and Bill Gates is using, reinventing education. Oh, he's got all the stuff where you going to have people and children learning his curriculum, isn't that an amazing power, across the planet. Online, you see, rather than school. Ahhh-ha. Is it starting to ding ding in the head here? Amazing hey.

It all comes together with the same little clique, the same little clique that, these self-appointed Nero's, you know. Did any of you vote for any of these characters? No, we didn't. You've been living under the delusion you lived in democracies, 'eh.

So, go into my website @cuttingthematrix.com. Remember, you can donate to me as well and help me tick along. Because like everybody else I need it too. You'd be surprised how many folk out there who use this stuff because I document everything I talk about as a resource, you see. And you’ll find it from all the top ones that's supposedly in the alternate media, because they use this stuff, most of them never tell you where they get it from. But that's just the state of affairs, everything's pretty nasty today, 'eh? There is no natural decency amongst most people today. Why should folk listen to people who won't be decent? because they're spouting about this stuff that I'm talking about for instance, but they're not decent themselves? why would they expect you to be decent about what they are saying, 'eh, if they can't play decent amongst other people too?

This idea of morality has been destroyed as your culture has been destroyed for years, a war on the culture. This is old stuff. The Soviets talked an awful lot about the destruction of cultures. That's what Bezmenov talked about too. Forget the James Bond stuff, most of the real Cold War comprised of subterfuge, going in and creating different kinds of agencies, inside countries. I've got books here going way back on the creation of front groups for communism. Lots of Christian groups got involved, they didn't know either, they had no idea they were getting used for communist purposes, they called them communist front groups.

Folk tend to get hung up on names, you see. I always say, you’re looking for diseases, you’re looking for diseases in society and what you do with any disease is you must look first of all for signs and symptoms of disease. Then you put down what is noticeable, observable, and you can see some of the effects of the disease and you list all of these things, you see. And you keep at it and at it and at it until you narrow it down. Then you come to the diagnosis, this is blah blah blah, and you give it the name, the title of the disease, that's how it's done. Folk have no idea. But they get hung up on names. Oh, that's not communism, no, it's a blah blah blah, you know, and it's generally a wonderful sounding thing, name, 'eh and it’s for the social good, you know. Bingo, bingo, bingo, that's how it's done.

But Yuri Bezmenov said that, he said that's what most of the agencies were about was subversion. You subvert cultures especially. And when he came into America in the 1970s, he went there first I think and then into Canada. He said that he couldn't believe it, and the communists, the Soviets couldn't believe it, how WELL their program of destroying the culture had worked. From destroying the family, this is the 1970s, with the excess use of sex in all the movies and so on, sex, sex, sex. You must create a society of promiscuity, excessive promiscuity, which ensures that most folk won't, number one, get married and have children, and number two, won't have children to pass on the culture to. That was part of the Frankfurt school and other ones too and Wilhelm Reich as well, who was also part of that group by the way [Alan chuckles.] and a communist. So that's what was done. He says, so yeah, they were overjoyed at how far it had gone to destroy the culture in America.

A belief system, it does matter what you think of it, a belief system gave you a moral code that you held in common. The commonality of a code of conduct was important. Once you've destroyed that, oh, it's all relative now. That term was brought in, right, deliberately, by the communists. Oh, every opinion is just as good as any other opinion, it's all relative. So, there’s no such thing as objective truth left anymore, you see, and before you know it, yeah, everything becomes subjective, and so, nothing's going to have any force of any kind to act upon, you see.

So, as I say, Bezmenov said that, they had no idea how successful their technique of deculturalization, destroying the culture of an opponent had been. Incredibly successful. M-hm. And look at it today. Now you have many groups, the leaders of whom are trained in Marxism and organizing and radicalizing the followers into really any subversive act, and overt violent acts too. And you're not worried about it because you've fallen for, no it's not, it's not the same thing, it's a protest about somebody being killed. No, that wasn't about somebody being killed. They were sitting waiting in the wings for it to happen, Antifa says they sit and wait for a spike they can jump on and jump on it they do. And they use different groups, even victim groups to jump on and ride them, you know, ride them like horses to the bitter end. That's what you're seeing.

Then you link that about that Extinction Rebellion. I remember one of the big meetings, I've said before, one of the huge meetings that they had for the World Trade Organization. They had quite a few back in the late 90s and the early 2000's for a few years in different countries. There were a couple in Canada too. I remember them showing you, they had cameras inside one of them, just for a little clip it was. It was awfully important, probably a clip for their own records, somehow got on the television. But you saw some of these people at the top looking down at these crowds down below them, beating their drums and the standard protest thing for globalism, they didn't want globalism. At that time students did not want globalism. Now, they've been turned 180°, haven't you noticed, did they notice, until they want no borders, and massive movements of everything and people too. Have they actually noticed? That's how slick you can use crowds, you see, four legs good, two legs bad, until their shouting, two legs good, four legs bad. It's that simple.

But in that little clip they showed you, one of the politicians who was attending it, and he's looking down, they're looking down and, what's wrong with them, what is it they want, you know. Don't forget how these guys are, trained as CEO some of them as well and they say, well how can we use this to our advantage? It's always that, they don't hit anything head-on making an enemy of it, you use it. So, he went down, and they picked, he said, we could bring some of the leaders up of these different groups, these NGOs, bring them up here. Well they did and from then on, as I say, that's when it was almost for the next year or two, there was no more protest against globalism and free trade. None. It just ended.

Suddenly they were all extinction rebellion types, you see, and all the other radical groups to stop the business from, you know, by having huge parades and stopping business and shutting down railway lines and yada ya. All the Club of Rome stuff, you see. Yeah. And that's what they did, they gave funding to the leaders and made them awfully rich and wealthy, guaranteed incomes that they'd never get before, you know, bashing drums and dreaming up the occasional slogan to yell, and suddenly they were kind of important. That's what you've had since then on. That's how slick it was. Now they're all working together, a big network of them. And they don't come out against globalism. Nope.

They literally, they don't care of the fact that the World Economic Forum, the richest folk, are the ones in charge of everything, who decide what policies we're going to have, including bringing us down to utter austerity and rationing cards. That's what it's going to come to, that's what it's meant to come to. And a post consumerist world as such, you see. You can't go around and just consume stuff; you have to just take what you get for basic survival. I did these talks years ago, from their own sources, including the brownouts and so on.

[Alan chuckles.] It's quite something. Life can get awfully boring when you've read all their stuff, 'eh. And I'm one who actually has read their stuff, not just saying it like other ones who adopt my stuff [Alan chuckles.] and say that. But that's really what we're living through, a huge agenda. And it is boring because you know what's next and what's next. And that's when you know, when they set on something, just like weapons of mass destruction, they'd rather obliterate a nation or a bunch of nations before they'll ever come out and say, well, we were wrong, or, yeah you were right all along, it was all bogus, the causes were bogus, like weapons of mass destruction.

I can remember Colon Powell, he was put forward to try to convince us to continue with Iraq, to finish it off and put it into the Stone Age, that was the agenda, you know, Kissinger admitted to that, who said that's what he would have preferred to do, so they can never get back together as a nation, a strong nation, uniform with uniform government so on. Once they've destroyed them into the Stone Age then you find different factions to fight each other, forever, they're never going to be a threat to anybody, and you can plunder them for resources. That's how it's done. It's kind of boring, isn't it, the whole system is awfully boring because it's repetitive, and rather obvious as well.

Yeah, it's a sad thing that we have masters. We don't elect these masters. You're all subject to them. They know it too. And these masters have sections of them that play the far left, you know, they play that game too, if you understand how the United Nations is set up to work as the world socialist system, on behalf of the elite, [Alan chuckles.] folks. Because don't forget, the United Nations was set up from the League of Nations which was set up by, it wasn't just Woodrow Wilson, he was the front man for it. It was the Lord Alfred Milner group that wanted it and through that they would run the world, every facet of economics and finance and everything, you know, and trade, would eventually go through departments of that.

From the Lord Alfred Milner group, you ended up with the Royal Institute for International Affairs, a private club, the same club. It sounds awfully official but it's a private club. Out of that membership they set up the World Bank. They set up the Bank for International Settlements. They set up the IMF and other departments too, Overseas Economic Development, etc. That the taxpayers would all fund. This is, what's that got to do with voting for politicians? Nothing! Nothing. [Alan laughing.] Nothing at all, 'eh.

And you go back into the histories of education, awfully important, you must get a uniform education. You keep most of the folk dumb and stupid, like Bertrand Russell said, that's the idea, he talked about Fichte [Johann Gottlieb Fichte] all the time and Fichte said the same thing, the objective of education was to keep the general public dumb. They were given an education, I gave talks on that many years ago too going into the system even leading up to John Dewey, but prior to John Dewey, the only reason the folk in Britain were given a basic education was for the industrial era. Because they had to have folk who could read little notes left for them, little instructions in the factories on how to operate this and how to write down all what was needed and done and so on and follow instructions. So, they were given a basic, basic instruction in the English language, very simple stuff too.

But they didn't, they even had meetings in Britain, of the intelligentsia who were worried about this. They said, you know, if they start to get an education and they read books, and even philosophies or ancient history, they might start to connect things together and not be too happy with their lot in life. This is all documented stuff. And they even said, well what we can do is to make sure we'll keep them working for 16 hours a day, they'll be too tired then to do anything afterwards, even if we give them basic education, to read or to communicate with each other to get organized and, you know, fight for any kind of rights at all. I'm not kidding you; this is how it happened. They had big meetings about this, they were worried.

So, what they also came up with is the idea, okay now that we've got them basic, basic reading and writing, let's churn out novels for them, fiction, you see, fiction is a great way to keep them happy and excited, as though they are involved in a fantasy world, give them a fantasy world. So, they work 16 hours a day of misery, will be bearable, they can daydream on what they read the night before, you see. They churned out, they called it, penny books. These little penny novels were aimed at men, and ones for women, you see. The guys would have their wars and they'd be super soldiers in the war and get the metals going out across the world fighting for good causes and things like that, you see. But in reality, they were stuck at a machine all day long in the cotton factories. And the cotton killed a lot of folk, you know, the same with wool, the cotton did the same thing to the lungs, 'eh, terrible diseases it caused.

But that was their escape. That's all they had, what else did you have? Nothing. You couldn't save up enough money to get out on the pittance wages that were basically worked out, scientifically again, how much you needed to earn, a male, and a woman, say, who also work in the factory, who might have, because they wanted to have another crop of offspring to work the factories, 'eh. This is how science works; this is how this kind of stuff works. So, for the next generation they had to make sure, well, again, they wanted to keep them poor, or they wouldn't work in the factories. Why would you work in a factory for a pittance if you had a better education and you could save up money and get out of that hellhole you were in and into a healthier environment at the very least, 'eh, than work in a factory?

So, they literally kept them, how much does it take the average man and woman to pay rent? So, they had these strange things, almost like fixture rents across the country, especially in the factory towns and cities. That system literally had gone on right up into the 20th century, where if you saw a person who was going into an apprenticeship, because in those days most folk didn't get into universities. But if you got into an apprenticeship for a trade that was a BIG deal, right. Big deal. And lots of folk would compete for the few jobs or few entries into apprenticeships. And these apprenticeships too treated their workers like slaves, like pittance wages. It was taken for granted up to the fifth year of apprenticeships, into the 20th century like halfway through, that the parents would still be supporting an apprentice. Because they were given just enough money often to get to their work, that's what they'd earn and their bus fare and so on, I'm not kidding you.

So yeah, it worked out that way. So, man and wife, 'eh, in the late 1700s and 1800s, the late 1800s onwards, how much would they need just to keep them in basic subsistence, enough for the food and so on… and they had it worked out. Literally, again in the 20th century, Britain was using that same technique in war, from World War I into the Great Depression, into World War II, straight, bang, bang, bang, bang, bang. They had wage freezes, price freezes they called them too, so you couldn't earn more money then and better yourself again, and you'd have to work more and more hours for the same amount and yada, yada, ya.

This is all, basically it came back, came out of the Industrial Revolution and how they treated whole families, thousands and thousands, maybe millions of people, kept them at pure subsistence wages, 16 hours a day. Could not get out of it. And folk didn't live that long, they'd often die, like 20 crammed in a room in these awful, awful cities that were set up for them. That's the truth of it. Forget all this white privilege stuff. This is the horror that folk lived through.

And you have to read the stories of some of the doctors that wrote about the diseases that swept through the cities with open sewers and things, 'eh. N-n-n. Frozen, you know, freezing in the winter, no heat, nothing. A horror show. I've often said that, history really is a horror show.

These things they tried to eradicate that from education, very quickly, because they don't want the present crop to realize, you know, how bad it was for these people. And unless your parents and grandparents and great-grandparents could pass it on, what it was really like, or you asked them the pertinent questions, a lot of folk don't want to think back to these things, it's such a horror thing for them too. But I did, I was one of these inquisitive ones and I asked the older folk, you know, much older, about it because I realized that they'd be gone too. And with them goes whole chunks of real personal history of what they saw and witnessed, etc. That's all you can verify, you see.

Like 9/11, I said too, I says eventually, when it happened, I says, you know eventually you'll get books coming out with the authorized versions, that will completely contradict what we've all experienced. [Alan laughing.] And that's true, that's how it's done. So, the point I'm making here, right, is that whatever is happening took years to plan and prepare. Even to get the very rough parts of everything worked out, it took years to put the basic stuff, we'll need departments for this and departments for that, who will deal with, then subsections dealing with blah blah blah, and all these special departments, etc. All prepared before the things happen like a big battle plan. It takes years to do so.

And think tanks go over the main problems. Well if this were ever to happen, God forbid, 'eh, how would we do this and how would we do that? And if we did this, what would the effects of that be? How would that ripple through society? yada, yada, ya? It's all managed this way. And we're managed now by behavioral experts, have been for an awful long time, who really have, they loath us. They have, they despise us. I've mentioned this before, many times, how we're treated by the elites, including the intelligentsia, the ones that think they're really part of the intelligentsia, who despise us, simply because they're still pretty well cloaked in secrecy. Oh, we're special, we're cloaked in secrecy, we manage your minds and you don't know it. And the more they manage your minds and it works on you, the more they despise you. I'm telling you the truth.

I said before, how the elite treat us is they disable you, just like Fichte and like Lord Bertrand Russell who thought the same thing too, he always used the former, his idea on education, you know, the idea of education is to make them stay stupid. Or to make them stupid even if they weren't before. And it's true, that's how the elites have always seen it. The trouble is if you start becoming, if you break out of it and you start to understand what's happening, you become a threat to them. Obviously. He went through that in his books.

Anyway, I always say, what they do to you, they cripple you at birth, really. Forget all the toxic stuff they pump into you, off the bat, which will give you, that will lower the immune system right away. [Alan chuckles.] People, they often say, you know, we've all got allergies now and we’ve all got compromised immune systems to some extent or another. That's official stuff from scientific papers, they tell you that, we’ve all got it now. Well, pretty well all us lot, 'eh. I don't know about the very, very ultra-elite at the top. But anyway, what could've caused it? Well, all you have to do again is to say, what started in the 1960s onwards? What happened then that didn't happen before? Was it the food? Well, it's possible the chemicals in it. Was there anything, well, what else were big health services doing what to you? Mm. Okay. And more – I want to avoid the name – and more and more of the what's have done to you, to the present bunch today are just, you know, they're riddled with the stuff that's being done to them.

Think about it, I mean, what is it supposed to…? It's supposed to alter your immune system, it affects your immune system, 'eh, isn't that the purpose? Well, I wonder… I wonder what's lowered all of our immune systems until some immune systems are just on hyper alert all the time and overreact to everything. That's what happened to me, you see, after I got a whole bunch of boosters back in the 90s. A real cytokine storm indeed, vaccine related injury. There was no doubt about it. Cause and effect. Two weeks later, bomf, you know, massive arthritis, rheumatoid too, arthritis, bomf, head to toe. All your joints in your hands just popped, whof, fever the whole lot. Yep. And the classic signs of other things too, you know, it popped your stomach, it popped everything. That was never healed, really, not properly. Anyway, that's what you get from it.

So yeah, there are certain, again, what's a simple detective, what's happening, what's the signs and symptoms of the problem? What happened before that all happened to you? Well, okay, diagnosis falls in. Well, bingo, there's your answer, folks. It's Occam's razor they call it. Occam's razor, Occam's razor goes right, straight from this point to that point, the shortest route is probably the plausible explanation and the valid one. That's a fact. That's just how it is.

So, we’re living through a big agenda. Rather nasty. It took years to plan. We've had the culprits, some of the culprits out vocally speaking about it like Bill Gates. And he's definitely a culprit. This man I would not trust, I wouldn't even say, with my life, there's no darn way, but I wouldn't trust him in any other circumstance either. This guy is a creepy guy who is not qualified in virology, bacteriology or any of the sciences to do either, he's not qualified with vaccines either. But what he is, he is a qualified eugenicist. He really believes in the better types and inferior types, and too many of YOU, as he's said himself, as he took over and filled his father's shoes. Creepy, creepy beyond belief.

And he funds the WHO, massive funding to them. And he funds huge sums into the group too that is under Fauci and other ones as well. I mean, come on here. Huh? Isn't this a bit of a small world or something? He's at the WEF, World Economic Forum. Huh? And they are mandating that we all have to, and your governments are all complying. Because some of the heads, the medical heads in the different countries are even on the board, like Canada's one is on the board of the WHO, at the same time. No conflict of interest there, 'eh? [Alan laughing.]   Who are they serving? Literally, who are they serving?

So honestly, you know, this is a very obvious, obviously contrived system set up for this particular time we're living through at the moment. A huge agenda. The Club of Rome saying, oh we'll accomplish the whole sustainability program because of this Covid idea. And that's not speculation, you know, I put the articles they published out for those that wanted to read it before, giving joyful and gleeful responses to this and praise to the Covid. They're going to go the whole way with this. This is the complete reset, as they've said at the WEF and the World Bank and all the rest of them, the great reset. It wasn't reset just for money. Which it is. And for economies. Which it is. It's a complete reset of and whole new value system of your life, and your conditions of life, as you go down into utter austerity, depending on who you are.

So, before I go on to the actual talk, because I haven't even started the talk yet, isn't that amazing. Getting back to how they loath you, they really loath you. They treat you like cattle. What they do from birth, they cripple you. Your parents help because they've been crippled themselves, and those who are crippled pass on the indoctrination of reality, what they are told it is, to the child. You know, why do we have to do this? Because, because that's the way it is. So, I'm going to grow up and pay taxes, why is that? Because that's just the way it is. You know, before the grandparents didn't have to, because they didn't have temporary war tax then, which became permanent income tax, etc. etc. But anyway, they cripple you that way. They used parents to indoctrinate you, the school takes it over, to make sure you never think to yourself again, you see, you only adopt opinion put up by experts and professionals.

It's like getting a cow, breaking its legs, one at a time, and the poor animal's suffering and the whole bit and then it can't get up, and they kick you because you can't get up. And now they really despise you. This is how sadists work, you see. They really despise you. Psychopaths do the same thing, the studies on psychopaths, even in military organizations and tyrannies, you find, if you could imagine them all on steps going up to a king at the top, or the head character at the top. Psychopaths will praise and lick the boots of the person on the step above them. But the person below them, they abuse like crazy in hatred almost and loathing, all the way down the steps to each one gets loathed and loathed and loathed by the one above them. That’s how psychopathy works. They praise the person who's got more power than them, because that really impresses them, and they want it. But they despise those beneath them, that they cannot use anymore, they can't use them to climb over, they're already over them, and so they despise them.

It's the same system today, we are crippled by so many different ways, and then they despise you all the more. I’ve given the analogy too of the movie V for Vendetta. Where interestingly, I've mentioned before, look at the plot of it. Really, a bunch of elites take over, radical elites take over a system by I think releasing a plague initially and then claiming it was the terrorist group that did it. They put themselves in power. Then they arrest everyone who is an enemy of them, who wouldn't stand for it. Which always happens anyway, and it will happen with this one too by the way, they'll arrest you if you don't go along with it, and they eliminate you, you just disappear. The Soviets did it in Siberia as well, all through the, you know, all through its reign.

But V for Vendetta, they had different people who enabled this almost to happen as they were coming to power. After taking over they use prisoners all the time and use them as test guinea pigs by injecting them with different things. One of the doctors there, a woman who was in charge of it and she says initially she felt kind of sorry for them because they'd get shuffled in every other day for their testing. But then she says, I began to, because they were so obedient and would never fight back on anything, because their spirit was broken you see, so it's like breaking the legs of a cow, you break it, so, you break the spirit, and these folk were shuffling in, these prisoners to get tested, prodded and bits taking out of them for goodness knows what. She said, and they never look you in the face and they always look down at the floor, total submission, and she began to despise them and despise their complacency and how they, their obedience, she hated their slavishness that they showed to obedience. She had less qualms on using them like guinea pigs. In fact, she hated them.

That's what happens when you comply. The ruthless psychopaths who are over you will utterly hate you. That's why it's easier for them to start to slaughter. I really mean that. I really mean that. And getting back to Peter Hitchens' idea, that Trotskyists of his era at least would argue, they wanted debate and so on. The groups today don't want any debate at all, they just demand that you follow what their dictates are, dictates and that's it. You do what you're told and obey, and parrot what they tell you. There's no, you have no say in any alternate reasoning, none at all. They are completely intolerant.

I've said it before too, this would come. I used to say that liberalism is one of the covers they use of course for communism in the West, according to Khrushchev, one of the ex-heads of the Soviet Union. He said, in the West we call them liberals. And liberalism is the most intolerant system of all. It has no tolerance, if you noticed, but it's been getting worse and worse for years, and now it's quite out in the open. They want to eliminate anybody who doesn't go along and parrot the same things that they parrot. They want to literally, this is not a debate thing, this is beyond politics, it's gone way beyond politics now.

Look at the States, the whole world is looking at the States saying my God, look at what's happened here, woah. That's why China is making moves and testing its muscles a bit. Other countries will do the same. Because nature abhors a vacuum as they say as really powerful groups become weakened. And when you are being taken down at home, it's like Rome, isn't it? They had all these armies outside Rome when they got invaded. There was nobody left to stop them. They were all out in foreign countries. They didn't even believe it was happening, they thought they were impregnable, as Alaric and the rest, just swarms of these different groups came one after the other through Rome.

They're all watching the States right now, and everything is so beyond, even the statements from scientists to do with this Covid are utterly steeped in politics. Nothing to do with reality and facts, it's all politics. Amazing, isn't it. And you're living through it. And you're watching this. And don't forget too, that the US did take over as the policeman of the world. This is the term they like to use even though it's not, it's the plunderer of the world on behalf of the elite, the same as Britain was too. The people in Britain had a worse time of it because they got nothing out of it, really. They just supplied the poor folk to fill the uniforms that were easily disposable across the planet for the elite who reaped in the harvest of course of cash.

It's amazing times we're living through. Again, big agenda. Well documented. And you're watching all the classical sides all drawn up with the indoctrinated groups that are all willing to eliminate borders and all the rest. A whole generation raised for this purpose. Through schooling. Through children's books. There were the politically correct inserts that were put into children's books for children at the age of five onwards, even four, to be read at the bedside by their parents. And it's all worked. School took over and utterly, utterly radicalized them to hate the older group.

Remember too, the battle cry during the 1960s with the Communists in New York at the time? Some of whom are still alive today and who pretend that they're now, maybe even some pretend they're Republican. They said, don't trust anybody over the age of 30. That was a mantra, a slogan. Well, now it's even younger, 'eh. [Alan chuckles.] And they've done it across the world, uniformly, 'eh, uniformly. The same schoolteachers' toolboxes trained across the world. That's what UNESCO is for, remember, that's what it was set up for, creating a universal culture through universal education, which is just social engineering indoctrination, you see. Very successful.

To me as a person who stands outside things and looks at it, it's interesting to see how they've done it all. And there's no point getting all emotional about it because most folk now cannot reason, they're so emotional, you see, it works awfully well, including the ones who might, who might be set loose on the public to do really more drastic things. What you've got at the moment is a warning of what's coming. Eventually it will get a lot more worse than this as they set them loose on the public. It's quite fascinating though to live through it and actually see it happening. And to watch the things that you read about in books, the chanting mobs, utterly radicalized, who can't really verbalize anything beyond the slogans that they're chanting, except that they hate you. If you ask them why they hate you, they can get into trouble trying to figure out why. It's just because you're there, really, you know, they'll hate you.

That's a very dangerous situation and it's all being fostered by the authorities, by your own tax money, training them through education, etc. And of course, the social media that they're all getting the same stuff from, the Internet and different sites, etc. It's quite amazing. It is amazing, isn't it, to watch it happening? But never forget that the talks I've given for years about this to do with the mind itself, and the articles I've read on the air about those who manage our minds from birth onwards, and how they even bring you to opinions which you will think they are your own. You all get it at the same time, if you all watch the certain programs at the same time that are really touted that it's almost must-see, you must go in and watch this. You'll all come away with the same ideas, you see. It doesn't matter if it's false, it doesn't make any difference, to you it's all real. Quite something, you know.

If you've been brought up, if you have raised a generation, if you raise them to be utter, beyond radical, this isn't just radical, these folk are literally chomping at the bit to get unleashed upon the public for a massive purge. That's what it is. And you know that, you all know that. And they're ready for it, they are pretty well ready for it. There's going to be no arguing with them or debating or talking to them when they get unleashed. You're an enemy. You're not just an enemy, you're a thing, an enemy and a thing, not a person, that will have to be disposed of. And whenever you give any particular group amongst humanity special status and give them a free hand to go at it, well, you would understand, now your governments are an enemy of the people. Your governments permit this. They themselves are an enemy of the people, they're complicit in the horror that they're bringing on. Don't forget that. There's never been a time when this has been pretty well advocated by your own governments, all of what's happening today. There hasn't been.

Even last year and the year before when you had the Extinction Rebellion going through London, week after week, you know, stopping traffic, businesses, you know, big trucks, stopping trains, disrupting everyone's lives, and being allowed to get away with it? Day after day after day for like weeks and weeks? And businesses getting hit with that, etc.? Well, what gave them special status over everybody else? Somebody authorized it. Are you starting to get it? Is the penny dropping here? [Alan chuckles.]

It's because whatever you thought your government was, is nothing to what you actually thought it was, nothing, it's completely different. And the system of civil service has always been the system of power, that's why you put them in there. They're there for life, regardless of the parties that surround them, and they are all trained towards their lifelong goals to accomplish what their masters, not the politicians, but what the real masters want. You know that that's how it really works.

So, let's look at this for instance. I mentioned this article before, it's so important because it gives you a little clue down through time, you see, from 2013 this one is. It says…

Ecologists Urge Government To “Move Beyond Existent Levels Of Public Permission” (Alan: …okay?)

explosivereports.wordpress.com / 15 Feb 2013

“(…) governments can and even should move beyond existent levels of public permission in order to shift norms (A: That's normals, right, norms...), allowing public sentiment to later catch up with the regulation.”

(A: So, this is from 2013, hm. This came out eventually in an additional BioScience. But what's awfully important is, listen to the wording again, right. You've got to think, start thinking, using that loaf you got there in your head, your brain. It says…)

“(…) governments can and even should move beyond existent levels of public permission in order to shift norms, allowing public sentiment (A: ...sentiment, okay…) to later catch up with THE regulation.”

(A: So, it's to do with laws and rules they're going to put out, you see. Now, you would need certain things to happen to give the excuse to put the rules out. It doesn't have to be a real event, just a made up one that could appear real, as an example. Because you've got to give an idea to the public, so that they will go, oh well, we better go along with that, you see, so there's no debate about it at all. So, it says…)

In a peer-reviewed paper put out by the American Institute of Biological Sciences titled “Social Norms and Global Environmental Challenges” ... a group of well-known scientists calls on government and scientists to start with the planned social engineering of “norms” and “values” in regards to environmental policies.

(A: Now remember, up until now the whole idea was to use the climate idea, as an emergency, to take your rights away, bring you into a post consumerist society, into a rationed society, where you'll live the way they're going to tell you to live in a reduced standard of living for most folk. Not for the ones at the top naturally, but for the rest of you.)

(A: So, you need something. So, the whole climate idea that they came up with at the Club of Rome, they were tasked with finding a reason to make it happen. They came up with the idea, and everything hinges on it, they can't back down. As I say before, Colin Powell got literally red-faced, he did, he actually changed, you see his face changing when he was called out on it at the time trying to convince the public that a fuzzy picture was actually some missile launching mechanism in Iraq, and it wasn't.)

(A: Even though and it came out during that interview that Britain had admitted that they'd sold, [Alan chuckles.] a transport trailer with the weather balloon systems for Iraq. That's what that was, they said, that's what that was. And here is Colin Powell trying to tell you it was a rocket rig, missile rig, he’s flustered and the whole bit. He still stuck to it; well you know it's… Everybody was laughing at him. And that's how they are when they've sworn to something they will not back off. They can't back off; they'd get kicked out of the club. They have sworn, they've sworn to go along with the biggest lies you can possibly imagine. And that's just the same here today with all of this stuff by the way. So, the idea, to get the whole climate idea, was already taught through the schools, right. But it says...)

The objective, according to the authors, is that these engineered “norms” must work their way into existing ones so finally environmental policies will be accepted without reserve.

Right. You're all going to die, or you're going to fry. No, you're going to freeze. Oh, you're going to fry, you're going to freeze, you're going to drown, it depends what the weather is going to be. But regardless of what they've picked for that time, you'd all better go along with it, because you're all going to die. No matter what it is, you're either going to die of that or you going to die of a disease, or you're going to die of... but you're going to die. You see? That's the main thing about taking folks' rights away down through time, is if you don't do what we say you're all going to die. Hm. Standard stuff. Standard.

Some of the founding fathers in America said pretty well the same stuff, all your rights are taken away with the guise of a good intentions for necessity, you see. And they've got these bioethicists working with them to do with managing society. You've got experts getting turned out of university and courses, who really do, it's just basically social engineering, how to con the public. The same kind of techniques that Bernays talked about when he talked about the decisions and your behavior is managed by an visible government, the ones that understand how your mind works. And they can convince you to go and buy things and do things and behave in certain ways, without you even realizing that you're not making your own decisions eventually, it's been put into your mind. Hm. Quite something, 'eh.

You get banks and banks of these characters, I've mentioned it before too, with the group that worked with the Sage group for Covid, and I put the articles out too, from them, where they actually gave advice to all the newspapers to comply and go along with this, right down to terrorizing the public, to jacking up and intensifying fear, to make folk comply.

Now again, are we all adults here? Wouldn't you do something if they just said, as children, we’re going to terrorize the children. Wouldn't you be, shouldn't…? Well, I don't know in this day and age, I don't think folk care anymore, to be honest, I think we're so far gone. But, if they said we're going to terrify the children, I think there'd be some complaints about it. And just from a memory of decency towards children, right, that we used to have, 'eh, when we cared, you know, we’d have to do something, even for the memories' sake of decency as opposed to reality, but regardless we’d say.

But here, it's to all the ADULTS as well. Who’s standing up and rioting on the streets about that? Nobody. They don't give a damn about the people who've been dying in the old folks’ homes or anything with this. Neither do they give a damn when they're out there screaming about this and the whole bit on the streets, about spreading any virus, even if they think, and they’re wearing masks some of them and some of them aren't wearing masks. But they’re shoulder to shoulder, they don't care. Really, are you going to comply with folk who don't care about everybody else? Really? [Alan chuckles.]   I-yi-yi.

But yeah, the American Institute of Biological Sciences. There ya go, biological sciences. It's all to do with bioethics too. And the Rockefellers are really up there, I've given out the articles before from the Rockefeller foundation from their bioethics societies, working with the legal systems for laws, all the new, like buckets full of laws they're going to just dump on us all. All from these unelected people. Well, we've got degrees in managing all of you scum, obey, 'eh.

This is an old article too, 2013. This has been happening for years this kind of stuff, 'eh. So, to get their agenda through on behalf the usual group, the WEF, the same bunch at the top, as I say, look at the World Economic Forum. Who used to be, why were all the top energy companies and oil companies the first ones to jump on board with sustainability? Oh well, there ya go, you know. Yep. The WEF, 'eh.

Now here's the thing about Covid. I mean, Canada unfortunately is, or used to be a few steps ahead of most countries in, we can call it socialism if you want. Again, don't get hung up on names, the signs and symptoms tell you all you need to know. [Alan chuckles.] I noticed Bob Ray by the way, was just, he was the next premier of Ontario years ago who had quite the going away exposé in the papers and proud to tell you more about himself than ever before. But again, left a massive debt in Ontario, but that's what they always do, and changed a lot of things as well. He was doing the same things as Justin Trudeau, he was saying years before, back in the 90s he was on about hiring, so abilities didn't really matter so much and so on and yada, yada, ya. And he went quiet for a while. I think he was a teacher at some university, probably was put on the board and he'd get a full-time salary for maybe showing up once in a while. But he's just been appointed for Canada as ambassador to the United Nations. Very timely, isn't it? So again, a complete socialist type. His dad was actually a communist revolutionary that came over, I won't go into the whole history of it but yeah, it's quite interesting when you go into his background.

But anyway, so Canada really is such a socialistic, almost communistic country. And it's well on the way to total, it's beyond total socialism actually. They don't question much, the people in Canada don't question the system much at all. Anyway, it says…

COVID Deaths in Canada: A Questionable Statistic

off-guardian.org / 1 July 2020

Before Canadians surrender anymore of their freedoms to COVID-19 propaganda, can we stop and ask some critical questions?

“COVID is unquestionably much worse than a bad flu season,” says Dr. Allison McGeer, an infectious disease specialist at Toronto’s Mount Sinai Hospital, in an interview with the CBC.

(A: It's a long article actually and it's kind of, I call it scattered in the way things are put across. But it says…)

McGeer cites government statistics (as of June 17) showing a COVID mortality rate of 22 deaths per 100,000 Canadians.

(A: Again, all these deaths are so meaningless when they're taking all kinds of deaths, with presumed, and even the iffy positive test they're doing, especially with the swabs. In other words, you could be dying of any kind of disease, but if they find Covid in you at the same time, even though it's not killing you, something else is killing you, you’re put down as Covid. We all know this scam; it's just it's never been done in history like this. This is astonishing to live through with all the verification from so many studies, you know, again, facts don't matter. Anyway, it says...)

By comparison, the death rate for influenza in Canada on an annual basis is usually between nine and 13 deaths per 100,000 people…"

Does this one statistic really make COVID "unquestionably" worse than the flu?

(A: So that's the point of this person's article, what they're telling you as opposed to what it really means. They go on to...)

Graphs, charts and lists slice the data up in so many ways: Cases by province, date of onset, number of deaths, male versus female, old versus young, etc. But they don't talk about the infection-to-fatality rate — that is the percent of people who acquire COVID-19 and end up having that inevitable out-of-body experience we call death.

(A: So, in other words, yeah, CASES are totally different from infected people, like disease infected people. If they have no signs and symptoms of the disease, they are not diseased. Hm? They are not ill. And whenever you get herd immunity, you get it by the same, I mentioned it before, most folk had the polio virus going through their systems in the 1950s when it was supposedly going out at the time, and didn't know they had it. They didn't know.)

(A: What they did find are certain categories of people, even people who got injured, like, I knew a guy who knocked his knee when he was in the National Service, on an assault course he hurt his knee and somehow the virus was able to set in and cause problems, permanent problems with him. It's very similar to a lot of viruses, you don't know that they've gone through you. Folks always ended up getting herd immunity, or none of us would be alive today, folks, long before this Covid 19 came along, right. Do you understand that? It's like normal stuff. In some years you'll get a cold, and everybody around you hasn't got it, that you know of. And sometimes they all have it, and you're fine. You know, that's just the way it is. But one way or another it's going through you, even when you are fine, that particular strain, whatever it is, and you're somehow resistant to it already, that year.)

(A: But anyway, all the graphs and charts as I say, don't give you anything to do with fatalities. And the more you test the more you're going to find folk who have got, as I say, positive. The tests are so nonsensical. They are nonsensical. These swab tests, they're not, a lot of these tests are not even meant for diagnostic purposes. Really. N-n-n. It's far easier for bacterial purposes, you can test bacteria, and you can grow them again in a dish of course, and you'll see it, you can test it, it's definitely so-and-so bacterium. But when it comes to viruses, especially Covid group, it's a massive group, of variations of things.)

After all, The World Health Organization had estimated that COVID-19's "official" death rate would hover around 3.4%. This statistic has been used to justify the loss of three million jobs in Canada and libraries being turned into food banks.

(A: You should be lucky you got a food bank because eventually come the winter and into next year you'll be lucky to get any food at all I think. And that is the plan.)

Well, I decided to calculate the infection/fatality rate for the entire country, as well as each individual province and territory. I'm using the official data from The Public Health Agency of Canada as of June 23, 2020 (6 days after McGeer's calculations):

As you can see we arrive at a 0.56% rate of death for those infected with COVID. 0.56% is six times less than the WHO's estimate of 3.4%. Notwithstanding, a 0.56% infection-to-fatality rate, as Dr. McGeer's says, would be "unquestionably much worse than a bad flu season." Around five times as worse as a mild flu season.

But wait! I have more questions before they finish turning the true north strong and free into a COVID-19(84) police state…

In the above table, take a look at the infection-to-fatality column. You can see that a person infected with COVID is twice as likely to die if they live in Ontario (0.62%) or Quebec (0.65%) versus somebody living in Nova Scotia (A: ..on the east coast...) (0.32%). And Canucks are twice as likely to die in Nova Scotia rather than in Alberta (0.16%).

Indeed, if you eliminate Quebec and Ontario from the equation we arrive at dramatically different results. An infection/fatality rate of 0.17% and only 3 deaths per 100,000 amongst the remaining 61% of Canadians.

Is COVID-19 then more dangerous than the flu? It doesn't seem so if you live outside of Ontario and Quebec.

(A: [Alan laughing.]   It's true. So anyway, they go back and forth to justify this reasoning, etc.)

(A: But you've got, even different provinces, even in the US states, some of them have different methods and percentages of percentages to do with the actual tests that they're doing. It's not like a switch going on and off, you're positive or negative. There's a whole range that it goes up to, even in different countries, how many hours this particular test has been studied, so many hours with the virus on so-and-so, that's how they really do it. There's a whole bunch of procedures they go through. And they've got different rates of it. It's only studied for maybe 36 hours in one state, maybe another state will do up to 30. Well, you'll be negative for the ones that did it in 30, and the ones that did the 36 hours test will be actually over. It's all bogus, it's unbelievable.)

(A: And again, the Koch's postulates, which you've got to go through to even confirm this is a particular unique virus, hasn't even been done. This is the most miraculous thing that's ever been, it hasn't been done, folks, hm. To make sure that this is a definite distinct virus, none of it's been done. There's criteria it must fulfill, step by step by step, before you can say this is a definite new virus. N-n-n.)

(A: And again, with everybody getting put down as dying from it anyway, remember in Britain, don't forget what they said in Britain with Hancock the guy who was put in charge of the health for Britain's National Health Service. He's a politician of course but don't forget what he said during that talk, and I put that up too. It was a YouTube video. He said, people have forgotten, folk are dying all the time every day, every week, every month, every year, people die every day, otherwise we'd have too many folks, obviously. Folk die every day and need replaced by new babies and yada ya, that's birth and death, that's why the stats they're always giving you births and deaths, births and deaths.)

(A: But we forget that. We've already been conned into, you know, no one died before Covid came along. Did you know that folk are dying of Covid? And they're putting everybody who dies down as Covid. And that's a fact. 'Probable.' Did he sneeze? He sneezed twice before he croaked, you know. Oh, put them down as Covid then, right. Never mind the scams that they get for putting them down, diagnose them as Covid, hospitals get more money, and if they have to use a ventilator, even more money again.)

(A: But back to the point here. 'Probables' as well, there's hardly a symptom that they haven't stuck into this Covid thing. If you get a runny nose it could be Covid. If you got congested nasal passages, it could be Covid. There's nothing that they haven't missed. In the middle of hay fever season, 'eh? So, they put all the folks down as Covid deaths. Hancock says, he says, people forget, you know he says, 10,000 people, and this is in Britain, or England, 10,000 people die every month here, he says. Shouldn't that shock you. [Alan chuckles.] I mean, you didn't know that, did you, 10,000 die normally anyway. Well, since they're putting so many of them down as Covid, then they keep jacking up the figures.)

(A: Because now along with the whole climate idea of catastrophe and we are all going to die, you've got Covid there, and oh, you're all going to die, give up all your rights and we'll manage you, and we've got to bring in a new system, a complete global reset, they said, and we're using Covid now as the excuse. Hm. Yep.)

(A: You've got to look at horror. And folk should definitely, definitely be put in the dock for this. It's a pity it will never happen because the elite run the system, that will never happen. But like some fantasy Hollywood movie to get some kind of justice, it would be kind of nice, wouldn't it? But it's a fantasy, again, it will never happen. Quite something.)

(A: A ‘probable’ case, they put them down as a ‘probable’ case of Covid...)

Looking up the National surveillance case definitions for COVID-19, I found that a “probable” case seems to leave much to question: One can be added to the COVID list if they suffer the “onset of (or exacerbation of chronic) cough” coupled by participating “in a mass gathering identified as a source of exposure.” A Canadian can also be branded a COVID case if she has a “fever (over 38 degrees Celsius)” and “close contact with a confirmed case of COVID-19.”

When it comes to “close contact,” how close are we talking about? Not all that close in seems: “…a single laboratory confirmed case of COVID-19 in a [long-term care home], in a resident or staff member would trigger an outbreak and would be declared.” says the Ontario Ministry of Health’s COVID-19 Outbreak Guidance for Long Term Care Homes (LTCH).

In other words, if the maintenance man at a senior’s home of 800 residents tests positive for COVID, all 800 residents would now meet the “close contact” qualifier.

Ontario Health’s Case Definition – Novel Coronavirus (COVID-19) confirms this: Just a runny nose and “being a patient in the same ward or facility during a nosocomial outbreak of COVID-19” will add Grandma to the COVID case count. “Facility” could include long-term care homes, where most of the deaths have occurred.

(A: That's another thing too, most of them have occurred, remember, in these long-term care homes, where I'm telling you, a lot of them have been done on the cheap, cheap, cheap, you know, especially with the staff, etc. Plus, they terrified, the stories that came out of some of them, the ones in Montréal, literally some of the homes were deserted, the staff had fled in utter panic and fear, and the folk were lying in their own waste etc., some of them. Just horrible. Horrible stuff. So, it says…)

Thus, you only need one confirmed case of COVID and all the residents in that nursing home become “probable” cases as soon as they show any of the broad list of COVID symptoms. (A: [Alan chuckles.] It's really broad, believe you me.) One of those COVID red flags includes a “decrease in blood pressure” (A: [Alan chuckles.] So even that, you understand, if you're one of the probables, because one person went through the nursing home, oh yeah, your blood pressure just dropped a little there, so you probably got Covid, so put them all down as Covid, right.) (a common occurrence among elderly using blood pressure lowering medication).

So, someone can be totally free of COVID but still be included in the total of COVID cases. But of course, if they do die, it would not be assumed that COVID was the cause of death.

Or would it?

WHAT KIND OF PROOF IS REQUIRED TO VERIFY A COVID PATIENT ACTUALLY DIED FROM COVID?

Consider that the Ontario Public Health’s Daily Epidemiologic Summary clearly states:

(A: And links are here for all these, by the way.)

Any case marked ‘Fatal’ is included in the deaths data. Deaths are included whether or not COVID-19 was determined to be a contributing or underlying cause of death…”

(A: It's right there, 'eh...)

...whether or not...

(A: Right.)

Said another way: It doesn’t matter whether someone died from cancer, the flu, heart disease, a ventilator, medication, falling down the stairs, a bullet to the head… As long as it is was “probable” that they had COVID, they will be added to the list of COVID deaths in Canada.

Now I'm also going to put up this article up next to it. It's called…

Legal Challenge to COVID-19 Measures Filed In Ontario Superior Court - vaccinechoicecanada.com / 8 July 2020

Statement of claim against Covid-19 measures - vaccinechoicecanada.com

They're actually putting in a legal challenge to see what happens. I don't… You know, you've got to applaud the people who do these things. I remember the same thing happened with the group, a very dedicated group who had all their facts right and they challenged the Bank of Canada's conology that it was doing. Eventually of course, everything ruled against them, they didn't go any further. Because Canada is more totalitarian and socialistic, very much like Australia. It's interesting to look at the Commonwealth countries, ex-Commonwealth, still Commonwealth countries, where they were part of the dominion. Canada used to be called the dominion, because of the dominion of England, or London.

There's always been a system in place which tells you you're under a monarchy. Don't forget that everybody appointed at the top, any official anything, has to be loyal to the crown. You've got understand there's a different system above it all, above the so-called democracy here. And it doesn't matter if the one below it pretends to be right wing at times or left-wing at times. It's really run by a system above them. So, you can challenge them all they want in Canada, because Canada is more of a totalitarian system than most countries. Australia is much the same and that's why Australia is getting locked down so quickly, with a very authoritarian system actually, very authoritarian. They give the people no choice at all, just to comply or else and that's it.

I'll put this article up, it's quite good, on the different things that they are putting forward. Because really, the government’s negating their duties supposedly, as you would think it was, in regard to the public, the citizens.

Legal Challenge to COVID-19 Measures Filed In Ontario Superior Court

vaccinechoicecanada.com / 8 July 2020

The mass and indiscriminate containment of citizens, the restriction of access to parliament, the courts, medical and educational services,

(A: It's true, how many folks can't get medical care during this whole farce? I guess the folk are dying at home, they can't get in hospital, put down as Covid deaths, even though they want other treatments for different things, that's what's killing them.)

the destruction of local economies (A: …absolutely.) and livelihoods, and the requirement to physically distance, (A: ...which is a farce. The whole idea dreamed up by a schoolgirl and her daddy who worked for the military industrial complex, you know, by a computer model. Nothing to do with reality.) along with the forced use of non-medical masking are extraordinary measures that have never before been imposed on the citizens of Canada. (A: Even though [Alan chuckles.] the micron size of this virus supposedly is smaller than the particles they can get through an N95 masks. But facts don't matter again. [Alan laughing.])

It's to make you literally comply.... obedience, the mask itself is compliance, that's a symbol, comply. We're all one, we are all one, you see, that's the first thing for a war type scenario is get the public all to act as one, and to obey as one. And get the mob to turn on anybody who's individual and says I'm not carrying this gas mask, that's World War II, I don't need a gas mask, what for, no one's getting gassed? And no one was gassed. That didn't matter, the rest of them would turn on you, you'd better get that gas mask on, we all have to do it. You know, that's the mob, 'eh. Always used.

It's very much like the movie Gangs of New York where I think the mayor of New York at the time said, we can always hire half the citizens [Alan chuckles.] to kill the other half if we need to. [Alan chuckles.] That's quite plain about it, that was quite good, that little one-liner there. And it's true, of course you can. Folk never realize they're getting played off, even your emotions, especially when you get emotions and you're angry, someone's using you, someone else is using you and you're being programmed. You gotta say, by whom and for what purpose, who is benefiting from this? Who's suffering because of it? But unfortunately, once folk have gone that far with their emotions, they cannot think at all.

But I'll put these articles up. Another one too… This is awfully good, and it's true. Again, it's facts but facts don't matter.

COVID-19 PCR Tests are Scientifically Meaningless off-guardian.org / 27 June 2020

Though the whole world relies on RT-PCR to “diagnose” Sars-Cov-2 infection, the science is clear: they are not fit for purpose

(A: The inventor says, it's not a diagnostic tool. I'll repeat that for the heart of thinking, the inventor says it's not a diagnostic tool for diagnosing disease. It's a tool to be used solely in the laboratory for other purposes. But it says…)

Lockdowns and hygienic measures around the world are based on numbers of cases and mortality rates created by the so-called SARS-CoV-2 RT-PCR tests used to identify “positive” patients, whereby “positive” is usually equated with “infected.”

But looking closely at the facts, the conclusion is that these PCR tests are meaningless as a diagnostic tool to determine an alleged infection by a supposedly new virus called SARS-CoV-2.

UNFOUNDED “TEST, TEST, TEST,…” MANTRA

The message was spread through headlines around the world, for instance by Reuters and the BBC.

(A: Test, test, test, right, it's true, that's all you've heard, test, test, test.)

Still on the 3 of May, the moderator of the heute journal — one of the most important news magazines on German television— was passing the mantra of the corona dogma on to his audience with the admonishing words:

Test, test, test—that is the credo at the moment, and it is the only way to really understand how much the coronavirus is spreading.”

This indicates that the belief in the validity of the PCR tests is so strong that it equals a religion that tolerates virtually no contradiction.

But it is well known that religions are about faith and not about scientific facts. And as Walter Lippmann, the two-time Pulitzer Prize winner and perhaps the most influential journalist of the 20th century said: “Where all think alike, no one thinks very much.”

So to start, it is very remarkable that Kary Mullis himself, the inventor of the Polymerase Chain Reaction (PCR) technology, did not think alike. His invention got him the Nobel prize in chemistry in 1993.

Unfortunately, Mullis passed away last year at the age of 74, but there is no doubt that the biochemist regarded the PCR as inappropriate to detect a viral infection.

The reason is that the intended use of the PCR was, and still is, to apply it as a manufacturing technique, being able to replicate DNA sequences millions and billions of times, to replicate DNA sequences millions and billions of times, and not as a diagnostic tool to detect viruses.

(A: That's what its function is, right...)

How declaring virus pandemics based on PCR tests can end in disaster was described by Gina Kolata in her 2007 New York Times article Faith in Quick Test Leads to Epidemic That Wasn’t.

(A: That was in 2007.)

LACK OF A VALID GOLD STANDARD

Moreover, it is worth mentioning that the PCR tests used to identify so-called COVID-19 patients presumably infected by what is called SARS-CoV-2 do not have a valid gold standard to compare them with.

(A: It's not a simple straightforward switch on and off, positive / negative.)

This is a fundamental point. Tests need to be evaluated to determine their preciseness — strictly speaking their “sensitivity” and “specificity” — by comparison with a “gold standard,” meaning the most accurate method available.

As an example, for a pregnancy test the gold standard would be the pregnancy itself. (A: [Alan chuckles.] Yeah, definitely.) But as Australian infectious diseases specialist Sanjaya Senanayake, for example, stated in an ABC TV interview in an answer to the question “How accurate is the [COVID-19] testing?”:

If we had a new test for picking up [the bacterium] golden staph in blood, we've already got blood cultures, that's our gold standard we've been using for decades, and we could match this new test against that. But for COVID-19 we don't have a gold standard test."

Jessica C. Watson from Bristol University confirms this. In her paper "Interpreting a COVID-19 test result", published recently in The British Medical Journal, she writes that there is a "lack of such a clear-cut 'gold-standard' for COVID-19 testing."

But instead of classifying the tests as unsuitable for SARS-CoV-2 detection and COVID-19 diagnosis, or instead of pointing out that only a virus, proven through isolation and purification, can be a solid gold standard, Watson claims in all seriousness that, "pragmatically" COVID-19 diagnosis itself, remarkably including PCR testing itself, "may be the best available 'gold standard'." But this is not scientifically sound.

Apart from the fact that it is downright absurd to take the PCR test itself as part of the gold standard to evaluate the PCR test, (A: [Alan chuckles.]) there are no distinctive specific symptoms for COVID-19, as even people such as Thomas Löscher, former head of the Department of Infection and Tropical Medicine at the University of Munich and member of the Federal Association of German Internists, conceded to us.

And if there are no distinctive specific symptoms for COVID-19, COVID-19 diagnosis — contrary to Watson's statement — cannot be suitable for serving as a valid gold standard.

(A: It very much depends who's studying it, [Alan chuckles.] as to what the conclusion they're going to have whether it's positive or not. That's really what it is.)

NO PROOF FOR THE RNA BEING OF VIRAL ORIGIN

Now the question is: What is required first for virus isolation/proof? We need to know where the RNA for which the PCR tests are calibrated comes from.

As textbooks (e.g., White/Fenner. Medical Virology, 1986, p. 9) as well as leading virus researchers such as Luc Montagnier or Dominic Dwyer state, particle purification — i.e. the separation of an object from everything else that is not that object, as for instance Nobel laureate Marie Curie purified 100 mg of radium chloride in 1898 by extracting it from tons of pitchblende — is an essential pre-requisite for proving the existence of a virus, and thus to prove that the RNA from the particle in question comes from a new virus.

The reason for this is that PCR is extremely sensitive, which means it can detect even the smallest pieces of DNA or RNA — but it cannot determine where these particles came from. That has to be determined beforehand.

And because the PCR tests are calibrated for gene sequences (in this case RNA because SARS-CoV-2 is believed to be a RNA virus), (A: …believed to be, that word believed to be…) we have to know these gene snippets are part of the looked-for virus. And to know that, correct isolation and purification of the presumed virus has to be executed.

Hence, we have asked the science teams of the relevant papers which are referred to in the context of SARS-CoV-2 for proof whether the electron-microscopic shots depicted in their in vitro experiments show purified viruses.

But not a single team could answer that question with "yes" — and NB., nobody said purification was not a necessary step. (A: [Alan chuckles.]) We only got answers like "No, we did not obtain an electron micrograph showing the degree of purification".

We asked several study authors "Do your electron micrographs show the purified virus?", they gave the following responses:

(A: And they give you answers to names and so on…)

Study 1: Leo L. M. Poon; Malik Peiris. "Emergence of a novel human coronavirus threatening human health" Nature Medicine, March 2020

Replying Author: Malik Peiris

Date: May 12, 2020

Answer: "The image is the virus budding from an infected cell. It is not purified virus."

So, none of them actually are purified viruses, which you're supposed to get in the first place, if you really want to get to the bottom of things. It's all, it's astonishing really what's going on here. But again, the PCR test is not even meant, it's not meant for diagnosis. Why do you think you're getting all these false positives and false negatives? It depends who's looking at it, folks. It really is. And how long they've had these things in, you know, that actually… It's a whole system they put these PCR tests through as they multiply and multiply in particles and so on, and then put a light there as well too, so many hours it takes. Well, if different countries use different amount of hours for it, that gives you the different answers on the same tests.

Another one too is…

Testing for COVID-19

cdc.gov / 24 June 2020

Guidance on Interpreting COVID-19 Test Results .pdf

Two kinds of tests are available for COVID-19: viral tests and antibody tests.

(A: It's got...)

VIRAL TESTING

Positive

Most likely* you DO currently have an active COVID-19 infection and can give the virus to others.

Recommended actions.

(A: And this is what comes, right, positive, most likely, they can't say you've definitely got it.)

Positive

Most likely* you DO currently have an active COVID-19 infection

(A: ...right. Even though it only picks up particles, you get particles even if they are dead and gone and broken up from weeks ago.)

(A: And negative, if it comes negative, right, on Covid 19 test results...)

Negative

Most likely* you DO NOT currently have an active COVID-19 infection.

(A: Right.)

If you have symptoms you should keep monitoring symptoms and seek medical advice about it.

(A: So, understand, any sniffy nose or cold or whatever it is, or flu, is going to be put down as Covid. Most likely, is your diagnosis, right. This is the official...)

Guidance on Interpreting COVID-19 Test Results

ANTIBODY TESTING

(A: Right. You'd think there would be more, but no, right. Don't forget, antibody testing will show you if you have even a flu shot over a few years ago could still show you up as positive. They are all Covids, you see. So, if it comes up positive, right, the blood test…)

Positive

You likely* have HAD a COVID-19 infection.

(A: Well, how can they actually say it’s the Covid 19 one when they've never purified it from anything else to even get a base thing to start with. Hm?)

You may be protected from reinfection (have immunity), but this cannot be said with certainty.

Scientists are conducting studies now to provide more information.

(A: Right. So even though you're positive, right, and you'll probably have immunity, they can't guarantee for certain that this is all true. [Alan laughing.] It's a good business to go into, 'eh, you can't fail, I mean, and you get paid anyway. Testing for past infections with the virus, and it comes up negative, right…)

Negative

You likely* NEVER HAD (or have not yet developed antibodies to) COVID-19 infection.

(A: Likely, but not positively. Right. It says…)

You could still get COVID-19. Take steps to protect yourself and others

(A: Well, what are you going to do? Go to a different planet and breathe a different atmosphere? Hm? And then…)

BOTH

Viral Positive,

Antibody Positive

Most likely* you DO currently have an active COVID-19 infection and can give the virus to others.

(A: Remember what they said before too? This is for folk who won't even have symptoms, remember? And the WHO came out and says it's very unlikely that folk who have no symptoms can pass it on to other people. Remember when she came out and said that? You remember? But here it says…)

Most likely* you DO currently have an active COVID-19 infection and can give the virus to others.

(A: Most likely you could. And maybe you likely couldn't. I mean, I don't know.)

Viral Positive,

Antibody Negative

Most likely* you DO currently have an active COVID-19 infection and can give the virus to others.

(A: Because you haven't developed an antibody yet, so they are saying here.)

(A: If you've got both antibody and viral testing, so you're...)

Viral Negative,

Antibody Positive

(A: So, this is a good one, 'eh. There's no sign of a virus, okay. So, you're likely, likely, again, I like this, science is so precise, you know. And obey, you're supposed to obey this accurate science and scientists. They speak with authority, 'eh. They've got lots of degrees so they can come in and say you'd better obey us because you likely have this or likely have that. Anyway, it says…)

You likely* have HAD and RECOVERED FROM a COVID-19 infection if you are viral negative and antibody positive.

(A: And once again…)

You may be protected from re-infection (have immunity), but this cannot be said with certainty.

(A: Oh, this is a really great science, this one, 'eh?)

Viral Negative,

Antibody Negative

You likely* have NEVER HAD a COVID-19 infection.

You could still get COVID-19. You should get tested again (A: Hhch.) only if your medical provider and/or workplace tells you to. Take steps to protect yourself and others.

There ya go, 'eh. Do you understand if everybody had had it, and tested positive, this thing would have been over long ago, and actually was, the spike was over at the beginning of April, we know that now? But facts don't matter. They need it, remember, they need this to happen.

Another one too is...

Was the COVID-19 Test Meant to Detect a Virus?

uncoverdc.com / 7 April 2020

The Corona Simulation Machine: Why the Inventor of The “Corona Test” Would Have Warned Us Not To Use It To Detect A Virus

(A: That's what I was telling you earlier. And again, this article also goes into, you know, the guy who invented this PCR test and all the rest of it, he said it's not meant for diagnosing at all. It says…)

“Scientists are doing an awful lot of damage to the world in the name of helping it. I don’t mind attacking my own fraternity because I am ashamed of it.” –Kary Mullis, Inventor of Polymerase Chain Reaction

(A: That's PCR. Hm. That's what he said, he is ashamed of his own fraternity.)

What do we mean when we say somebody has ‘tested positive’ for the Corona Virus? The answer would astound you. But getting this “answer” is like getting to a very rare mushroom that only grows above 200 feet on a Sequoia tree in the forbidden forest.

I say that for dramatic effect, but also because I wound up, against all odds, finding it.

Every day I wake up and work at shedding one more layer of ignorance —by listening carefully. I got lucky with scientists many years ago; Epic, incredible scientists, happening to cross my path when nobody else wanted to talk to them. Now their names are emerging, their warnings and corrections crystallizing. True “science” (the nature of the natural world) is never bad news. Globalist science is nothing but bad news.

(A: And that's the difference, it's politicized science, you see, for a big agenda.)

The reason Bill Gates wants you to believe a Corona Virus will exterminate over 450 million people is that he hates nature, God, and you. (A subjective interpretation.)

Why is that? You’d have to ask his psychiatrist.

Then it goes on and on. It's quite a good article actually. Here's another one too…

Bill requires employers to keep implanted microchips voluntary for workers

Remember that article too that Bill Gates said, working with MIT, and that's genuine, that's not a made up story, to do with a chip type system that would track and trace everybody that had vaccinations, on their skin, a tattoo is one of them. Then they also looked into the actual chip itself, implanting that, yada ya. Well, trial balloons come out all the time in preparations for what's coming, comes out all the time too.

Because folks can’t handle more than one or two crises at the same time, two, they say three maximum will break people, most folk will break at three crises happening all at the same time. So, they give you these little bits and pieces here and there, and a lot of things will get ignored by you because you can't handle extras. You've got enough to worry about, right. So…

Bill requires employers to keep implanted microchips voluntary for workers

abc12.com / 25 June 2020

As employers around the U.S. implant microchips in workers to track productivity, (A: ARE they doing that already? Where?) The Michigan House passed a bill making them voluntary in the state.

The bill passed Wednesday prohibits employers from requiring workers to accept a microchip implant.

“With the way technology has increased over the years and as it continues to grow, it’s important Michigan job providers balance the interests of the company with their employees’ expectations of privacy,” said State Rep. Bronna Kahle of Lenawee County, who sponsored the bill.

(A: You wonder what's really behind it and who had the… You know, most politicians today are just, they're lobbyists for big businesses. I mean they are. [Alan chuckles.] That's the truth of it. Everything is so corrupt, that we accept corruption, 'eh, until it can't work, things eventually stop working altogether because it's so corrupt. Just like Rome again. But anyway…)

She said companies increasingly are turning to miniature microchips about the size of a rice grain implanted in employees' hands to track productivity so managers can look for ways to boost efficiency.

In some places, the RFID microchips take the place of timecards, (A: I wonder what places they are? They don't mention what places are using them.) ID badges and security clearance devices. Some can be equipped with credit card technology to complete financial transactions.

(A: They've had this for years, this stuff.)

Kahle said the devices aren't used widely yet, (A: I wonder where they are using them. I know that Mexico had been advocating them for government employees for the federal government at one point years ago. But I haven't heard much since from elsewhere.) but she believes they could become a standard business practice around Michigan in the next few years.

(A: I wonder what tipoff she's got?)

"While these miniature devices are on the rise, so are the calls of workers to have their privacy protected," Kahle said.

Companies could still deploy implanted microchips under her bill, but the policy would have to be voluntary rather than mandatory.

(A: Which means they'll fire you if you don't accept it. They don't have to necessarily fire you. I mean, you know something, corporations and businesses have got many ways to get you out the door. And yeah, you get no say in anything. You either ALL say no or allow somebody to say yes, which means you're all finished, you see. So...)

Kahle's bill now heads to the State Senate for consideration. It would have to pass there before Gov. Gretchen Whitmer could sign it into law.

And…

Michigan tackles compulsory microchip implants for employees with new bill - zdnet.com / 29 June 2020

I think Ms. Whitmer would be quite happy to sign it into law. They all would, wouldn't they, when they can actually bring the cattle, you know, brand them properly with a tracking chip in the cattle. Yep. That's what it is, it's a brand. Yep. And ownership.

LancetGate: “Scientific Corona Lies” and Big Pharma Corruption.

Hydroxychloroquine versus Gilead’s Remdesivir

globalresearch.ca / 5 July 2020

There is an ongoing battle to suppress Hydroxychloroquine (HCQ), (A: I did different articles similar already actually.) a cheap and effective drug for the treatment of Covid-19. The campaign against HCQ is carried out through slanderous political statements, media smears, not to mention an authoritative peer reviewed “evaluation” published on May 22nd by The Lancet, (A: I already did that last week I think.) which was based on fake figures and test trials.

(A: ...remember, they published [Alan chuckles.] and had to retract it. Again, how politicized they all are, 'eh? They're all on the take for big corporations.)

The study was allegedly based on data analysis of 96,032 patients hospitalized with COVID-19 (A: I guess it would be 'probably' from that last article I read, 'eh, or 'possibly'.) between Dec 20, 2019, and April 14, 2020 from 671 hospitals Worldwide.

(A: Well, that Lancet article was retracted, it says. Because they said they'd stopped using the testing hydroxychloroquine, that's what they said. I read an article that was done again, they just dropped it again. Because they're told to, you know, by Fauci and the rest of the crew at the top there.)

While The Lancet article was retracted, the media casually blamed “a tiny US based company” named Surgisphere whose employees included “a sci-fi writer and adult content model” (A: That's true, I read the article maybe two weeks ago.) for spreading “flawed data” (A: [Alan chuckles.]) (Guardian). This Chicago based outfit was accused of having misled both the WHO and national governments, inciting them to ban HCQ. (A: ...that's the drug.) None of those trial tests actually took place.

(A: It was all made up and fake, that the Lancet even published, they took it as truth as well.)

Because we know that Fauci and the rest of them, the only ones, even before that, everything was, he kept pooh-poohing everything until this was ready, from Gilead. Because he knows Gilead, at the very least, put it this way, there's a lot more to it, but he's friends, he's friends with Gilead, how is that? Just like they're all friends with the same vaccine companies too that are going to get the contracts.

Advocates demand Ontario shut down farms as COVID-19 cases soar among workers

ctvnews.ca / 29 June 2020

(A: No, they've gone in to test them and you're going to find more and more every day that you test folk. They're not ill, 'eh. As I say, it's such a fake thing for diagnosing anyway. But it's great for getting great big numbers, 'eh? Isn't it? So…)

TORONTO -- A single farm in Windsor-Essex, Ont. has been linked to 175 new cases of COVID-19 in the province, reigniting concerns about the rapid spread of the virus among temporary foreign workers.

Ontario reported 257 new cases of COVID-19 on Monday, (A: These are cases, these are not illnesses, folks.) 177 of which were confirmed by the Windsor-Essex public health unit following (A: ...LISTEN...) targeted testing of migrant farm workers over the weekend.

Well, if you keep doing targeted testing, you're going to find more and more cases. So, that's how it spreads through society and gets herd immunity, folks. And cases are not illnesses. And then illnesses have to be confirmed. And you've already seen the articles here, they've got probables and possibles and likelys and unlikelys. [Alan laughing.]   That's science, 'eh? M-hm.

And don't forget too, in communism, which is the system they're bringing in, to suit this global elite, they always give you the system to suit the global elites. Believe you me, if they were not happy with it and had not advocated it, it would never have happened. This is the plan. For efficiency and getting it all done what they always do is create for compliance sake is rationing and shortage of food. That's a standard thing across the globe, that's what they do. That's what communism always does. It makes you buckle under and you’ll beg for food and you'll do what you're told. They've already pretty well closed most of the meat market, like permanently. That's what they want. Remember what the Club of Rome said, and the World Economic Forum? That meat and the rest of it is unsustainable. Unsustainable. Because it makes you kind of healthy if you're sick. Even Gandhi had to take that, you know, meat eventually.

And Australia as I say, they are so totalitarian in the old British Commonwealth countries…

Victoria records 74 new coronavirus cases overnight

(A: Oh, 74. I guess they must have tested them all in the morning and say, oh guess what we found, 'eh?)

- as Daniel Andrews announces free rent and a $1,500 payment for the 3,000 people locked in Melbourne towers

dailymail.co.uk / 4 July 2020

(A: That's just like that pandemic we saw I think, the movie a few years back, or at least… I mean, getting us all used to the idea of getting locked in towers. Just like China. China was the role model for it all. Now they're implementing the same thing too. Because you must understand, this is a whole new system and you must believe it's all real and get used to obeying very drastic and nonsensical measures being implemented against you, and upon you. So yeah, the more you test somebody you're going to find, or there's cases, you know. But again, it will come down to likely or unlikely, or possibly are, you know. Yep. So…)

Premier Dan Andrews had warned of a lockdown return if things did not improve

Nine public housing towers across Melbourne have been shutdown for five days

People living in the towers will not have to any pay rent (A: Oh, that's a real relief, isn't it, they don't have to pay the rent. I guess they just starve to death.) for the next two weeks (A: They have no work to go to anyway.)

Victorian Police will be guarding each floor of the towers ensuring no one leaves

(A: Weeeell, there's freedom! This is the new freedom. Remember what they said when 9/11 happened and later on as they took away all your rights and freedoms, they put out a new statement, a legality too when they announce these things. Bush Junior with a big grin on his face said, he says, this is the new freedom. The NEW freedom, you see, they're redefining freedom.)

NSW recorded 14 new COVID-19 cases, but all were returned overseas travellers

(A: Well, were they ill? It doesn't say, you see. They never do. [Alan chuckles.]   Well, they probably didn't know, hey. M-hm.)

I'll put this one up too… South Africa, they always use South Africa as the guinea pigs for these things and they have done all long for many, many years for different things. There's been many conspiracy theories out there too, some of them pretty valid actually, mind you, many years later how they really have certain things and then test them out there too. They do the same in Latin America by the way. Big Pharma companies use these countries for testing. M-hm. Anything happens to them, no one mentions it because there's no newspapers to write about it, you see. It's easy to pay off folks in charge of commissioners and all that.

'We are NOT vaccine guinea pigs': South Africans accuse researchers of testing Oxford coronavirus vaccine on poor and vulnerable Africans - dailymail.co.uk / 2 July 2020

'We are not guinea pigs,' say South African anti-vaccine protesters

reuters.com / 1 July 2020

JOHANNESBURG (Reuters) - Anti-vaccine protesters took to the streets in Johannesburg on Wednesday to voice their concern over Africa's first human trials for a potential coronavirus vaccine.

(A: It says they were demonstrating…)

… at Wits University in Johannesburg, South Africa.

The involvement of South Africa in vaccine trials is intended to ensure the continent will have access to an affordable vaccine (A: [Alan chuckles.]) and not be left at the back of the queue.

(A: They always say things like that, 'eh, you don't want to get left behind, you might be at the bottom of the list, you know, if you help us out here we'll get to you quicker, maybe cheaper too.)

About 50 people held protests at the University of the Witwatersrand in Johannesburg, saying they did not want Africans to be used as guinea pigs, reflecting concerns among some on the continent over testing drugs on people who do not understand the risks.

“I'm not happy at all! I mean this feels like the 1980s all over again when the AIDS pandemic just broke out in South Africa,” said 29-year-old graphic designer Tebogo Legoale.

Some of the placards carried by demonstrators read: “We are not guinea pigs.”

(A: I wonder if he remembers that, he's 29 years old but that's like 40 years ago. Anyway...)

Twenty-nine-year-old community activist Walter Mashilo said the vaccine should be tested first on members of parliament (A: I'm all for that.) and ministers' children, (A: That's the politicians' children.), not on poor people.

“We are clear, comrades, we don’t want this vaccine (trial),” he said, addressing the crowd.

South Africa has the highest rate of infections on the continent, with confirmed cases at over 150,000 and more than 2,600 deaths.

(A: Now, confirmed cases, again, right, is that what killed them, or is that not, or were these folk dying anyway? As I say, don't forget that just England alone 10,000 folk a month die, normally, of different old-age problems. Eventually we all get our turn, you know. And Africa is a massive continent. So, there you go, 150,000 and more than 2600 deaths. But yeah, 2600 deaths from what? Hm? And confirmed, were they ill or not?)

Traditional healers are also fighting for their medicine to be used against the virus instead of a vaccine.

“We are not going to follow a vaccine because we as healers believe that our traditional medicine is not given a chance,” said Sellwane Mokatsi, 32-year-old compliance officer, who is also part of the traditional healers’ organisation.

So anyway, I'll put this one up. Well, they’re quite right. At least, you know, at least there's saying something normal like we’re not guinea pigs. These are trial vaccines, folks. What is it again? The folk literally who've got premature Alzheimer's, think about it. Again, I said tonight again, the same thing, Bill Gates, what was it he said? 700,000 folk, 700,000 folks will die from the vaccine, in the world, die that is, you know, across the world, from the vaccine, and that was acceptable. Well, here's normal folks doing normal things, we’re not guinea pigs, they don't want it. [Alan laughing.]

childrenshealthdefense.org

(A: Now, here's the thing too, as I say, you've got a gang here, especially in the States, rather evident in the States. But the same thing in England too and Oxford and different places like that. You find the same cliques actually, some in Oxford I think even worked over in the Wuhan lab at one point. And they all get patents on things too. The National Institute of Health, right, in the States...)

In addition, four NIH scientists have filed their own provisional patent application as co-inventors. (A: ...right, of the vaccine.) Little known NIH regulations let agency scientists collect up to $150,000.00 annually in royalties from vaccines upon which they worked. These rules are recipes for regulatory corruption.

NIH’s stake in the jab may explain why Anthony Fauci moved Moderna’s vaccine to the front of the line and to let Moderna skip animal trials despite the experimental technology and the inherent dangers of Coronavirus vaccines. Every prior coronavirus vaccine has proven problematic and can be lethal to animals due to COVID’s unique penchant for “pathogenic priming.” (A: In other words, they give it to you, then you have the virus and your body then overreacts to it and it kills you.) Death occurs only after a vaccinated animal encounters the wild virus.

(A: He moved it to the front. He's the one who decides who's going to get the contract's, 'eh. Just coincidence though he picked that one.)

(A: It doesn't even have to be that particular virus you're given a vaccine against, right, it doesn't have to be that one. It can be one of the strains, different, even quite different, but it will still react and down you go.)

Public health advocates and scientists criticized Fauci’s decision to skip animal trials as reckless. It may also explain why Anthony Fauci arranged a $483 million grant (A: [Alan chuckles.]) to Moderna from a sister NIH agency, BARDA, despite the fact that Moderna has never brought a product to market or gotten approval.

… Fauci publicly announced he was ‘encouraged’ by Moderna’s catastrophic Phase 1 clinical trials despite the fact that groups of super healthy volunteers had Grade 3 ‘severe or medically significant’ reactions following vaccination.

(A: Some had to go to hospital, 'eh.)

Fauci’s infusion (A: ...good name...) made Moderna CEO Steve Bancel a billionaire and further enriched Fauci’s mentor and co-investor Bill Gates. It may also explain why Fauci publicly announced he was “encouraged” by Moderna’s catastrophic Phase 1 clinical trials despite the fact that 20% of the high dose and 6% of the low dose groups of super healthy volunteers had Grade 3 “severe or medically significant” reactions following vaccination.

(A: Well, they can stuff that where the sun don't shine Mr. Fauci.)

Those results would have spelled DOA for any other medical product. After getting the abysmal news, Bancel and four other Moderna executives immediately dumped more than $89 million in stock and Fauci was forced to make his optimistic public assessment to save Moderna's plummeting shares from death spiral.

Fauci painted lipstick on that lame donkey and now he's trying to convince everyone it's a thoroughbred.

(A: M-m-m.)

Moderna and NIH began manufacturing the first of 1 billion doses of the deadly (A: [Alan laughing.]   ...deadly vaccine…) vaccine this month. Fauci knows from experience that no matter how dangerous a vaccine, the easy part is convincing people to take it. (A: They will if you terrify them, yeah.) Pharma, after all, controls the media.

Well, the media is all part of the same system, with the same owners actually. So, there you go, that's that one there. Another one too, this article here is, again you get these fake polls. Once again you have to go back to the so-called father of propaganda. He wasn't really the father of marketing, really, Edward Bernays. He understood that people are motivated by subconscious things, even desires and so on, and you could titillate them by tickling the desires and make them do certain things, or you could terrify them through fear, very primitive parts of the brain and so on, into compliance and things. It's all marketing strategies to persuade folk to comply.

Another part of it too for compliance was to create polls and fake polls. Because they know through the herd instinct of people, a lot of folk literally, oh well, you know, 70% said that's okay, maybe I should join them. I've actually had people say to me that they voted for Pierre Trudeau, the daddy of the present one, even though they knew he had been communist and they said, yeah but you know, one of them says to me, I realized that he was winning during the election and I thought I'd just join the winners. Because they give them statistics. That's how dumb it was.

Some folk are like that, well, if most folk go that way, I should go that way too, you know. So that's what polls are for, to convince you, well maybe... Because you'd say, I couldn't believe this, 72% of Canadians? …

72% of Canadians support mandatory coronavirus vaccine, Ipsos poll suggests globalnews.ca / 13 May 2020

(A: I'd never have thought of that, oh I'm really surprised, I'd better jump on the bandwagon and go along with them, 'eh. Prove it, 'eh, prove it all! Well, that won't happen because fake news is allowed when it's promoting the noble lie, for the noble cause, that's permitted, you see. So…)

More than two-thirds of Canadians believe a vaccine for COVID-19 — the disease caused by the novel coronavirus (A: Is it really?) — should be mandatory for all, a new poll by Ipsos suggests.

(A: Aahhhh, there ya are. Well, nobody asked me. Did you know, did you get asked? I bet you didn't, 'eh? I tell ya. I wonder who they ask, 'eh? So...)

Forty-one per cent strongly agreed with the idea, while 32 per cent somewhat agreed.

(A: ...and yada, yada, ya. So yeah, we should all get it mandatory regardless, you see. Naturally we'd all vote for that, wouldn't we? Wouldn't we? Yeah.)

I don't think so. Fake polls. They had books put out on percentages, how they work at percentages too, and how to use percentages, how to manipulate and even create percentages through fake techniques, to convince the public that your percentage and your outcome for your study is correct. There's actually, you can get degrees in it, in fact.

And…

Using behavioural science to help fight the coronavirus

I've mentioned this before, I thought I'd do it again because most folk don't remember much. It was from, again the Sage group, and also, they have a subgroup that they gave the behavioral insights team to work on terrifying the public into compliance. This is your money, again, you see, your money pays for you to get brainwashed all the time. And you're an animal. You see, once you’re not a spiritual creature with the rights from a God and deity, you're just an animal, and you’ll believe that yourself so you won't object so much when they say, we are being treated like animals because you're an animal. And you say, I guess they're right, well, you know, they're treating me like an animal, they prompted me this and prompted that, I had no idea I was getting prompted and all that, but I guess, though, well, you know, I'm just an animal. So, this one here is March 2020.

Using behavioural science to help fight the coronavirus

journal-bpa.org / 29 March 2020

(A: So, conology, the art of conning people, right, is being used to do it all. Eventually it came out initially from Britain at one point, that's where the different people who took part in this part here, behavioral research unit. It's an article on how they can use it. It...)

...summarizes useful evidence from behavioral science for fighting the COVID-19 outbreak.

(A: Maybe they put out… You see, most folk will read this and think, behavioral science to fight Covid? Maybe they put out, like create fake ghosts like virtual reality ghosts that's going to scare the viruses away or something. No, no, no. It's to manipulate you, folks. It's based on…)

... an extensive, multi-disciplinary literature research of relevant behavioral interventions and studies of crisis.

(A: You know, how to terrify the public.)

The findings aim to be useful not only to government and public authorities, but to organizations, workplaces and households, seven issues are covered.

(A: They go through the usual handwashing that they've taught you all about, right, until everybody's got their skin peeling off their hands. Read the articles yesterday, some folk were getting poisoned off the types of alcohol use that was coming through their skin. It says...)

Shows, information and education.

(A: There are not enough, you see.)

Placing hand sanitizer in colorful sitage in central locations, right beyond doors, canteen entrances, (A: What do you mean canteen entrances? Everything is shut.) the middle of entrance halls and LYFT lobbies, increases use substantially.

(A: ...of the sanitizers. Can you imagine, this could be a holy thing, they're treating it like holy water. It's the same thing. It's all rituals, you understand.)

All organizations and public buildings good adopt this cheap but effective practice. By contrast we lack evidence on reducing face touching.

(A: Really? Just have a look and watch the folk, they keep touching where their nose would be. Because it clogs up in front of their nose and their mouth from moisture, and so they keep pulling it away from them. And that moisture takes any viruses, by the way, through the fibrous tissue, it's just paper tissue, it's fibrous, it takes it through to the surface onto their hands outside the mask, folks. Did you know that?)

(A: And look at them, I saw it in a store, this woman was, “stand 6 feet away!” And she didn't allow you to touch anything, she was going to put stuff in bags and stuff. And her face the whole time, she just kept touching this part of her. I says, everything you're touching there you're infecting, if that's the case, you know. Oh, she got really ticked off about that. But that's what they do. The whole thing is ludicrous. But it's meant to be ludicrous, folks. Especially when they tell you that the asymptomatic people, and the WHO, probably don't infect anybody anyway. After telling us for months before that that it did. [Alan chuckles.] Gaslighting, 'eh?)

Articulating new norms of acceptable behavior (A: Right.)

As for sneezing and coughing and keeping tissues within arm’s reach could help. Isolation is likely to cause some distress and mental health problems.

(A: No kidding, you're getting, is that why they put prisoners that are really nasty prisoners in isolation when they punish them and that, to try to break their spirit, is that what they're trying to do with everybody? Stay home, stay isolated, don't talk to anybody, don't meet anybody. Yep.)

Isolation is likely because some distress and mental health problems (A: No kidding.) Requiring additional services.

(A: Well, if you get additional services, maybe you're going to meet folk you don't want to meet that's going to send parts of the virus to you, you know.)

Preparedness, through activating social networks, making concrete isolation plans, (A: That sounds nasty, they should change that from concrete, it sounds like they're going to wall you into something, like a horror movie.) and becoming familiar with the process, helps.

These supports are important, as some people may try to avoid necessary isolation.

(A: I wonder why? I guess it's maybe those words that they have in these tests and stuff, likely, may or may not have, you know, and if they're negative, they probably have it anyway, but may not necessarily in all cases and yada, yada, ya.)

Public-spirited behaviour is most likely when there is clear and frequent communication, strong...

(A: So here you go, here you go, how to use the mob against somebody…)

...strong group identity,

(A: There's all the face mask wearers, you see, look at them, 6 feet apart, leadership...)

strong group identity, and social disapproval for those who don’t comply.

(A: Use the mob against the individual. Social disapproval. Strong group identity.)

This has implications for language, leadership and day-to-day social interaction.

Authorities often overestimate the risk of panic, but undesirable behaviours to watch out for are panic buying of key supplies and xenophobic responses. (A: Well, maybe if you don't terrify them it wouldn't happen.) Communicating the social unacceptability of both could be part of a collective strategy. (A: You see.)

Evidence links crisis communication to behaviour change. (A: Wow.) As well as speed, honesty and credibility, effective communication involves empathy (A: We feel your pain.) and promoting useful individual actions and decisions. Using multiple platforms and tailoring messages to subgroups are beneficial too.

These people get paid thousands of bucks for coming out with this trash. They really do. Rather than just say our job is to con people, to lie to them, to get groups to fight other groups on behalf of making compliance mandatory, you see, and terrify them. It actually has it in them, I mentioned that before too, the handout they put out to the newspapers, the same group by the way, it says they could, folks could, they could really exaggerate stories to create more fear and tension and anxiety, which would help folk to comply all the more. In other words, terrify the public. This is all official stuff, folks. [Alan chuckles.]

It actually mentions that too though, you know. M-hm. This article is 25 pages, I think. Yep. Ohhhhh, it's amazing how they treat us, just like animals though, isn't it? And again, they use our tax money to do it. Hhhhhhhh. N-n-n. Another one too…

Options for increasing adherence to social distancing measures assets.publishing.service.gov.uk / 22 March 2020

(A: Ohhhh. Eight pages here, 'eh by the same conologists, 'eh. Professional liars and manipulators. Isn't that something? Perceived threat it says in this one, persuasion…)

Persuasion

Perceived threat: A substantial number of people still do not feel sufficiently personally threatened; it could be that they are reassured by the low death rate in their demographic group, although levels of concern may be rising. Having a good understanding of the risk has been found to be positively associated with adoption of COVID-19 social distancing measures in Hong Kong. The perceived level of personal threat needs to be increased (A: Have you got that?)

The perceived level of personal threat needs to be increased among those who are complacent, using hard-hitting emotional messaging.

(A: They mean terrorizing you, folks.)

To be effective this must also empower people by making clear the actions they can take to reduce that threat.

(A: In other words, comply. [Alan chuckles.] There ya go. And then they go on to about…)

There seems to be insufficient understanding of, or feelings of responsibility about, people's role in transmitting the infection to others.

(A: Well, the WHO has given us two stories, that people without symptoms probably aren't passing it on to anybody anyway.)

This may have resulted in part from messaging around the low level of risk to most people (A: D'you understand they're studying all your text in real time, they've got access to all your data, and algorithms and so on pick up all your stuff through different phrases, words that you use. They actually call it that...)

This may have resulted in part from messaging around the low level (A: Your messaging to each other.) of risk to most people and talk of the desirability of building 'herd immunity'. Messaging needs to emphasise and explain the duty to protect others. (A: M-m. There ya go.)

Tailoring: Some people will be more persuaded by appeals to play by the rules, (A:...'eh. We are all children to these evil characters.) some by duty to the community, and some to personal risk.

All these different approaches are needed. The messaging also needs to take account of the realities of different people's lives. Messaging needs to take account of the different motivational levers and circumstances of different people.

(A: Then you get...)

Incentivisation

(A: Social approval and social disapproval, yada, yada, ya. Never mind the fact they can't give you any hard fact and data on their testing methods to even prove if the thing even exists. Hm? Facts don't matter. What matters is your compliance to the orders and doing dumb things, you know, like suffocating yourself behind a mask.)

I'll put these links up remember for everybody who is really interested and who's not bored stiff by now. Because this, you understand you're living through incredible history. You know, this is incredible times. And those of you that can live another 10 years and 20 years, no matter what the world will end up with by then, I'm sure it won't get any better. And that part I am sure of because they told us that, into austerity, and true austerity, for under necessity to save us all, you see. It's not going to be better no matter what excuse they give you. It's not pleasant at all.

Remember, I'll put up the Scientific Advisory Group for Emergencies, that's the Sage group, right. Again, this special group that works under, they were put for underneath the real high-tech manipulators in the mind, etc. I've done it before, and I'll put it up again tonight perhaps. For those who can handle it.

Sage publishes evidence behind advice on lockdown following calls for more transparency - itv.com / 5 May 2020

You understand, if you have basic real scientific facts, put them out there and leave it at that. Instead of employing these professional Bernays type manipulators in mind control to play with our heads. And to turn groups against other groups by creating the groups, the compliant ones and the ones who think for themselves and get them all clashing. N-n-n.

Another one too is I mentioned already that woman who wrote ‘the disease that never was’ because of the test. Well, this is the one that came out from the New York Times.

Faith in Quick Test Leads to Epidemic That Wasn’t nytimes.com / 22 Jan 2007

Dr. Brooke Herndon of Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center, shown at left this month, was told last spring that she appeared to have whooping cough.

(A: They give you an example of it, and this is back in 2007, remember, right.)

Dr. Brooke Herndon, (A: Listen to this story.) an internist at Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center, could not stop coughing. For two weeks starting in mid-April last year, she coughed, seemingly nonstop, followed by another week when she coughed sporadically, annoying, she said, everyone who worked with her.

Before long, Dr. Kathryn Kirkland, an infectious disease specialist at Dartmouth, had a chilling thought: Could she be seeing the start of a whooping cough epidemic? By late April, other health care workers at the hospital were coughing, and severe, intractable coughing is a whooping cough hallmark. And if it was whooping cough, the epidemic had to be contained immediately because the disease could be deadly to babies in the hospital and could lead to pneumonia in the frail and vulnerable adult patients there.

(A: It's pretty unmistakable, whooping cough when you hear that, when you cough cough cough cough, until the lung is empty, aauuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuu and then you go whop, you hear that whooping as they try to inhale the air. It's pretty well unmistakable. Anyway, it says…)

It was the start of a bizarre episode at the medical center: the story of the epidemic that wasn't.

For months, nearly everyone involved thought the medical center had had a huge whooping cough outbreak, with extensive ramifications. Nearly 1,000 health care workers at the hospital in Lebanon, N.H., were given a preliminary test and furloughed from work until their results were in (A: That's a lot of folk laid off.); 142 people, including Dr. Herndon, were told they appeared to have the disease; and thousands were given antibiotics and a vaccine for protection. Hospital beds were taken out of commission, including some in intensive care.

Then, about eight months later, health care workers were dumbfounded to receive an e-mail message from the hospital administration informing them that the whole thing was a false alarm.

(A: Eight months later, right.)

Not a single case of whooping cough was confirmed with the definitive test, growing the bacterium, (A: That's definitive. You see, you grow the darn thing, right.) Bordetella pertussis, in the laboratory. Instead, it appears the health care workers probably were afflicted with ordinary respiratory diseases like the common cold.

Now, as they look back on the episode, epidemiologists and infectious disease specialists say the problem was that they placed too much faith in a quick and highly sensitive molecular test that led them astray.

Infectious disease experts say such tests are coming into increasing use and may be the only way to get a quick answer in diagnosing diseases like whooping cough, Legionnaire’s, bird flu, tuberculosis and SARS, and deciding whether an epidemic is under way.

There are no national data on pseudo-epidemics caused by an overreliance on such molecular tests, said Dr. Trish M. Perl, an epidemiologist at Johns Hopkins and past president of the Society of Health Care Epidemiologists of America. But, she said, pseudo-epidemics happen all the time.

(A: I'll say that again...)

...pseudo-epidemics happen all the time.

The Dartmouth case may have been one the largest, but it was by no means an exception, she said.

There was a similar whooping cough scare at Children’s Hospital in Boston last fall that involved 36 adults and 2 children. Definitive tests, though, did not find pertussis.

“It’s a problem; we know it’s a problem,” Dr. Perl said. “My guess is that what happened at Dartmouth is going to become more common.”

Many of the new molecular tests are quick but technically demanding, and each laboratory may do them in its own way.

(A: I'll repeat that...)

...each laboratory may do them in its own way.

These tests, called “home brews,” are not commercially available, and there are no good estimates of their error rates. But their very sensitivity makes false positives likely, and when hundreds or thousands of people are tested, as occurred at Dartmouth, false positives can make it seem like there is an epidemic.

(A: I'll say that again for the hard of thinking...)

...false positives can make it seem like there is an epidemic.

This article goes on and on, it's a good article. It just shows you I guess a lot of folk were laid off, 'eh, for eight months it took before they found out, that they had real testing, that they couldn't find the bacterium anywhere, you know, or the virus or whatever. They couldn't find the particular agent that was causing it, I should say.

Another one is awfully important, this one too. You see, just like they're saying, oh you've got Covid, 'eh. How do you know that? Well we presume you have it. Because you have what? You know, one of the many symptoms. You might be constipated, maybe you've got diarrhea. Maybe you've got blocked sinuses. Maybe you've got running noses. Maybe you've got an itchy left cheek instead of an itchy right cheek. I mean, there's nothing they haven't covered in this darn thing. And as I say, Fauci added the last one, and it really is so comical. He waited until the allergy season, the hay fever season started and says, oh it could be running noses, you know. [Alan laughing.] Foxy Fauci, 'eh?

NBC doctor who claimed he caught the virus on a plane (A: This is a guy who, you know, worked on you know, one of these PR doctors for television.) through his eyeball (A: This was big news at the time, oh I got it from my eyeball, you know.) says he tested negative for the virus and NEVER had it

dailymail.co.uk / 10 July 2020

Dr Joseph Fair, an infectious disease expert, (A: [Alan laughing.] Sorry, couldn't hold that one. [Alan laughing.] So, he’s an infectious disease expert.) initially believed he caught COVID

Fair took a flight to New Orleans April 24 and suspects he was infected onboard

He told Today that he suspects he was infected through his eyeballs

He tweeted that he was in hospital May 13, and was released on May 17

On Tuesday he said antibody tests were negative, so the virus remains a mystery

(A: But how many folks got the same kind results, 'eh? If you died, you know, he'd be put down as Covid.)

... was left fighting for his life in the hospital, (A: ...with whatever it was….) has tested negative for COVID-19, he confirmed.

...he was severely sickened by something, but it was not COVID-19.

His illness 'remains an undiagnosed mystery', he said in a tweet on Tuesday.

'I had myriad COVID symptoms . . . (A: He had that he says.)

. . . co-morbidities, (A: I don't know what else he had wrong there.) despite testing negative by nasal swab,' he said.

'I was severely ill for 2 weeks, 4 days of it in critical condition, resulting in pneumonia, diffuse lung injury & 18lbs of weight loss.'

(A: It's true, with these diseases that you get into the lungs with pneumonia, and you end up getting scar tissue, and you'll lose lung tissue for sure, apparently 'eh, and you'll see, you actually see it on the x-rays. In China because everything is so efficient and cheap there, they can run you through an MRI, that's what they use for it to actually see the lungs. So, they don't just put it down to testing, they actually do a visual, they can see and say you have definitely got pneumonia, at least you definitely got that right. It's much more definitive. Anyway…)

He said he would now have a second antibody test to confirm the results, and work with other specialists to find out the source of his infection.

His doctor has ordered another antibody test from a different manufacturer to confirm the negative result.

(A: I guess you keep just, if you, at that level, you can afford all kinds of different companies' tests, and then you'll pick the best tests that you want, maybe a 2 out of 5 or whatever say this, whatever suits you, depends on how you feel that day.)

... he has spent time in the Democratic Republic of Congo.

(A: Tropical diseases, 'eh.)

'My path forward is a 2nd AB test, & follow-up with a pulmonologist & tropical medicine specialist in an effort to diagnose what made me so ill,' he said.

Fair believes he contracted an illness on a plane to New Orleans on April 24.

He said he took all possible precautions - wearing a mask and gloves, wiping down the area surround him - but passengers were 'packed in like sardines'.

'Instinctively I probably should have gotten off the flight when I saw that,' he told NBC's Today.

He concluded that he caught a virus through his eyes.

(A: So, he's still convinced he got it from there, because I think he was covered in every other way, you know, so...)

'Obviously you can still get it through your eyes,' he said.

The idea behind the eye is that they say you have similar ones, the ACE2 receptors too, on the tissue around the outside of the eyes, you see, so it can bind to it there as well just like the lung tissue. Anyway, the article is quite good, and it gives you more and more data. But again too, so much is speculative.

Another thing I've noticed as well, so many folk have got sick for years now, at least 10 years, I can remember even 10, yeah, at 10 years ago when they had different flu's coming out, 2009/10. They weren't getting positive tests even for the few that had it done, everybody else got eventually lumped in as something, swine flu or whatever, that's what they were told to do is put them all down a swine flu even though there's no definitive testing for it. That's what was ordered in Canada at the time, I remember that, I did the shows on it at the time.

But the folk are getting definitely heavy bronchitis into kind of pneumonias. And getting antibiotics... Bacterial infections often generally set into these bad viral infections that breaks down the tissue in the lungs, you see, and bacteria immediately follows, gets in and that's it. Then you've got a bacterial secondary infection and you've got to get antibiotics for that too. But some folk would try to fight it themselves. And I tell you, that's what they said at the time, that this particular odd one lasted, it's still on the go yet, it hasn't gone away. For the last 10 years occasionally folk will get it, every other year, and same symptoms, they'll start coughing, they have all the symptoms of a heavy cold, then the flu it seems, then they get bronchitis, like a bacterial one. Then they get antibiotics to clear it up. Or they don't get antibiotics, it will seem to clear up then it will come back again about two weeks later. That was the common symptoms of this oddball one that they so far supposedly haven't diagnosed that's been around for years now. So, who knows what that one is too? Was that released as well? Was that a trial result? Who knows? Who knows, 'eh? But they've picked on this Covid idea, even though they can't isolate the thing. So, there you go.

Now, this is important again, this one as well, and I want to just mention before I go into this thing. I just want to remember to get back to my website @cuttingthematrix.com. I've got to keep saying it, or remind myself to say it because for years and years and years I always forgot to say it, to send a few bucks my way @cuttingthroughthematrix.com, how to do it, etc. Because I have to tick along as well. Remember, you can send cash as well or checks or use PayPal. I think there's Instagram as well. The one you take to the post office, they still do that, some countries still have international postal money orders. I don't think the US is sending them to Canada now, the actual international postal money orders. They'll send bank orders, naturally, or any personal checks, that's okay. As I say, you can still send cash.

So, go into @cuttingthroughthematrix.com and if anything happens to any of the sites, use the other sites listed on that one. All my official sites you'll see listed on that one, so you know they're genuine, and hopefully there will be other sites left if anything happens to the .com site. Because things are changing fast, and these characters at the top, they're not going to mess around with small fry that are a nuisance to them. This is a wartime scenario for them. And in all wartime scenarios they are ruthless. In fact, they're ruthless even when you think it's all peaceful, [Alan chuckles.] as folk have accidents all the time. All the time. In every country.

That's the reality. You've got to get this out of your head of this Disneyland system of rights that you been born into and see how it really, really does work. I remember some years ago and that's awfully true, there was so many biologists who worked in some labs, a whole plague of them getting killed. They were all, you know, committing suicide and falling over railings and down steps and stuff and out windows. It was just astonishing. This is how… This is the real world, folks. This happens all the time.

The same with Dr. Kelly that came out a few years back too, he was found suicided supposedly, just like he said he would. He said, they'll find me in a forest with my wrists cut. And that's exactly what they did. And he was due to go up and give testimony about biological warfare systems and so on. He never got to court naturally. But at the same time too, other ones that all knew each other were dropping dead all over the place. That's the real world you live in.

When big plans are afoot, believe you me, nothing stops them. Nothing. These characters now are in full war mode of compliance and they're not going to tolerate any nuisance factors at all. They made it quite plain, even with the preliminary Event 201, the Johns Hopkins experiment they did with, or trial run for the Covid, along with the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation together. They had a set of systems they would introduce, like 1 through 5. Starting with just defaming the people for putting out untrue news, etc. and contradicting their facts even though it didn't matter, facts didn't matter, or truth didn't matter, just contradict them to get folk from reading them. If they persisted, start taking away their money or basically blacklisting them on the Internet until they were shadow banned. Then if they persisted in some way or another, you could withdraw all their means of support from them, for them to get money, yada ya.

Well guess what 4 and 5 would be? They didn't mention that, you know. That's the real world you live in. I hope you understand that. And everything hinges, all the elite who run and own the world, and they actually talk about it that way amongst themselves, they're not going to mess around with any little nuisances. And those who really work for them, they take little hints... Oh, so-and-so is a nuisance, and they go off and deal with that little nuisance. And that's how the world really, really does work, folks.

So, as I say, help me tick along here, if I can tick along. Because I'm not in for politics. I don't give a darn about politics. Even with Trump. I mean, Trump literally is, I think he's just played his part. Everybody, the whole world is saying, why isn't he being more active and authoritative in dealing with problems? Well, why hasn't he been, you know? Tell me that. Astonishing. The world is literally looking at America thinking it's falling apart. And if that is the case then you're finished. If you allow it to happen. If you allow it to happen, then it is finished.

It's just like Peter Hitchens said before, when he was there when Russia literally just went down, like in over a week and down went the Berlin wall in Germany. He said it was obviously a command that went across the board to all those in charge in all the Soviet bloc countries. Obviously. But there was that feeling there, what happened? It didn't have to happen. It didn't have to. It was prearranged. That's how things really happen.

And when you see like mass demonstrations, or one, that literally had nothing to do, honestly, I think very quickly they forgot what it was about and they were given their mantras by the Antifa group that piggybacked immediately and took over this whole thing and then cause the rioting as well. Because you're looking at a communist revolution obviously. And then Extinction Rebellion. All these folks are all mixed into the same group networking. And it's all your fault, all the adults' fault, there's too many of you, look what you've done to OUR planet, yada yada, you're all enemies and that's it.

Preplanned, folks. And they're all saying, what on earth is Trump really…? And again, they can get no cooperation. Well, if it's that bad, if that really is the case, then it would be over, wouldn't it? But what you're looking at too, as with all socialist systems as I've said before, end up with mass slaughter. That's where it goes. That's their history from the French Revolution right up to the Bolshevik revolution. Mass slaughter's there, incredible slaughters. And China did it too, mass slaughters. China also had its cultural revolution where the youngsters were actually egged on, again, to get rid of the older folk, which they did with gusto. Hm? You better start realizing what's going on here. And what's being allowed to happen for years using your tax money to create the armies that are going to eliminate you, maybe, 'eh.

With, ha, I tell you, and I've said before, they'll believe they're doing the world a favor. That's how radicalized they are. You understand, when you have risen people to be, to utterly hate, there's just pure hatred comes out of them, now you've got a real problem. You can't argue with radicalized hate. And that's what you're seeing. And it is authorized hate. Dangerous, dangerous stuff, folks.

And they always end up eating their own, too, even the ones who have eliminated everybody else, that those at the very top encourage them to eliminate each other. And they will. That's its history. Quite amazing.

So yeah, go into @cuttingthroughthematrix.com and see how to send me a few bucks my way, hopefully. Now that the mail is, as I said before, I've already sent off two shipments and I've got one more to go in two days and that will be that lot done and cleared up and they'll get them within 10 days hopefully, should be, and I'll feel a lot better then.

It took, I mean, this isn't just me closed down when you can't get books and you can't get this… I've got them all now but... Can you imagine every business across the country? You know, big businesses and so on? Not me, not paltry little me but big, big businesses? This is a war scenario you're looking at. Actually, more catastrophic than most wars, folk were not locked down in their homes and their businesses stopped because of the wars.

This is THE one, the big one, for a global reset, a reset on the way of life, like what new values will be, new rules, regulations, new culture, yada, ya. M-hm. Yep. There ya go. Your master's voice has spoken and we're always to obey them apparently. Or they'll turn mobs on you, you know.

They will.   Here it goes too…

Forced Vaccination Plan Unveiled

lewrockwell.com / 10 July 2020

Stanford University Legal & Medical Authorities Join Forces To Fashion An Indiscriminate Mandated Mass-Vaccination Plan That Would Frighten The Public, Disregard Lawful Protections Of Informed Consent And Result In Needless Deaths.

(A: This is a war on the people. Total. It's been declared.)

Our health overlords propose a dangerous infectious disease control plan that mandates indiscriminate immunization for all Americans, a plan that is far more dangerous than the COVID-19 coronavirus epidemic itself.

Writing in the prestigious New England Journal of Medicine, Stanford Law School and Health Policy departments propose priority vaccination for high-risk groups that comprise the population that are least likely to benefit and most likely to experience side effects and hospitalization from COVID-19 coronavirus immunization, or from any vaccine for that matter.

Initially voluntary then mandated

The Stanford plan would initially roll out as a completely voluntary inoculation scheme to be followed by compulsory vaccination that would penalize refusers with employment suspensions and/or stay-at-home orders.

(A: As I've said this already, this would happen.)

Their plan calls for a future FDA-licensed vaccine, a vaccine whose side effects will not be completely known until it is widely used, (A: ...and even then it could take months or even years to see all the effects.) that according to another Stanford University study, would benefit only a miniscule portion of the population.

(A: How about that, folks? Well, what’s it really for if it's not to help you? Hm? Well, we won't go there but keep that in mind.)

That study showed, as validated by blood tests, the COVID-19 coronavirus only infects Americans at the rate of 1 in 3868 encounters (A: ...right.) (range 626 to 31,800) with others who are already infected and results in death in only 1 in 6,670,000 contacts among middle-age Americans (range 1.68 to 97.6 million). Despite the fear generated by TV news reports, the risk of acquiring COVID-19 coronavirus infection is remote.

(A: And that is more of real facts actually. These are tests that are done and good studies too. But facts don't matter, right.)

With presumption the vaccine is 100% effective, (A: That's what they're presuming.) those numbers put a limit on the percent of vaccinated subjects who could possibly benefit from vaccination – – 19 million would be need to be vaccinated for 1 person to avoid death.

(A: [Alan laughing.]   But what about all the side effects in this 19 million, 'eh?)

Even if only 1% experience side-effects that result in hospitalization, in a population of 328 million Americans, that would result in 3,280,000 vaccine-induced hospitalizations, which would overwhelm the 1-million bed healthcare system.

Using data from prior flu-vaccine studies, about 1% of those vaccinated may require hospitalization after vaccination and 1% of the hospitalized (1 in 200) would die, which would result in 32,800 needless deaths that would likely be blamed on the COVID-19 coronavirus.

(A: Ha, wouldn't it too, 'eh?)

The vaccine itself may be perfectly safe when received by healthy subjects. (A...MAY be, right...) but frail, elderly, malnourished (vitamin and mineral-deficient) individuals would be the most prone to suffer side effects and death when admitted to the hospital with its inherent problems of antibiotic resistance, medication errors, ventilator lung trauma and failure to check for vitamin and mineral deficiencies prior to admission.

(A: Apart from that I should just add here too, if you're over 60 they'll give you a higher more powerful dose of the adjuvants to try and make it work on you. [Alan chuckles.] Which is a bit ridiculous. If the normal stuff wouldn't work because your immune system is compromised or low, it's dying off, it's not as strong as it used to be, then giving you more adjuvants to try to force it to take on you is just going to cause more, it's a poison, adjuvants are poisonous, you have terrible reactions to them.)

High-risk individuals least likely to benefit from vaccination

While it may appear wise to vaccinate high-risk individuals (diabetics, hypertensives, obese, autoimmune), these are the very people whose immune systems do not respond well to vaccines and are subject to side effects.

For example, flu shots are not very effective for the very young and the very old. Flu vaccines are 40-60% effective in the population at-large (A: That's what they say.) and as low as 23% effective for certain strains of the flu, says a CDC report. (A: In other words, it's like the toss of a coin whether it works or no. Between 40 and 60% effective it's like 50%, right.) As an aside, flu vaccination may actually increase the risk for coronavirus infection via a mechanism called viral interference (by 36% said one recently published study).

(A: I've mentioned that before too, the Department of Defense in 2017 in the US had warned them to stop giving them the flu shot because the particular flu that went out that year, once you got vaccinated and the actual wild virus hit them, the real one, then it caused a tremendous reaction. Again, a tremendous cytokine storm in the lungs that end up killing some of the service people. Don't forget that. It can cause up to 36% it said in one recently published study, it says, viral interference cause it when one particular flu vaccination.)

But despite the fact you can read that study for yourself, proponents of vaccination deny any such link between prior flu shots and subsequent COVID-19 coronavirus infections. Viral interference is reported in other studies. For example, those individuals who were vaccinated against the flu in the previous fall of 2010 were 1.4 to 2.5 times more likely to become ill from the H1N1 strain...

(A: That's true. In Canada they put out a warning, a panicked warning from the national health system here telling folk to stop taking the flu shot because it made them more prone to the actual flu that was around, it actually caused them to come down with it. Yep. So yeah, so the ones it says who are vaccinated...)

For example, those individuals who were vaccinated against the flu in the previous fall of 2010 were 1.4 to 2.5 times more likely to become ill from the H1N1 strain of the flu in the following year, which happens to be the predominant influenza strain in circulation this year 2020.

(A: There ya go. So, you have to wonder if the cytokine storm is caused by Covid or this particular flu hitting those who have had their flu shots already. This all has to be, you can't pooh-pooh this stuff. This is what scientists all have to go over and work out. Having an opinion isn't good enough, it's the facts that count in the end, isn't it? So, it's not belief, it's supposed to be based on facts. So…)

These high-risk groups have inherent problems activating antibodies against any infectious disease, which is why most vaccines require multiple inoculations and include toxic adjuvants (A: That's what I talked about.) to provoke an immune response.

Also, on the priority list for forced vaccination are prisoners, people with prior respiratory problems, nursing home patients and healthcare workers.

(A: They're going to be made to take it right off, first of all, you see.)

Why current treatments are being rejected

The Stanford plan would require evidence that existing treatment or prevention of COVID-19 coronavirus is ineffective, (A: ...right...) which at the moment is solely comprised of archaic quarantine and lockdown measures and limiting contact with the virus itself by employing face masks and social distancing.

Obesity, further induced by lockdown, increases the risk for COVID-19 related deaths. Indoor lockdown deprives people of sunshine vitamin D that impairs immunity and increases risk for death. Quarantines and lockdowns are counterproductive.

Any prospective treatments, such as hydroxychloroquine and HCQ +zinc, nebulized hydrogen peroxide, as well as vitamin and mineral regimens (zinc, vitamin D, vitamin C, selenium) are ignored and dismissed outright by the CDC, categorized as unproven, even potentially dangerous. There is sufficient evidence for nutrient therapy in the prevention and management of COVID-19 infections.

But without a vaccine or an approved treatment, vitamins and minerals have vanished from retail store shelves without widespread reports of any side effects.

Public demand for a vaccine

According to the Stanford report, only about half of the U.S. population plans to be vaccinated against COVID-19 coronavirus. (A: Actually, I saw some, it was about 34% I think it was.) This is why hospitals are over-stating the deaths attributed to COVID-19 and why news agencies create continued fear over a common-cold virus that results in few if any symptoms upon infection and only kills a very few. Our modern healthcare system is over-committed to vaccination. The prospect of a vaccine is dimmed by the fact 90% of vaccines that enter human trials fail to make it to market. (A: These are all links, by the way, they've got links for all these things.)
Given the remote possibility a safe and effective vaccine ever materializes, the nation may await an imagined vaccine at the expense of finding an effective treatment.

Mortality rate is far lower than quoted

(A: He goes into that too, how they fudge the figures, etc. and the death rates and put them all down as Covid and yada, yada, ya. It goes on and on. It's quite good though. But it does touch eventually on the rights of informed consent.)

Rights of informed consent

The Stanford report that calls for mandated vaccination overlooks certain rights to informed consent that are required by Title 21 of the Code of Federal Regulations for persons who receive newly licensed vaccines in a clinical study. Since all vaccinated Americans will be enrolled in a surveillance study (stage 4) in order to gain full FDA approval, informed consent will be legally required.

(A: Don't forget too, under the Nuremberg Code that came out in the Nuremberg trials, they can't use the people for experimental medications, or for ANY experimental purposes by the way. So, they're going against that too. Don't forget that, folks, and that was to do with genocide.
M-hm. It also says here…)

Furthermore, doctors should individually assess the chances a person has of benefiting from vaccination. And patients have the right to reject hold-harmless clauses that would then make health practitioners legally liable should they proceed to vaccinate an individual who has little chance of benefiting from immunization.

(A: If it's made mandatory, you better get, make, get it all made up in advance and its forms, the doctors or whoever's going to inject you must sign, with their name on it and address and so on, so you can sue them if you get any bad reactions, after them telling you that you're going to be fine. And in it will state that, I, so-and-so, tells you that this patient will be fine and quite safe from this vaccination, which I am forcing upon them. How about that, folks. And yeah, you've got to have the right to sue. That's the least you have, to save yourself, 'eh. Obviously.

You can’t start doing what you're told by a scientific tyranny, the kind that Bertrand Russell talked about who was all for it. He said, if there was going to be a tyranny I preferred it to be a scientific one. He was, again, another socialist totalitarian type character and an elitist. It says here that that...)

A model INFORMED CONSENT/REFUSAL form has been written and published for the public to present to their doctors when and if a vaccine is licensed and available in the U.S. at covid19consent.com

(A: So, it's got a link on this one that you can print up yourself.)

This is not what the vaccine industry or the Centers for Disease Control, that latter a co-holder of COVID-19 related patents, wants to be known.

All these folks are completely compromised that are wanting you to take this, folks. They’re all on the take, a lot of them. M-hm. I'll put this link up too, for those that care to wade through it, you know.

This article is to do with the elderly, again. Again, a huge massive sacrifice. In preplanning obviously, it was intended that the elderly, and they've conditioned the public that somehow you're worth less once you're elderly. This is how, you'd be surprised how you're conditioned in what to think without really thinking through it for yourself. It's given to you. But it's conditioning you to think that way, whereas all the other age groups talking about the elderly getting sacrificed, with the, it's beyond gross incompetence, it's deliberate.

Were conditions for high death rates at Care Homes created on purpose?

off-guardian.org / 26 May 2020

During the COVID-19 pandemic, people in care homes have been dying in droves.

Why is this happening? Is it simply because older adults are very vulnerable to SARS-CoV-2...

(A: What would it be, in other words.)

Or do care homes deserve the lion’s share of the blame, such as by paying so poorly that many workers have to split their time between several facilities, spreading the virus in the process?

(A: That's what I said before, they always have them part-timers in care homes, because they don't have to pay them pension plans and other stuff, you know, medication, drug insurance, things like that.)

Alternatively, could medical experts and government bureaucrats, with the full knowledge of at least the top tier of government officials, have created conditions shortly after the pandemic struck that contribute to the high death tolls while engendering virtually no public backlash against themselves?

This article shows that the third hypothesis is highly plausible. The people who created the conditions may be unaware of, or oblivious to, their implications. But it’s also possible that at least some of them know exactly what they’re doing.

After all – seeing it from an amoral government’s point of view – the growing numbers of elderly are a big burden on today’s fiscally strained governments, because in aggregate they’re paying much less into the tax base than younger people while causing the costs of healthcare and retirement programs to skyrocket.

(A: Well, they paid for it all, that's what it's all for, you know. We're forgetting another thing too. This has all been discussed before in big global meetings, and the University professors get on television talking about the elderly, they should just give up and die at retirement age, you know. They had professors, especially the one in Australia, he was given the star making machine, made him a star to make sure he got lots of coverage. He comes out every so often, gives the same speech about, they shouldn't live so long, you know.)

Here are three sets of conditions that collectively create a framework for enabling significantly boosted care-home deaths – and doing so with impunity – even while most of each set of conditions in isolation may appear to be purely for the benefit of everyone in society:

One. Bureaucrats develop extremely broad definitions of novel-coronavirus infections and outbreaks. (A: No kidding.) This is coupled with the continuing presence, in a number of care homes scattered across each jurisdiction, of at least one nurse or physician who follows every letter of all definitions and rules. (Such individuals are always present in every discipline, but in the medical milieu their actions can be deliberate, deadly and very hard to detect.)

And it goes on through the different problems that could have been, made it happen in the care homes. I think personally it's because they terrified the public, completely terrorized them actually. And I still want to see, talking earlier on about cytokine storms and so on, the pulmonary priming that can happen with it too, with vaccinations, then you hit the actual real virus later on, how many of these folks in these homes, and mandatorily, had all the flu shots? Huh? You gotta take these into consideration, you see, as to why they had severe reactions by this whole thing.

This cannot be dismissed scientifically. You've got to, these are all the things you have to consider and study to rule things in or out, hm. And if they won't do that then something’s up. Then it's not scientific at all. So, I'll put that link up to for this particular article.

Another one too, as I said before is, I'll put up the one from Canada where they're challenging the Ontario Superior Court of Justice, and by the Vaccine Choice Canada. I'll put that article up by them, it's a PDF. And then

Legal Challenge to COVID-19 Measures Filed In Ontario Superior Court - vaccinechoicecanada.com

It's a big one too. 191 pages, I think. For those who want to look through it.

And here's a beauty of our scientific establishment too, the things that… You see, I don't even expect anyone to even yawn with the articles that I, that one time should have shocked people. Nothing shocks them anymore. We found dumpsters before with baby parts in them over the years, that was a normal thing outside some clinics. They’ve had articles in the last year too of doctors who just retired and died, and they find thousands and thousands of baby parts. They don't know why; they say they don't know why they saved them all. But I guess it’s just folk that take pride in their work or something, you know. Some folk collect all, you know, ornaments for the mantelpiece and stuff like that.

But scientist, you have to really, you must get the shivers once in a while. I would think so. I mean, I still get them once in a while. And it takes a lot to move me, believe you me, in that respect. But I don't expect anybody to be disgusted about anything anymore. I can remember doing a show years ago where I think it was the Greater Manchester area, the director for the National Health Service at the time was called up in the question. He wasn't fired or anything but for some reason that was never explained to the public, that over the course of so many years thousands of corpses and parts of corpses of children up to the age of 5 to 10 years old or something like that, that supposedly died in hospitals, had all, they'd found parts of the bodies.

So, they had to start having secondary funerals, notifying the people when they identified them DNA wise and so on. So, here's the poor parents have been grieving again, and then over a year or two more parts of the same bodies would turn up. Thousands of them. They even found refrigerated parts, this is in England remember, they found refrigerated parts of thousands of them eventually in I think it was a warehouse in storage, cold storage in Nova Scotia. Never explained to the public why this was happening. I don't know if anybody got charged in it all. I don't think so.

We live in the dark, people. We live in the absolute dark as to what really happens. Honestly. So, nothing shocks the people anymore anyway but…

Judicial Watch Obtains Records Showing FDA (A: Food and Drug Administration.) Paid for 'Fresh and Never Frozen' Human Fetal Parts for Use In 'Humanized Mice' Creation

judicialwatch.org / 23 June 2020

(Washington, DC) – Judicial Watch announced today it received 165 pages of records (A: If you want to download it the link is here.) from the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) showing the FDA between 2012 and 2018 entered into 8 contracts worth $96,370 with Advanced Bioscience Resources (ABR) to acquire "fresh and never frozen" tissue from 1st and 2nd trimester aborted fetuses for use in creating "humanized mice" for ongoing research.

(A: This kind of stuff is common. All over the place. M-hm.)

ABR (A: ...the company...) is a non-profit firm which has been the subject of criminal referrals from House and Senate committees investigating whether Planned Parenthood or any other entity was illegally profiting from the handling of fetal tissue from aborted babies.

(A: Whoa, well they'd never do that, you know.)

There you go. But anyway, I'll put this article up for those who care to even look at it. Most folk don't give a darn today. You understand, we've all been taught that life is awfully cheap. Awfully cheap. You're another animal.

Like, don't forget, going back to Julian Huxley who helped set up UNESCO and Planned Parenthood too, who hated the vast bulk of the ordinary people. As all the founders of that did. He was quite plain, we've got to knock people, the humans, off the pedestal as the superior species on the planet. In order to control them. They wouldn't obey you. You understand, at one time the things we are accepting today would have caused mass riots. We don't riot now. Certain selected groups are told to riot and encouraged to riot, and paid to riot some of them, but the leaders are for sure. But we don't riot for natural normal things all the time that we should be.

We've been dumbed down. We are knocked off the pedestal as being the top species on the planet. Like Huxley said, we were trained to do that. And so, you devalue yourself and others. You see, once you devalue the life of others, then that falls, then you just devalued your own life too. When it comes your turn, whether they can keep you alive or kill you, what are they going to say about you? What's so special about you? That's, again, what one of their top guys said, George Bernard Shaw, why should we keep you alive?

I hope you understand, you've all been trained into this. So yeah, here you go with no one cares really who's getting chopped up. And of course, humans are not to blame, they're engaging and causing all these aborted tissues, fetuses and so on, for their own actions, it's never their own fault, you know, the system made them do it. It's just terrible how we devalue ourselves in the process. Constantly, constantly. You start at the one end, before life, or before they are born, and then you go into post birth abortion now, which is just murder. Then you go into, let's kill off the adults. So, you do that now, they're not worth anything are they? And you've all been trained through it step-by-step in completely devaluing your life. And then of course they don't stop there. Oh, you know, you've got an illness, you could live for another 40 years with it but why, that could be a burden on society, you know, why don't you just take this euthanasia pill here, you know. That's already happening, folks.

But no one cares, you see, life now, and folk have accepted it, ah, well, we're not, what are we anyway, we're just another, we're not even a good animal. We're taught to hate ourselves. There you go. So, this article goes on about it too. As I say, it's got links to the FDA, lots of pages to go through, etc. And this is fairly common, this kind of thing. Unfortunately.

Now, don't forget that Mr. Foxy Fauci said that things would never get back to normal, remember. And what did he know that you didn't know? And how come he's into making policy for society? and finance and travel and handshaking and all the rest of it? Strange, this little guy who just suddenly he's got more power than the president, it would seem, 'eh? If the president shut down everything by himself and ordered, he'd be out of the office and maybe even lynched!

But when Fauci says it, he's a scientist, you see, and he knows outside his jurisdiction, you know, commerce, he's got the whole place shut down and companies going bankrupt, and massive debts that you'll never get out from under, and the whole way of life changed forever, because he said so. And you didn't vote for him either. And you're all accepting it. [Alan chuckles.]

International travel won't be back to normal for three years warns top holiday boss - with enforced testing before and after flights likely to replace quarantine - dailymail.co.uk / 1 July 2020

So, there you go, it's all these wee things that you, yep, you need your immunity passport for goodness sakes, 'eh. And that's how they get it across to you. Because it's not going to be just that, it's going to be going from your house to the supermarket, 'eh. [Alan chuckles.] There you go. M-hm. There you go.

More Than 8,700 Stores Are Closing In 2020 So Far—A Number That Will Surely Rise

forbes.com / 6 July 2020

The list of store closings is already very long and may be much longer by the end of the year. The coronavirus pandemic has left many companies in horrible shape. (A: Well, no kidding. No kidding.) Some have had to declare bankruptcy (A: I wonder why, when you close them down, the whole economy, forbid them to go anywhere, why that makes them all go bankrupt?) while others have closed some of their units. Many employees have not been recalled to work as the pandemic has raged on, and there has been a paucity of customers since they are scared they might contract the virus.

Debt is now the common enemy. Every retailer who had high debt before all of this started is closing some stores and cutting back on new projects. At a time like this, ability to raise cash and to maintain a semblance of free cash flow is quite difficult even as it is invaluable and enviable for most retailers. Many have had to rely on more borrowing to sustain their business. It has left their future uncertain.

(A: No kidding.)

We are witnessing a retail apocalypse. It began in 2010 when brick-and-mortar stores started to close and has only gotten worse over time.

(A: Everything is a step-by-step isn't it though when you look at it all. I said that years ago too, obviously, when you can order things straight from China for a fraction of the price you'd buy in a store, that's got big overheads in the store and so on and employees to pay, then obviously it's going to hammer the economy at home, put more folk unemployed. That's the beauty of free trade, isn't it? Yeah. There ya go. That anybody who is working has to sacrifice their jobs for the greater good, 'eh. So, this goes through this article here about folk going bankrupt and all that. But it lists some of them, how they’ve already gone. It says… This is Forbes by the way. They'll update it as time goes on.)

Below is a listing of store closings so far this year, which I will update as more information becomes available. The companies currently in bankruptcy are listed first since their future is uncertain until they emerge from court protection.

Store closures in 2020

Chuck E Cheese: 54 U.S. stores (bankruptcy)

Destination Maternity: 90 stores (bankruptcy)

GNC: 1,200 stores (bankruptcy)

J. Crew: 54 stores (bankruptcy)

JCPenney JCP +1%: 152 stores (bankruptcy)

(A: There's a whole bunch of them.)

K-Mart: 45 stores (bankruptcy)

Modell's Sporting Goods: 153 stores (bankruptcy)

Neiman Marcus (Last Call): 20 stores + 4 main stores(bankruptcy)

New York & Co: 378 stores (bankruptcy)

Papyrus: 254 stores (bankruptcy)

Pier 1 Imports PIR 0.0%: 936 stores (bankruptcy)

(A: There's one in Sudbury too, I think, Pier 1 Imports.)

Sears: 51 stores (bankruptcy)

Stage Stores SSI -0.6%: 738 stores (liquidating)

(A: There's a whole stack of them here actually.)

But who would've thought, 'eh? Better than any other kind of war with real, you know, bombs dropping and things, they managed to shut down the entire economy, and bring you to a state that you might have reached if you had had 20 years physical war, like a normal regular war, 'eh. They've done it all very quickly. Very efficient, isn't it? Terror itself is awfully efficient, when you've got professionals managing the terror, and how to put it across to the public and how to terrify them, and how to exaggerate certain types of the terror too to make folk comply. All authorized by your own governments. This is not speculation; this is what I read to you earlier from the Sage reports and so on from governments.

And...

NYC Black Lives Matter marches can continue despite large-event ban, de Blasio says - foxnews.com / 10 July 2020

Again, some are more special than others in these utopias we're in today. And that's the way it is, isn't it? Yep. So, all the other big large events are canceled by law, by dictate I suppose, and there you go. This is the new system. Yeah well nothing surprises me, or you I suppose, 'eh?

Trump, Mexico president meet to discuss new U.S., Mexico, Canada trade deal

nbc4i.com / 8 July 2020

WASHINGTON D.C. (WCMH) — The USMCA trade deal (A: That's really the same NAFTA deal.) between the U.S., Mexico and Canada took effect on July 1, but White House officials and one expert say it’s not much different than the deal it replaced.

President Trump welcomed Mexico President Andrés Manuel López Obrador to the White House on Wednesday to celebrate the launch of the U.S., Mexico, Canada trade agreement.

Commerce Secretary Wilbur Ross, one of the USMCA’s architects, says the pandemic should not hurt the trade deal’s rollout.

But right now, the Mexican manufacturing sector is only working at about 50 percent because of the coronavirus.

(A: But yeah, they changed the name of it really. And for some reason I think Justin Trudeau couldn't go over something. It's quite something isn’t it? The world we're living in is something else. It really is.)

I was looking up too, again, that they're going to fulfill all their goals with who can open up, when they can open up, are you important enough to open up, are you necessary, essential, yada, yada, ya, or if you can't. And that's the end of society as we know it. That's what it was planned to do of course. And Fauci said that at the very beginning, he didn't even want the lockdown to end, remember, he wanted it right into the following year. And that's what you're getting. [Alan chuckles.]

You had a little wee bit of a break, a week or two for the summer, which would quell you a bit, as the riots, well, protests and riots could continue. Then lockdown comes again. Except for some groups that are still [Alan chuckles.] allowed to do it all. Everything else is shut and closed including big events. And I guess sporting events too in some areas, I don't know.

It's astonishing, as I say, what's been accomplished so efficiently, with years of planning to make this happen, obviously before the event happens. But in a few months, they've literally wrecked the economies of nations across the world. Exactly what the World Economic Forum said, we've got to bring the folk into complete sustainability. And sustainability means bringing in the complete austerity programs, by the way. Post, post everything, post-consumer, post-manufacture, post post post. [Alan chuckles.]

And folk can’t quite get it, can they? Why would they do that? It's their world. It's not yours, it's theirs, as far as they're concerned. And as long as you obey them, it will continue to be their world, obviously.

Now, I'm going to put up an article from Ron Paul, from his group anyway, and it's written by Caitlin Johnstone.

As Long As Mass Media Propaganda Exists, Democracy Is A Sham

ronpaulinstitute.org / 9 July 2020

A new Reuters/Ipsos poll has reportedly found that a majority of Americans believe the completely discredited narrative that the Russian government paid Taliban-linked fighters to kill the occupying forces of the US and its allies in Afghanistan.

(A: And they give you examples of the fake news, that's authorized, right, as fake news. [Alan chuckles.])

Those 21 percent are objectively correct: the story is not credible, and it’s not even close. Gareth Porter shows in The Grayzone how the “Bountygate” narrative is so utterly baseless that even US intelligence agencies have dismissed it...

And they have. But the article itself is showing you how the mass media today all works as one, it really does. They're like all one in the propaganda for Covid for instance, to be very afraid and be very terrified and yada, yada, ya. And it never stops. But there's no real dissent amongst most of the mainstream media, it's all pretty well on board with the whole thing, isn't it?

And the media all went along, that all the protesting that went on was all peaceful. And you can see for yourself, a lot of it wasn't, for goodness sake. I mean, here's an article here on Portland. Portland is interesting. I don't know why it happens more there, maybe there's more propaganda there coming from out of Portland there on its own woes, etc. But night after night they've had I think City Hall attacked, they're trying to burn it down or something, by all kinds of, and even fights with the police there. But it says…

Portland Demonstrators Engage in ‘Night of Rage’

(A: This is one night between, before it all started there too, they were already doing the same thing before this particular event happened.)

to Protest Death of BLM Protester

breitbart.com / 8 July 2020

Demonstrators in Portland engaged in what was dubbed a “night of rage” to avenge the death of a Black Lives Matter protester who died over the weekend after a man drove his vehicle on a closed freeway, (A: And you can actually see that, that little clip of where it happened.) where a protest was taking place.

“The Multnomah County Sheriff’s Office is aware of an event tonight calling for a ‘night of rage’ at the Justice Center in Downtown Portland.”

“We strongly support the right to demonstrate and for people to use their individual and collective voices to express grief, outrage, and call for action. But criminal activity under the guise of peaceful protests will not be tolerated,” the sheriff’s office warned.

200 people gathered in front of the federal courthouse for a sit-in.

The event coincided with the “night of rage” protest over the death of Summer Taylor, who died Saturday after being struck by a driver who drove his vehicle onto a closed freeway, where a protest was taking place.

This driver by the way was driving a pretty new expensive vehicle, anyway, it looked pretty well new. But regardless, he himself was Eritrean I think, that he was from, came over as a student and had stayed from 2014, or something like that, I can't remember. But goodness knows why he kept driving. Maybe he panicked when he saw them all on the road, who knows, it was at night, you see.

But why are they attacking the courthouse? Hm? But I think they attacked the courthouse, it was already happening before that happened, so it was on the go. I mean, Portland's been wrecked with massive rioting. When you start burning places down, that's not a protest, people, you know. That isn't a protest. A protest is something where you peacefully handout literature to people in the cars and things. You don't go up and jump on the cars and smash them. Again, that's what Peter Hitchens said, the ones today are not there for debate, it's their way or no way. And they want to take it out on somebody, and that's the truth of it.

But then you have an article here…

Portland Businesses Have Lost $23 Million Due to Violent Protests

breitbart.com / 9 July 2020

(A: Why are you calling them protests?! I mean, burning places down is not a protest, folks. That's not protesting. That's anarchy.)

Businesses in downtown Portland, Oregon, have lost $23 million since violent protests have wracked the city, authorities say.

Portland Police Bureau Deputy Chief Chris Davis told reporters that the intensity of the violence and length of the demonstrations have been unprecedented in the city’s history.

(A: It's a model city for the United Nations, 'eh, a goody-goody-goody city, and sustainable, and they've got more folk bicycling there than anywhere else and yada, yada, ya, you know.)

Protests have occurred for 41 consecutive nights following the death of George Floyd, a black man who died while a cop kneeled on his neck for eight minutes in Minneapolis, and the protesters are directing their efforts towards destroying federal property.

...you know, and it goes on and on and on. And the world is watching this. And yeah, what is the message to the world, 'eh? What is the message? The message is, something is going under, and what's going to replace it, you know? Well, I don't think you have to guess much how it's going to replace it… It's going to be a complete shambles. And folk who know how to destroy and burn places down, certainly don't know how to make things work. Once rage is gone, what's left?

What's left? Is that when the cries for help go out? Ah, help. It's astonishing what's happening. All coordinated across the world, mind you, not just one place. And this is what you call revolution. It's a revolution obviously coordinated too by the richest folk on the planet at the top, who will use one crowd against another as it suits them. That's how things work out. Sad isn't it, but true.

But that's the real system. It's beyond your control. You don't have much say in it at all. You only have a little bit of say in what maybe you can do for yourself, a little bit, not much in these times. Because it's been planned on a worldwide war type footing. This is a world war [Alan chuckles.] to bring in a global structure system. And for globalists who control the planet, they already own it all. They’re the richest folk in the world, their minions beneath them are not the ones that are rioting on the streets. They're handy at the moment for them, it suits the purpose. The ones that work for them all wear the very expensive suits and ties and live in luxurious homes and things. And they are not the bosses, they serve the bosses, the ones above them.

But at the moment as I say, a form of anarchy and communism suits the purpose to bring in globalism. Oh, we need a global structure to deal with epidemics and pandemics, and to share things equally across the world, you know, the redistribution of wealth. It's all your wealth, the little bit you've got, [Alan chuckles.] not for the ones at the top that already own it all. But the folk at the bottom never figure that out, most of them. Even the ones that are rioting. So, there ya go.

Terrible times really to be living, but at the same time for those who can see it, it's incredible wartime strategy. This is a war on everybody else, you see, to make you all comply to their system of what they call sustainability. Which is all to suit them. And over a period of 30-40 years, well most of us will die off, you see. As I said before, the ones who are doing the rioting at the moment and so on and who are angry about everything, and angry about the planet and yada, yada, and the environment, they won't have children and they'll die off in their turn as well. So, they're all useful at the moment. And that's how it's run.

All you can do is try to keep some decent friends around you, at least be in contact with them. To help each other, come what may. That's what you have to pledge too. Because they have nothing else, government is not going to help you in the next phase of it all. And government obviously is complicit in making all this, ALL of this happen, and allowing it all to happen. Of course, it is.

Including the whole Covid lockdown, depending on who you are, to get out of your home eventually you'll have to get some group that can go out and protest so that it will be allowed, you know. And you can get, maybe if you're protesting down streets you can get into a store and get some groceries, you know. Otherwise you might not be allowed out without an immunity passport. I said that years ago, eventually you'll have to belong to some special elevated minority group, whatever is the trendy ones at the moment, or you won't have any rights at all. And that's exactly what has happened, you see.

So, take care of yourselves. Stay with each other. Get in contact with each other. And vow to help each other out. Even if you've had little arguments in the past, don't let that stand in your way, you'll need people as we go through all of this, obviously. Because it's not finished, this is just the start of it.

And you will go off the cradle as they say, [Alan chuckles.] your rocker, you will go off your rocker if you don't, if you are unable to communicate with people. At least for most people that's the case. So, it's wise to have a few acquaintances that you can keep in touch with. Even if it's just emailing them to keep in touch with what's happening and having correspondence back and forth. It keeps you sane, right.

For myself Alan Watt from Ontario Canada, remember send a few bucks my way, [Alan chuckles.] it's good night and may your God or gods go with you.

[emphasis added to articles with underscore and bold]

Hi folks, I'm Alan Watt and this is Cutting Through the Matrix on July 19, 2020. And what a ride we're on, 'eh? It's a real roller coaster. I hope you're all hanging in, and not hanging yourselves, but hanging in there. Because folk are getting awfully depressed. And it's going to get a lot worse too, as we are cajoled and threatened into this new, this new system, a system planned long before the Covid idea broke out and was implemented. We have lots and lots of evidence naturally that it was in the planning for many years to bring us to this particular point. We always think that we are somehow part of societal evolution. And that's a crazy idea that you're part of it because most folk are not part of it, you exist within it but you really don't, you have no say in how it's implemented, or even what kind of future you would have.

Most folk, it's true enough the bulk of the population go along to get along. It's a quite natural thing to do. But you keep forgetting amongst the people that you coexist with, there are those who often form little bands and clubs, sometimes big bands and clubs, through education, through business and through their big hobbies of ruling the world, it's a big hobby for a lot of people, and how to get more and more power over the public. And when you merge that with academia and all of the so-called social sciences and psychology as well, behaviorism, etc., and eugenics, which it all ties in, anything to do with humanity they bring in eugenics naturally. It's awfully important to those that rule the world, and what kind of world that they have planned for the future, when most of us will all die off through sterility or simply not having children, at least not live births and so on. We just will pass away. And they'll bring in their new system of course, the scientific type of technocracy for a particular period of time.

And we keep, folk can't grasp that. They always think short-term, that if you bring this in, it will last, and it will be forever. No, it won't be. Whatever they're bringing in is going to be temporary as well. It will have a fixed lifespan of efficacy to suit the bosses, until they go onto the next stage. And that's how they work this out. This is not my idea of it. It's a summary really of all the books I've read that they put out themselves at the top. And they've been putting out these books for an awful long time.

You can take the basic one's going back to the Rosicrucian's as an example, and even long before them in fact, of the idea written in allegorical form, of altering humanity and making, you know, gold out of lead. Meaning basically getting the base product which is generally humanity and sharpening them and refining them into a more pure human being, this is how they say it.

The reason it's a degreed system is that it's not meant for everyone. Even those that join it at the bottom level or the blue Lodge in masonry for example, most folk think it's a self-help club and comradery for men. Partly that's true. But at the same time as you go up the ladder and really go up and up and up you find out it's very, it's not egalitarian at all, it's very selective on those who get to the top.

Even then if they're good enough they go on to much higher degrees above that because then you're put into places of power. Especially if you've been really, at the very least, chosen when you were even a teenager or even before that. Some of them I think, really personally I really believe are bred this way by very careful breeding and selection of partners or whatever. Or even just sperm and ovum. This is an old thing they've been doing for a long time. And the keep harping on about it, that they can create perfect humans, if you just allow them to take over the world and allow them to design the perfect humans. They'll take out the bad genes, as they call it, and put more advanced type genes in for intellect and physical health, all that kind of stuff.

All they have to do is get the compliance of the general public, you see. That's been an awful nuisance, that, for them for an awful long time, this compliance. It's rightfully theirs, you see, that's how they say it for themselves. They are the ones who run the world and after all they have all, they have members who run the economies of the world, the financing of the world, the conology of money, the wizards of cash you might say.

So yeah, they have them all on top. And they have academia there too with all their sciences and long-winded degrees, etc. on how to manipulate, manage and control the general public. How to use way beyond public relations techniques that Bernays talked about in Propaganda, his book, way back a long time ago. When he was boasting about how they got America into World War I, he was put in charge of a massive team and had big financing to convince the public to just back Wilson go off to war. And after the war he boasted about it. They have great egos, these psychopaths, they like to tell you how they fooled you. But he did mention about the subconscious, taking it from Freud naturally.

You've got to understand that there's a group from Freud, even before Freud, a group really who understood where they were going with the world and how they had a mission, you see. And the mission would be partly to destroy religion. That was a big part actually, replace it with science, especially science of the mind, until you would allow them to create a new culture, a new behavior, a new normal behaviors for the general public. Which is still going on today. Big time in fact.

Most folk today have no idea that their parents and their grandparents before them were all victims of this big long agenda that went through the whole 20th century, altering culture, belief and opinions and everything else. All to suit the ones at the top. And now you're in for the big push, where you're being trained that, really, you're not worth much at all. I mean, you're just another little insignificant drop of water in the big pool, so accept your place and your diminished ability to conceive of what, to actually appreciate what you are, and accept the fact you're a lowly nothing. That's what you're getting taught today big time with this mass psychology that's going on, and, we're all in it together wartime attitude that they use, all these slogans they use for wartime.

And it rubs out the fact that there's individuals. You're all individuals, if you stop and think about it. And you've got to stop being part of this giant herd. Once you're into a herd you obviously have herd management. It's harder to say we have an expert to manage you, the individual. You see, that's a lot of work for them then, and they've got to get compliance tests put out and agreements and so on. They won't get it that way. But when you label everything as the country or the mass, it's much much easier then to put out the experts who then simply dictate down to you like Dr. Fauci and others like him or members of his ilk.

So that's how it really works. That's how it really works. It's very simple really. And it's not new. It's been understood for an awful long time how to do this. And there's never been a time where even with the countless countless daily and weekly and monthly and yearly surveys in psychology and behaviorism of all the different tests they ran through university students and volunteers and society in general, etc. etc., on how to get folk to comply and conform and so on with demands put upon them. Right down to even to convincing you why you're not voting at all, to then who you should actually be voting for. It's all done to you and using incredible sciences so that you'll come to what you think is your own opinion on things and you go along with it. In fact, you’ll argue with folk when they'll tell you, look, this statement didn't come from your own mind, it's projected into you with bits and bytes of information, repetition.

And literally, if you understand the magic, this is the key to things [Alan chuckles.] that they knew way before the French Revolution, and with Kabbalah and the Rosicrucian ideas, and the Rosicrucian manifesto as well, that most folk literally are what they are made by those who rule them, in a true slave society, you would say, by those who own you, you see. And the trick in all the societies is to convince the public that they're free. And if you're really good at it they'll believe it.

And so, it will be absurd when you say, do you realize that you're getting treated like slaves here? And big corporations have made plans to inject you with all kinds of things? Not just this Covid thing. And it's been in the works, in the planning for many many years? They won't believe you. They can't believe that anyone would go to that length to fool you, which is precisely why it works. It's your own disbelief, you see. But that's how it's done. That really is how it's done.

Those who run the world see us as literally as I've said before, like a huge herd of cattle. And it was rather obvious to me even reading the writings by many of them at the time, but it was very obvious to me that even in the 1970s, you have this wallow, it's like a wallowing of nothingness. It's very hard thing to put in words but it's where the economies especially in Europe and Britain and places fell stagnant. And they were stagnant. But there was also a stagnancy of purpose in society and within individuals, almost a hopelessness in fact.

It was during that era that Margaret Thatcher came out and she said that there's a generation growing up now who will never see work, like full-time employment, in their lifetime, get used to it. And the theory that they had at the time, and it's probably still the same, under the general capitalistic theory was that, and Thatcher talked about it in this fashion. She said, we need a goodly amount of people unemployed because that keeps the wages down, you see. Because folk are desperate to get work, you can offer them less money. If you got full employment, then the employer has to literally buckle under and give more and more money to get folk to come and work for them, when they got so much choice, you see. A very simple concept.

During that time, that 1970s era in Britain, during that period of nothingness, this, where are we going, where am I going, everybody said the same thing, where am I going. It wasn't just that. Of course, they were getting drugged then too. And they altered all their laws having to do with pubs. The pubs in Britain had opening times in the morning, I think it was 10:30 to I don't know if it was 2 o'clock or something and then they closed. Then they opened again at maybe 5:30 or 6 to maybe 10:30 at night, or I think it was closing time, and then you're out by 11 PM.

But when Thatcher was in, they decided to open the pubs all day long pretty well, maybe, I think it closed for a few hours at night or something. She said it quite openly, quite honestly, and that's the one thing you could admire about Thatcher, she just said, she gave you the reasons and didn't just simply lie. She said, it's better to have the youngsters with their unemployment money drinking all day in the pubs, and then sleeping, you see, every day, rather than going out on the streets and marching and demonstrating or causing riots. That was as simple, she said it the way it was. So, they open the pubs all the time for quite a long time.

But there was still a feeling of... I think lack of purpose, it was, it was like a depression in the air. I actually think of these financial depressions which Britain was always prone to because it was, you know, an Empire. And the people at home were paying for all the wars and all the debt for all the wars, and the debt for all the, they were still throwing money across the world in these little countries they supposedly ruled. But it was a select few that benefited from it all, all those years. And that is a fact. That is the truth. And Britain had a big army because they kept employment at a good level, and you could always go into the Army and get some respect. You get no respect anywhere else if you're unemployed. So yeah, Britain had, Britain still is throwing out money from the taxpayers in Britain to support a lot of the little places that used to be parts of the British Empire.

So, everybody's broke. Including Britain, at least the folk in Britain. And it's going to get a lot broker with all the riots going on too. Because it's to be taken down into the dust pretty well, in the dustbin of history. That's the old Frankfurt school idea of it, destroy everything, the culture, the whole lot, right down to its foundations, that which it stands upon. Right down to utter crisis and depression, like financial, etc.

And with the Covid they'll certainly get it. And all the riots they've had too. I say that as opposed to just demonstrations. We know there's communist riots going on well-funded from outside, and the leaders are certainly well-paid for their work in all this. But again, this didn't come from those demonstrating. Demonstrators, and those who riot, they can't think beyond what they're going to loot or what they're going to burn down that day. That's what rioting is about. But those who at the very top who plan it and organize it, know exactly where it's supposed to go. And it won't be too long, maybe a year's time, you'll see all the ones who were rioting and arguing literally turning on each other just to get a scrap of food. That's where it will eventually go. If the agenda goes the way it's supposed to go. That's the way it's been planned. Of course, the leaders in all these things won't suffer at all. They'll be well taken care of and looked after. And maybe even flown out of the countries to safe havens for themselves and so on. That's how things really, really work.

You're living through a perpetual war scenario and this is the present phase of it. It didn't take countries by surprise. You'll hear certain people's names, now it's almost forbidden to speak their names now because your social media is completely part and on board with it, this whole agenda of a complete world revolution, bringing in a new Technetronic and technological type society and technocracy to rule it all. They're completely all part of it naturally for those at the top. And they want a regulated obedient society where you'll simply comply.

The beauty of it is too, through all their tests and their constant incredible studies that are so well done, with the Internet and all electronic communication, daily they add to it with enormous amounts of, you know, thousands of gigabytes daily just on information. They don't care so much about the topics, but they're interested in how you think about things, how you're feeling about things. Or certain prompts to vote for this, or not to vote at all, or to riot, or whatever. To see if you're falling in line with what they want. It's quite an amazing time for experiments. And they've got a completely free hand today. But if you mention those who are financing it, you'll be completely struck off and you'll lose all access to social media. Because you're not living in any kind of fair real society. You're living under a tyranny.

This is the tyranny that Bertrand Russell talked about, he did The Impact of Science on Society and a few other books too. One was awfully good about education, how they would train the children from birth into what to believe. He was talking about future revolutionaries of all kinds actually. Which we watched happening. But he also said that they can make the children, if you get them young enough, and you keep them in a closed group... It's so interesting to watch this happening. With electronics you see, and with the social media, and with school, combined, you can literally bring out everything that Russell hoped would happen. Because he said, if you can really get children and you can separate them from the rest of the world, if possible, then they have a peer group, but you control the peer group, he said, that you can make them believe whatever you want them to believe.

And even if you want to give them enemies, like adults or whatever, because they were doing that in his day too through communism, don't trust anybody over 30, and even under that age. They've done it again using social media now, more efficiently than he talked about. Because literally with flash mobs and everything, with the indoctrination and the websites, the big ones put out there for them, catering to them, to help them to agitate and feel unruly about things, or get unruly, and to be discontented.

And they're completely literally almost isolated, even though they're all going through the same school curriculums from a very young age. They are cut off from even their parents. Their parents have no idea what they're learning. Or maybe they don't even care what they're learning. But they certainly don't participate in, they've been literally weaned off of taking care of your children. They let the state do it, exactly what Bertrand Russell said. And it's been so effective.

Look at it today, you know. You've got youngsters that are ready to kill people, ala Marx, you see, and Trotsky. Because they believe, oh my God, you've destroyed the planet and we might all die in a few months' time or a few years' time, because of you. All bogus. But they don't know that. And once you're radicalized to that extent, and this is what the communists know, if you read their own writings, if you win by using those children, you have to eliminate them because now they're contaminated because you can't then bring in a society, the next phase of the society by using the folk that destroyed the old society. You can't bring them into the next phase because they won't be content with what they're seeing happening then in the new phase. They're not getting their utopias fulfilled, you see. Personal happiness, that's it, they actually think they're going to be given like a personal happy pill or something. So, it's quite fascinating to see it all coming into being.

But yeah, Russell said that, we'll bring in a system, he didn't say social credit system in so many words, but he referred to it in similar words. He said eventually you'll have everyone on some kind of credit system. And don't forget too I mentioned it before where he mentioned the Technocracy Inc. Technocracy Inc., they came out in the 1930s, where they would, the gray, they were called 'the gray men' by the way those who don't know it. [Alan chuckles.] Just like the movies and stuff, and the gray men, they move between systems, and they moved between countries during the Cold War, the gray men, the grey suits and so on. Well, they had a uniform and it was gray suits. And not quite, in between the platform you might say, like masonry, and the tessellated floor, black-and-white, and what's in between it is called gray, you see. Nothing is a color, everything's gray. And black is not a color, neither is white technically, you see.

So, there are the gray men and they used to come out and they were going to be a replacement for the systems which we can refer to as republicanism in the States, or democracy in other countries. Which again was a joke because it was never Democratic, and it still isn't of course. But even the communists used that term as well, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republic, you see, Democratic Republic, you see.

But the fact is, Russell talked about them. And there's no doubt he knew them from the 1930s on.

They didn't die off and go away. They were kicked out of countries like Canada. And I think Musk's grandfather was one of them, or maybe his, maybe even, yeah, his grandfather [Joshua Haldeman] or father, one of the two, for being subversive, they were classified as literally subversives along with communism, you see.

The communists like some aspects of it too because they both had so much in common, a future that would not be Democratic, a future where the specialists and those in academia and professors and so on would rule your lives. Again, psychologists and not just social workers at the lower level but psychologists and then behaviorists and so on, and then the biosciences where they come in and literally make new humans. That's the whole idea in the 1930s of Brave New World, you see. And folk would just lap them on thinking, oh that will never happen. Look at it today. [Alan chuckles.] You know, people can hire, they can hire, there are guys, like two guys, quite common now, hire a woman and have the sperm inserted in one way or another, and again, they can literally have the male sperm spliced between the two men, so they're both fathers to the same child and things like that. This is all normal today; it's quite routine, you see.

But things they talked about in the 1930s, they went through it all, where it would all go to. They even had terms for wellness in Brave New World, you would have your span and so on. They brought all that in. And Bertrand Russell also said, you know, that he said and I've mentioned this so many times, that if it's going to be a tyranny, and he thought it would eventually become a tyranny, it didn't matter who it was that was running whatever system, he said he much prefer it would be a scientific tyranny. That's what he was for, he advocated that.

But he also talked about the system where you wouldn't be able to complain about anything eventually. He said it too, that techniques of conditioning the general public would be so perfect and perfected, that people, meaning sheep, like sheep would be people, you see, sheeple, he said that it would be as impossible for sheep to complain about the price of mutton, as it would for the people themselves to try and change or complain about the system under which they lived.

That's where we are today with the perfected sciences. It's just too easy in real time, as things are happening and all the social chitchat across the world, this massive chatter, being analyzed instantaneously with billions of algorithms and so on, and categorized, and before an hour or two has passed everything's put in its own boxes and slots and so on, and countless universities across the world are taking samples and studies and yada, yada, ya to see what works best, etc.

It's just incredible what's happening. We have no freedoms at all right now, unless you throw out all the electronics. And even then, you have to really survive in a society where everyone around you is completely hooked into this matrix, you see. And you’ll never get through to them.

But Russell also said, eventually, and here you're down to the social credit system, and the universal basic income. He said, everyone will be given credits for like a salary not for working, for those who work and those who don't, you all get credits. They'll simply appear into your bank or your credit bank account every week or every month, depending on what they decide.

Again, you've got to understand everything you’ve heard of like communism and capitalism, technocracy, the scientific means of controlling societies, all of this, all come together in our present system, which they knew would happen and as I say, they wrote books about it.

But Russell said that everyone will be given so many credits per week or per month, that you wouldn't, there would be no tangible cash as such. Now because you are on to electronic and digital cash. But he said that you wouldn't be able to save it up, it will appear the same day of the month every month or every week and if you haven't used it up by the end of the week it would start off at the same amount again for the following week. You couldn't save it up. And that way you would keep an equality of poverty amongst the general public. And that would stop so much, again, in their mind, complaining or aggression between peoples when they're all getting the same basic... Very communistic in a sense. But don't forget he was talking about the proper folk running your world. People like, you know, like himself, you know, folks like him.

Again, it's so amazing. I remember reading years later in the United Nations on the idea of self-policing, that's what they call it. By using psychologists and behaviorists, and who are all financed by our tax money, just incredible, like billions every year across the world that get thrown out to these parasites. They find ways to manipulate all of us on behalf of the Masters. But he said that what eventually the United Nations would be doing, and the United Nations then comes out with the same thing, yeah, self-policing is the way to go.

They're training people in a Pavlovian sense, you see. First instill the ideas when they're very young, so much so that they’ll never really break free. Very few can break free from the initial indoctrination. That's very, very true. He said, self-policing, they could change normality's, you see. He didn't use normality’s; I've used that before and that took off. But the fact is, all the social norms, new norms, you see, the new ideas, the new systems they would bring in, of the present reality, would be introduced to the general public. And then another present reality. The people would adapt and adapt and adapt into it. If you didn't adapt and you were angry, or you weren't convinced it was the right way to go for you or society, you'd be punished.

Now, think about this, what's happening with folk getting cut off the net? But he said, you're going to be punished and your credits won't go into your account by the state, or someone appointed by the state, it would be some big banking conglomerates I'm sure. He said that you wouldn't be able to pay your rent or even buy food then, you see. You'd be punished that way. So, totalitarianism, it has its ways to make things more efficient, that's really what he was getting at. When there's nobody to complain to you have to comply or you're down on your knees or you starve to death or you freeze outside, etc. And that's all, and they'll tell you, well it's not our fault, sir, we give you options, you know, if you just went along like everybody else. And that's what they always say in democracies, isn't it, if you go along with everybody else, well, these folks are all accepting these new rules, what's wrong with you? And so that's how they always force everybody into the same system. Or they punish you by using everybody else, as they say.

Whenever you see something as being temporary or voluntary to start with, that's what they mean by that, once they have a magic number, they say, well you know, it's just too efficient to allow the stragglers behind to have a separate system when they're using cash or whatever it happens to be, so therefore we're going making it mandatory now. That's how it all… The same with the vaccinations by the way. That's why it's put out in exactly the same way that they put it out for driving licenses, which were not mandatory at one time, or insurance for cars, which were not mandatory at one time, etc. etc. [Alan chuckles.] It's quite something, isn't it?

Always done, Plato said, he says, if you understand the techniques that have been used in the past to get specific objectives accomplished, if you understand the formula that introduced them, and it's like a step one, they're in a certain order, you see, if you understand, do this first and then that next and then that next, then the people will comply and then the same behavior would be expected to show itself. It's very true. It doesn't matter about how advanced you think you are; the same behavior manifests itself. If you terrorize the public, a good chunk of the public, if they're getting daily terror will turn on the other ones, then you can use them to force the other ones into compliance. You see? That's how it works.

And so, yeah, so there's Russell’s idea of a credit system given to the public, tokens of some kind, credits, call them what you want. And he came out with that by the 1950s. Don't forget too he was also way up in eugenics. And that's all these characters, really believe in eugenics and the evolution of man. Now, if you're a nobody, they wouldn't include you under the headline of man, you understand. There's all these hidden little caveats they have in normal language you just don't understand. Again, you can go into even the Rosicrucian ideas and free Masonic ideas and capitalistic ideas of what man is. Then you go off into different tangents, different paths, etc. And if you really followed it all you'd come to the same conclusions in them all. It's set out that way. Certain people are really human, and some are not. That's what they believe.

They used to always, used to say at one time, there are ones who have spirit, and those who have no spirit. That goes way back even to the writings of Paul in the Bible where he referred to those who couldn't comprehend at all what you're talking about, about decency in human beings and helping one another. He said, these are people of instinct or creatures of instinct, and you wouldn't get through to them, you see.

There's some kind of truth in that as well. The people who are brute instinct are the ones that they do use for extermination camps. We saw that in the communist Gulags. They had an incredible cruelty for 70 years. That's nowhere near the play that it gets from Nazism, and from a five-year stint basically, or even eight-year stint if you tally in before into the 30s. But no, you've got 70 years of horror and slaughter in the Soviet bloc countries.

I keep every so often looking back at the people who survived the Gulags of Bulgaria and the massive camps that were set up. And who were gathering every year after the 90s, the horror stories these poor folk were telling. And you could tell, their lives would never be the same obviously. And the huge graves, mass graves that were dug up, never mind all the folk that were burned and even just dumped in the waters and so on to decompose. Just horrible stories of utter brutality.

Well these, the people who ran these camps were creatures of instinct. These are the people who are very base. And if you are under them too, you would have to think into realms you couldn't think before, or they'd simply… Would calling him a psychopath, would that even come close, would that satisfy you as a label to describe these people? Would you go even further because they are creatures of instinct, you might just say they're completely possessed creatures, demonic? Because animals wouldn't treat other animals that way. So, you have to really question what these creatures are. Every country has them. And in every age, they have them too. They've got their dirty squads that deal with dirty business.

When you give a negative power especially when there's no oversight to it, there's no real caring about very detailed paperwork, horrible things happen. Every day. And it gets worse and worse and worse. It isn't enough for these characters just to kill people. They literally feed off them in a sense, off their anxiety, their fear, their terror and their horror. They'd beat up them and that's why they prolong their lives in such horrible conditions of torture until they kill them, and brutally.

I keep telling folk, you can't dismiss this. Again, back to Plato, if you understand the formula to get the public to behave in a certain way, or other segments of the public to behave in a certain way, you can introduce it in the same, with the proper sequence again and the folk will respond exactly the same way to it. In any era. It hasn't changed.

We're seeing things happening today with this whole horror and terror put out from the top of Covid, which is of course a cover for a whole bunch of, is a whole new world order. That's what it's for. For the World Economic Forum using all of the different arms and institutions all connected with them. Never mind the big Pharma industries that literally at the top of the tree, and the ones who are promoting it at the top to the general public on television have massive shares in the Pharma industries for goodness sake, they're going to profit off this. This is in your face.

But what you're seeing with the incredible terror they're causing amongst the public, very deliberate installation of abject terror, they know exactly, because I've read a lot of their studies already, they knew who would be more prone to become terrorized quicker than others. It was women to start with, broken down into different age groups as well. In some of the other studies they said they'd even use these women to terrorize the rest by, when you see someone who's in a store, who suddenly freaks out behind a counter or something, because you either don't have a mask on right or you're not standing in the footprints that were painted on the floor [Alan laughing.], and you're all going along with this too. [Alan laughing.] And they freak out, you're seeing incredible aggression from them.

They've done studies on the different signs that these people will show to the customers, from the hand out, like stop, like a policeman on traffic, to a waving of the hands frantically, which is, it's very much like what you would see the apes do [Alan laughing.] in the jungle, if you look a Jane Goodall’s video, old video on them too where they run up to you and they start waving their hands around as a warning. Well, that's how people behave too. People who are really terrified will behave that way.

And they can flip in any direction at all. And it's meant then, it becomes contagious. Because if the person who's now being threatened, as a customer, you see, and then the customer gets anxious and goes into an anxiety state, and then the arguments can start and all the rest of it because of it. They've already had people shot by the way; Ontario is one of the stories I'll touch on tonight. Ontario, Canada. And it's such an amazing piece of propaganda, a disgusting propaganda the way the stories are written about this old guy in his 70s killed by police. It all started because he wasn't wearing a mask in a grocery store. So now you have folk getting killed, an outcome of whatever happened in a grocery store.

Ontario Police Kill 73-Year-Old Man After He Refused To Comply With Local Mask Mandate

zerohedge.com / 17 July 2020

The cops followed him back to his home, next thing you know he's dead. And all the papers could say is, and this is your standard PR thing, well he was a loner, you know, he didn't mix much with people. Like so that’s a crime now is it? You kill folk for that? Is that the idea? You understand, you see, they have nothing else they can say about this guy. They don't want to touch on whatever happened inside the grocery store where it all started. But when someone starts screaming at you and freaking out, this old guy might not have been out for months, this is maybe the first time he's seen a reaction to it, who knows? You just don't know.

But no, it's good enough that he didn't mix much with people. He was, he kept himself to himself. That’s a crime now, you see, keeping yourself to yourself. So, let's kill the folk, you know. Standard stuff. Anyway, this is how it's going now with... And psychologists are making a heyday as they throw out grant after grant as they study us all, little animals that we are, you see, and how we are reacting to this and that and all the rest of it. And how to get around us, to make us all comply.

Remember I read the article too from the Sage group in Britain and elsewhere, I mean, the Sage group has got the BIT [behavior insights teams] units and all kinds of them working with them across the whole planet. Every country is involved together here. And they actually said on the recommendations to the media, and I put that out a few times, it's in cuttingthroughthematrix.com, my own websites, so go in there, look at my previous talks on it. They actually advised the newspapers and journalists to increase pressure because they decided they wanted to increase the anxiety amongst the public to help promote conformity.

Sage publishes evidence behind advice on lockdown following calls for more transparency - itv.com / 5 May 2020

So, in other words, terrorize the public to get them to conform. And the media is going along with it. This is in the open. Huh? [Alan chuckles.] And it's all media, and the TV is the biggest one of all of course. Folk are sitting watching, tuning in every day to what they think now is their new lifeline to saving themselves. They're tuning in every day for their daily dose of horror and fear. You'll never get through to those people. You just won't. You can't do it. You can't do it. Np.

You see, this whole system is to try to stop you from even thinking for yourself altogether. And so, like that old fella, you know, who got killed there. He obviously was, he wasn't watching TV. I mean, for goodness sake, you know, he would've been complying and compliant and obedient, and yada ya, he wouldn't have been a loner, oh no. He wouldn't like his privacy, oh, what a crime, 'eh? Yep, what a crime, let's kill him. And we'll never get the whole story of it, who freaked out first in the store where it all started. Never mind why on earth were the cops following him home?

So, that's what happens in this new system, you see. It could be you. It could be you. It's quite amazing. There's even articles from Ontario, never mind just the Covid thing itself but some of the kind of Antifa groups in Canada turned on one of the reporters. And you probably know it was Rebel Media, like hate them or love them or whatever, regardless the fact is the guy did get pushed around. He went down to one of their meetings when it was possible, maybe he went down, I have no idea if he went down, because they were thinking about either throwing eggs at the next Prime Minister of Canada, one of the founders really of the Confederation, or maybe knocking the statue down, who knows what they were really there for. But the fact is, he did say, because there'd be a lawsuit against the ones who were attacking them, physically anyway, in a public place. It turned out that the leaders of the groups had asked the police, in advance, not to even attend that protest as they called it you know, at the park. And the police were complying. Well, we're… this is a sad time, a sad time to be alive, isn't it?

Because your own government, Canada you see, you remember, is more communistic than other countries. Ahead of them. And I think that's the whole reason for all this happening. And they can just tell you that I guess the police are all part of it too, if they're going to comply with the ones who are out to destroy the past. No matter what you think of the past, it's still public property. [Alan chuckles.] And they're complying with the ones that are going to do it. This is bad news, folks, really bad news, isn't it?

And as I say, I don't really follow most of the stuff in Canada because it's, everything's so predictable here, it's very socialistic to say the least. Its progressive socialism is just a form of communism, of altering and destroying the past and the culture and everything else to bring in the new.

It's the same system again, which the elite want us all to follow. Because everything that's happening across the world right now is with, it's not just the compliance of the elite at the top, because believe you me if they didn't want this it would never happen, all the riots and so on, it would have been dealt with very quickly. In fact, you would never even, they would have headed them off in the pass before they got to moving.

But this is what they want, this is the global reset. It’s a new way of living. It's like Bertrand Russell's idea of a credit system and dishing out credits to you, and tokens for money, electronic, and you have to comply or else you won't get your tokens every month, to whatever is demanded of you. It's all social control. It's all here, folks. Universal basic income is all part of it too.

They knew this before they brought in the whole idea of completely universal free trade, by giving it all to China pretty well and the Far East. It wasn't just... Don't forget, it was your governments that allowed all this to happen. They all signed onto it, for China to be the manufacturer for the whole planet pretty well. Which they knew at the very beginning of their free trade we'd all be unemployed in the West, a good chunk of us anyway.

And definitely the folk who work in factories, and no matter what you think of them, folk had some pride in themselves because they did bring in their own income, and a lot of the work that they worked at too, they made real things which gave a form of satisfaction too. Today we've got a miserable bunch of folk who literally, they don't, again, there's that feeling of the 1970s of Britain where it was a feeling of lethargy in the air, and literally, literally a depression. It wasn't just a financial depression, I used to wonder why they called it just depression. It's more meanings than one.

Of course, there's a psychological depression that goes along with it. That's what you have today, when folk literally, literally don't know what they are here for. And it's much easier for them, those at the top who say, well yeah, we’re wondering why you're here as well and why you’re existing as well, you know, and why don't y'all become sterilized and die off, ala HG Wells, 'eh, in his Modern Utopia.

So yeah, I mean, why don't you do that? You know, with the Fabian Society's idea, just get sterilized, then we give you extra credits for it, and you can have as much sex as you want and there will be no fallout from it. There will be a few diseases and things, but they can treat you for that, for most of it, not all of it, and it doesn't always work. But yeah, you can be quite happy, and you get a universal basic income and you'll die off and in maybe 40 years’ time, you see.

A whole chunk of society will be gone they didn't procreate, and the elite will get their vastly reduced population. Yep. And during that 40 years remember they'll do more advances, more advances in genetic engineering and manipulation, and they will bring in a brave new world scenario for their own, you see. At the very least they'll have a slave population they'll keep, they'll make or produce them, create them, and they won't complain much at all. Just like Brave New World.

Don't forget these books that were put out, you know, way back in the 1930s and before a lot of them, were put out because this is what was discussed at the height of Empire. These are the things discussed by those who were maybe the fifth, sixth, seventh generation of nobility, you know, across Europe. They were quite open about the societies they would like to bring in. And academia as always, priesthoods are always happy to accommodate the wishes of the Masters. Because it's the masters that could make you a higher priest then you are at the moment. Meaning, scientist, right. And give you more respect, more responsibility, more income, more power.

It's sad that's how humanity really works, isn't it, it's to do with this power thing. And folk of all calibers, and it's so sad too, men and women, it doesn't matter. Women are the same. You see them, more and more of them getting in trouble, that seeking for power and making a mess of it, or falling into the same traps as the men and scamming the books and so on when they're in charge of the public purse and things like that. Yep. Materialism does that, doesn't it? Because that's all you worship eventually is materialism.

And all the celebrities as they call them, are awfully rich. You never see a celebrity that's got an income of maybe 40 grand a year, do you? It wouldn't be a celebrity. You wouldn't follow them, would you? People only drool when they see that, the lights flickering and the cameras going off at these celeb shows, because now they've got fame and fortune, you see. And in a materialistic world that's what folk worship. Sad but true.

Mind you the other way is just as bad because then you can go into a system where you pretend it's all altruistic and you'll work for a peanut wage and do really important work and get very little back from it at all. But you'll get all this, oh you've been such a nice person, you're a good person doing what you do for society. You can always… You'll always get used by the same psychopaths; I don't care what kind of system they bring in.

It's astonishing, isn't it? And here they are trying to bring in at the bottom level, the ones who are following them really believe this communism, 'eh, Marxism.   After all the horrors, as I say, 70 years of mass slaughter in Gulag's and executions and mass graves. And expansion naturally because it was in… but non-expansionist… or colonial, yeah, they were moving their powers in all different countries in the world and getting the public to work for peanuts.

And yet everyone who defected including Bezmenov and many others before him, they all started off their talks to the West by saying that they didn't, they never left for financial reasons. They never left the Soviet system for financial reasons. Because those who got into the KGB for instance were the offspring of KGB, and before that the NKVD and so on and the Cheka, just generations of them. They always got their own children into them. And they lived really high on the hog, like any top civil servant in any other country, that's what they said, you know. So, there was nothing that they lacked on the physical means for wealth and comfort and so on so it wasn't, they didn't leave for that, they could, they had it all, and on their level in the communist countries.

Where the folk literally had to line up and wait sometimes 10 years to get a phone installed, if they could afford to get one and get it permitted. Kind of like Britain. But yeah, it's quite fantastic to see how it really works. And here they're trying to bring it in again, so's that maybe a few hundred families can live at the very top of utter luxury with their holiday homes in the countryside and servants taking care of them and all that. Hm? Real utopia. Yep. And everyone else is scraping by and lining up at times too outside the main big cities, lining up to get food. They used to show you that all the time in the West when there was any kind of shortage. So, they're trying to bring that in.

Now, since the elite at the top who run the World Economic Forum, right, I'll just repeat that for the hard of thinking. The World Economic Forum, they decide, along with the Bank for International settlements, they send their members there too, and the World Bank and the IMF and all the different groups, that are one big club, all private, all set up by private institutions like the ones who set up the United Nations, all from basically the League of Nations into the United Nations, with all these different private bank groups to run the world, set up by Lord Alfred Milner and eventually morphed into the Royal Institute for International Affairs. Running the world, and they're all for this idea of using the youth, as I say, the disaffected youth at the moment. They've had their mandatory indoctrination through school and college to protest and demand that everything's, all of civilization stop and we go back and do some kind of Eden type of simplicity, etc. etc., to save the world and the planet and all that because they've been brainwashed into it. And who will benefit from it all? Well, it won't be them. It will be, it's the ones at the top, the World Economic Forum.

The global reset, the great reset, it's a whole new way of living, using a socialist Soviet type system to rule the public because then just like Justin Trudeau said, he admires China even with the Covid idea, because China doesn't have to bother having to get the public to agree on things and debate things and have their approval. China just tells them what they're going to do, and they do it. It's as simple as that, you obey them or else. And he really likes that system.

And to go along with what's happening you have to truly, truly be a doormat, at the very least, to what's happening. When you don't have rights as an individual, you're living in hell. Because that's what they had, as I say, in places like Bulgaria under the communist Soviet regime. You were seen as a mass of people, dissidents, not as individuals. And that's how you'd be treated by the police and everybody else. They says, hey you, get in there, stand on that line, stand there, blah blah blah, shut up. And that's it. That's your utopia.

Interestingly enough, like I've seen before in other countries, in Yugoslavia they had that to an extent too, as I say, Bulgaria and other places as well. You hear the folk talking, you know, they came out of an era, right, 1930s and 40s, when they were younger, these people, a lot of them that survived anyway, they belonged, they had their indoctrination into a form of socialism. Remember, communism is just socialism in a hurry, that's where it always ends up, you see. But some of them were anarchists and agrarian type anarchists. There are different groupings of them all. They all had their ideas of the way to work and then trade whatever you produced with other groups rather than use just money and so on. When the Communists take over, folks, they start off by using the anarchists, as they say. Until you realize, no, the anarchists at the top are not anarchists, they're really Communists, and then they turn on all the ones they've used, [Alan chuckles.] and that's who ends up in the camps. [Alan chuckles.] Really sad but true.

So, it's true how things can repeat themselves. Mark Twain said, they never really truly repeat themselves, they just rhyme. But as far as I'm concerned, no, they can repeat themselves. They can wear different uniforms, different clothing, talk different languages, use different terminology, but it's the same thing. If it walks like a duck and quacks like a duck, it's a duck! Yep.

It's quite fascinating to live through it and see it being instituted, isn't it, in our lifetime? And the complete ruthlessness of government, literally telling the media to go along and actually increase anxiety by exaggerating the stories to get the folk to comply. By creating horror. Terrifying them.

And who knows how many folk already have lost their lives because they couldn't get into hospitals to get treated for basic things? That's murder, folks. This is the generation that's being sacrificed. They knew who they'd sacrifice before it started by not allowing them into the hospitals. Hospitals are meant to treat people of all, with all problems. But most of them, you had empty hospitals waiting to see their avalanche, incredible avalanche, they say, oh my God, avalanche of Covid cases. M-hm. And folk weren't even getting picked up by ambulances, that they were having heart attacks at home. Getting written off. Just lie down flat in your home, see if it gets any better. And a day or two later they're dead, 'eh, in their homes. Who's going to answer, you know no one's going to answer for this because it's authorized from the top.

What you're seeing is not a grassroots movement from the bottom, including the anarchists. It's all been planned from the top by the richest folk on the planet. Some of them who finance a lot of these things, as you know, give speeches. One of them gave a speech at the end of the last WEF big meeting, and he's awfully popular and famous by supplying money to all the different groups that are going at it to destroy society. He was the last one to talk and give his talk.

You're looking at a completely different governmental system dictating here. Openly. And you didn't give any approval to it. You were not asked about it. And your own political parties are a sham, we know that, they've been a sham for years. Quigley himself who was a big part it, who was all for where the society was to go, a merging of all parties into one. You would keep the pretense of different parties he said but when they're all talking about the same things at election time, unemployment, healthcare and so on, insurance, education, he says then it's the same party. It's pretense, it's all pretense. Meant to go that way.

Then you're in a different system. And how can you have a government that literally uses your tax money, every country does this, uses your tax money, hands all the problems over to private think tanks, that decide, who draft up the policy for governments to follow. All kinds of them. All kinds of think tanks, all private. All got their own particular bent on where the world is supposed to go, for very important and rich and powerful people. Well, we don't… Why bother with the government if they hand it all off to private agencies? What's the point? Government is supposed to serve the public. What they say is, well, you know, you can't complain to us about this, we gave this to these private agencies, so you have to complain to them. That's, this is how they cop out of it, taking the can, carrying the can, 'eh? Just astonishing to watch this happening over and over again. Well, we didn't plan on that, it's this think tank that decided on that, you know. Well who owns the think tank? What do they stand for? So, we haven't had any kind of democracy for an awful long time.

But the colleges and universities have been, were taken over, easy, you know, from the 1930s right through, and picking up speed from the 1960s onwards. Big time. With the same characters, often that fled Europe into Britain and then over to the States and into the universities and started teaching communist doctrine then as well. I could never figure it out, when I was young I thought, why would, when you studied communism and the policies of it, it would be the complete overthrow of all existing governments, religions, family units, etc. Then you had to obviously ask yourself, why on earth would your own countries, which were definitely ruled by a leading establishment, m-hm, why on earth would they allow them to teach the stuff in universities in the UK and across the world?

You have to start thinking like that. If you started up a subversive poetry group in Britain [Alan chuckles.] you would've been overthrown before you got the first few lines out of your mouth. This is, you know, but yeah you could teach communism and Marxism in universities and colleges. I mean, it didn't make any sense, did it? Because as I say, you've got an elite who doesn't, you know, shrink from any task, who held an empire together by a massive bureaucracy, and very efficient bureaucrats really, and spies. But you allow them to come into the country and you allow them to take money off the taxpayer and get paid through universities and so on to teach subversive tactics, especially if you are the queen or king of England, why on earth would you allow them in there when they've vowed to kill you, like they killed the Tsars?

It made no sense. Until you realize, there's another game on the go here. Obviously, another game. And it has to suit the ones at the very top, this game, or it wouldn't be happening. It wouldn't be happening. You always have to have a group that you can call upon, and you can radicalize them very quickly actually, it's like just press the right buttons at the right time and you've got an instant, instant internal Army or mob to be used against the system which you already run.

I mean, remember the dialectic and how it works, 'eh. Society won't change too much very quickly in a progressive, what they call progressive movement. Progression is a planned society; they know where they want to take it to step by step by step. That's what they call this, this is a progressive socialism. But it wouldn't happen by itself you see unless the folk all go along with it.

So, you must always, in the dialectic you give them a problem, so you have the basic system, just call it a system. So, you have the system, and then you create a problem against the system, there's a group that's not happy with it now. So, you have an anti-system. Then you have a conflict on the go. And out of that you have your discussions and your debates you get a compromise. And that's your synthesis. That's what you wanted in the beginning. If you only had one side that's quite content not to argue with anybody, they're quite content in the way things are, then you won't have the change that you've planned. So you get an opposition movement set up, cause the conflict and eventually the folk who are quite happy the way things were will have to do some kind of compromise, and you get part way to where you want to go. That's how it's done.

It's a very simple technique, the thesis, antithesis and synthesis. And then the synthesis, under communism or Trotskyism, becomes the new thesis to start again. That way you can get constant change, all planned change, as I say, where you… And what they say in the old old communist literature too, is that what they're… Because they believe in evolution [Alan chuckles.] and they'll say, this is to speed up societal evolution to where it should go and would go if it was sped up, you see. So rather than wait for a thousand years for this to happen, let's do it in four stages of this, this, this, and this. This is how it's done, it's planned, planned change.

Most folk are oblivious of all this when they're living through it. You're given lots of entertainment, for miserable little lives they give you all kinds of exciting things to watch. They're oblivious that their reality, their very reality is catered to and given to them. The things they accept as normal today were given to them. Even they've been through a process of not wanting a lot of the new normals that they've now accepted, that was all given to them too, including how to adapt to them, they don't know they were trained to adapt to the new normals, and say, oh well, you know, maybe they've got a point. It's so slickly done.

So before I get into the meat of the talk perhaps, you've got to remember, before I forget again, 'eh, because there's so much happening, that this planned alteration of society using Covid as the biggest deadliest thing since the atomic bomb, hm, don't forget all the people who've already been sacrificed too, and who will still be sacrifice now that they're going to bring… I said, I knew that back in February they'd bring a spike, you know.

Fauci said it, you can take it to the bank, whatever he says, because he was part of the planning committee for this before it even broke out. [Alan chuckles.] You know, these characters were all involved with the Johns Hopkins Event 201, and the events before that too for the Rockefeller foundation groups and so on. These are the same clique that went through the stages of what they were going to do, what they wanted to do, and how they would even force the public to eventually except mass vaccinations.

Years ago they planned all this, how they'd go about it and how they'd even get it mandatory that, oh because it's so expensive for vaccinations, you see, that they've got to stop the mass waste of vaccines, like they did in the last couple of nonevent pandemics, like the swine flu and so on, where millions and millions of the doses were dumped. They actually say that in their own writings at the CDC in the meetings that they had because they were causing bad side effects. And folk didn't want them. They didn't need them. It even gave narcolepsy to a lot of schoolchildren in different countries. Never mind the long-term effects, we don't even know yet, it can take years before some of them show. M-hm. So, they want to stop all that to make sure that governments are going to guarantee to buy them all and use them all. So, it's to take away the whole concept of free will and the compliance by individuals. Basically tyranny. Of course it is. It's tyranny.

So, getting back to what I'm saying. Look at all the folk who have died already because they couldn't get in the hospitals and get treatment. Never mind the folks in the old folk's homes. Disgraceful, disgraceful what's happened. They were all written off pretty well by the system and the establishment and the mandatory, putting infected folk in with noninfected people. Never mind the fact, I really do as far as I see, well I won't even go into it right now because you get hammered, absolutely hammered if you come out with anything that hasn't come out of the same mouth as Fauci, the majordomo of the pandemic movement. But there are treatments. There are treatments. Of course, there are. There's even standard treatments that were done long before this one broke out, that should have all been used.

But no, they wanted panic, they wanted terror, for the big push for the global reset, etc. You can't crash whole economies across the world on purpose by mandating that all the healthy folk are quarantined without collapsing the economy. That's what the global reset is about, out of this is to come a new system, and new, a new normal of money or economy and so on, with a whole new set of rules for everybody to follow.

And I've no doubt you'll all be getting your lifelong, well, maybe, however long that will be actually, your life might not be that long, but your lifelong stay-at-home credit system basically. Token system. Or universal basic income. And they won't stop now that they've had their taste, you see, of the acceptance. Because they're constantly studying us all, and how many folk tonight, this very moment, are worried about all the old folk who have died already? the folk who are going to die because of negligence?

It's a system that's already bringing in euthanasia, like Canada, it's already got it. It's not very reassuring, is it? You understand where is it going to go next, hm, where is it going to go next? Just think about that. And the most versatile disease anyone ever designed on paper. As I say, they've covered every symptom under the sun. A sneeze. Not a sneeze. A runny nose, a stuffy nose. A clear nose. A temperature. No temperature. Yada, yada, ya, you know. It makes no difference. You're not going to get out of this one [Alan chuckles.] because they've covered everything. Feeling normal? Ha, that doesn't mean anything. Yada, yada, ya. M-hm.

It's a big, big show for a much bigger plan. And again, I've even got the articles here from the CDC and the World Health Organization from years ago, lots of stuff they put out on mandatory vaccinations and how they would try to get them introduced, etc. Lifelong booster vaccinations for all adults too. Lifelong, like annual. [Alan chuckles.] Yeah, pincushions, 'eh?

So, the companies you see who are now ruling you are the owners of the corporations that own the vaccines. They are the ones mandating what you're going to do and how you're going to behave. You talk about fascism! Whoa! Private partnerships between corporations and governments, and you have to accept it, the consumer, you, whether you like it or not, are going to be a consumer of their products, their mandated products.

Can you imagine if they said, you know, to all gardeners out there in the world, only this one company here, that's donated to us and actually donated to run for politics and so on and the political party, you've got to buy their digging spade, no other one's going to be allowed, you'd better buy theirs. You know where folk would tell them to shove it.

But in this scenario, we're going to save you by mandating you must take our products whether it works or not, or even has any adverse effects, it makes no difference. That's a death sentence for a lot of folk. If you get a response to this thing, and they've already, Fauci has already said it, mind you, you know, that 700,000 will die across the planet with the vaccine as a side effect. It's amazing how they come out with this stuff when before they always denied there was ANY side effects to anything at all, even when folk were dropping dead and having fits on the floor with seizures. N-n-n.

And it was amazing too, you knew from the beginning for Fauci, foxy Fauci, because he did say it, he wanted it to be a complete lockdown right into next year, from February onwards, or March right into next year, he said that. Maybe he says in two or three years it will be over, you know. He meant, with his vaccination.

And your own immune system, right, even though you've got positive antibodies, because most folk it goes through you anyway, like ALL viruses do, the same viruses go through millions of people every day across the planet, all kinds of viruses, including Covid family groups, and you don't even know, they're harmless. But that doesn't matter. Facts don't matter, you see, when there's a big agenda here. And don't forget, getting your own immune system working, having it work and defeating this thing and creating antibodies, well, there's no profit in that for goodness sake. You've got to get their vaccine. Your own antibodies might only, well, rather than the standard 3 to 5 to 10 years it might work, you see, your own antibodies, Fauci said well we can't be sure your antibodies will protect you for more than a few months. Because they've got massive profits just staring them in the face. They've never had such a windfall before staring them in the face. And they worked hard to make this happen, for goodness sake.

Even though your own antibodies would be the final thing that would work anyway. Either caused by your own immune system taking over, that you won't even know you had the damn thing, most of the folk. Or it would be stimulated by a vaccine using a dead weakened virus. As opposed to the Moderna one which of course is going to alter your cells in your body. We always called that cancers before. Mutations, 'eh? But no, they've been dying to go this new way for a long time. Let's start altering humans, 'eh, the great herd for the brave new world. N-n-n. And make it mandatory.

This is a horror show, a horror show. I don't even care if they pretend they've tested it on so many volunteers before, I don't care. It takes years of studying what happens to those folks afterwards, what's the immediate effects, what's the intermediate, it would be between 7 to 10 year study, effects that have broken out since then etc. etc. That's what you do, folks. That's what you do.

First coronavirus vaccine trialled in US boosts immune system just as scientists hoped as it’s set for final tests - thesun.co.uk / 14 July 2020

Here's another thing you should think of too. It's illegal, you get charged, the police charge drug addicts who threaten them with either biting them, breaking the skin, biting them, you know, or trying to stick needles in them, or even spitting at them, with really potentially, it's life-threatening if that person has got AIDS, they could threaten your life. So, it could be manslaughter or attempted manslaughter or something like that, you see, or murder. But here's companies going to mandate your governments, to mandate to you, to stick all kinds of things into your body. Same thing. But when the white coat ones do it and say it's under science, it's different from a junkie sticking it into you. Huh? What? [Alan laughing.] Really.

You might have more idea what's in the junkie’s one than the one they're going to stick into you. Trust us, they say, trust us. You'd better do your homework. There's lots of information out there that's literally verified by the same organizations, throughout the years, and the massive lawsuits they've had on terrible effects, on all kinds of vaccinations. Including the ones they have to withdraw from Canada a few years ago because they found out they had vaccinated Canadians with a flu shot and it was the wrong kind or whatever, but they said that literally it opened them up to that year's flu and pneumonia, you’d get a cytokine storm, which would kill you.

That's still there, you could look it up, pull it up and ponder it. Because you have to use facts. And even if you use facts, they're going to hammer you anyway. They said at the Event 201 by the way if you went through the whole thing, it was awfully interesting, there was different stages they would go through into voluntary compliance, then getting a bit more severe with the public, and then forcing it, forcing compliance.

Fauci by the way, I might touch on him if I find the article, mentioned that it's maybe time to start forcing compliance on the public for masks and behavior and distance and all that stuff, forcing it. Forcing, I think he uses the word. But it's to lead up to the forced mandatory vaccinations, you see. And it's up to the public to start saying no we've had enough of this nonsense.

Because there's no backing out of it once you've gone halfway, you see. This is how they do things, with percentages. Well if so many folk have accepted it, what's wrong with you? This is a democracy. And sure enough, just like as I've mentioned before, Tammany Hall, and the mayor of Tammany Hall from that movie The Gangs of New York, awfully well done that movie actually. He said that about the public, he says, well we can always hire or get one half of the public to kill the other half. That's what they do, use the ones that are terrorized to force you to comply and be as terrorized as they are, you see. Okay, okay, yeah.

And go through all the different rituals, all designed by computers. For social distancing. Not 5 feet 11, no, 6 feet! 6 feet! You know. Yep. Utter rubbish, 'eh. And then of course in the summer they say, it's okay, you could probably bring it down to 3 feet now for the summer, that's from Britain. I guess it's backup to the 6 feet again. They keep you jumping back and forth and it's all shadows. Shadows. It's like trying to jump on your shadow as a child in the sun behind you, the shadows on the pavement. Same idea. Keep you jumping. You'll never get it. Because you can't really comply when there's all kinds of obscure and deliberately obscure orders getting shouted at you. It's meant to throw you off guard until you have no reasoning ability left. You won't trust your own judgments. That's the psychological warfare.

Remember folks too, go into @cuttingthroughthematrix.com and toss a few bucks my way. You can use PayPal, you can send cash or checks, and I'll tick along here as long as I can. I mean, you know darn well it's all coming short now, they're getting rather nasty. And they won't just stop, obviously, with pulling folk off social platforms and things. They actually mentioned in the Event 201 as I say with maybe a five-stage plan or whatever, the steps they would take with even arresting people. You'll be an enemy of the… It's the same thing in all totalitarian regimes, you'll become an enemy of the people. And of course, the tyrants, just like communism, they represented the people, the guards that picked you up, and that would be the charge against you, you're an enemy of the people. Yep.

[Alan laughing.] That's how… Any excuse will do, 'eh? And things repeat themselves because it's an agenda. But they said, yeah, they would take folk off these different ways, make it absolutely impossible for you to survive financially, as a start. This is an old trick, that, enemy, mind you. But yeah, ruthless. And when they send cops out now to shoot people who have had an argument in a store, an old guy, then, well, and if that gets accepted, which it probably will in Canada, then that's a warning to everybody else, you see, that you'd better comply. It really, these things are very, very significant. As I say, when they give you ridiculous, nothing else to say about the old guy except, well, yeah, he lived alone, you know, and he didn't mix much with the people, you know.

SO WHAT! Was he supposed to go around to all the local chitchats and booze with them all and get drunk with them all and slap their backs and then talk behind their backs about them? No, no. The guy kept himself to himself. But that's an evil thing. Because they can't find anything else right off the bat to justify what's happened to him, that's why they put that rubbish out there. That's how things happen.

So, as I say, @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. You can buy the books and discs by the way. I think the whole backlog is, it wasn't huge but it's all out now. Folk have either got them, or they'll get them in the next few days I suppose. But that helps me tick along here. Because yeah, I'm going to get locked down for another winter, obviously. And they want to get folk vaccinated before the snow flies it seems to me. I guess if you don't comply, initially, before they make it mandatory and they lock you up and do it physically to you whether you like it or not, then you won't be allowed to leave your home. That's actually what articles from Australia are saying much the same stuff, you know, you'll be locked in your home. That's the way, they say to you, we're not stopping you sir from going out to the stores, all you have to do is comply, you know. Yep.

This is how things are done, they coerce you into things. That's how the system in the West always works. And remember too, when you go into @cuttingthroughthematrix.com make sure you list all the sites I have in case the .com site goes down. That way hopefully I still get my shows out to you and you can find them on one of the alternate sites I've got listed. These are my official sites @cuttingthroughthematrix.com so, make sure you do that just in case.

Because we're living through amazing times, aren't we? And authority, especially when it's a totalitarian authority, it doesn't accept anything outside of itself, any little nuisance. I won't say any competitor, it's only when it comes to countries, between countries, they won't accept competitors. But when it comes to the individuals in society, you're not even a smidge as they say in Britain, or even a mosquito in Canada, they just swat you out of the way. And that's where tyranny goes in these situations, always, using wartime scenarios, complete tyranny for conformity, naturally.

So, it's really something isn't it. But here's an article here about the masks. I'll put a few ones up tonight perhaps, at least one or two.

Target, CVS, Walgreens to also require masks at stores nationwide as COVID-19 cases rise - tennessean.com / 16 July 2020

This one is from the Association of American Physicians and Surgeons. It gives you an idea, for those who want to just argue the facts. [Alan chuckles.] What's the point anymore? Because facts don't matter when there's a big agenda. The agenda came before all of this. They go into Covid...

Transmission of SARS-CoV-2

Note: A COVID-19 (SARS-CoV-2) particle is 0.125 micrometers (A: Right.) (μm); influenza virus size is 0.08 – 0.12 μm; a human hair is about 150 μm.

(A: And that's microns. And just, I've always been fascinated with when folk get to understand the terminology that's used in medicine, or even in psychiatry. They always change it. You see, any science or one, even when it comes up as the pretense of science, because all these things came from literally rather barbaric techniques of treating people in the hope that they could help them. All of them, all of them did.)

(A: You should see what they were selling the public in the 1900s at one time, in the 1800s, I should say the 19th century. Even earthworms, they'd crush them up in a powder for, and to give out. You could actually see that in some of these old shows that dealt with the past and how the old pharmacies used to be, the chemist as they called them in Britain, what they ground up for themselves for the potions and so on. Quite amazing stuff.)

(A: A lot of it really was kind of, you know, what we call today kind of quackery in a sense. But other things were pretty good when it came to even again treating the common colds and so on. When they found eucalyptus in other countries and then they could start to bring the stuff in, it really is good in a bowl of hot water when you've got a bad cold or something. Today you would just get labeled as Covid and that's you. But yeah, these things really are pretty, pretty good actually for the problem.)

(A: But anyway, here we go into this thing, so they change the terminology, you see. I noticed it too even in psychiatry when they used to have manic depression, people would go from manic bouts of hyperactivity and then it would be followed eventually by a phase of melancholy or depression and sometimes suicide. But once the public through lots of TV shows and things get used to the idea of what these things were and the problems, they changed it again to bipolar, you see. That's what they do to with anything, even in the physical problems as well.)

(A: I grew up talking about microns, 'eh. People over the last few years started getting used to the idea of microns and micron size would get through your mask, or it would get blocked by masks, certain masks and so on. But now they don't use micron, it's called micrometer, you see. That's the preferred name now for micron, which is an older term, you understand, so that you can't converse with each other or to doctors or surgeons, 'eh? Anyway, it says…)

*1 nm = 0.001 micron; 1000 nm = 1 micron; Micrometer (μm) is the preferred name for micron (an older term)

1 meter is = 1,000,000,000 nm or 1,000,000 microns

Droplets

Virus is transmitted through respiratory droplets produced when an infected person coughs, sneezes or talks. Larger respiratory droplets (>5 μm) remain in the air for only a short time and travel only short distances, generally <1 meter. (A: There's no way. [Alan chuckles.]) They fall to the ground quickly.

(A: Again, this is one a scenario fit's all. It doesn't fit all. If it's warm air in the place, it could travel quite a distance, it might even go UP with thermals, you know what I'm saying? But here it says it falls to the ground quickly.)

Then it shows you a link to the Lancet in Britain, right, the Journal Lancet, medical Journal. So you can look up that text, if you really are obsessional you can look that up for yourselves.

https://www.thelancet.com/journals/lanres/article/PIIS2213-2600(20)30245-9/fulltext

This idea guides the CDC’s (A: Centers for Disease Control.) advice to maintain at least a 6-foot distance.

(A: They're trying to figure out ways now, you see, to justify the 6 foot thing, that have been kind of shredded, since it literally was designed by a young schoolgirl and daddy wanted to get her a good, you know, a good markup so she could get into one of the most prestigious universities basically, by helping her with her computer program to decide, so the God computer could decide how far apart we should be, etc. That's a fact, I've done the story before folks, this was in the newspapers at the time. And here you are, they're following this guidance of a schoolgirl, computer program, again, under daddy who worked with the military-industrial complex. My, that's just coincidence though. It actually mentioned in the articles too, that the Department of Defense came to see her, and daddy, about it, you see. Because they have their own health department, they keep up on all the stuff. Because if the troops get sick with anything, they've got to be ahead of the game, if they want to still win wars. Anyway so, this is the idea for it, 6-foot distance. It's all to… It's to destroy natural social contact, is what it is. It's a psy-op again.)

This idea guides the CDC’s advice to maintain at least a 6-foot distance.

Virus-laden small (<5 µm) aerosolized droplets can remain in the air for at least 3 hours and travel long distances.

(A: So that kind of contradicts the other one too. So, there you are, my goodness, some of them apparently just drop to the ground in a few feet, but here's one here, here's the CDC, and it says, you know, it...)

...can remain in the air for at least 3 hours and travel long distances.

(A: That's what I'm saying, you're always given these contradictory reports in the same articles, because then you can't believe anything. You can't even believe your own common sense when what you're given by professionals makes no common sense. You understand? This is psychological warfare. It says…)

Air currents

In air conditioned environment these large droplets may travel farther.

(A: This is why you get degrees at universities and get big paychecks, because yeah, if you got air conditioning it blows air around, it may travel further. That's a stroke of genius.)

However, ventilation — even the opening of an entrance door and a small window can dilute the number of small droplets to one half after 30 seconds.

(A: I wonder who got the money, a few million, to do this study, you know, of speculation.)

(This study looked at droplets from uninfected persons). This is clinically relevant because poorly ventilated and populated spaces, like public transport and nursing homes, have high

SARS-CoV-2 disease transmission despite physical distancing.

(A: That's because they don't get ventilation, everything is shut in, you're sealed in the darn place, like a tomb. So that's another article by the Lancet. Then it says…)

Objects and surfaces

Person to person touching

(A: The most natural thing in the world is person to person touching.)

The CDC’s most recent statement regarding contracting COVID-19 from touching surfaces: “Based on data from lab studies on Covid-19 and what we know about similar respiratory diseases, it may be possible that a person can get Covid-19 by touching a surface or object that has the virus on it and then touching their own mouth, nose or possibly their eyes,” the agency wrote. “But this isn’t thought to be the main way the virus spreads.

(A: So, they've got another way it might be spread, so they give you lots of links to waste your life looking up.)

Chinese study with data taken from swabs on surfaces around the hospital

(A: ...and they give you that one, I read that ages ago.)

The surfaces where tested with the PCR (polymerase chain reaction) test, (A: Remember I mentioned before, last week I mentioned that the guy who invented it said this stuff, this test is USELESS as a diagnostic tool, it's not meant for diagnosing these things in people. That's why you're getting all these false positives and false negatives and so on.) which greatly amplifies the viral genetic material if it is present. That material is detectable when a person is actively infected. This is thought to be the most reliable test.

(A: Well, if that's the most reliable, you should really do what I said at the beginning back in February and March, just hire some elderly woman, who meet together every so often, you could hire them and they can read tea leaves, just get the old tea, you see, or just tear the bag and put the tea leaf in a cup and put in the boiling water. They can tell the future more reliably for individuals than any of these ridiculous well exposed bogus tests, where even the inventor said it is not a diagnostic tool. [Alan chuckles.] It's astonishing really. Again, facts don't matter. So anyway, they tried different things…)

Computer mouse (ICU 6/8, 75%;

General ward (GW) 1/5, 20%)

Trash cans (ICU 3/5, 60%; GW 0/8)

Sickbed handrails (ICU 6/14, 42.9%; GW 0/12)

Doorknobs (GW 1/12, 8.3%)

(A:...and yada, yada, ya, plastic steel, all the different, how long it might survive on different surfaces, paper compared to stainless steel or cardboard, copper, floor, etc.)

(A: And some other genius that this, at the bottom of that list there it says, and this is probably someone very important that said this...)

- gravity causes droplets to fall to the floor.

(A: Wow! Whoa, thank goodness, they must think we’re real morons, 'eh. It says…)

Half of ICU workers all had virus on the bottoms of their shoes

(A: Wow, there ya go. Like they've just discovered this kind of thing. Imagine that. Wow. Yeay.)

(A: D'you know the hospitals over the years especially in the States there had really slashed the domestic cleaning staffs to save money to get more profits? I used to talk to a lot of folk in the hospitals, still do, and yeah, they couldn't believe it. Even some of the surgeons said the same thing, once they travel to different hospitals, they said they couldn't believe how, especially in New York and different places, how filthy a lot of the hospitals were because they had cut so many of the cleaning staff. This is like over the last few years. You've got to you have, I don't care, even regardless of Covid, you've got to have cleaning staff in and disinfecting the different walls and floors and the whole bit. That's how you keep these things down, 'eh, all these different kind of diseases.)

Filter Efficiency and Fit

*Data from a University of Illinois at Chicago review

(A: It goes through the filters and the masks too. It starts with…)

HEPA (high efficiency particulate air) filters – 99.97 – 100% efficient. HEPA filters are tested with particles that are 0.125 μm.

Masks and respirators work by collecting particles through several physical mechanisms, including diffusion (small particles) and interception and impaction (large particles) …

(A: I don't know if people know it but masks, never mind the fact that most of these things won't work for you anyway, [Alan chuckles.] and supposedly this particular virus. The N95 masks are meant to go, if you're going in, you see, if you're going into a contaminated area, where outside of you and the mask is contamination, that's what N95 is supposed to be for, so that anything you're breathing into yourself it's going to filter it, right. And there's an electrostatic kind of charge built up in those masks too, folk don't really know about, so that helps to stick it to the outside surface, that's the idea behind it or the theory behind it, right.)

(A: But when you get into a surgical masks, hm, a surgical mask is where you put, you're now going into a contaminated area, you're going into a sterile area, like an operating theater, and the idea there is so that it will trap, hopefully it will trap any bacteria there or virus you're breathing out from yourself, and it will get trapped inside that mask. That's the idea behind it, the N95, that you're going into a contaminated atmosphere outside of you and the mask, so that you won't get contaminated. So, it’s for a completely different purposes if you understand that.)

(A: And the other ones just with the little ear bands are just... help disguise you if you don't want folk to notice who you are. I think that's the only real purpose of them to be honest with you. It might, if someone's got a heavy thick mucus, mucosal cough or something, it might help stop some of the thick mucus getting stuck in it, that might get trapped in it. But they're really well pretty well useless for anything else like that, you know.)

(A: And cloth ones by the way, any kind of cloth, especially cotton and so on, right, some of these cloth ones that they're selling have got interwoven nylon amongst them too. Moisture is trapped and depending on the material, mold will build up on it, quite quickly by the way, especially in the summer. You shouldn't be b...)

(A: You understand, you're given nostrils to breathe in the atmosphere, because your body needs oxygen. You don't have flaps going over your nostrils to close it off. You see? You're not a seal or something like that. Your nostrils, you can't close off unless you, I guess you could plug them up with cotton wool or something. But the fact is, there's a reason they are not plugged up, and you don't have a valve for them. It's because you're designed, because your body really needs oxygen, you shouldn't be putting any impediment IN THE WAY OF IT.)

(A: There are folks even in Sudbury who have collapsed wearing masks and get carried off by ambulances because they can't get the oxygen. And once you have the moisture buildup from your breath on the cloth, on the cloth or on the paper, and clog the pores and fibers, you’re getting suffocated. This doesn't… I'm doing this for free. [Alan laughing.] I guess if I belonged to some of these organizations they'd give me a few million just restating that fact. Because everybody else is doing that with their hands out, 'eh. But this is the farce of it all. This article here has got a breakdown of the efficiency with...)

N95 respirators had efficiencies greater than 95% (as expected).

(A: And T-shirts, using T-shirts, the cloth for that…)

T-shirts had 10% efficiency

(A: Until it gets clogged, as I say.)

Scarves 10% to 20%,

(A: How ridiculous. A scarf, made of what? It doesn't say. Scarves 10% to 20%.)

Cloth masks 10% to 30%,

(A: Absolute farce.)

Sweatshirts 20% to 40%, and

Towels 40%.

(A: There's all kinds of towels as well.)

All of the cloth masks and materials had near zero efficiency at 0.3 µm, (A: ... microns, or they call them micrometers now.) a particle size that easily penetrates into the lungs.

(A: So, the cloth masks were useless. That's what it says here. And…)

Another study evaluated 44 masks, respirators, and other materials with similar methods and small aerosols (0.08 and 0.22 µm).

N95 FFR filter efficiency was greater than 95%.

Medical masks – 55% efficiency

(A: But again, medical masks, what kind of medical masks? Was it surgical, N95, what were they?)

General masks – 38% and

(A: ... until they get moisture on them of course.)

Handkerchiefs – 2% (one layer) to 13% (four layers) efficiency.

(A: Actually, you'll get 100% efficiency if you put a dozen handkerchiefs on there, because you can't breathe at all and you'll be dead. And if you're dead obviously it's very efficient because you can't breathe anything in. So, there you go. There's another million dollars for that advice.)

Conclusion: Wearing masks will not reduce SARS-CoV-2.

(A: I'll repeat that for the heart of thinking.)

Conclusion: Wearing masks will not reduce SARS-CoV-2.

N95 masks protect health care workers, but are not recommended for source control transmission.

Surgical masks are better than cloth but not very efficient at preventing emissions from infected patients.

(A: So again, N95 is to stop it coming into you, right, from a contaminated atmosphere. Surgical masks are to protect the sterile environment outside of yourself, but not to stop it coming into you from infected patients outside. That's the idea behind it.)

Cloth masks will be ineffective at preventing SARS-CoV-2 transmission, whether worn as source control or as personal protective equipment (PPE).

(A: And it also says...)

“Masks may confuse that message and give people a false sense of security."

So, there ya go. And don't forget in Asia they were wearing the masks at the very beginning, it didn't stop it there, right. But this article I’ll put up for those who want to look at it and it's from the Association of American Physicians and Surgeons. And you can go on and on with facts, but it doesn't really matter. Big agenda, a big agenda, folks. It took years to plan this agenda and the complete global reset of everything. It isn't just money, it's a whole way of living into austerity, into a future where rationing is the norm. Including all energy rationing. They said that, I read the articles years ago on the air on my radio show when I was on. I read the articles, austerity, planned austerity. And planned brownouts. And how governments had gone along with it, they signed it on at the climate meetings and the sustainability meetings that they would start to reduce energy or make it more expensive. That's all energy for keeping you alive, for cooking, for everything, for heating yourself. Yep.

Here's an article here too, one of the articles from one of the sources and it is…

Man shot dead by OPP after mask dispute was 'very reclusive,' neighbour says

cbc.ca / 16 July 2020

Oh, there you go. There's see, there's your, I guess that's the reason you kill him then, 'eh? Very reclusive, neighbor says. Why would they even put that parts in the paper? Hm? Because they can't think of anything else.

(A: The guy that got shot was 73 years old.)

...officers in Haliburton County on Wednesday morning says the victim lived in the area for several years but didn't seem to have any friends.

(A: Well, that's a wise thing at times, because often the friends aren't your friends in the first place, and they're often heavily into booze. Even the older ones are into drugs big time, a lot of them too. And if he wanted to be by himself, that is his choice. That is his choice, folks, you see. So, there you go, there's a good reason for, you know, that's it. It says…)

CBC News has confirmed the victim's identification, but is waiting for police to name him after they notify his next of kin.

The OPP (A: Ontario Provincial Police.) said the man had refused to wear a mask and allegedly assaulted a grocery store employee (A: …allegedly, right.) before driving away.

(A: They could say, it could just be an argument and they'll put that down as assault, who knows. The cops followed him home apparently and…)

He was later shot dead

(A: Well, that's a good excuse, he was a loner, hey, he liked peace and quiet, you know. There you go, that's a good reason to kill him, 'eh? [Alan chuckles.] You understand how… Where did they dig this stuff up? It says…)

"He was a very reclusive man. (A: ...says a neighbor, 'eh...) He's been here, I'd say, between eight to 10 years," Garfield Munshaw told CBC News.

"He built a big new house, (A: That's a good reason they won't like him.) will not have nothing to do with anybody …

(A: Oh really? That means he'll have something to do with somebody.)

In He won't even speak. He's just very much to himself, doesn't want anybody around, you know. He had big no trespassing signs.

(A: Often you'll need them too, otherwise you get all kinds of nuisances, and snowmobiles going through in the winter and ATVs going through in the summer.)

"He's a strange, strange man," he added.

(A: Well, that's a good reason to kill him. You see? Is this the best they can come up with here? Hm? Huh? There ya go. N-n-n.)

Police were called to a Valu-Mart in Minden, Ont., just after 8 a.m. on Wednesday, OPP Sgt. Jason Folz said.

Officers spotted the man's car and tried to stop it, but they refrained "in the interest of public safety" before doing a follow-up investigation, Folz said.

According to the SIU, the man drove away, and an officer saw the car and started following it for a short while. Based on the licence plate, officers made their way to a home on Indian Point Road.

Outside the home there was an "interaction," and two police officers fired their guns, the SIU said.

So there ya go, that's it. So, I guess you really have to be careful now because I've said before a lot of the people who work in the stores are absolutely hysterical now. They are. I've heard them yelling at people. Yelling at people. You, get over there, you know, GET, you know, that kind of thing. And it wouldn't take much to start off a real big argument with them. And the cops will side with them immediately, you know. Well, you see, you are in the store, they are in charge of the store and so on. And that's just the way it turns out to be.

All because of a lot of nonsense that literally would never have happened unless it was this whole pathetic terror campaign put out by the media, that's working hand in glove with big Pharma obviously, you know, and the big WEF boys and gals, the global Masters. And once again you get fed up with it, oh you don't need a mask now, oh, you need it now. Yeah, you only needed in some places. No, you've got to where it everywhere now. Yut-dut-dut-dut-dut. As they have you jumping, and again, chasing your shadow basically.

But folk are dying, not just in the hospitals with this nonsense, and getting stuck on ventilators. As I say, before when, they shouldn't even be on them, there's other the treatments. Now of course as folk in the National Health Services in Britain and elsewhere, who came out before and talked about what was happening, now they can't, they've all been threatened with their jobs if they speak to the press about what's happening. This IS tyranny, folks. This is incredible tyranny. M-hm.

I think back to the night of 9/11 2001, and how they immediately went into a wartime scenario, that was planned by the same group, in the Bush campaign, who backed him up and were all part of the cabinet and so on, the PNAC group, the Project for New American Century, that really wasn't for America at all. They published their list of countries they wanted to be taken out, but they said, before 9/11 happened, they would need something on the scale of the Pearl Harbor event to get public opinion to back them for these wars that they had planned. And bingo, they got it, 9/11 came along, 'eh, on a practice rehearsal day for the towers to be hit, 'eh? [Alan laughing.] Just coincidence.

They told the Air Force, that normally comes into any, because they know who comes in, what flights are coming in, what paths they're supposed to be on, and they're scrambled immediately when they veer off their path and head towards the cities. And they were told to stand down, by I think it was Cheney and Rumsfeld at the top that were in charge of that particular day's tests. And you can't make this stuff up. This is published stuff, it's not made up stuff, conspiracy sites. It's admitted to. It came out during the inquiries.

Anyway yeah, you’re living through amazing times. So, Pearl Harbor event to get a wartime scenario. It's always important for big changes to get a wartime scenario, Carol Quigley, right, you can get more done socially, like changing society in five years of war than 50 years of peace using propaganda and persuasion. You see, so bingo! Covid, bingo! Facts don't matter. It doesn't matter. Numbers don't matter. Folk not dying doesn't matter.

This is to change the system, the global reset, remember. A wartime scenario. You'll do what you're told under a wartime scenario. The police get more brutal, obviously, when they're given these kinds of intimations of more power, obviously again. The same police that are told to stand down, and will stand down, as folk are going around burning down cities. [Alan chuckles.] We are in trouble. I hope you realize that. This is not going to be pleasant going through these big transitions, not pleasant at all. And it's planned that way. Planned.

And there will be tremendous casualties. Never mind the folk who have already died by getting put in and getting these darn things stuck down their tracheas, rather than traditional treatments like medical treatments, that they have. N-n-n. I'll put that article up again, the one where you actually hear a doctor tell you how much they get paid if they put down Covid diagnosis and get them on a ventilator, it's like $40 grand extra, in the hospitals.

Minnesota Senator Dr. Scott Jensen - Hospitals Get Paid More to List Patients as COVID-19 and Three Times as Much if the Patient Goes on Ventilator - thespectator.info / 9 April 2020

But we're going to go through bad, bad times. And out of it too they're going to get folk out of the country, Agenda 21, right, for the 21st century. If you read the agenda for the 21st century, the breakdowns, you're looking at 2030, all the rest of it, 2050. These are just the milestones to get so much of it implemented. But the actual agenda for the 21st century had everything it has to happen in the 100 years’ span, right. Again, no private vehicles. Shortly there will be no gasoline vehicles at all. They already said they're going to have them off the road by 2030, anyway, and this global reset is going to help. Because if folk aren't going to be allowed to drive so much then you're going to cut back on the creation of gasoline and diesel. Then you're going to get your rationing, folks. Then you’ll be in trouble and the government steps in with, just dust off the old plan, oh yeah, we have this part we move on to now, we'll deliver to certain places, for a short time, but we'll encourage everybody in the country to move out of the country into the cities. Ding-ding-ding-ding, you starting to get the picture, 'eh?

They need all this to happen, you see. Without it they couldn't make it all happen. The Club of Rome and the WEF said, under this so-called crisis, right, under this crisis, Covid crisis, they says, we should be able to accomplish all the things which we couldn't, couldn't accomplish by persuasion. They pretty well said the same thing as Quigley said years before, for sustainability, you see, and using climate change as a big, the big battering ram.

I'll put up again that same, one of the guys who's left the climate agenda, who said it was pretty well, he's apologizing for terrorizing the public with, oh you're all going to die because of the climate change. He said it isn't as bad, anywhere near what they're telling you it is.

Renowned Green Activist Apologizes For The Climate Scare - climatechangedispatch.com / 29 June 2020

And he was part of it. He says, under the surveys that are done now for climate change, he says, that they're pretty well consistent, no matter what country you look at, children up to the age of about 10 are having nightmares, for five years to 10 years of age, think the world is coming to an end because of the climate. They've terrorized the public again, you see.

So, getting back to the Club of Rome, they said yeah, they could use all this to get all the sustainability goals, which is depopulation. How do you depopulate? Cutback energy. Cutback fuel to farm the fields and the tractors and all the rest of it. Cut back on heating yourself in the winter for the colder climates. Folk will die. Illnesses and pneumonias set in all right; you don't need Covid for that. All the problems that you had in the 19th century will reemerge again. Poor hygiene, you know, water pumps won’t work, sewage systems that filter and all that will stop working and yada, yada, and disease breaks out, yada, yada, yada, yada, ya. That's what you get, and they want all these things to happen for a fairly rapid depopulation agenda.

And of course, food, umph, you won’t get the proteins you need because they want you to get on a mainly vegetarian system. And since most of the food, what you get out of that is nitrogen, of greens and so on, you can see the cattle eat all day long to make up what they need if they were eating, they don't eat meat so if it's the nitrogen diet you'll be eating all day long, you'll constantly be starving, and you won't put the weight on, folks. And they're going to stop that too because they don't, they want to cut back on farming, you see.

Sustainability. You've got understand what they mean by that. It's not keeping the present population going at its present size. Sustainable is what they've decided the number is that they want to work more efficiently on the planet. [Large inhale.] M-hm. [Large exhale.]

Now, this article is from England, and remember that all they are, always so many cases were discovered today thing, it's because they are mandating every day more and more thousands of tests. And these are the same tests I've said before that will give you false positives and false negatives. And it really doesn't matter, because the folk are not ill. It's got nothing to do with reality, it's to get numbers up to terrify the public. Oh, there's so many… These are not cases. If you put out a basic cold virus it will sweep through the whole population pretty quickly and most folk won't even get the symptoms. It's weird how sometimes some folk will get it and some won’t or get symptoms of it. But most folk don't get it all, at the same time, but it will be through their system regardless. That's how viruses are. And you have this thing called herd immunity. That's how we've always survived in societies, having herd immunity, it develops very quickly.

But you hear these numbers, oh there's 10,000 new cases today. No, these aren't folk running into hospitals saying oh we're dying. No. It's just in different areas you've put up more tests, and you get the numbers back, you know. And that doesn't mean they are even accurate. They're just so inaccurate it's a joke. And a lot of it is computer models by the way. Because they say, for everyone person, okay, how many, they’ve actually worked out, how many people could this person have met in the last week or whatever, or in the last few days? And they'll work it out to, well, maybe 15. Well, so you put down 15 more contacts on top of the one that you've tested, and you've said is positive. So, you've now got 16 for the one person. And you do it and it keeps on and on and this is how it goes.

Anyway, after I read about the facemasks...

Face coverings to be made compulsory in England's shops and supermarkets standard.co.uk / 13 Jul 2020

Wearing a face covering in shops and supermarkets is to be made mandatory in England in a fresh move to stop the spread of the coronavirus.

(A: Well, no, you want it to spread, that's called herd immunity, folks. You see, they want this to drag on for a few years if they can.)

Health Secretary Matt Hancock (A: ...who's put his foot in it so many times...) will say (A: ...WILL SAY, and I love how they do it in Britain, they already have their speeches prepared. They should just give it to us from the person who wrote the speech for them. Because these speeches are all written for them, 'eh, like prime ministers and politicians that are put in charge of health and whatever. So, it says…) ...will say on Tuesday (A: Right, so they've already read the speech.) that anyone who fails to comply with the order, which comes into force on July 24, could face a fine of up to £100.

(A: So, there's your threatening coercion again, you see, right.)

The move follows a weekend of confusion over whether ministers (A: That's politicians.) intended to make face coverings compulsory after Boris Johnson said they were looking at "stricter" rules.

(A: This is what I'm saying, they've got about five different stages to go through, on the actual Event 201, to get to this stage, stepping it up, getting us used to it, stepping up, getting us used to it, stepping up, getting us used to the next step, stepping up, and this is it, not just a mask but on a whole way of living. It says…)

The senior Cabinet Office minister Michael Gove said on Sunday he did not believe they should be mandatory and that it was better to "trust people's common sense".

(A: Well, you can't have THAT when there's a big agenda at stake here. And by the way as I say, Matt Hancock is the guy who admitted, I put the little video up when he talked about it, when he's telling folk near the beginning of this whole thing, because they were all thinking, oh, so many folk have died of Covid. No, they weren't dying of Covid. They might have had Covid. It's like as I said before a virus can go through millions of the population in weeks, millions and millions, and most folk won't even know they've had anything wrong with them. There's all kinds of viruses and even the family of Covid is quite big as well, and they don't bother you, most of them, you see. And you get herd immunity then. And when you've all got herd immunity, it dies off, it can't find a target anymore, so it dies off and you've got immunity.)

(A: And they're trying to say, oh, it won't last long, your immunity. No, no, no. Generally, your immunity will last about 10 years to a virus. And if it's still in circulation, after a few months, and you'd had it months ago, if it was even waning in you it wouldn't get a chance to wane because you're constantly coming in contact with it, which reinforces your own immunity against it, that you've already built up antibodies, and you build more, that's how it works. You don't suddenly stop making them. [Alan chuckles.])

...a weekend of confusion...

So, Matt Hancock remember, he said in the video that, because he was talking about folk panicking on the holidays. He says, well you know, people have been dying before this all came along. He says, you've got to remember in Britain, you know, he says, 10,000 die, I think it was every week or something. He says 10,000 die every week. He was giving you the stats, you see, births and deaths.

Folk in this day and age, because they don't tell you about folk dying all the time, which is happening every day, right. And other ones get born, every day. But because they don't talk about it, suddenly they're all terrified, and think folk are only dying of Covid now, you see. I've got an article here, a guy died on a motorcycle, an amazing motorcycle accident, a young guy, and they put him down as Covid as well.

Florida Man Who Died In Motorcycle Wreck Labeled As COVID-19 Death By State - zerohedge.com / 19 July 2020

It makes no difference, you see. You could all have it in your system, it makes no difference. You would never know. Never know. N-n-n. And if they're using the swab test it's useless anyway. Yep. And if they use a blood test and they find you've got antibodies, then you're immune, aren't you? But again, facts don't matter, 'eh. So, there you go, mandatory again. And then you've got this one here, another one…

Effects of wearing N95 and surgical facemasks on heart rate, thermal stress and subjective sensations

ncbi.nlm.nih.gov / 26 May 2005

(A: And it won't make any difference because they're going to mandate it regardless, you see. This was first put out 2005 May 26. It's Occupational and Environmental Health, from PMC, the US National Library of Medicine, National Institute of Health. So, it gives you the effects of wearing it on your heart rate, thermal stress and subjective sensations.)

Aim: The study was aimed at investigating the effects of wearing N95 and surgical facemasks with and without nano-functional treatments on thermophysiological responses and the subjective perception of discomfort.

Method: Five healthy male and five healthy female participants performed intermittent exercise on a treadmill while wearing the protective facemasks in a climate chamber controlled at an air temperature of 25°C and a relative humidity of 70%.

Four types of facemasks, including N95 (3M 8210) and surgical facemasks, which were treated with nano-functional materials, were used in the study.

Results:

(1) The subjects had significantly lower average heart rates when wearing nano-treated and untreated surgical facemasks than when wearing nano-treated and untreated N95 facemasks.

(2) The outer surface temperature of both surgical facemasks was significantly higher than that of both N95 facemasks. On the other hand, the microclimate and skin temperatures inside the facemask were significantly lower than those in both N95 facemasks.

(3) Both surgical facemasks had significantly higher absolute humidity outside the surface than both N95 facemasks. The absolute humidity inside the surgical facemask was significantly lower than that inside both N95 facemasks.

(4) Both surgical facemasks were rated significantly lower for perception of humidity, heat, breath resistance and overall discomfort than both N95 facemasks.

(A: They go through all this too, how they got feelings of sensations of itchy...)

The ratings for other sensations, including feeling unfit, tight, itchy, fatigued, odorous and salty, that were obtained while the subjects were wearing the surgical facemasks were significantly lower than when the subjects were wearing the N95 facemasks.

(A: They go through it all there. If you've seen the, I don't know if you've seen, if you wear these things in a hospital scenario, you end up with blotches on your skin and everything because it's getting this moisture all the time as you're... as you're... naturally the humidity from your breath alone builds up inside, you know, in the mask, everything's wet and damp. And again, it clogs the air coming in and out of the mask basically.)

(A: So anyway, this is mainly to do with perception of discomfort and physiological measurements and so on. It's more important to see if they passed out on the treadmill, that's what I'm looking for here. And I can't even be bothered looking at it very deeply for it because they go into the different heart rate and so on...)

...reaching peaks at the end of the third exercise session.

(A: ...etc. etc...)

Temporal changes in mean heart rate under the influence of the four kinds of facemasks.

They certainly padded this study big time. But anyway, yeah obviously you're going to cut off your oxygen supply to an extent. They can't do heavy, heavy exercise, for any length of time, even if you're young, etc. And if you can't get the CO2 out quick enough either, then you start to suffer from that as well. Anyway, I'll put these articles up.

And another one too is by Helena Handbasket, we are all going to hell in a handbasket, right. This one's about...

You can’t mask stupidity… When do we get our collars and shackles Massa?

theirishsentinel.com / 16 July 2020 / Helena Handbasket

(A: Because we're all slaves now, you see. That's how they used to, they actually used to put masks on slaves, folk don't know that.)

In the dark days of slavery, masks were used as form of control over the slaves. It not only made them more compliant but it also prevented them communicating with their unfortunate fellow slaves. This was rightly seen as a form of physical and psychological torture.

For thousands of years these torture devices were used to silence women but were more generally used to keep slaves in line and compliant with their masters.

Modern mask wearing to prevent the spread of microscopic virus particles is not only unscientific, it is also a form of compliance to so-called ‘experts’ who claim that these surgical or N95 masks actually work as they claim.

They certainly do not, and therefore we must come to the conclusion that there is another reason behind these mandatory diktats that we must all wear these muzzles or gags.

These come from people with no medical qualifications or training, and therefore no authority to give orders to wear such medical equipment. There also appears to be no medical exemptions and therefore those with underlying health conditions are at serious risk of major health complications as a result of simply going about their daily business of buying essentials items for life, such as food, medication etc…

But these masks are a health hazard for all who are forced to comply.

(A: And it's true, it's true, you know. And you'll see it, you'll see the people with the mask, it doesn't matter what kind of mask they've got on, they keep digging your fingers into where the nose part is. And by that time, if there's any viruses or even bacteria [Alan chuckles.] by the way, it will come through with osmosis. It's basically capillary action between fibers and so on. When you get moisture going through to a certain level, it starts to pull it through from behind it. It will pull more through, that's how capillary action works for the material, and along comes viruses.)

(A: So here you are, they constantly got their fingers at their nose mouth part, generally pulling the mask away a bit and putting it back. And if you want contamination, they're passing it on. I saw a woman in a food shop doing that, you know, and she was serving the customers. I thought, oh no. [Alan laughing.] So yeah this is common. There's nothing to do with reality here. It really isn't. So, it says here...)

But these masks are a health hazard for all who are forced to comply.

There are many studies showing issues from oxygen depletion to heart rate problems,

(A: You'll find that too with the last study I mentioned before this so-called official one. You can’t go on an exercise machine and cut off your oxygen and reduce it, you're going to suffer. That's why, as I say, you don't have flaps over your nostrils.)

CO2 toxicity through re-inhalation of exhaled breath, headaches, fatigue, blood acidity risking cancerous cells and other health issues.

https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/articles/PMC7087880/

https://www.bmj.com/content/369/bmj.m1435/rr-40

The case for wearing masks is in serious doubt as outlined in the above report…

(A: And he gives you links as well. All these things I put up mind you have links here, from government links too. This one is NCBI, the National Institute of Health for the government telling you about these problems, right. And the British Medical Journal, there's one there too.

This isn't speculation from conspiracy sites. The only conspiracy sites now you get are from the ones that Mr. Fauci [Alan laughing.] thinks he keeps coming out with. Now he's telling you that, even though his orders back in March were opposite of today, where he was telling folk, oh, don't wear masks, no, only folk in the hospitals need to wear masks and medical personnel. Now he's telling everybody you must wear them now. It doesn't matter that they're contradictory, you know, and he wants everybody to wear them now. He doesn't see any problem with that, with the dilemma of the two opposing theories getting put out by himself. But that's not called conspiracy, you know. Even though the companies that are going to make big money, he's kind of involved with them all. That's my opinion anyway. And it's not hard to justify it. But it says here...)

Inappropriate use of face mask: people must not touch their masks, must change their single-use masks frequently ...

(A: That's what they say by the way. The ones you're wearing where you feel the moisture buildup, you're supposed to throw them away every 20 minutes or so.)

Other potential side effects that we must consider are:

(3) The quality and the volume of speech between two people wearing masks is considerably compromised

(A: That can lead, by the way, in the stores, again, when you've got hysterical people serving you, and shouting at people as though they are in a lineup like a prison camp, 'eh, because that's what some of them are doing now, and here their speech is muffled, the people they're yelling at, the customers, their speech or reply is going to be muffled. So, you get tempers going up, rising and it could lead to full, getting, you know, lead you off and getting shot I suppose. It really can. Of course it can.)

(A: If you know people who work in hospitals, ask someone who's worked especially in confined spaces, in emergency, or else an operating theater, where everybody's wearing masks. And some of them too, especially the ones like operating theaters, it's echoey, because it's a soundproof, it's like a soundproof room in a sense, generally tiled and so on so it can get properly scrubbed down and sterilized. That's the ceilings, walls and everything, and floors. And when they are wearing masks, believe you me, everything is so muffled and echoey.)

(A: Even if you're all talking the same language, and the same dialect and accent, it's confusing enough. But when you get with people from all over the world [Alan chuckles.] working together, incredibly terrible things happen at times. Because no one really understands anybody else. And it's all muffled, muuum, muuum, mmmummm, muuummmmum. Was that his left leg or his right leg? Muun, muum, munmumma-mun. [Alan laughing.] That's what happens. I'm not kidding you. That's what happens.)

(A: So here you put that environment into the stores and so on, and you get people who are terrified because they tune into their daily terror every day, the news, and people like Fauci and so on. And then they're serving the customers there. And then they start yelling at customers. Because again, when that mask on the customers as well, they don't see them as individual people anymore, they see them as just a mass, like cattle. And that they start yelling at them. And they obey like cattle. And you have less respect for them. So, you sort of, it just gets worse and worse, as they start yelling at folk. That's what happens. That's exactly what happens, folks. N-n-n.)

(A: And it's meant to be that way, they know what they're doing. Especially when literally the mask thing is a bit nonsensical. Especially when everybody wearing them is touching their face all the time anyway. But this article goes on to say that the…)

(3) The quality and the volume of speech between two people wearing masks is considerably compromised and they may unconsciously come closer. (A: ...trying to understand each other.) While one may be trained to counteract side effect n.1, this side effect may be more difficult to tackle.

(4) Wearing a face mask makes the exhaled air go into the eyes.

(A: …and it DOES, 'eh, it blows up in your face. Even that little band, that metal band you get over the nose thing, eventually it gets clogged up with the moisture, hm, the air has got to get out some way and they get around outside of the seal and it goes up around your eyes. And you feel it blowing up your eyes all the time. Then your eyes start stinging, 'eh. Anyway, it says in the article here…)

This generates an uncomfortable feeling and an impulse to touch your eyes. If your hands are contaminated, you are infecting yourself.

(A: You're infecting other people too obviously.)

(5) Face masks make breathing more difficult.

(A: Well, that's a genius said that one, 'eh. This is from experts, this is the CDC, NCBI at NIH.gov, 'eh. And again, it's from a few years ago, where it was more honest about what it would do. [Alan chuckles.] Honesty goes out the window when there's a big agenda at work. But anyway, this article continues and says…)

For people with COPD, (A: Right.) face masks are in fact intolerable to wear as they worsen their breathlessness.

(A: I wonder if the old guy had that too? Probably.)

[5] Moreover, a fraction of carbon dioxide previously exhaled is inhaled at each respiratory cycle. Those two phenomena increase breathing frequency and deepness, and hence they increase the amount of inhaled and exhaled air. This may worsen the burden of covid-19 if infected people wearing masks spread more contaminated air. This may also worsen the clinical condition of infected people if the enhanced breathing pushes the viral load down into their lungs.

(A: So, it can actually make it worse. I guess maybe, it may be intentional all this that's going on, hm? You see, if you're just breathing normally, and getting a loading dose, you see, this is what you get, a loading doses of any infection, right. And it often depends how much you catch at once. The more it can suddenly overwhelm your immune system quickly with a big heavy dose, you see. Well, if you're just breathing casually and it's not getting forced down in the deep, deep areas of your lungs, but now you're breathing through this darn mask, 'eh. And it says…)

This may also worsen the clinical condition of infected people if the enhanced breathing pushes the viral load down into their lungs.

(5B) The effects described at point 5 are amplified if face masks are heavily contaminated (see point 2)

(A: That means also with moisture and so on from your breath.)

(6) While impeding person-to-person transmission is key to limiting the outbreak, so far little importance has been given to the events taking place after a transmission has happened, when innate immunity plays a crucial role. The main purpose of the innate immune response is to immediately prevent the spread and movement of foreign pathogens throughout the body.

The innate immunity’s efficacy is highly dependent on the viral load. (A: That's what I was talking about, the viral load, you see.)

If face masks determine a humid habitat where the SARS-CoV-2 can remain active due to the water vapour continuously provided by breathing and captured by the mask fabric, they determine an increase in viral load and therefore they can cause a defeat of the innate immunity and an increase in infections.

So, this article here is quite decent and it's got articles going back for years up to the present on the same article. And from the official, official areas as I've said before, and CBI, NIH government PMC articles. And the BMJ, British medical Journal. And other ones too.

CDC inspection findings reveal more about USAMRIID research suspension - fredericknewspost.com / 22 No 2019

So, there you go, everything that's happening today goes against all the previous accepted course of actions to take in such an event as we’re having now. M-hm. Africa has always been a great test ground for the big Pharmas and the medical industry. I remember seeing a good movie, I can't even remember the name of it. Maybe it wasn't that good, maybe it was kind of boring actually. But the whole idea was that it was a common occurrence where big Pharma would pay companies to go down to do testing in village areas in Latin America and in Africa.

And that thing has always, that's always been done, you see. It's quite easy to bribe a headman or a few chiefs and so on, head people, to allow them in. Then they put out their propaganda for the people and, oh we're going to give you free healthcare for certain diseases. And they can lie to them quite easily because the folk really believe, they can't… It's hard to believe that folk can go on and use you as guinea pigs. They're always there to help you, right. But they do that, that's what they do. And a lot of the stuff that’s eventually used in the West is tested out in these places.   And it is easy to keep quiet the terrible fallouts from certain things, in the past, that's a fact. And the movie I'm talking about too was really based on things that really happened, terrible horrible things that happen with certain vaccination programs that were being tested. I wish I could remember the name of it. Anyway, it says…

Africa to Become Testing Ground for “Trust Stamp” (A: This is interesting...) Vaccine Record and Payment System (A: Okay.)

mintpressnews.com / 10 July 2020

(A: So here you go again…)

A new biometric identity platform (A: Again, this is your whole passport, immunity passport with a different name again.) partnered with the Gates-funded GAVI vaccine alliance (A: This guy has got his hands in all these pies, 'eh. This front man for all the big, big global elites.) and Mastercard (A: So here again you've got MasterCard, the cash system, and Gavi...) will launch in West Africa and combine COVID-19 vaccinations, cashless payments, and potential law enforcement applications.

(A: Hm. There ya go. It says it evolves as you evolve…)

A biometric digital identity platform that “evolves just as you evolve” is set to be introduced in “low-income, remote communities” in West Africa thanks to a public-private partnership between the Bill Gates-backed GAVI vaccine alliance, Mastercard and the AI-powered “identity authentication” company, Trust Stamp.

The program, which was first launched in late 2018, will see Trust Stamp’s digital identity platform integrated into the GAVI-Mastercard “Wellness Pass,”

(A: I love this wellness thing, 'eh? That obviously takes your mental health too by the way. And a little commentary as to your personality, 'eh. Your wellness card. Are you compliant? Are you an individualist, eccentric, or a bit noncompliant maybe? A bit asbo, as they say in Britain.)

a digital vaccination record and identity system that is also linked to Mastercard’s click-to-play system that powered by its AI and machine learning technology called NuData.

Mastercard, in addition to professing its commitment to promoting “centralized record keeping of childhood immunization” also describes itself as a leader toward a “World Beyond Cash,” and its partnership with GAVI marks a novel approach towards linking a biometric digital identity system, vaccination records, and a payment system into a single cohesive platform.

The effort, since its launch nearly two years ago, has been funded via $3.8 million in GAVI donor funds in addition to a matched donation of the same amount by the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation.

So, I'll put this one up as well for those who... There's so much to remember, isn't it? And you can say, it's almost like the Sherlock Holmes novels because in the novels you sometimes hear Sherlock talking about his attic, where everything, all the information that he knew and acquired in his lifetime was stored, in his brain, you see, in his skull, in his attic. And he says, sometimes you've got to start moving stuff out of the attic to make room for new, you see.

And today, don't forget, it's a technique which works awfully well on most folk, is overwhelming people. I read the articles over the last few years, and a few years ago I should say, from again psychological behavioral programs on the public, studies on us all and how they could quite easily overwhelm us with data. It doesn't mean it has to be real facts or true facts or anything, just data, bits and bytes of data. Until we would close down. And when you close down, then if they want you to actually follow a routine or an agenda, you become more compliant to close down. Because you can't think for yourselves, you're just overwhelmed with data.

Well, this is what they're using with all of this today with you as well. So, keep, always keep, it's like looking across the sea at night and you see a lighthouse, always keep yourself focused on that point of light way out yonder over the darkness. Don't lose sight of that. Don't get distracted. That’s your goal. That way you don't become confused with all the overwhelming data that's heaped upon you daily. Another one here too is…

Gavi and Mastercard - vaccines for children with (A: Here's the big selling point…) lifesaving vaccines gavi.org / 11 Dec 2018

(A: There are so many saints out there working for big corporations for money and for, big global vaccine companies and things, that, where would we be without them, 'eh? I tell ya. It actually gives you a Facebook live interview...)

Watch the Facebook Live interview with Michael Froman, Vice Chairman and President of MasterCard's Strategic Growth, and Dr Seth Berkley, Gavi CEO, discussing why innovation in digital ID is key to Gavi's mission.

(A: Well, they all have their missions, but regardless of their missions, maybe we should just tell them, you know, we have our own ideas as well and they better maybe put forth their various missions for our opinions.)

Abu Dhabi, 11 December 2018 – Mastercard and Gavi, the Vaccine Alliance announced today at a high-level conference for Gavi’s 2018 mid-term review, a new transformative partnership to ensure more children from the poorest countries are able to benefit from life-saving immunisation programs.

(A: You understand, we pay for all these things, the programs from the West, we pay for it all. It's not for nothing, you know, you don't do these things for nothing.)

This partnership will leverage Mastercard expertise and technology, enabling ministries of health and authorised health workers to provide a card with a digital immunisation record, to each participating child’s caregiver. By empowering caregivers to stay on track to receive critical vaccinations, the program aims to strengthen the efficiency and reach of health services in developing countries where children are most at risk of missing out on immunisation. Governments will benefit from having a better understanding of the immunisation needs of their communities.

And it's so true, that the articles over the years where Mr. Gates has been sued heavily by even India for some of the fallout from some of the programs over there too. But facts don't matter, 'eh. Another article…

Tens of thousands of coronavirus tests have been (A: This is a good one.) double-counted, officials admit telegraph.co.uk / 21 May 2020

(A: I tell you, they must've been wringing their hands, 'eh, oh, woe is me. So…)

Two samples taken from the same patient are being recorded as two separate tests in the Government's official figures

(A: Well, I am shocked. I am really just taken aback that they would stoop to this level to jack up the numbers.)

By Mason Boycott-Owen and Paul Nuki

(A: Nuki... I don't know who wrote this, that surely is not a real name. This article is from the Telegraph in England for instance. I got two articles from the Telegraph. Again, with Matt Hancock talking about coronavirus tests, etc.)

Tens of thousands of Covid-19 tests have been double-counted in the Government’s official tally, public health officials have admitted.

Diagnostic tests which involve taking saliva and nasal samples from the same patient are being

(A: [Alan laughing.] It's amazing how your mind thinks at times, isn't it? I was thinking about the movie Idiocracy, it's a comedy, where the guy gets put in an army experiment and wakes up in the future where people are living on heaps of garbage dumps and stuff, because they don't know what to do with the garbage. And the people who they bred heavily were a lower level people so, this guy literally becomes a genius because he's of average intelligence but in the future he's a genius.)

(A: But he does go in for a test for something and when he went to the hospital, it's like it's coming that way now actually. He goes into the hospital and goes into the admissions area. The woman behind the desk doesn't speak anything at all or talk to him at all, she just kind of looks at him in a glazed sort of way. In front of him is like an almost, a huge computer screen and it's got symbols rather than words. So, you get a knee and you've got a little lightning strike, like a sore knee, and all the different parts of you and so on.)

(A: So eventually he touches the one that he wants. And he goes into a line up. In the lineup there's a whole bunch of folk there too before him and after him. When it comes you turn the guy says, this tube is to go in your mouth, this one to go in the lower regions, and another one goes somewhere else. And when it's his turn the guy says, he puts them on the right places, and then, oh sorry, it's the other way around, and so then he put the one that was in his lower region in his mouth. And that's where we're getting to today with all this nonsense. But I was reading this about [Alan laughing.] them sticking them things up your nose and in your mouth, what are they using first I wonder, you know, or are they using them in both places, or did they change their mind. Anyway, that's just the way my mind works at times when I see how ridiculous things have become. So, it says here, back to the article…)

counted as two tests, not one.

Almost 350,000 more tests have been reported in Government data than people tested since the start of the pandemic.

(A: No wonder you're getting huge figures going up. No wonder you're getting huge figures spiking up. That's a lot, 350,000 MORE tests, right, than were actually done.)

The discrepancy is in large part explained by the practice of counting salvia and nasal samples for the same individual twice.

(A: So that's what they're doing, they're putting, rather than saying they both came from the same person, they put the person down twice, you see.)

Public Health England oversee the testing of patients who are seriously ill in hospital, as well as the most critical key workers.

The test involves a swab from the mouth and nose as well as a sample of saliva. (A: [Alan chuckles.]   Idiocracy.) Although both of these are taken from the same patient, they are counted twice by the Government in its daily data.

It is not the first time the Government has been caught massaging the testing data. It was accused last month of including thousands of home tests which had been posted but not completed in a bid to reach its target of 100,000 tests.

[Alan laughing.]   And it goes on and on. It's got different bits and pieces inside of it, I don't know who wrote this one here, this article, but it's got good links inside of it regardless. It's quite funny. Because you need a little bit of humor during these particular times as well.

NHS Consultant Says Staff Are Being Silenced Over COVID19

off-guardian.org / 13 July 2020

First published on The Bernician, the below statement is allegedly from a senior consultant working for the NHS in a hospital in Surrey.

Although we cannot verify his or her identity, we still think our readers should see it 1) because it dovetails with other verified reports, and 2) if it is what it alleges to be, it sheds concerning light on the state of things inside the healthcare system

I am a consultant at a major, regional hospital in Surrey. By major you can take that to indicate that we have an A&E (A: Admissions and Emergency.) department. I had agreed to give an interview to an anti lockdown activist in which I would have revealed my identity. I have since changed my mind and only feel able to give an anonymous statement.

I have changed my mind simply because that all staff, no matter what grade, at all hospitals have been warned that if they give any media interviews at all or make any statements to either the Main Stream Press or smaller, independent press/social media we may, immediately be suspended without pay. I have a family, dependents and I simply cant do it to them.

I therefore can not reveal my identity at this time but wish to state as follows:

In my opinion, and that of many of my colleagues, there has been no Covid Pandemic, certainly not in the Surrey region and I have heard from other colleagues this picture is the same throughout the country. Our hospital would normally expect to see around 350,000 out patients a year. Around 95,000 patients are admitted to hospital in a normal year and we would expect to see around a similar figure, perhaps 100,000 patients pass through our A&E (A: Admissions and Emergency.) department.

In the months from March to June (inclusive) we would normally expect to see 100,000 out patients, around 30,000 patients admitted to hospital and perhaps 30,000 pass through A&E. (A: That must be four months.)   This year (and these figures are almost impossible to get hold of) we are over 95% down on all those numbers. In effect, the hospital has been pretty much empty for that entire period.

(A: He goes through what happened and so on.)

The few Covid cases that we have had get repeatedly tested, and every single test counted as a new case. (A: So, there, that ties in with the last article too.) Meaning the figures reported back (A: They give you the official office...) to ONS/PHE (Office for National Statistics & Public Health England) were almost exponentially inflated. It could be that Covid cases reported by hospitals are between 5 to 10x higher than the real number of cases. There has been no pandemic and this goes a long way to explain why figures for the UK are so much higher than anywhere else in Europe.

It's because they are literally jacking up all the numbers.

How Honest is the COVID Fatality Count? Dr. Scott Jensen is a Physician and Minnesota State Senator. - youtube.com / 9 April 2020

Now, I'm going to put up a link as well to an awfully good article, which is an individual study of the whole Covid plague or no plague, and death rate and so on.

All-cause mortality during COVID-19: No plague and a likely signature of mass homicide by government response

researchgate.net / June 2020

Denis G. Rancourt, PhD Researcher, Ontario Civil Liberties Association (ocla.ca)

(A: He's a researcher. I didn't know we had civil liberties in Ontario, but there you go. But anyway, it's from Research Gate and it's a well-done study of using the overall death rate, annual basically, in different countries and different seasons, you know, for winter into spring and summer and so on. But it's very interesting his conclusion because his hypothesis is that it's really like a no plague. He says here...)

All-cause mortality during COVID-19: No plague and a likely signature of mass homicide by government response

(A: And before you go off and say oh my God, how ridiculous is this, it's conspiracy and so on. The fella does incredible detailed work here, year-by-year, showing you, rather than just get the fudged figures with tests and so many folk have had it or whatever have it, as they're fudging it and so on. He simply goes into the death rates, overall death rates, which can't be fudged, you see. Dying of all kinds of things, especially in spring and winter and all that, when most bronchial problems happen in the wintertime.)

(A: But he goes on to say here that, and it's about 27 pages. It's a good study of the whole, this whole phenomenon of what they call SarsCovid2 and the way the governments responded. It even shows you the spikes in all countries that happened AS SOON it was declared as being a pandemic and governments were encouraged to go into pandemic mode. That's when you had this sudden spike, mainly in the elderly across the place, all dying in homes and so on because the staff were freaked out, they didn't know how to treat them or even look after them.)

(A: Suddenly everybody... It's true, the staff, and most of the staff remember are not trained in a lot of these elderly homes, that they're really like assistants, they're caregivers, they clean up and they feed and things like that. They were petrified too, the studies had already come out which were in the newspapers admitted that, that some of them deserted, they left, they were just terrified and just left the patients and terrible death rate happened. So, what he's saying is that the response of governments is what caused the deaths, all these deaths.)

(A: Then afterwards, when that died down too, he shows you that the morbidity, the deaths I should say, of all the people so far, according to the previous graphs, and he's got them all here from all the official sources, didn't spike at all really. It just happened when the WHO declared a pandemic and they went into pandemic mode. And it's the results of how the people were treated in pandemic mode, especially in places like New York where they had them all on ventilators, you know, the data had most of them, well, a good 80% of them on ventilators died because they were stuck on these things. And they were getting, it doesn't mention it here, but they were getting about $40,000 extra for putting them on ventilators, by the way. So, there was definitely a financial incentive for these hospitals to do it.)

(A: But regardless, back to this study, it's a well detailed study with lots of links to the articles that he takes his information from. The CDC and national statistics of all kind. It's quite well worked out actually. And it will take a lot more, I've only just briefly gone over it, but a lot of data in here too, and I might share it with some of my friends.)

(A: Because he's got official studies were done before this pandemic came out on previous times with, of government responses causing deaths, again, in old-age homes and stuff like that because of the response of the government and they would go into freak mode. And it causes excess stress and the stress factor in the elderly too causes a lot of deaths as well. And they were thrown up in the air thinking that they were all going to die suddenly, and the stress must've been incredible in these old folks' homes. I mean, they're watching the same news too remember that the staff there are watching. And it's like daily horror and terror mandated by Sage and different organizations that were put out there to terrify the public. In saying that they had to really, you know, cause more anxiety to make them comply.)

(A: This is astonishing. You've got to understand this too. He's got the speech too from the WHO Director General Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus saying...)

[…] In the days and weeks ahead, we expect to see the number of cases, the number of deaths, and the number of affected countries climb even higher.

(A: Yada, yada, ya. Then he's telling them, everybody get into real, real, almost war mode, to ready the hospitals and so on.)

(A: Then he compares it with the graphs of the actual deaths, the statistical deaths. You can't fudge them, you can fudge all the causes of deaths, but you can't fudge the statistics for average deaths all through the year, you see, and previous years too. And it's just astonishing how the only spike that they had was when WHO gave that speech and told them to get into basically war mode for it. And everybody panicked, governments panicked, decided to put infected folk in with noninfected, and the stress factor in these elderly homes must've been honestly phenomenal.)

(A: Imagine being in one of these homes and you're getting written off pretty well, you're all gonna, it's just the elderly that are going to die. I mean that's what you kept hearing, 'eh. Well so were these folk hearing the same news as well every night. And then the staff were terrified, oh we might get it off the old folks, so they deserted the homes. [Alan chuckles.] Quite something, eh?)

(A: But this individual who did this study, he does go to the different studies, previous studies all done, put it together, shows you the graphs, and he's got all the data, the official stuff. And that's one thing, as I say, you can't really fudge, is the actual death rate per annum per country. And he’s got them for quite a few years for each country, you know, maybe for the last 10 years here and there. He's got...)

Interpreting the all-cause mortality “COVID peak”

(A: Because everybody's being lumped in as Covid death, right. But he goes to that as well. He says…)

The synchronicity of the onset of its surge, across continents, and immediately following the WHO declaration of the pandemic; and • Its USA state-to-state absence or presence for the same viral ecology on the same territory, being correlated with nursing home events and government actions rather than any known viral strain discernment.

(A: That's when it suddenly all happened.)

In Montréal, a guy who ran a whole chain of these nursing homes literally had been, [Alan chuckles.] he was some kind of felon already, and they're only now looking into how on earth did he get a license to run these homes, it was just incredible what they found there. https://www.foxnews.com/politics/cuomo-probe-into-nursing-home-coronavirus-deaths-askpresident-trump

“New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo on Wednesday brushed off calls for the Department of Justice to open an investigation into the massive number of deaths in the state’s nursing homes during the coronavirus pandemic – claiming he was only following guidelines (A: ...typical politician.) from the Trump administration and Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. While no formal probe has been announced, the speculation comes amid scrutiny of his March 25 directive that required nursing homes to take on new patients infected with COVID-19.”

(A: The links are all here. That's Fox News, that one.

(A: It even has the one too, he pretty well ordered them to accept the infected patients. It says…)

“During this global health emergency, all NHs must comply with the expedited receipt of residents returning from hospitals to NHs. Residents are deemed appropriate for return to a NH upon a determination by the hospital physician or designee that the resident is medically stable for return. […] No resident shall be denied re-admission or admission to the NH solely based on a confirmed or suspected diagnosis of COVID-19. NHs are prohibited from requiring a hospitalized resident who is determined medically stable to be tested for COVID-19 prior to admission or readmission.”

(A: So, they're telling them they have to accept them even though there'd be definitely certain positive ones amongst them.)

(A: Incredible really what's happening. And it's true enough, you understand, this is a massive agenda. I've already said, this is, a lot of people have been sacrificed already for this agenda. And this is an agenda. Come on here. You don't have mock trials of a pandemic just before it all breaks out, and you follow it to the letter, exactly as you would do in the so-called test that you already had and hand all this power into private organizations, Pharma companies and vaccine companies, working with government. Come on here. Come on. N-n-n. And then literally, anyone who complains about it loses all social media access and are banned for mentioning the obvious. This is tyranny, to the nth degree here.)

(A: Well, there was no lockdown and stopping of everything then, was there, when it was four times as many folk died then, 'eh, of flu and complications of it. It's got Stanford and different studies by well-known organizations and universities, NCBI, Ministry of Health, the National Institute of Health and so on, .gov, yada, yada, ya, stacks of them.)

(A: But the fact is, it's well laid out what he’s showing you, and the different graphs, from the official sources, not the usual stuff that you can't figure out, if this is the total deaths for the month, the week, the day or the year or... [Alan chuckles.] Because that's how they deliberately put out most of them. He goes just by deaths, you see, to show you there's no spike, really, except one little peak, and in the old folks' homes mainly when it was declared by the WHO as a pandemic. That's when all staff panicked and yada ,yada, ya, you all know the stories. Good article though.)

(A: You can go through it. I'll have some of my friends go through it too to see what they make of it. To make sure it's all, you know, up to scratch and so on. But it's well done. All-cause mortality during COVID-19: No plague and a likely signature of mass homicide by government response

Ontario Civil Liberties Association. I'll have to look that up and see what it is, maybe, I never heard of it. I know in the States they have theirs, but I don't know if we've got it here, we'll wait and see. Good article though.

Remember folks too, again, I'll say it again, because folk forget very quickly. Go into my website @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. That's my website. You'll see my official sites all listed on that one site. You can buy the books and discs @cuttingthroughthematrix.com and donate to me and help me tick along. Because things are coming down fast as I say. Eventually you'll get, they'll weed all the dissenters out very quickly now because they're going into the next stage of this big agenda.

Remember, above all the Covid idea is a big agenda. That's what's really driving all of this. They couldn't do it with just the climate change, it would take years to convince the public to cut back in a postconsumer age and all the rest of it, and into rationing. So, this way is the fastest way to bring it about. The WEF has mentioned that very fact, they can get their agenda through this way under the Covid. And so did the Club of Rome. They are all rejoicing over it. The businesses that eventually will be allowed to open up will be what they call sustainable and green, etc. etc. All the things that were listed in their sustainability agenda under climate change, and all the other reasons and excuses they've tried in the past to bring this to pass.

So, as I say, times are getting tough. You'll need a few out there that can put out the information and keep it going. And tell you at the same time, don't just panic and bury your heads in the sand either. Do what you can, however little it might be that's positive as we get through all this for yourselves. And stay in with your friends, get some friends and try to, not to fall out [Alan chuckles.] and put up with each other because you'll need each other. You always do when it comes to deep crisis like that because it's going to get awfully bad as we go into this total wartime mode. They won't just stop at this. They're going to go on and on and get the whole agenda fulfilled by the way. So, go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com and you can donate to me and help me tick along, hopefully, for as long as I can survive. However long that might be. [Alan chuckles.]   As I say, cash is okay or PayPal or checks. All the usual methods.

So now here is…

Banks Use COVID As Cover To Shutter Branches Across America

washingtonpost.com / 11 July 2020

The Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) acting head Brian Brooks said banks should not use the cover of the virus pandemic to shrink branch footprints across cities and towns, the Financial Times reported.

(A: It's happening in Canada too.)

Brooks warned in a recent interview with the European financial daily newspaper that he "was not prepared to revisit the fundamentals of bank regulation" due to the pandemic.

He said banks shouldn't expect permanent concessions from regulators because of virus-related issues.

Many bank branches were temporarily closed for months due to virus-related shutdowns. Customers heavily relied on online services, and bankers told FT (A: The Financial Times.) they hope the pandemic will allow them to "accelerate branch closures."

(A: So, there is your agenda again, 'eh. You're post everything pretty well. You're definitely post interest on any savings that you have. You're not getting any interest on it. And some of them have negative interest rates, they're charging you for having your bank accounts and you get nothing back. Now of course they want to close down branches as well. But they still want you to do everything cashless and go through their bank system, electronic system, so they can skim things off for every transaction. And you thought that banks were part of your community? Like the ads say, we're part of your community. Ohhhh. There ya are.)

(A: So, it's true how fake our whole system is, and commercial system, isn't it? It's all propaganda and smiley faces in ads and telling you what to think and believe. And folk fall for it, their part of our community. You know, they're here because they love us. [Alan laughing.] So, he says…)

Brooks said national banks preparing to shrink branch footprint must inform OCC three months in advance along with a detailed explanation of the reasoning.

I don't know if they even have to do anything like that in Canada. Because now they are expected, I know in Canada apparently they kind of told some of their employees, some of the more senior ones maybe, to go home, they bought them all laptops in some of the branches and told them to go home and then do it all from their homes anything that had to be done. Which might have been fine for the banks, but it was just hopeless for the customers trying to get even checks cashed and things like that.

But we know the future is to go cashless. Everything is. Again, you're back into the system that Bertrand Russell talked about, you see. Because money is a control mechanism, for you. It's power for those who own it all at the top. But for you it's a control mechanism over you. Once it's totally electronic, that's how they're going to punish you. That IS on the agenda. If you don't toe-the-line and do what you're told and obey what they say and so on, to pay rent and all that, you've got to do it all cashless, you see. That's what it's all going to be, cashless transactions, ala Bertrand Russell. Everything you're living through today was planned about 40, 50, 60, 70 years ago. I hope you understand that. Yep. That's how things really work you know. I'll put this article up too. And then you've got these ones here about Britain…

Britain 'faces decades of tax rises' to repair finances after virus crisis

thesun.co.uk / 10 July 2020

(A: Because of the massive borrowing, again, wartime scenario, right, and shutting down the whole economy. And this is just… wait 'til… How do you think they're going to get through in the US? This is to take the US completely down; I hope you understand.)

BRITAIN could face decades of tax rises to repair its battered public finances in the wake of the coronavirus crisis, economists have warned.

It isn't even finished yet. It's an agenda to bring you into utter poverty. That's what austerity is, folks. It's a nice word for poverty. Hhhhhhhhhhh. I-yiy.

Anyway, look at the States and Canada. Canada is completely dependent on the US. It was bailed out after the 2007/8 crash, planned crash, or reset then, and we’ve lost a good 40% of the currency value of a dollar, of the buying power of the dollar since then paying it off. It's not paid off yet totally. And every major bank branch in Canada, the big big banks in Canada, every major one, was getting special drawing rights as the American banks were from the US Federal Reserve. I hope folk realize that happened.

It's all planned that way to take you down, you know. They always do this, they always plunder you eventually, the same banks and so on, the elite always do this, at least twice a century, sometimes more. This is the big one of course to reset everything, and the way you live, into your mandated austerity. To save the planet, you understand. As you start getting sick. If you think this is bad with Covid idea or folk just dying off in the wintertime, as they always do with bronchial problems in the northern climates, you wait until you're really into austerity and you're malnourished. You wait and see the winters then. Woah! And this is well understood, folks. Yep.

You shut down the entire economies for something literally most folk don't even know they've had, never mind didn't even get ill with it, most folk. Even the ones who did get ill could have been treated properly without all this mandated ventilator nonsense and so on and hysteria surrounding it all. It could have been done logically and quietly and professionally and efficiently, and pulled them through, definitely, with a good lot of them anyway, no doubt about it.

[Alan chuckles.]   You know, they hate religion, don't they? What's left of it in the West. But they've said, they're quite open about it, they're using, and another Cathedral of course in France got set on fire, 'eh? Intentionally. Because that's the agenda too. But if you look at communism, and they want to destroy religion, you see, as a nuisance. Because folk obey their religion, which gives them individual rights, you see. As opposed to simply obeying government and doing what you're told.

And that's a fact. HG Wells talked about it too, he was all for the eradication of religion, and the family unit mind you, same as communism, for the Fabian Society and for the elite that he worked for. As I say, the richest folk on the planet run both sides, completely, at the top. But you find, I mean, they always go after religion. And Mao Tse Tung said it too, in China, Mao, Tse Tung, Chairman Mao. He said that power comes from the barrel of a gun, that's what he said. And when he was asked what he was afraid of though, when he was talking about power and guns and so on, he said, it was a big idea. What he was referring to were folk with religious thoughts, religious ideas.

Because folks will blindly follow them and put 100% of themselves into a cause, the cause of religion. And it can be a tremendously formidable enemy for any dictatorship or system. And the governments all know that, and even and including all the so-called democracies. [Alan chuckles.] It's an awful nuisance when you say, well you know God gives them rights, not you. And I'll obey my God and not you. That really ticks them off to no end, you know.

So, it's says they're trying to shut down all religion. Where folk gather. Folk gather and they meet each other, and they've got things in common. They can help each other out. This is social gathering time. The churches were tremendous social gathering places. That's where people used to, daughters and the sons used to meet each other for marriage and things. This is a social thing. Vital. Mind you, they want to destroy all that too. So, it says...

Public Masses resume in Scotland with ‘irksome’ 50-person limit

catholicworldreport.com / 15 July 2020

CNA Staff, Jul 15, 2020 / 08:10 am (CNA).- Public Masses in Scotland resumed Wednesday with a maximum number of 50 people permitted to attend regardless of church size.

(A: That's astonishing, 'eh. Yeah. It's astonishing. I mean, a God, the one they say who will tell you how many folk are going to be permitted to come into heaven, but your state, your government tells you how many folk are permitted to go to church. Think about it, 'eh.)

The Scottish Government (A: Mind you, the Scottish government literally is about 10° left of Karl Marx. It says…) permitted public Masses to begin again from July 15, 118 days after they were suspended on March 19 and 11 days after they resumed over the border in England.

A 50-person limit, 'eh? If you see some of these photographs inside the churches, they're all well-spaced out inside, a massive high ceiling, 'eh. I mean, you’re talking about, it's almost equivalent to being outside in a sense, and they're all sitting way apart from each other. But that's not good enough. They want to shut them all down. The governments have really had churches in their sites for an awful long time. Especially Christian churches, you know. Definitely, no doubt about it. They've been quite vocal about that for a long, long time.

And they're doing the same in the States too I believe. At least in the States they might get some folk to say no, 'eh. Hopefully. Hopefully. But there ya go. You understand, when there's nothing else to stand up for except just do what the state tells you, it's all over, you're under complete tyranny. Absolute horrendous tyranny. That's what they had in the Soviet system all that time, utter tyranny. You did what you were told. OR ELSE. Everybody was scared. It wasn't living, it was existing. Folk didn't even want to look at each other in the streets passing, you know. Everybody looked somber and a bit suspicious and you know… It was that bad.

And East Germany was so bad with the Stasi, which they're using that technique now with the contact tracers, by the way. [Alan laughing.] It's just incredible watching all this being pushed out once again with different names for the same things. The Stasi literally spied on everybody. They had over half a million, almost a million people paid to spy on all the other people. And countless assets because they'd threaten folk if they didn't help them become informers, they would pick them up or somebody in their family and put them in prison. This was horrific.

Well, this is the system you're going into, when there's no religion to stand up for. Religion will bind folk together and they will stand up and say, get off our backs, you know. That's what they don't want. So, when you don't even have that to fall back on, you've got nothing, you see. You certainly, in this age, you can't argue science with them, when they're using science to justify their agenda, their tyrannical agendas. You're going to go into their playing field and debate statistics and so on with them? Of course, you won't because they fudge it all.

I hope you understand, you've never really seen a free society. You've never really been in one. You have degrees of freedom but you're losing the last few degrees of that. Carroll Quigley, again, the professor who trained people for the US State Department and to go across the world and bring in this world order of commerce and at that time US domination over it, and at the same time bring everybody into the global type structure. I mentioned it before, the US, I said this back in the 90s, the US is financing all of this through its tax money, and the State Department, for the few that really run and rule the US at the top, will bring the whole world into the system as they take it all down. Then eventually when the US has done that, done it all, then they'll collapse the US into the system which it created. That is the plan. You're seeing that latter part happening now, where it's folding up into the system that it created and forced upon the rest of the world for a long time. Agendas that you don't even understand. And agendas that were often, had nothing to do with the interests of Americans back home. And often for outsiders' interests. We all know this.

Anyway, here we are, as I say, we're going through it all now and folk will never, haven't quite got this through their heads yet, what's really, really happening right now. Now it's the global agenda for a world type corporate government, run by professional CEOs at the top and corporations, on behalf of the richest folk on the planet, and academia all serving them to manage our lives from birth to death, every individual, a number, the whole lot. And that's it too, we've all got numbers, don't we? Our SIN numbers, social insurance numbers, our sin numbers, you're born in sin, right? [Alan chuckles.] Ah, they love to mock you, they certainly do. And folk don't even know it's happening. M-hm. There's another article from the Guardian and it says…

The strange case of Australia's 10m Covid-19 tests: how Andrew Forrest's coup fell flat theguardian.com / 10 July 2020

What seemed a good news story became complicated as details emerged about the $190m Covid-19 tests and the company that made them

(A: It's quite a, the usual kind of scam that went on. Big, big money. Taxpayers money naturally. It says…)

Andrew Forrest had used his Chinese connections to help secure a remarkable quantity of diagnostic equipment for Australia.

Even though all these tests mind you are the same type tests that have been proven useless. [Alan chuckles.] It doesn't make any difference when there's big profits to be made, 'eh? Hm? Yep. And how it all kind of fell flat. And even expired, they only lasted a few months, the shelf life of these particular testing kits and so on. It's amazing, you know, they never get their hand slapped for throwing, you know, billions… Well, it didn't go out the window, because billions would end up, or millions definitely within the pockets of the folk involved. So, it was profitable for them. But I'll put this article up here.

And also, I'll put an article up, if I can find it later, on Australia as well, on their particular system of tracking and tracing everybody as well. It's quite something. All countries are doing the same agenda. Again, this was all planned before this happened, folks. We exist to get fleeced by the companies that plan all these things way in advance. They really do. Monitored from birth to death, you can't move without getting monitored, 'eh.

And this article too… is by Whitney Webb who's done an awful lot of good articles, but this one here is…

All Roads Lead to Dark Winter

thealtworld.com / 1 April 2020

The leaders of two controversial pandemic simulations that took place just months before the Coronavirus crisis – Event 201 and Crimson Contagion – share a common history, the 2001 biowarfare simulation Dark Winter. Dark Winter not only predicted the 2001 anthrax attacks, (A: ...that happened after the 9/11 towers.) but some of its participants had clear foreknowledge of those attacks.

(A: It's quite a good article for those who want to go through it. And how it's just astonishing too. I remember all this stuff and I kept a lot of the information. Because I knew a lot of it would disappear over time, and certainly, the memory hole, Orwell's memory hole is definitely working overtime on the Internet and the World Wide Web, the WWW, 666, 'eh. But there ya go. It says...)

In addition to missing samples of anthrax...

(A: This is what happened when it all happened with it at Fort Dietrich and so on.)

...U.S.' top biological warfare research facility at Fort Detrick, Maryland. Specimens of highly contagious and deadly pathogens (A: That had just disappeared and so on.) – anthrax and ebola among them – had disappeared from the lab, at a time when lab workers and rival scientists had been accused of targeted sexual and ethnic harassment and several disgruntled researchers had left as a result.

In addition to missing samples of anthrax, ebola, hanta virus and a variant of AIDS, (A: ...interesting, a variant of AIDS…) two of the missing specimens had been labeled "unknown" – "an Army euphemism for classified research whose subject was secret," according to reports. The vast majority of the specimens lost were never found and an Army spokesperson would later claim that it was "likely some were simply thrown out with the trash."

(A: It's quite an interesting article. It goes into Fort Dietrich of course including what happened as well, how... You wouldn't believe too, [Alan chuckles.] how Mr. Fauci has got his hand in everything as well, including Fort Dietrich and so on. It's just astonishing. It's a small world for those that are put in charge of big areas of it. But this article is quite interesting on how other players...)

Other major players in Dark Winter (A: This is from quite some years back, right, but they're now working some of these players from Dark Winter…) are now key drivers behind the "biodefense" mass surveillance programs currently being promoted as a technological solution to Covid-19's spread, despite evidence that such programs actually worsen pandemic outbreaks.

(A: Definitely what they do is, as I've mentioned in the previous articles, is kill a lot of patients off by the response. And…)

Others still have close connections to the insider trading that recently occurred among a select group of U.S. Senators regarding the economic impact of Covid-19 and are set to personally profit from lucrative contracts to develop not just one, but the majority, of experimental Covid-19 treatments and vaccines currently under development by U.S. companies.

It's quite a good little article for those who want to go through it and so on. You understand, yeah, and don't ever, I mean, I even heard Fauci mention something when he was questioned about his constantly contradicting himself with what he's demanding, you know, like don't wear a mask, then now you must wear a mask, and he can reconcile the two statements, you know, regardless. But he mentioned in his response about people who put out conspiracy theories. Well, it's about time we put things together, these are not conspiracy theories, you know. Are you supposed to believe in COINCIDENCE theories ALL the time? ALL the time? Huh? I don't think so. No. No.

Detective work, and in every detective story, and every real detective knows, you put things together to lead you to conclusions. You don't say, oh that’s a conspiracy theory, detective so-and-so. You see? That's how it's done. And we're fed up with the CIA come back of conspiracy theories, that they came out with about JFK getting shot and all that kind of stuff. Oh, it's a conspiracy theory that there was more than one gunman, or whatever it happens to be, you know. The CIA came out with that and they've never given up on it. It's awfully good, mind you, it shuts most folk up. Well, you're a conspiracy theorist. You're supposed to blush if they say that to you, you know. It's like calling you a Nazi or something, you're supposed to blush and shut up. It's a communist technique actually to shut you up, to stop any debate on anything.

Florida Man Who Died In Motorcycle Wreck Labeled As COVID-19 Death By State

zerohedge.com / 19 July 2020

We know that coronavirus death counts are being inflated - we just don't know by how much.

Fox 35 did an investigation where they talked to Orange County Health Officer Dr. Raul Pino about two deaths of people in their 20s that were labeled coronavirus deaths. When they asked if the people who died had underlying conditions, Pino responded: “The first one didn’t have any. He died in a motorcycle accident.”

When he was asked about whether or not the motorcycle victim's data was removed from the state's Covid system, he responded:

“I don’t think so. I have to double-check. We were arguing, discussing, or trying to argue with the state. Not because of the numbers -- it’s 100…it doesn’t make any difference if it's 99 -- but the fact that the individual didn’t die from COVID-19…died in the crash. But you could actually argue that it could have been the COVID-19 that caused him to crash. (A: [Alan laughing.] You see the games that they play?) I don’t know the conclusion of that one.”

This seems to stand at odds with how the Florida Department of Health explained how they were reporting Covid deaths.

The state had told Fox: "A COVID death is determined if COVID19 is listed as the immediate or underlying cause of death or listed as one of the significant conditions contributing to death. Or, if there is a confirmed COVID-19 infection from a lab test – and the cause of death doesn't meet exclusion criteria – like trauma, suicide, homicide, overdose, motor-vehicle accident, etc."

"The only thing that I can say to people is the data I provide you with is the data we consume from the state. We offer you the best data that we have," Pino concluded, copping out.

(A: Meaning, sidestepping [Alan chuckles.] any further questions.)

So yeah, there you go. Everybody's dying of Covid, you see, no matter what happens, 'eh. And of course, we all know that Donald Trump's, whether it's real or not we don't know, he's got a little spat going on with Dr. Fauci. This is from the Daily Mail.

Donald Trump claims 'I get along with and I like' Dr. Fauci despite his own White House aides calling him 'Dr. Faucet' and distributing list of medical expert's supposed mistakes - dailymail.co.uk / 13 July 2020

But that's what the folk around Fauci call him, Dr. Faucet because wherever he appears, he goes and starts performing and just spouts off the same stuff. I guess that's the word, spouts, right, faucet. And you know what he's going to say, oh that's terrible, I should shut everything down, oh yeah, just close everything down, yep, stay in your homes, do what you're told, blah, blah, blah.

But folk really are fed up with this. Again, Fauci has got a big role to play, preplanned of course. And yep, he's got a finger in every pie. And he's got a finger in every pie I think that's going to definitely materially profit financially, incredibly so, from all of this as well. Mind you, they always reward the big implementers of the big agenda awfully well, don't they? This says….

Stockman: The Clown Cars Are Fully Loaded And Dr. Fauci's Is Leading The Parade

zerohedge.com / 18 July 2020

Yesterday he uttered the following incoherent babble, saying the recent surge in new cases is because the Virus Patrol didn't go far enough in throwing 50 million Americans out of work:

'We did not shut down entirely,' Fauci, director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, said. 'We need to draw back a few yards and say, "OK, we can’t stay shut down forever." …You’ve got to shut down but then you’ve got to gradually open.'

Got that?

What does this pretentious old windbag think - that the blooming, buzzing mass of a $21 trillion economy can be calibrated up and down by the week via some magical dimmer switch?

Never mind because he was then on to this preposterous comparison:

Fauci also said he expects the public to compare the Covid-19 pandemic (A: This is true, this is what he said…) to the 1918 pandemic flu, which killed around 50 million people, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Well, it so happens that the US death rate from the Spanish Flu was 655 per 100,000 persons (675,000 deaths in a population of 103 million). That’s obviously orders of magnitude larger than the 39 per 100,000 deaths to date from the Covid.

As I've said before, from these other articles, on the average statistical death rate, what we've got right now it's pretty well normal, except for that little spike when they started to terrify the public and everybody, all the workers fled the old-age nursing homes.

But everybody's fed up with Fauci, there's no doubt about it. But again, he's the front man for a BIG agenda. And he's got his fingers in, you understand this guy, literally, he's got to be CIA, at the very least because he's in charge of bio labs. These bio labs are... Well, it's, we just alter viruses to make them killers, in case it ever went that way by itself, you know, we tweak them into being bigger killers, so we're ready for them if it ever breaks out. This is what their excuse is for the bio labs.

The bio labs are warfare labs making deadly, deadly, deadly viruses out of things which are harmless, generally. Gain of function they call it. And that's why the military and the Pentagon is completely interwoven with Fauci. And the CIA is too. And Fauci is also into Fort Dietrich, he's got a big say in Fort Dietrich. He's got a big say as well in the cancer virus agenda as well, you know, the ones that, huge money goes into all these things. Because yeah, of course the military is involved in doing tests to see if they could create cancers using viruses. You know. Some of them we know they can.

But he's got a finger in every pie. Just astonishing. And here he is on TV every day terrifying the public and telling them what to do, like some, you know, Mussolini. Just astonishing. Il Duce. Yep. It's astonishing. You can't believe it. I mean, who do they really? And all the fudged statistics and all the rest of it. And we're supposed to all go into poverty and shut the entire world economies down here? For a new system, a new reset into poverty? Ha. Ha. N-n. No, that's bigger than just a guy in charge of some medical opinions.

Enforcing Compliance with COVID-19 Pandemic Restrictions:

Psychological Aspects of a National Security Threat

jcpa.og / 18 March 2020

As the world faces the threat of the coronavirus (COVID-19), many commentators and national leaders around the world are beginning to recognize it as a genuine national security threat.

In human behavior terms, however, the threat is not from an external enemy but from citizens who refuse to comply with guidelines and instructions and fail to change their behavior to adapt to the developing situation. With the coronavirus, the individual refusing to comply is an active and ongoing threat to others as well as or sometimes more than to themselves.

(A: And where does this come from? Where do you think this comes from? Any idea where it comes from? This one here is actually from Jerusalem Center for Public Affairs. Mmmm. [Alan laughing.] I've got to look underneath it. It says...)

Jerusalem Center for Public Affairs

Israeli Security, Regional Diplomacy, and International Law

(A: Well, this guy should learn some diplomacy [Alan chuckles.], you know, he's telling that folk are going to be a threat, they're a threat, you see. He says…)

The obvious threats are the outright refusers. From a psychological perspective, these are people who are either oppositional in their attitude or in denial regarding the effects of their refusal. While the former understand that by intentionally violating guidelines they are creating risk for others, the latter deny it, at times adopting an “it won’t happen to me” attitude.

He goes on and on and on, this character. I mean, you can see the ones who want the uniforms, 'eh? And can mandate and scream orders over the masses. And from Israel too there's other awfully good articles from professionals who have come out and saying this is all bogus. And literally saying the same thing, it's the terror and fear that's been causing the terrible fallout from all this. And not giving them the treatment, the proper treatments, which are well understood by the way. M-hm-hm. Quite something, 'eh?

But yeah, some people you can see literally they're all on board. And I don't know if this guy too, I don't know, if he's got any say at all in, because a lot of the characters who are pushing this stuff have got involvements in security bracelets as they call them. Which were developed for prisoners by the way. I think Israel has a company that does that too, and sells them to the world, electronic bracelets. That's what they wanted to use in Canada for all its people who don't have cell phones, and who might not want to go along with things, you know, so you can't leave your home, etc. You'd be like a prisoner because you won't conform and obey der Feurer, you see. So there ya go.

Face Masks Mandated By UK Government Specifically Say They Don't Protect Against COVID-19 - zerohedge.com / 18 July 2020

I mentioned one like that before already, so I’ll put that up again. And…

Fauci is sidelined by the White House as he steps up blunt talk on pandemic

washingtonpost.com / 11 July 2020

For months, Anthony S. Fauci has played a lead role in America’s coronavirus pandemic, as a diminutive, Brooklyn-accented narrator who has assessed the risk and issued increasingly blunt warnings as the nation’s response has gone badly awry.

But as the Trump administration has strayed from the advice of many of its scientists and public health experts, the White House has moved to sideline Fauci, scuttled some of his planned TV appearances and largely kept him out of the Oval Office for more than a month...

(A: Well, that's the way you're supposed to do it, don't let them in. If you don't have to leave home or room without it, don't do it, just stay there. So, they go on about this spat between the two of them basically. And you won't get any backing for Trump, to back him up anyway. None of the media is going to back up Trump on anything. Even though he seems to be all over the roadmap, and that is true, he's all over the place.)

(A: But after all, if he would just stay out of foreign wars, he would get a lot of backing from the general public. Not from the military maybe, so many of the generals are so compromised themselves in the military-industrial complex, that's a problem in itself too.)

As for Fauci himself, although he is frustrated by the turmoil and the state of the outbreak, friends say he has no plans to abandon his post, which includes a critical role in the development of a coronavirus vaccine and treatments.

Well, he's been on board for a vaccine from the beginning, regardless of your own immune system working. There's a different agenda here obviously, maybe a few agendas, apart from just the profit motive. But you don't rush these things through. And folk should not be forced to take something, especially when they've already got antibodies to the actual problem.

Now here you go too, here you go. This is awfully good. This article is to do with psychology. You see, psychology is a big part of what run your lives and you don't even know it. Most folk don't know it. Because they don't come out and say, oh by the way we're giving you new thoughts and ideas and we're altering your behavior. That's what I wanted to really finish up with tonight, some of these articles to do with, to show you what's happening.

It's a massive business, controlling us all and manipulating our thoughts and our minds to get uniform opinions prevalent throughout society. You get all the specialists that live off our tax money, get grants thrown at them all the time. They live awfully well, these master manipulators, the kind that Bernays said, those who run the country or the world are an invisible government, you don't know they exist or they're there but they're doing it, they are pulling strings and you jump and dance like puppets. So here you have psychology today, and again, with all these universities that are heavily subsidized by taxpayer’s money to create the chains that chain and enslave our minds. And they pay...

I see these people as traitors to humanity, the people who profit off manipulating us. What's wrong with plain old truths and facts? Well, you can't have that, oh, no way, no, you do it quietly, like bandits in a sense, 'eh. So here you go, this article here…

(A: I guess that's extra cash. They've got their hands out for all, just give us more money and we'll study this, and we'll study that and so on. Incredible. And...)

(A: You won't make real friends when you're stuck at home, you know. [Alan chuckles.])

Erasing memories might be difficult after all.

Well, you know they put viruses in the brains of people for PTSD, remember that one? Remember that one, for the military? This is all from psychologists and so on, and people who are into your brain, 'eh. I guess that's a step up from just getting a little scalpel and drilling a hole in the prefrontal cortex and going into the temples and just cutting a wee bit here and there, 'eh. So...

Under Pressure: Good Behavior in the COVID-19 Pandemic

psychologytoday.com / 5 May 2020

The COVID-19 pandemic has brought tragedy and hardship to many people. But it has also opened up opportunities (A: Don't they always go the same way, these characters?) for behavioral scientists to advance their understanding of behavior change.

(A: You see, that's their whole purpose is to change your behavior. Not to help you but change your behavior.)

In a recent BBC article, Mark Easton writes:

The behavioural science that forms part of the government's thinking on the lockdown warned before the restrictions came in that people would struggle to stick to the rules for prolonged periods.

However, experts have been struck by how compliant the British public have remained.

Why has there been no evidence of the “behavioral fatigue” that some people were initially worried about?

(A: You mean, all their lies and that they said that at the time, they would terrify by the public, that would cause incredible fatigue too, as well as behavioral change that was getting forced upon them. So, what happened to it all?)

When it comes to behavior, good or bad, there is rarely an easy answer. Compliance is undoubtedly due to a combination of variables, including the high risks involved (for both individuals and society)...

(A: Meaning terror campaign. I read the articles too remember, that they handed out the to the press telling them to increase tension and fear amongst the public, for reporters, right. [Alan chuckles.] So, there you go. Yeah, a combination of variables, no kidding.)

In terms of the spectrum of concepts and tools behavioral scientists have identified, social factors may well be the most important dimension in explaining behavioral compliance during the current pandemic. I was reminded of a literature review related to hand hygiene that I wrote a few years ago, which prominently featured social factors, especially in healthcare settings.

My report highlighted research and initiatives drawing on the power of social influence by role models, peers, and patients. It also mentioned mobilizing social norms and social comparison, the power of observation and personal feedback, as well as using commitment devices.

(A: This is all their psychobabble yap, you see. And that's why the only folk that you thought had Covid initially were celebrities. They were all getting paid to say that they had it. [Alan chuckles.] Oh yeah, I did. Folk that you had heard about, all famous folk, you know, not as ordinary people that you don't know anything about, but the famous people. That means it must be prevalent if they got it, 'eh, with all their wealth and money and big estates and stuff, you know. So there ya go. So, it's the role models, that's what they used to influence you, you know, and...)

... mobilizing social norms and social comparison, the power of observation and personal feedback, as well as using commitment devices.

In terms of role model effects, for example, one study found that hospital workers were less likely to wash their hands if a peer or higher ranking person who did not engage in hand hygiene was in the room with them. (A: Right. And they got all the links to it, all the studies with the links for their studies.)

Research conducted in university restrooms (A: What d'you mean being in there, stuck watching folk. I guess that's what they're talking about, peer studies, 'eh? [Alan chuckles.]) found that female students were more likely to wash their hands when others were present in the restroom (91%) than when they were alone (55%). In hospital contexts, a study on hand washing showed that baseline hand hygiene rates were greater in high visibility areas located near nurses' offices (45%) than low visibility rooms (29%).

(A: Even THEY are getting studied and studied and studied, you see.)

Another hospital-based study measured hand hygiene compliance during periods in which they were either aware or unaware of being observed.

(A: Why don't they do this study on, as I say, they're picking away at the mask in front of their nose, the wet part, where their breath goes through, [Alan chuckles.] why not do studies on that to see how bad it is for spreading everything, 'eh? But no, they're not getting paid to do that, right.)

Elsewhere, an ICU unit observed staff for several weeks via video. Workers were informed about the cameras installed to monitor hand hygiene but were not given performance feedback. During this time, hand-hygiene compliance rates were below 10%. In a follow-up period during which the hospital workers received emails and hallway scoreboards with information about compliance rates, the rate rose to above 80%.

(A: Now listen…)

The powerful impact (A: ...we've always known this, like they've just discovered it, right…) of peer pressure and social norms has also been demonstrated by research comparing the effectiveness of different types of messages in an English highway service station restroom.

(A: These pervs should be... the only way to deal with these characters who are… [Alan chuckles.] Woah.)

Results showed that some messages worked better on women than men, but one message performed well for both genders: the normative statement “Is the person next to you washing with soap?” Compared to a control condition, this message resulted in a 12% relative increase in hand-washing ratio among men and an 11% increase among women. The power of social influence was further evident when the researchers included data about restroom busyness. Effective messages became even more effective during busy periods.

(A: And he goes on and on and on talking about, to remind healthcare workers, and all the different tests they put out there to get them to comply and do what they're told to do, etc. etc.)

Behavioral science is sometimes accused of an excessive focus on what people get wrong.

(A: You see, you can only get things wrong if you're not doing what they want you to do. Do you understand that? Right. Behavioral science is about controlling people on behalf of those who run the system, d'you understand that? So, he goes on…)

As we analyze people’s behaviors during the COVID-19 pandemic, let’s also continue asking why and how people have been getting it right.

(A: Oh, there ya are, there will be another study, we’ll give them another million dollars and they’ll do that study too.)

Incredible. Again, the Sage organization, you know, that subcontracted it too all with the groups that do behavioral insights and insights teams and so on, that manipulate your thoughts online by the way in real time, I've done the shows on that too. So, there's nothing you can do online that's not prompting you and trying to push you in their direction, you see, and change your behavior. But literally, yeah, what they're, the government has been working with them all to get you to comply with a whole bunch of things that you're not even aware of yet.

Using social and behavioural science to support COVID-19 pandemic response

nature.com / 30 April 2020

(A: That's from human nature, perspectives. He goes on to talk about...)

The COVID-19 pandemic represents a massive global health crisis.

(A: Well, that's a statement right off the bat. Is it really? Is it really a massive global health crisis? Is it? But there's your fear impact on the first line, right.)

Because the crisis requires large-scale behaviour change (A: There ya go. That's the whole point is large-scale behavior change…) and places significant psychological burdens on individuals, insights from the social and behavioural sciences can be used to help align human behaviour with the recommendations of epidemiologists and public health experts.

(A: Experts, experts, Bertrand Russell, experts, we'll train the public that they can't do anything without the advice of an expert. There you go. It's all happened, long ago.)

Here we discuss evidence from a selection of research topics relevant to pandemics, including work on navigating threats, social and cultural influences on behaviour, science communication, moral decision-making, leadership, and stress and coping. In each section, we note the nature and quality of prior research, including uncertainty and unsettled issues. We identify several insights for effective response to the COVID-19 pandemic and highlight important gaps researchers should move quickly to fill in the coming weeks and months.

(A: So, they start off with a history that they're giving, they start off in about December I think it was 2019.)

...the social and behavioural sciences can provide valuable insights for managing the pandemic and its impacts. We discuss topics that are broadly relevant to numerous stages of the current pandemic to help policy-makers, leaders and the public better understand how to manage threats,

(A: …and so on, and...)

navigate different social and cultural contexts,

(A: A lot of babble, 'eh? They pad these things tremendously to try and justify the incredible cash rewards they're getting. It says here, they go on to tell you that...)

Due to space constraints, this paper provides a brief summary of each topic.

...such as handwashing, face-touching and self-isolation). Research on these topics is ongoing and, in many cases, far from settled.

(A: Oh yeah, they'll need multiple studies, and more grants, you know, they live on grants. Actually, they could retire in a few years, one or two years of this nonsense, right from University, if they've got hands out all the time for grants. And let me see now here... field experiments and stuff...)

Historically, infectious diseases have been responsible for the greatest human death tolls.

(A: Not really. Murder by the state has often been part of it, really, when you think about it. And they go on…)

For example, the bubonic plague killed approximately 25% of the European population.

(A: Well that's not quite absolutely accurate, you know. Especially when you didn't have folk doing census reports then and population studies, in the early Middle Ages, hm. But let's not, let's not stop throwing a spanner in the wrench here, 'eh? That really annoys them, that kind of thing. So here you have it here for policymakers…)

We highlight some insights for public health experts, policy makers, and community leaders.

-A shared sense of identity or purpose can be encouraged by addressing the public in collective terms (A: Not individual, you see, but collective…) and by urging ‘us’ to act for the common good.

(A: For US, for US all, to act for the common good, right. But not, so use collective terms we and us and we are all in it together, that type of thing.)

-Identifying sources (for example, religious or community leaders) that are credible to different audiences to share public health messages can be effective.

(A: That's Bernays, again, Bernays says don't bother starting an organization up, use existing organizations, go for the leaders and get them to push out your message. And that's what they do. Yep.)

-Leaders and the media might try to promote cooperative behaviour by emphasizing that cooperating is the right thing to do and that other people are already cooperating.

(A: Well, you might all shave your heads, you know, to stop the viruses hiding in there or something. So, if they all did that would you have to go along with it, 'eh? Promote cooperative behavior. No, that's obedient behavior. A big difference, you see. If you're obedient to something, you'd better be absolutely dead on in your facts here.)

-Norms of prosocial behaviour… (A: What do you mean, prosocial? That means what THEY WANT is prosocial. What they don't want is antisocial. So, anything that’s individualistic and saying I'm not going along with that, is antisocial, you see. So...)

-Norms of prosocial behaviour are more effective when coupled with the expectation of social approval (A: You see, they do approval and disapproval...) and modelled by in-group members who are central in social networks.

-Leaders and members of the media should highlight bipartisan support for COVID-related measures, when they exist, as such endorsements in other contexts have reduced polarization and led to less-biased reasoning.

(A: There ya go.)

-There is a need for more targeted public health information within marginalized communities and for partnerships between public health authorities and trusted organizations that are internal to these communities.

(A: So there ya go, it's partnerships, public and private. And public health authorities, you know, the health authorities used to be called health services. A service is something you said I want, or I don't want it. Thank you for your service. No, I don't want your service. Now they are authorities, 'eh? Folk adapt to the changes without, wait a minute, when did this change from a service to an authority? Hm?)

(A: The same with police forces, they used to be called police services, you see, then they became forces. Where before that forces were really, was reserved for military. Because they force actions, you see, they use force. But folk don't really think where it all, when it all changes. Well it's characters like this that I'm reading here that help to change it all for you without you even noticing, you just go along with it. Anyway, it says...)

...highlight the prospect of social group approval tend to be persuasive.

(A: You know, we're all in it together, and goody-goody, you're nice, you're doing awfully well, social approval and disapproval. Oh, I don't like what you're doing, it's not good for society, you know. That's disapproval, you see. Yep.)

-Given the importance of slowing infections, it may be helpful to make people aware that they benefit from others’ access to preventative measures.

-Preparing people for misinformation (A: ...you see...) and ensuring they have accurate information and counterarguments against false information before they encounter conspiracy theories, fake news, or other forms of misinformation, can help inoculate them against false information.

(A: So, get the people ready, so that they laugh and say, oh you're one of those conspiracy theorists, aren't you, for saying that it's not as bad as they make it out to be. M-hm. There ya go. You see, this is psychology, operative psychology and these characters getting paid to manipulate society on behalf of the master’s that pay them.)

-Use of the term ‘social distancing’ might imply that one needs to cut off meaningful interactions. A preferable term is ‘physical distancing’, because it allows for the fact that social connection is possible even when people are physically separated.

(A: Hhhhhhh. Can you imagine them getting paid for this? Can you believe this?)

Threat

One of the central emotional responses during a pandemic is fear. Humans, like other animals, (A: Mmmmmmm. That's why they got your religion out of the way, then they can say that you're an animal.) possess a set of defensive systems for combating ecological threats. Negative emotions resulting from threat can be contagious,

(A: That's what I'm saying too, when they start freaking out in stores and so on behind the counters, because they're terrified of the customers, each one obviously is bringing contagion to them, that then yeah, when they start, that fear that they emit spreads to the folk that are emitting it too...)

and fear can make threats appear more imminent. A meta-analysis found that targeting fears can be useful in some situations, but not others: appealing to fear leads people to change their behaviour if they feel capable of dealing with the threat but leads to defensive reactions when they feel helpless to act. The results suggest that strong fear appeals produce the greatest behaviour change only when people feel a sense of efficacy, whereas strong fear appeals with low-efficacy messages produce the greatest levels of defensive responses.

(A: In other words, when it doesn't make any sense to you, you're going to have defensive responses. And then…)

Sound health decisions depend on accurate perceptions of the costs and benefits of certain choices for oneself and for society. Emotions often drive risk perceptions, sometimes more so than factual information.

(A: You see, the normal animals at the bottom there just run on emotion, you see.)

An emotional response to a risky situation can influence thinking in two stages. First, the emotion’s quality (for example, positive vs negative) focuses people on congruent information (for example, negative information when feeling negative). (A: Boy, this person is a genius, 'eh, negative when feeling negative. Wow.)

That information, rather than the feeling itself, is then used to guide judgment at the second stage.

(A: I cannot stand these incredible folk who get paid to manipulate on behalf of the Masters, right down to teaching people, who don't even know they're being taught actually, through very careful suggestion to turn on folk and call them conspiracy theorists if they don't agree with what's being done. Hm? Think about that folks.)

These conspiracy theories can have harmful consequences. For example, belief in conspiracy theories has been linked to vaccine hesitancy (A: ...HHHHHHHHHH...), climate denial, extremist political views and prejudice. COVID-19 conspiracy theories may be similarly problematic.

For instance, people who believe that alternative remedies can help them fight off the virus may be less likely to follow health officials’ advice and instead opt for less effective (at best) or lethal (at worst) alternatives.

Some evidence suggests that giving people factual information before exposure to conspiracy theories can reduce conspiracy theory beliefs, and this strategy might work in efforts to combat conspiracy theories relevant to the current pandemic (A: And they've got another paragraph called…) (see "Fake news and misinformation" below for similar findings).

Mind you, again, on the actual Event 201 they went through all this too, right down to the fake news and how they would deal with the fake news and folk who wouldn't comply and all the rest of it. This is old stuff, you know, really. But this is a long article here. Well, not really long but I'm sure they're well-paid for it too. But this is the characters that manipulate and manipulate, right down to teaching the people to actually hate and turn on the folk who have different perspectives on what's actually happening. And can back it up with other facts. You see? But they're teaching people to turn on them immediately unless they're going along with, from the so-called official sources. The same sources mind you that tell you wear a mask and then tell you not to wear mask, then fine you if you don't wear a mask, etc, etc.

The same sources that tell you in the summer it was okay to be 3 feet apart in Britain and that would be okay and all that. The same sources said that it was okay for big demonstrations, to be shoulder to shoulder in protest marches and so on, all that kind of stuff. And even riots in some cases, that was okay, you see, because they weren't bad people at all for doing that, or they weren't endangering other people. But everybody else is endangering them if you get too close, etc. I mean, this is absolute nonsense. As you know. Absolute nonsense.

Global Social Norms and Environmental Behavior - researchgate.net / April 2017

But paying people who specialize in manipulating others...? They're psychopaths, really. You see, you get taught psychopathic techniques in their courses on how to manipulate, because that's what a psychopath does. They get through life by manipulating other people into behaving the way that they want them to behave for their own, for the psychopath’s good, you see. So that's what these folk are, these behaviorists. M-hm. And they're eugenicists too. If you ever go into the old ones and watch and the different ones who did different experiments as well, they're all eugenicists superior/inferior types and all the rest of it, you know.

And back to the one as I said near the beginning...

Canada's First 'Mask Murder'? Ontario Police Kill 73-Year-Old Man After He Refused To Comply With Local Mandate - zerohedge.com / 17 July 2020

I'll put that one up again too, there's two different articles, two different articles about the same guy, you know.

And then I'll also do this one here, a young woman, you probably saw it, I don't know if you saw the article last week, it was…

LIFE CUT SHORT Who was Jessica Doty Whitaker? The woman shot and killed for saying ‘all lives matter’

thesun.co.uk / 14 July 2020

She was fatally shot earlier this month following an argument with four men and a woman about Black Lives Matter.

(A: Because I think there was a Fourth of July event she was at, I think, and as she was leaving it a group were passing and said that black lives matter, and she just replied that all lives matter. That started the argument. And a man who was with her said...)

Ramirez said one man pulled a gun during the racially-charged argument, and then he did the same.

The two sides did manage to talk things over and go their separate ways.

(A: But then when she went under an underpass or something, she was walking, shots rang out, she got shot in the head. She was killed, murdered. Yep, there you go.)

That will probably never see the light of day in any… any… in the present climate of things it's just being ignored of course. All these things are getting put down as just protest.

Remember that all the communist protests of the past ages, hm, always end up in purges, utter slaughters. I hope you understand this. The ones at the top certainly do. They seem to be allowing it to happen. But as I said, everything happens at the top on behalf of the elite, and if the elite didn't want this to happen, a socialistic system, then it wouldn't happen. It will be more efficient for running the system on behalf of the controllers at the top, or the owners of it all. Because you can get things done fast and efficiently, because folk are terrified, they simply obey in that kind of system. So, you get further progress as they call it into the future plans, you see, where you want to take the world. And that's what they want this particular moment. After that, who knows what they'll do. They'll definitely get eliminated, the ones that helped it to happen, that's what happens as well. [Alan chuckles.] But it's interesting to watch the authorities at the top stand off and are allowing it all to happen.

Another article too…

The Social Psychology Of Crises

hub.jhu.edu / 19 March 2020

Why are people hoarding toilet paper during the coronavirus outbreak? It takes restraint to resist our instincts in the face of social dilemmas, Johns Hopkins (A: ...naturally.) expert says.

(A: Expert, they say expert and that's it, it's like high priest, 'eh. Yep.)

While restaurants in six states are offering free toilet paper to those in need in response to the barren toilet paper shelves in many local grocery stores, USA Today reports that a police department in Newport, Oregon, issued an urgent request for residents to stop calling 911 when they run out of toilet paper. "You will survive without our assistance," the department stated.

Meanwhile, as The New York Times reports young people are continuing to travel despite restrictions...

(A: Yeah, they're getting offered [Alan chuckles.] all these very cheap air flights and so on, right, by the companies that are struggling to survive. A lot of them will go under of course, that is the agenda too.)

"This outbreak is a classic example of a social dilemma," says Stephen Drigotas, a teaching professor and co-director of undergraduate studies in the Department of Psychological and Brain Sciences at Johns Hopkins. He is an expert in social psychology, and he says he'll likely draw from these news reports for material to include in his introductory course.

(A: And they go on and on and on, 'eh.)

We are the most studied creature on the planet, I've said that for 30 odd years. We truly are. And how they can actually use other groups that conform to everything against others, you know, that's part of it too. They actually started that off in school with group courses they take for groupthink, where they don't want to encourage individuality, they want groupthink. They want conformity of opinions, you see. It's very important now. The ways to do it, they have toolkits for teachers so that if Johnny or Julie doesn't want to conform to the rest, they are kind of shunned to an extent. And because of peer pressure they want to have pals and friends and so on, that eventually they just give in and say okay, then I agree with that point of view, just to get along. That's how you learn to subdue your own individuality and belong to the group, the group thing, the authorized groupthink, you see. This is what it's all about.

So, this article here now is…

Stunning! Texas Coronavirus Numbers Show COVID-19 Less Lethal than Last Two Flu Seasons

thegatewaypundit.com / 14 July 2020

The Texas Department of Health released numbers recently comparing the coronavirus to the last two seasonal flu viruses.

So, it's official stuff from the Department of Health. It doesn’t make any difference, they'll just call it conspiracy theory, you know, when you say it, but not when they say it. [Alan laughing.] It's quite something, 'eh. And then...

Using social and behavioural science to support COVID-19 pandemic response

nature.com / 30 April 2020

ANOTHER study, right. You know, there's countless studies to do with it and how they get you all to conform and go along with it and so on. So, I'll put this one up just to show you. As I say, you're back to the Gangs of New York where you can get one half of the public to kill the other half, you know, if you know how to manipulate them, and pay them here and there too.

It's the same thing too under groupthink, you see. You can use the rest of the group, or the class, to shame the other person, to make them feel ashamed of their point of view. That's what they're doing with the psychological responses in society, right down to, oh you're a conspiracy theorist, or you won't comply on something, oh shame them, shame them publicly. Well, when you start shaming adults publicly, you're not in any kind of democracy anymore, folks. I hope you understand that.

I remember doing an article years ago when they were putting in big, big screens inside shopping malls. If they saw a person dropping a piece of paper, even inadvertently pulling it out of their pocket, they'd say, yeah you, YOU! And this big face would point down to you with a finger, and then your face would come on the screen. They would all see you and you turned bright red. This was a public shaming. They were doing psychological experiments with them too, which, they're using now today of course. Eventually if you don't comply and jump and jump and jump when someone's freaking out behind a checkout counter, then you see your face eventually will come up on the screen and you'll be the bad person, and everybody will say, oh, oh, do what you're told, do what you're told, you know, be like the rest of us.

This is their whole system, they're ramming it through under the guise of Covid, ‘eh, Covid emergency. Something that most folk don't even know they've had. Another good article by the way is to do with, just before I do get off. Remember the white helmets that were over in Syria? You used to see them with their helmets on, and then you’d see them taking them off and grabbing the rifles and their weapons. It was well understood by the people who were over there that it was an army, it was merely a stunt kind of thing that was going on. But they were getting lots and lots of cash to help fund parts of this Al Qaeda – ISIS – ISIL – IS – – – – as it kept changing its name, that was to try to take down Syria, you see. And they kept calling it a civil war. It wasn’t a Civil War. It was all outsiders that were brought in.

But one of the guys that founded the white helmets organization, who was part of the British military at one point, James Le Mesurier, he was found dead, we don't know, he jumped from a window or something, it's never been clear what happened. But it said that he committed suicide. I very much doubt that. He jumped from a four-story building. And it turns out he defrauded the rescue organization that he was a cofounder in setting up, Mayday Rescue. It says...

White Helmets Co-Founder Defrauded Organization To Fund Lavish Wedding

zerohedge.com / 18 July 2020

This organization fundraised from Western countries to support the anti-government rescue group in Syria.

RT News quotes a report via Dutch newspaper De Volkskrant, who says Le Mesurier informed an accountant during an audit that he "forged receipts" for tens of thousands of dollars. At the time, he listed the funds as lined items to support efforts in evacuations for refugees in war-torn Syria, though the money was actually expensed for his lavish 2018 wedding.

Le Mesurier was paid a generous salary of €24,000 ($27,414) per month. (A: [Alan chuckles.]   I'd say that was pretty generous for a charity, right.) It was noted he issued loans to his wife, former diplomat Emma Winberg, using funds from the organization.

... "tens of thousands of dollars in cash" (A: ...went into his pocket and so on.) were used to pay for Le Mesurier's "fairytale wedding."

A Dutch Ministry of Foreign Affairs' 2018 report showed Mayday received $127 million from mostly Western state donors between 2014 and 2018.

Le Mesurier's White Helmets promote themselves as 'first responders' to emergencies in Syria, the group has been accused of staging multiple chemical attacks (A: And we saw them too, some of the children that were involved in the videos, came out afterwards and saying they were paid to pretend and so on. It's just astonishing what went on.) - including an April 2018 incident in Duma, Syria, which the White House used as a pretext to bomb Syrian government facilities and bases.

It’s intelligence agency at work there, you know. That's really how it's done. Yep. Another one too is…

Covid Digital Health Passport

vstenterprises.com

(A: I'll put that one up too. And I think this might be the one, I'm not sure if this is the one for Australia. I'll put these links, regardless, up tonight. It's all prearranged who's getting them and all the rest of it. But VSTE is currently using, they work with the United Nations it says here in this article here for this Covid passport, this health passport, consumer phasing, etc. It's not just health, it's everything, folks. You know that too, don't you? For the entire future of mankind forever, that's what it's about. It's called...)

VCode, one code, infinite possibilities.

Medical details, dental records, ICE details, crypto wallet, education details, payment methods, loyalty schemes, event tickets, travel tickets, passport, national ID, and contact details, work ID.

Everything about you will be on this thing here, VST Enterprises. I'll put this stuff up tonight. I think that's the one they're going to use for Australia. But I've got the stuff from every other country too and what they're going to use as well. It's all been preplanned, obviously. Including the companies that would get it, rather obviously too.

France: Arson suspected in major fire at Nantes Cathedral - dw.com / 18 July 2020

As I mentioned before. But they really do hate religion. They really, really do. And the past. The past is the past, folks. You know? Absolutely. Completely past. And you understand too, your ancestors might not see it the way you've been taught to see it today. [Alan chuckles.] Have you ever thought about that?

Also, in these articles…

Under Pressure: Good Behavior in the COVID-19 Pandemic - psychologytoday.com / 5 May 2020

I'll put all these ones up for you to go over. Because psychology is a big, big part. But imagine them teaching the public through TV, in little clips and bits and pieces on television and so on, how to respond to the, anyone who gives you anything that's not just parroting the mainstream news. I mean, they are denying the public their chance to think for themselves by acquiring other information, and that's okay? Woah! Woah!

This is what it's all, it's all down to this stuff now, isn't it, 'eh, social and behavioral sciences, 'eh. Isn't that something. Yep, we are well on our way folks, as you all know. But of course, if you don't think along the mainstream, what they're telling you to think, even though it makes no sense what they're telling you because they contradict themselves in fact, you're a conspiracy theorist.

I guess on the mainstream media they're confusion theorist, because that's all you're getting is confusion. And oh yeah, let's do another 50,000 tests tomorrow, in this particular area, and guess what? They'll find so many thousands came back positive. Well, shouldn't that be a good thing if no one was sick? And they'll now get antibodies out of it and be immune? That's what it always was, that was a thing for celebrating in the past years for flus and things. But nope. Nope. Not good enough you see. We've got this agenda, and nothing is going to change this agenda. Come hell or high water. So, there you go.

Anyway, don't get all gloomy and doomy. And think for yourselves. That's one thing you've got left with even though they might call you a conspiracy theorist for thinking for yourself. Don't worry about it. It might be a good club you belong to eventually. Because it will be the only factual thing left.

You've got to just start thinking for yourself and preparing for the worst. You always do that, prepare for the worst, as best you can. Even with limited supplies or even resources. And get a few friends, just stay pally with them. And make an agreement, make it an oath if you need to, to stand by each other, to help each other out if things get really tough. And if one person can't go grocery shopping, maybe someone else can, things like that. Basic, simple and human necessities have to be got regardless of lockdowns and all that. You can take turns going out doing their shopping if need be. Or going out together and helping each other.

Because this is what it's going to come down to. There's no doubt about it. They're going to make it as hard as possible to bring in the next phases of rationing, you see. And they want to get you off the country for instance into the crowded cities already so they can manage you better. They'll say, "This is for your own good, you see, during these terrible times. And it's unsustainable to be living in the country in the first place, you see." It doesn't fall in with the agenda for the 21st century and 2030 and all that.

So, we've got to accomplish all this by using another terror tactic, and here we go. Sad but true, folks. We’re in a terrible, terrible place to be but I've mentioned before, always remember there's never been a generation really, since the advent of authorized government, even if they authorized it themselves at the top, there's never been a time of prolonged peace for people living under tyrants and psychopaths. And when you get educated psychopaths working together in collective clubs and so on and parties, it can be a horror show, in bed with psychopaths in charge of corporations, that's true fascism mandating what they're going to do with you. So there ya go.

Take care of yourselves. As I say, don't give up. Whatever you do, don't give up. And read some good books if you've still got some old ones to read. Because it takes your mind off things. Helps your mind work better too when you can, books can tend to draw pictures in your mind, so you've gotta stop allowing them to GIVE you the pictures. Everything is video now. Start using own mind because your thoughts are supposed to encompass thinking with the words and also envisaging pictures that are drafted up in your mind. Very important, that, to use more of your brain all the time.

For myself Alan Watt from Ontario, Canada, you take care, and it's good night and may your God or your gods go with you.

LIFE CUT SHORT Who was Jessica Doty Whitaker? The woman shot and killed for saying ‘all lives matter’

Hi folks I’m Alan Watt and this is Cutting Through The Matrix on July 26, 2020. And as far as we know we’re all still here. Most of us anyway are still here, 'eh. Because we’re living through incredible times of... the culmination of lots of planning over many, many, many years going way back in fact into the 20th century, and even actually a bit further back than that. Everything that's happening today pretty well was being discussed for many, many years by those who bothered to take the time to crack open the old books and read all the boring stuff. Because that's what it's based on, you see, awfully boring stuff, 'eh, BS. You find that everything's presented to you [Alan chuckles.] in this fake reality of ours, and by fake I mean it's all presented to you, even your conclusions are given to you so slickly. And it's not new at all, it's been done for an awful long time.

It's quite simple, Bernays was involved in how to bring people into consensus, for instance, how to manipulate consensus and create consensus amongst the public and consensus of opinions, desired opinions by those who basically rule. Bernays wasn't dedicated to any particular country. He would sell his ideas to any country, and every country, including the communists too in the Soviet Union block countries and so on. He also worked with a lot of administrations in the US government with different presidents coming and going. He also had his private, his own private massive group, you might call them a massive group of propagandists or media manipulators and public relations companies.

He went so far in fact as to get the U.S. Army to go and rescue his client, one of his biggest clients, I think it was the American Fruit Company. He got them to go down into Latin America and overturn the elected government there. [Alan chuckles.] Because they were going to, they might even have socialized the company, you see. This massive Fruit Corporation was a massive company and it wanted to keep the workers’ wages down. So, he used the American military to go down there and claimed they were communists and got them to overthrow them.

But that's how it goes, isn't it? People get, they get caught up in names and terms and they don't realize that often you have the same characters running both sides of everything. That generally is what really happens. I've said before, you've got to have at least two sides fighting it out, physically or verbally, and politically, in order to get change. The whole idea of Marxism of course is planned change.

That's the Trotskyist attitude to the whole idea of reality, is planned, organized and directed change. It's created by strife, you create the strife to upset the apple cart of whatever staid system there is and you get the other side coming back of course and try to defend it. Out of it you get compromise. That's your whole thesis, antithesis and synthesis. So, once you get the synthesis, that's the next step to take over and change to the next step again. So, it's really what they call social evolution being fast tracked. In other words, what they think that you could have gone through in the world in 100 years, they can do may be in 30 years, even sooner if they can get a revolution going. It's a whole bunch of ideas, a whole system, a whole way of living of course to be implemented once they have succeeded.

You always find, I've always been astonished when you find the same, the richest folk on the planet surviving through all of it, you know. Because the true communism, as we've seen it, what we're given as true communism, never really demolished big corporations. In fact, in Russia the whole idea, very quickly in fact the lawyers, a lot of lawyers actually took over the country, and they claimed that they were communists. But the whole idea of not making money off labor, people's labor, was very quickly demolished. Oh, you live in a twilight zone, really. They'll say, no, it's not, it's still there. And so, they just simply reword big private banks that they set up, that, they weren’t making money off labor, you understand, because it was reworded how they got their money. And that's what lawyers are awfully good for is rewording things to get around things and getting what they want, you see.

We found that out at the end of the so-called Soviet empire when it went down, on cue, it didn't just fall apart. It's just like a monetary crisis in today's system, the only crisis you have is a money reset, like you had in 2007/8 really, and bankruptcies that were all planned to be taken over by the winners, you see. And the winners are always the ones that plan it. That's how it works. Well, the same with communism. They didn't have to collapsed back then, it was, they all got their orders from the different provinces and areas and regions of the Soviet Empire and the Soviet bloc countries to stand down pretty well. Then many of the leaders that had been communists became social Democrats, and a whole bunch of other names for the same thing really. And it goes on that way, you see.

But the ones that they really serve, the richest folk on the planet, who own corporations across the world, and they own everything we need, I mean, all resources. That's the key to it. Then they still run the show. And of course, no one attacks their headquarters. In fact, you find as I say, this Antifa, which is definitely a communist, or fascist.... iiiiiyy, communistic antifascist organization, which is an old organization of course but re-painted for the present times, they're still financed by the biggest corporations on the planet.

The leaders of the Black Lives Matter movement as we know have come out openly saying that they were trained Marxists. Trained in organizing and trained... to train a whole bunch of dialectical techniques. Of course dialectics is meant to throw off the scent of what they're really doing, and to really convince a lot of people, who sit on the sidelines thinking it's all quite aboveboard and quite natural and decent and all the rest of it.

Everything is perception management. Again, back to Bernays, that's what he was into, perception management. Very old techniques. These techniques are still used today. Even improved upon with the behaviorists working for countless governments down through time. And adding to it, to all the different techniques that they have of manipulating the minds of the public. So, everything is perception management.

There's never been a better display, isn't there? I mean, I don't get involved in the politics behind it all. It's all managed anyway. I think the whole thing is managed. And we're seeing right now with the WEF, the World Economic Forum, the great global reset. It's time to reset again, not just the monetary value, which is devaluation of the currencies. You need a lot more of the same currency to buy basic foodstuffs shortly. That's what they mean by global reset, bringing you into austerity, the planned austerity.

Of course, they're also using and financing the BLM movements. The big CEOs of these corporations, they're also funding the Black Lives Matter. I'll put some articles up where they boast about them all, they're all on board with it, all funding it. So, they're funding the demise of their own system. Because it's time to move on into their new system, you see. [Alan chuckles.] It's still them who run it all.

This has been discussed for years by them with the Futurist Societies which they own, working in tandem with the real psychopathic teams that get paid big money, behaviorists and psychologists at the top, and those who work in intelligence agencies for Department of Defense and so on. They came out with all these different articles over many, many years telling you what they'd like to do and how they could do it and pull it off, etc.

And don't forget, everything, everything that comes out of the Department of Defense or your governments, for a long time now, has been pure propaganda/public relations. ‘Public relations’ goes back again to Bernays, where he called it initially ‘propaganda’. That got a bad rap, the whole idea of propaganda so they changed it into public relations. Every official organization that's out there from police, military intelligence agencies, whatever, has specially trained people who are propagandists, or public relations experts. They know how to walk around direct questions that are asked of them and how to really leave people scratching their heads until they catch on that they've just been had. By that time, they've gone, you see. But that's what they do, they just walk around the different questions that are being asked.

And we're getting lots of it today, that's for sure, aren't we? We're seeing a massive campaign by the big corporations, that they own the media, that are promoting all the, it's not protests, most of the protests you're seeing now really aren't protests, they're just riots. They're planned riots. They had one in Montréal a few weeks ago I think it was and I just saw, just the other day I just managed to see a little tiny clip. I get bad speed because we're hammered here where I am with speed, we get hammered until things just crawl. Even timed out, it gets timed out just pulling up a newspaper article sometimes. And I'm getting hammered maybe especially, I don't want to be paranoid but that's the sort of thing that's happening right now.

But I just saw this article and I was reading the Covid articles at the time, again, all the different countless rubbishy articles that are getting churned out by some machine I think, you just crank it out. I don't think the Covid has missed a single sign and symptom of any disease out there. They've got everything in there. I've mentioned it before, and Fauci adds to it as well sometimes, just to get his face in the papers again. He likes the limelight, doesn't he?

But they've got everything in it. You might be asymptomatic completely, but you'll have it. Maybe that's the symptom that you have it, you see, and you might feel fine, and that's definitely a symptom you've got it. You might feel bad, it doesn't matter what you feel bad with, you've definitely got it. And if you got a runny nose, you've got it. If you get a dry nose, you've got it. If your sinuses are plugged, you've got it. If your sinuses are exuding fluid, you've got it. Right. If you've got a sore throat, you've got it. If you've not got a sore throat, you've got it. Yep. If you've got a rash, you've got it. And if you have not got a rash, you've got it. And he added to it, in the middle of the hay fever season, 'eh, that again the whole idea with runny noses or blocked noses, in definitely hay fever season, well, that's definitely a symptom of it. Everything is getting put down to Covid.

Researchers call to make rashes a coronavirus symptom - uk.style.yahoo.com / 15 July 2020

I just, I was reading one of these articles and then next to it was the big so-called, they call it Protest Montréal where they went down the street looting the stores. [Alan chuckles.]   That's quite… It's astonishing to actually live in this twilight zone. I've mentioned this for years and years, this idea of gas lighting, the old movie where they try to convince you that you're not, not to see what you're seeing, they'll tell you what you're supposed to be seeing, 'eh. So, you're in this kind of strange Lala land where you're trying to hold onto sanity, as you're getting told that this is just protests that you're seeing.

But I just realized after reading the article on Covid, you saw a bunch of these guys smashing a big music store in Montréal and they all ran out with guitars and instruments. I realized, that's a symptom obviously of Covid, hey, to add to all the other symptoms, you just suddenly get this urge, you've got to get a musical instrument, for free preferably, and it's definitely Covid, 'eh! Has to be. What else could it be? Because we're having peaceful protests, it must be Covid. [Alan laughing.]

But we truly are living in a twilight zone. And it's all managed. Our minds are always managed. I remember too a few years back reading an article, I was on radio at the time. It was about a voice-to-skull technique that advertisers hoped to use, they were demonstrating it and trialing out in New York City. It showed you people walking past the particular store and they also showed you this little funnel type projectile gun thing, acoustic cannon I guess they called it, but it was a very small thing. It wasn't like the big things the military can use.   It could literally put into your head, aim at you and follow you, it locked onto you because it was all computerized. You're walking past and they can lock onto you and you hear in your skull, go into the store here and get so-and-so. And it would be very audible to you, just like schizophrenics often say they hear voices and things. You'd hear it all right. And it'd be very clear. And they showed you really what you'd be hearing from a tape or recording or something. And that's what you'd hear. Of course, you saw these folk literally [Alan chuckles.] stopping where they were looking around and looking up and down and they couldn't figure out where this was coming from. It was aimed at them, and no one around them would hear it, you see, just you.

So, when you see the protesters just going berserk and smashing in all the music stores and grabbing the best instruments, it's because they got Covid. That's what happens to them, you see. And that will be down shortly as a symptom. What else could it be? Obviously, right? I mean, it could not possibly be communists, they're really wanting communism by stealing the goods of capitalism because they want them so badly. It couldn't be that, could it? No, no. Nope.

But this is what we're living through, isn't it, tremendous times of change. And these are planned changes, I did the talks years ago on the coming changes that were all planned. And this is the century for it, the 21st century is the century for change. That's what it was labeled in universities by professors as they taught them Marxism and collectivism and so on and austerity, you know, the recycled old myths of communism all back in full force. And the 'century of transition', everything was to transition, including people in some ways too.

But this is all just change, you see, that's what it's about, planned change. It's been on the books for an awful long time. You had the same terminology put out by those who taught Marxism and all of its different front groups, you know. Because that's how Marxism runs is through different front groups to cover its real tracks.

Also, it was being promoted by the climate change groups at the top. The ones at the bottom are the ones who follow and believe what they're told. Some of them. The leaders not. I've said this before, the leaders of Antifa, the real leaders know what they are about. The same with Black Lives Matter, the ones at the top who have come out publicly saying that they are basically Communists, or Marxists if you want to use that term. And those who fund them, way above them, the real bosses, way way above them, as the CEOs of big corporations, they know what it's all about and where it's supposed to go.

This is the big change; this is the big reset as they say. But this is the time for change. And the excuses of saving the world and saving the climate and all the rest of that is all to do with population reduction. I hope you're getting the message. It's about population reduction.

Young folk will go along with it and do all the rioting, not realizing their time will come when they are on the list for removal as well. And it's not just old folks, you see, that are getting written off with Covid and so on. Eventually there will be other excuses, other reasons. They've already come out at the last climate change meeting last year talking about the need for population reduction, that would reduce the climate problem as they said at the last big meeting. You find it in their articles. So, you're living through it.

It's frightening for a lot of people because they don't understand this. They watch the mainstream media, that still [Alan chuckles.] showed you incredible, incredible... talking heads telling you that, well it's just this or just that. They don't tell you any truth of course. But the fact is, this is way beyond their little protest. A protest is something where you hand out literature and get folk to sign things, that's protesting. When you smash doors in and windows in stores and loot them, that's not protests, no, that's called looting and rioting.

So, we're living through amazing times as they keep telling you not to believe what you're seeing, but to believe the fake version of it. Isn't that astonishing? And in real time you're getting told this, it's just amazing. So, these talking heads are quite happy to tell you lots of lies, they always have done before, are quite happy now they are getting a lot of attention. Everyone's tuning in because of the Covid idea and the protests to see what's happening.

They're quite happy to lie to everybody of course, in the standard communist technique. It was always the same. I've got books written, published in New York because that was the main center for publishing all the Marxist books all through the 20th century from the earliest times. They said that was the standard technique is to start to cause first protest and then going into riots, you see.

You always have the two factions. You have the faction which just spouts off the reasons for protesting, as they say. Then the other active faction which is the physical action parties who does all the physical work. You saw it in the States too years ago, by some group now that's got all the power to tell you a different story. But the one in the States had two factions obviously and even blew up government buildings. Now they're respectable and some of them even own the media. That's quite amazing to watch it.

Quite amazing to watch all this actually happening over and over again. And folk, it only takes 20 years or 25 years for people to forget the signs and symptoms and what's happened in the past, you see. It doesn't take long. That's how they, as I say, generally even the Western countries traditionally in a big, big war like World War I, they would give out about 20 years, maybe 20 years or so from the end of a real heavy, heavy slaughter/war to raise another crop of young folk, who wouldn't have a clue really about the reality of the last war, and they'd be ready for the next one, you see, for the slaughter. So, they always give it about a 20 year span, that's what they do.

It's quite interesting because when 9/11 happened I thought, I even gave a talk about it. I says you know, I says, with this sudden, which wasn't sudden at all, all these restrictions on free speech and free this and free that, and reducing all your rights and freedoms, not just in the US but across the world, at the same time, that it was planned long before 9/11 happened. Obviously.

That going through screenings at airports and so on and being x-rayed for goodness’ sake, and I even did talks on the companies that were given, in advance, the rights to sell all the x-ray machines that you would be walking through at airports and so on. And hhhhhh, I won't go into that again because that gets me annoyed even thinking about it, who the companies actually were.

But it was all planned in advance. That's how things really, really work. Including what's happening now, all planned in advance. Like the last crash of 2007/8, planned in advance. Some from top bankers in Switzerland, they said the same thing, they didn't need to do it then but they did, it was a political decision. It wasn't a necessary decision, it was a political one. And politicians as you know, they do what they're told by higher authorities. So that's the real world in which we live.

But we're in a century for change, of change. And this is the century of change, there's a whole manifesto to accomplish of course. Including population reduction, licensing of folk who will be permitted to have children, and folk who will not. That came out as well, not just at the last climate meeting, but a previous ones as well. And mandatory sterilization will come in. There will be a lot… It won't be just said, what's mandatory, you know. It's little perks. If you sacrifice your right to have children, you see, it's your choice you see, they always give you the choice, then you can get extra credit points on your income, your basic, universal basic income that everybody's going to be put on, you know. It will be little perks and things like that.

You'll also get the goody-goody-two-shoes who always rush into it and says, do me first, and get their names in the paper and they're quite happy. Unfortunately, a lot of them are young folk, you know. We already saw it come out of previous climate change meetings where they bring forth young women who were very young, they were still in their teens, and some of them still in high school, and it was in the newspaper saying they'd like to volunteer for sterilization to save the world. This is what happens. As I've always said, nothing happens by itself. It takes use years of planning and gradual incremental implementation of the propaganda and the techniques to bring conformity and uniformity of opinion and so on, then you see it manifest. And it's always presented to the public as suddenly spontaneous, as a spontaneous thing, you know.

Just like the Covid was all spontaneous. Then you find out, no, the Rockefellers talked about it in 2010. Of course I put up the PDF before so go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com and you can find them, with the Rockefeller Foundation talking of the things that would come with technology and jumping in on it and so on, and all the apps that would get unrolled for tracking and tracing, for your own good, tracking and tracing you and all that. In 2010. Then of course Event 201, that's published as well.

It's really amazing again, isn't it, to watch counterintelligence, you know, counterintelligence go into action and immediately brand everybody who mentions the published articles by the Johns Hopkins University group, Event 201 in collusion with Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, and they even put out their videos where you hear them talking about it and all that. But if you mention that now you're put down as a conspiracy theorist, 'eh. You're one of those Q-anons, 'eh, you’re a conspiracy theorist talking about that. But you’re talking about the facts. But the facts don't matter anymore. The fact that you mentioned it means you're crazy, you see. Even, but it's okay for Bill Gates to talk about it and reference it, he's not crazy. You see, there's your difference. And this is again, this tremendous technique of obscuring your logical processes in your mind.

Some folk cave-in, they can't fathom, the average person who doesn't follow these things, and only get it from the mainstream news, still gets confused because they're hearing conflicting stories even from the mainstream media. And THAT'S intentional. It throws you off into a twilight zone as I said where you, and you think, I'll just think about this and I'll think about the other side and I'll come to my own conclusion. But within a week they've already worked out, you see, where you have to go next. And that's what it is, you don't realize, it's all where to go next, and they'll take you to it to give you a uniform opinion, and you'll adopt that opinion, you think it's your own.

People fight today, they've been fighting for years over opinions that were given to them, but they've never really investigated them for themselves. I've mentioned before how often, sometimes quickly and sometimes weeks or months later, I get the same articles I put out a long time ago coming back to me. It happens all the time. It's interesting, especially when they're quick, you know they've got it from your site and so on. What's interesting to me is it means a third party has got a hold of it from someone else who's reposted it, and they don't know it's me, and they'll send it back to me, you see. That gives me an idea of how fast things really move. But it also shows that people often don't look at the primary source for themselves to find out where it really came from.

And this is going somewhere by the way, what I'm going to talk about. Because it's to do with our reality again and how reality is given to us and how the agencies that manage your reality and your opinions, when it's not working properly for those who deem them to be necessary, particular opinions they're wanting to give you, they bring in real intelligence agencies like the 77th Brigade in Britain. I mentioned that months ago, back in April, I think it was, and I still get articles coming back to me, folks sending it to me saying you've got a look at this. Well, it was me putting them up, they don't realize that they’re sending it back to the person who put them up in the first place.

But I gave talks about them, you see. It's a group in Britain, it belongs to the Department of Defense, the psychological warfare group. Their job is to go around, scour the Internet and pray on people actually that are nuisances, people who maybe know things or who are getting too close to hot topics or whatever it happens to be, and to throw them off the track. Or defame them. There's a whole bunch of dirty tricks they use. That's what intelligence agencies do, is lots of dirty tricks.

This is a battle for information in an information age, naturally. Back in the 90s they talked about the coming Internet age basically, a war on information and of information and who might win it. I can remember even reading articles at the time were Hillary Clinton talked about it with other people and she talked about this coming war of information, how it would have to be handled, etc., and didn't want to outright ban things but there had to be other ways to sort of limit information.

Of course, you see where it all went today, where if you say anything close to any topic at all [Alan chuckles.] you're completely banned immediately. But apart from that you also get hammered by psy-ops organizations, thousands of them. The Brigade in England works for the military, I might touch on a bit later on, the actual original article, where they came out and boasted about what they're up to, some of what they're up to. They boasted about thousands of, of having thousands of people working for them, and thousands more to draw from, like part-timers basically, to tackle big issues.

Like bombarding the Internet and targeting individuals basically, targeting them with your defamatory information or wrong information. Then they have again a different department that dreams up the ideas, you know, you understand how intelligence agencies during the Cold War really worked. There's been some good movies put out from good novels and so on, some of them written by people who were in intelligence agencies. Sometimes a bit far-fetched or dramatic just for the movie version or the novel version, because most intelligence work is boring stuff, very boring.

Like Bezmenov said, it's nothing to do really with the James Bond stuff, it's mainly to do with destroying the culture of your opponent. And psychological warfare. And altering the culture, you take down, using the Gramsci methods of infiltrating and destroying and changing the culture. Well, that was done successfully in the West, completely done. Look around you. Look where you are right now in this particular time. This is the outcome of that technique being used for a long, long time in the US and Britain and elsewhere.

But I don't want to get off the topic completely, but the fact is, the intelligence agencies often showed you some of the techniques that they used. One of them came to mind as well, it was called Russia House, where they talk about the characters who manage the Cold War. Both sides. All sides in fact. And how it was very profitable. And it certainly is for those who run it all. But how they also put out counterintelligence to their opponents, and, for the people within their own countries. You see.

We have to remember that most of the intelligence of propaganda is aimed at your own population actually. [Alan chuckles.] It was so-called forbidden for a while but it happens anyway, and the US came out eventually under Obama and said that it's okay now to use propaganda on their own citizens in the US. That's a fact, I have the article here from years ago. But Britain and other countries had always been doing that. Because you must get your people behind you, you see. The same as a war, if you want a war, the first casualty of war is truth, you see. So you must get the people behind you, just like the PNAC group used the term, the phrase, for the lists they had drawn up that they wanted to attack and take over by using the US military, to get the people on board, behind them, the domestic population behind them, they said they would need a Pearl Harbor event. That's not make-believe, that's fact. It's out there. And you had 9/11 pop-up so... That's what you must do. So again, truth is always the first casualty of war.

And once it's all going, truth doesn't matter anymore. Because that's out the window. Once you've got troops in somewhere, it doesn't matter if it's uncovered as being false, the reasons for being there in the first place, you've got to get them in their first, get involved, get the huge machinery of war on the go and on site and away you go. Most of the public then just sit back and let it happen, they've not much say or input in the first place, you see.But that's how it works.

They came up with amazing ideas to confuse populations both domestically and worldwide. Often, too, it's like, it's the mystique of things, they give you big diversions, which are interesting too, but they're also tests upon populations. They'll put out something, a false narrative, and watch how fast it travels around the world. I read an article a few years ago as well from MIT where a professor there stated that he was teaching his class on how to put out fake information on history, and then because they were given access to the chitchat on the Internet and electronic media, by the government, everything is farmed out, all your private stuff is farmed out, and they said then they could follow all the chitchat, to see who was rebroadcasting the chitchat with the false history in it, to see how fast it...

Well, why do you think they were doing that? It's because right now a lot of it's being used, of all the information put out by intelligence agencies. And it's been awfully successful. And the testing by MIT and others is exactly that, it's testing, to see how well it can be done. And also, how they can set up groups, they seem to spread out of nowhere when folks jump on a really incredulous idea. And it doesn't matter about the validity of the idea, it's the idea itself, it’s to get them in conflict with other people and say, oh don't be crazy, that could never be the case. It doesn't matter if it's flat earth or what it is, as long as you get something out there that gets people yelling at each other, and almost ready to fight each other. It's quite…

You must understand the power, the power that behaviorists and psychologists have over the general public. The last people to understand they are being manipulated are the victims of manipulation. And when emotion takes over you've lost it and they have won, you see. Always, it's always the same thing.

These techniques were also used by the Communists in the Soviet era as well, as Yuri Bezmenov said. And it doesn't matter about the truth being said by, being spoken about by guys like Bezmenov and others before him, the fact is, as he said, the ones who are totally convinced of the utopia of Soviet-ism/communism, call it what you want it's all the same system, Marxism, the wonderful utopia, that never seems to materialize, they said that you could take them right up to the prison camps, the Gulag's, and they still wouldn't believe it.

That's how it is with indoctrination. People want to believe so badly, so incredibly..., in fact, if they've been under it for years, that becomes their whole reality, it's a religion for them, a real religion for them, fanatical. They'll just crackup on the spot and go berserk of they're actually forced to see what's really happening. That's how it is.

But the thing is, he said that it was in the 1970s, that the Communists of the Soviet bloc countries were so astonished to see how well that assault, total assault on the culture and value system of the West had been. I used to give talks on what your culture comprises of, but even the more surface kind of things like, never mind your language, and that gets changed as well by the way, and so does even your dress mode, what's in trend today for the youngsters especially, and every age group is catered to of course. Like uniforms.

People never figure it out, the battle between communism is not communism against really capitalism. Because capitalism never dies off, it really takes over the system, and actually they benefit more off it. [Alan chuckles.] I mean, the Soviet Union was up to its eyes in hock to foreign banks and different things like that, you'd be surprised. Yeah. I know. Again, it's wonderful for those who own these big corporations, in the Soviet bloc countries, or anywhere else for that matter, because they could get the governments of other countries under the Economic Development Corporation that were set up by the United Nations, every country had them, a continuation of the lend-lease programs after World War II, right up to the present time. Your governments would then bail them out in these bloc countries, so the corporations were guaranteed to get bailed out, guaranteed money. Not less money but what they wanted. Ha. It works awfully well for them.

But the folk at the bottom never figure it out, really. They never do. The few that do might end up in the gulags themselves. The facts don't matter, you see. There's always the same resurgence of the same, by the same folks actually who are pushing this idea of communism. And right now as I've said, it doesn't surprise me at all that all the demands that are being put out by Antifa and Black Lives Matter, and when you really look at their manifesto, it's communism basically, pure and simple.

But it's exactly what the World Economic Forum run by the richest folk on the planet want, for sustainability, depopulation, austerity for the general population, postconsumer society, yada, yada, ya and down to rationing. So, they're actually helping to fulfill what the elite, the richest folk on the planet want. These richest folk on the planet and their big massive international corporations that own the resources of the world, they're getting the left-wing to do their bidding for them. [Alan chuckles.] Isn't that amazing, 'eh?! And the ones at the bottom never figure that out. They really don't. They just don't figure it out at all.

It's the fastest way to get to where they want for the WEF. They actually said that, and the Club of Rome said it too, that they'll be able to achieve all of their goals for sustainability by using the Covid, but also, they're jumping on this idea with the communist left... Isn't it amazing how it all coincides at the same time? But it's just coincidence, right? It's just a coincidence. It's one of the solar things that, you know, the stars are all in the right positions and having this flux in space, 'eh, that's what it is, isn't it? Hhhch. Well that's what the intelligence agencies would put out for you.

Getting back to what I said, I remember them doing similar things before, tests as well. One of them was after 9/11, just building up to 9/11 in fact, and some people who followed what they would call, or I would call loosely, the New Age movement. Because it was a... oooh, a smorgasbord of all ideas and things and all the old and new and so on. Again, that was all getting geared up big time through the 90s, again for a big change in society, peace and understanding, all that kind of stuff. Aquarian movement, you know.

People that I knew would say to me, because they got it from different sources, I wasn't on the Internet at all. They would say, you know, we're going to go through a photon belt, a big photon belt. And I thought, well photons are what comes from the sun anyway, that's light, you see. Yeah, but it was going to be a real heavy belt that we're going to go through, and some of the talk shows at night and so on would go through these things, that's how they were promoting this idea of a photon belt.

But the New Age, the ones who, you see, the whole New Age movement was really run from the top. Again there's big institutions running, that actually are actually famed for using psychological warfare and incredible testing on the general population that have no idea of it. This is well understood. But the idea with a photon belt, you see, was before the flat earth theory came back, was resuscitated. Because it was an old idea, the flat earth, very old of course as you know, then it came out in the 19th century again and back into the 20th and 21st.

But the photon belt and this idea, because everybody was getting ticked off with this idea of 9/11, it just had happened. They said, we're going to go through this belt, of this photon belt. This is from the top New Age movements who were using all the different terms and occultic terms and so on, which everybody knew, it was in all the books. But they said, everybody, everybody suddenly across the whole globe, everybody, no exceptions, right, would suddenly instantaneously know everything. We'd all know everything, no work involved. We'd all be immediately enlightened, and we'd just know everything. No secrets could be held from us all because we'd know it all, you see. Not because we did anything, it was because we went through this magic photon belt, it did it all to us magically.

So, I've watched this kind of thing happen, knowing darn well it's obvious to me that literally intelligence agencies write this stuff up and then say, well it's working on people. And it also helps to defuse folk from going any further in demanding answers from governments, for instance, like 9/11, etc. Because now you just wait and wait, if you wait long enough, you see, all of a sudden, you'll get enlightened by magic. These are delaying tactics and diffusing tactics, that's how they're used.

So, we get all these different theories coming along and building up, and you're studied and studied with all the theories that are put out there and the chitchat and all the rest of it. Again, you get the groups like the 77th Brigade involved, officially, Department of Defense, thousands of these characters literally in live time manipulating your data to you and back. And you think they're all real people that are just interested in this? No, no, these folk literally are countering, they are playing you. You're being played. The folk that get involved and caught up and sucked up in have no idea that it's… They think it's all, I just hate this guy that keeps emailing me, he tells me that…. No, no, these are agents, these are literally psy-op wars they call them and they're counterintelligence agencies all working to manipulate your thoughts, etc. That's how it's done.

The whole idea is a big chessboard in intelligence, and they tried to, they came up with an idea they want to bring off, pull off something, you see, against your enemy in such a way that he will walk into all the different traps that you leave, he'll walk into them. He'll get lead there and led here and led there, and without, until the bitter end he realizes he's been had and he's been played. And that's how it's done.

Today there's battalions of these characters employed to screw you up. I've mentioned before, I don't go on Twitter and Facebook. Because I know what they are. You can just tell who, see obviously who really set them up and what set them up, behind the front people that set them up. They're essential elements to total control, obviously. Total control. Because they start off as something where you volunteer to put your info up on, and they make it almost mandatory or necessary to use to make an income in this day and age. That's how they get you all sucked into it. Then they start deciding who will be put off of it or punished for whatever. It was all planned before you heard the name Zuckerberg.

Believe you me, all planned. You have to go back into the 90s, and yeah, as I say, Hillary Clinton and other ones talking about what they would do, etc. and have to do. They weren't worried about losing control of the dialogue. Whoever they happen to be. After all, can you figure out who they're really working for? It's not followers, they're not working for the followers. [Alan chuckles.] Again, that's the beauty, the macabre beauty of the dark arts as they call it, you know, of persuasion, manipulation and using your natural emotions to get what they want from you, as they do you in basically and put you under. Or have you crack up and either really commit suicide or appear to commit suicide. That's the technique that's used. Over and over again.

In fact, it was skillfully inserted, the idea of the techniques, a minuscule amount of it, mind you, in the movie The Good Shepherd. It gives you an idea how it works. It also brings into it the idea of how sex is used, 'eh, for blackmail eventually; that's involved in the movie too. And how you can get to your real target through their offspring or relatives as well and threaten blackmail if you don't comply with them, etc. That's of course what the whole Epstein organization was about. Again, and he really is an asset of the big agency above him of course. That wasn't just a horny guy there with an insatiable appetite for young girls. But that's the system we truly live in.

Your emotions, all your emotions are played against you and used against you. And the psy-op warriors, as they say, countless numbers of them can hammer you all the time and soak up your time if you fall into that trap as you try to answer them or stand up for yourself. Or you'll hear false accusations at times, and say wait a minute here, this is psy-op thing, just ignore it. Because that's what you got to do, is ignore these things. They want to suck you in and suck your time away and suck you dry basically, or have you crack up. Some people really are very sensitive and if you fall for whatever they are giving you, you'll be ripped apart. Absolutely ripped apart, you know.

You've got to remember too, the Internet is... it's... hhhch, it's the biggest can of information ever invented, where everybody is stuffed into this big can and those who own the can and manage the can, can dissect your entire personality and life history from you. So be careful what you're putting out there too. Don't forget as well you can be sucked into organizations just chatting away and they'll try to label you as some kind of terrorist, for instance. It's just astonishing the things that they're putting out. The FBI seems to be classifying everybody as a terrorist, even just the crazier fringe type people as well, and ignoring the ones who are [Alan chuckles.] doing anything at all right now as cities burn and shops are looted, etc.

It's interesting though, as I say, I find it interesting to watch this, again, the same techniques that Plato talked about, understand the techniques of what worked in the past to get certain things done and if you understand the sequence of implementation then you can create the societal conditions, the acceptance of each stage of it, implement them in the same order and they will work. It doesn't matter if it's for 1000 years ago or 2000 or whatever, it will always work again.

It really is astonishing, that. It's kind of sad too. We like to think we're really special, don't we, and that we're always on the cutting edge of understanding and beauty and perfection of knowledge and all that kind of thing. But no, we are pretty well deluded, [Alan laughing.] pretty much so deluded. Rather sadly too. And willingly. The best kind of delusion is to be willingly adhered to it, willingly enter into the pack of delusion, and get used by, again, intelligence agencies. You always get used.

What I'm saying is just what I've said before, with the guys who are being set up over the years by intelligence agencies in the West, since 9/11 especially, where you would often read about sting operations for police or FBI or their counterparts in other countries, and set up sting operations by putting out people on the net. A lot of young Moslems fall into this too. They would put out really rabid preachers, what seemed to be preachers in Islam and in would come the followers, young guys who were always picked up so easily. Your psychology is very predictable when you're young and young guys, oh that's terrible, we should belong to that and do the right thing and all that. Then they get used, set up, then they're supplied by fake explosives and things and then in would come the cops and arrest them or the FBI. Then they would admit how they did it, they would admit how it was done.

Now, these young guys might never have got any further beyond the bitching part – oh, you can't say bitching anymore, that's been disallowed apparently. So, they were getting beyond the complaining part and actually falling for it. But they probably would never have done that if they had just kept complaining amongst themselves and griping, you know. But that's how things really work.

I've noticed for a long time, even before, you know, all the present debacle and troubles etc., but long before that, from the books I've read, old books to do with the Bolshevik revolution and just before the Bolshevik era, what was happening and how it was getting set up by infiltrators. Again, there's always this element of different groups, ethnic groups wanting to dominate other ethnic groups as well and vice versa, conflicts of all kinds, and religious groups sometimes. But how they set up the conditions to get enough people to follow the initial revolutionaries. It was very similar to what we're seeing today.

The Black Lives Matter idea initially had protesters against crime, against horrible crime obviously against people, regardless of who they are or what they may or may not have done you don't treat people that way. So you had the initial outrage, but it was so quickly hijacked by a group, two groups really that work together and often share the same funding sources, [Alan chuckles.] that are avowed to wait for this, any spike, to jump in, in the summer. And they did it, you see. And then commandeer it.

Then all the followers still keep the chanting going, because you must have the sheep. You got to be honest here, if you follow a group, a big group, you've given away your rights to think for yourselves. If you start shouting slogans, you've given away your right to think for yourself. In fact, you're advertising it. This is what George Orwell knew perfectly well when he wrote Animal Farm, the four legs good, two legs bad, they tell you who are your enemies, and you all just chant it in unison. And this is how you do it, you give up your rights to think for yourselves. Until you're a willing dupe because you won't get what you think you're after, whatever that happens to be you.

Even your temporary solidarity, where you actually seem to be fitting in maybe for the first time in your life with something that seems to be bigger than yourselves, that's how it works, it always appeals to young people, always. And those who run the system at the top, that really are big intelligence agencies, believe you me, a lot of them too are privately owned. Big ones. They know how to manipulate the minds and use you all. But the ones who are in the forefront of it all, the ones who are trained, the anarchists, or revolutionaries, are really mercenaries. That's what they are. And they're well-funded and well-paid. And maybe well looked after when everybody else is paying the price for it all. That's how things really, really work.

It's a sad thing to watch, isn't it? As it gets repeated over and over and over again, the same thing. From Peter the Hermit to the present time, the same ideas getting used over and over again, always using the young. I gave Peter the Hermit's talks back in the late 90s and how he literally came out, this unaffiliated kind of separate preacher, or priest, and encouraged the young children to go dancing off to God's holy city. Yeah. Of course, lots of them got rounded up on the way and put into slavery and massacred and used and abused and… But that's what happens because life was so hellish then for those folk though, for the peasants and their children, so hellish that it's easy to sell them an idea of utopia, even though it's magical, again, you know.

Today of course you get the lull, a managed lull, as we go through changes, big changes. The century of change, getting back to what the big thing tanks all worked upon in the last century, the coming century of change. Carol Quigley's idea, working for the same group, they can get more done in a social system, construct system for change in five years of war than 50 years of peace. And they have, haven't they?

9/11 started it all and suddenly no, it's not an enemy that they're tracking, [Alan chuckles.] it's everybody at home across the Western world. You have no rights and freedoms and all your information is monitored and scoured by intelligence agencies and programs. And you can't just move anywhere, it's papers please and yada, ya, who are you and why are you here and yada, ya, and all that stuff, you see. You've watched the very quick erosion of all your rights, traced and traced and all the rest of it.

This is the next part of it for the WEF and the Club of Rome, is this part you're going through today. They will bring through, you'll see it, if there's a true revolution, you see, if something was really spontaneous or even well-planned and completely different, outside the realms of the present controllers, they would be hammering away at the WEF and the Club of Rome and all the rest of them, that are going to manage the aftermath of this and who are going to manage their whole rationing system after all the chaos and the big financial collapse and all that. All planned, obviously.

But they won't go after those characters, will they? They'll be… they'll be… they'll go along with that all too once all the main things have been achieved, you see, which is the destruction, end of individual liberty. It's going to be into collectivism then, you'll be told what you're going to be, and go where you're going to be told to live and designated to live, if they allow you to live, be alive to live at all, it all depends. It's a new regimented system. That's what it is.

The people who are helping to bring it all to pass, no, they see the utopia and some strange kind of magical thing that will come along, and people would just be wonderful to each other. Then it won't happen that way, so they'll suddenly see commissars and their own courts just suddenly appear, magically again. Then they'll all be, different ones, put up on trial for not being firm enough, you see, and dogmatic enough, and a comrade believer, they won't have enough of it, and you'll start to see these trials go on as they turn on each other.

This is what they do, the ones who cause it all. But way above that, you see. But the one who follow it all are then put on trial themselves and put off to gulags. Because it's already understood, if you've turned, if you have turned, here's the key to it, the system that you're living under at the moment, if you've turn on it to enable another group to take over, right, then you can't be trusted by the other group when you've turned on your own country, regardless of what it's done, and they can trust you either.

I hope you understand this. This isn't scarce stuff. This is fact. This is how it works. It's known. We live through this whole idea of extraordinary rendition, when the group ruling had us all off to war, all the countries off to war to fight across the Middle East and Afghanistan, preplanned of course before 9/11 by the group who published it all. [Alan chuckles.] But again, facts don't matter. It doesn't matter that General Wesley Clark was out talking about the list on Democracy Now, he's up on YouTube. He said, I didn't believe it, there's a whole list of the different countries to take out, ya-duh-duh-duh. But that doesn't matter. Facts don't matter, you see, when there's plans. Everything is a plan. Everything is part of the agenda.

Do you really think the big characters that run the world allow things like this to happen? No, they make things like this to happen, and they use them. And they'll direct them. That's how it is. Because they want the world to go into a more organized manage system, which is more efficient to manage the public. This is what they want. And the chaos, or even the death and destruction that it causes, it doesn't matter, that's acceptable.

That's what old David Rockefeller talked about. He was in the CIA. He was in everything, head of the CFR and Trilateral Commission at one point, but he was in the CIA too. He actually lent them money for black projects, they talk about it in their books, [Alan chuckles.] the actual guys who worked there in the CIA at the time. M-hm. And he says, well, he says, you know, all these different things that happen in society, the public are ignorant of what happens, he says. That's what he was referring to at least. And he says, you know, here's what we want to happen in the world, and he says, and he meant there would be a lot of chaos and fallout from it and he says, but he says you know, you can't make an omelet without breaking eggs. So, what you're seeing now is just the eggshells, the chaos in the streets and that and the rioting. But that will be taken care of by those who are managing it and say, now it's time to go into that phase, you see. That's how things really work.

Most folk won't listen to it, it doesn't matter. And youngsters, as I say, they love to belong to something, for the first time. Most of the people really feel alienated at school. They might have had one or two people that they knocked around with, but they still don't really, they're not part of, they're still growing up, big thing, you're growing up, it doesn't excuse things, and you can still kill folk quite easily if you’re part of a radical movement, and you're still growing up, that's why they use young guys for the military of course.

But regardless, they're still growing up and they want to belong to something where they are part of something. And folk who are part of something, which is awfully strong... Why do you think you get so many movies on war, fictional movies, and it's always your country that's always in the right and yada, yada, ya? It doesn't matter what country is showing, it's the same formula for the movie. Your guys are the heroes, the good guys. And the truth is, in reality, this is a fact, because psychology is a big part of it, behaviorism is a big, big part of it and how we are as human beings.

Look at all the veteran’s clubs in all countries down through the last 150 years or so. And the guys all, when they get together have a great time. It's the only time when their lives were on the line and it was live or die, you didn't know what it was going to be, what it did to their mindset, they'll never forget, they'll never ever look back on it, they could never go back and criticize it, most of them anyway. They can't do it. The initial propaganda of the reason for whatever war it was, has stuck with them. It's always simplistic stuff. And it works, it's embedded there, because they've got to believe in it after what they've been involved with and what they did themselves, you see. This is well understood by behaviorists. Well understood. They will, the guys that'll hang on to the end, the brotherhood that they were involved with will be their pals, you see, they were there with them, because it's the only time in their lives they felt part of something, regardless of the outcome of what they were involved in and what it maybe did that was detrimental to the whole society in the long run, it doesn't matter. And it happens in every country. No matter what side folk are on.

So it's all well understood and as I say, Bezmenov talked about it too and how they must always round up the ones in the forefront, not the leaders themselves but the ones who work with the leaders, from the group of the followers. They are the ones who get arrested and pay the price. The leaders simply disappear off and have new identities, etc. often in other countries, well-paid too. That's how the world really is run.

The last folk that they want to know are the ones who are being used to bring in the next stage of the postconsumer society. First it was postindustrial, that's what Maurice Strong was all about, you must end industry in the West. Well, they were already doing that, the guys he worked with, and the Rockefellers. It was Rockefeller remember that picked him up and initially gave him all the power in the world to do what he did and backed him, etc. But postindustrial, to bring the world back to a stage before the 20th century. Before the 20th century, I hope you understand, once you're in austerity and poverty, and energy restrictions, the death rate escalates at a heck-of-a pace, believe you me. And this is what they want to bring back, 'eh? That's what the young folks are going to see, and they're bringing it in thinking they're going to have this wonderful utopia. No, you're going to bring in exactly what the elite wants. Yep.

Getting back to extraordinary rendition, and here's another thing, never forget this, the techniques never change. Down through time, from very light psychological techniques to heavy ones, to deep narcosis and so on, techniques to get information out of people, and nevermind human nature itself, when it comes to the crunch and they go after members, when horrific things have happened you see, that's, and the public won't mind then because it's been horrific things that have happened when they go after someone, no one is safe that took part in it, no one. All their names are out in the open. And all the plea deals come in. Okay, we'll let you off with so-and-so if you just tell us who your immediate groups are and so on, yada, yada, ya. And people sing. They sing. And that's without the torture. And if they want to go into torture, then you see them really sing. Because they must always get rid of those they've used to bring in the phase of it, you see, once they've accomplished the mission. I hope you understand what I'm saying here. Some might listen. Some might not.

Because there's so much psychology involved, and I haven't mentioned all the other reasons for it too. I've said before that in the 70s I had the same feeling, and into the 80s, the same feeling of, it was a strange... it was like a lack of purpose that permeated the air. It was like HG Wells talked about and others talked about before World War I and then World War II. He said, it was in the air. Everybody knew it was coming, we just didn't, you know, you were outside of the causing of it, but you know that you're going to be part of it and it was in the air, it was inevitable. That's what you felt.

But also the same feeling can be when an economy is changing drastically and again it's like today when you see fires in all different parts of US cities and people by the hundreds getting bussed in, well-financed and well organized and trained, you know, to do what they're going to do, when you see it all happening you know this is to lead somewhere else, but from what they're telling you, as I say, it goes to the WEF and austerity and yada, yada, ya and the Club of Rome, and all the other top groups that work with them. It's what they want. Well, it's been in the air for a long time.

In the 70s when they were destroying the economies, the traditional economies in Britain, say, and Maggie Thatcher when she got in, she said, there's a generation growing up now that will never see work in their lifetime. This is before you heard of universal basic income. Huh? They had all these different trial runs beforehand to iron out the problems and so on. At that time, they tried to, they opened up all the pubs all day long. She said, it's better to have them inside the pub spending their welfare money, they're not on the streets marching and rioting.

She didn't invent this idea of how to manage. No, it's intelligence agencies, that's old stuff, how to do it. Today of course they're using massive quantities of drugs and all kind of things, and also the Covid scare, oh you can’t go out anymore, just stay at home, get drunk or something, you see. Yep. The whole thing is working together at the same time. Not by coincidence. Never by coincidence. Never ever. So, you’re living through a plan.

So that's the feeling that you felt in the air back then when all that was happening, that there was a… I had to imagine, it's like there was a void, a void in the ether you might say, you sensed it, of your existence. And that's what's here today again. We've had that for a while now too after free trade for years with China, set up by the same folk at the WEF, who are running the show to bring you into austerity, who gave it all, all, because it's their corporations, over to China, to make things cheaper then to get a bigger profit. And to do away with the work in the West. So naturally there is this kind of, well, where do we go from here? All these millions, it wasn't thousands, it was millions of folk put out of work all through the Americas for instance that worked in factories, written off, you know, just like that, bomf.

By the same folk who are sitting smiling at this agenda for post consumerism. Now, post doesn't mean you're not going to consume. It means it's going to be restricted and planned by specialists to make it more efficient for those at the top. A rationing system. Guaranteed payments, by the way, as always, by anybody who's left working. Because they'll be giving huge handouts, and they already are, to folk who will never be working, so the people who are not working can buy all the goodies, or any goodies that are still allowed to be bought, and guaranteed payments by the governments from the taxpayer. That's what the big elite wanted for so long. They love socialism/communism, expertly run societies birth to death, cradle-to-grave and all that kind of stuff. They love it because it’s efficient, and they're guaranteed to have everything they make, including the vaccines, bought and paid for by the governments. Isn't that amazing? And so, the Anti-fascists are encouraging fascism, [Alan laughing.] by not going after all the rest of it, 'eh? And that's how crazy things are at the moment.

So, if you're a follower and its four legs good and two legs bad, then you wait and see, you know, you will. Just, I don't have any dogs in the fight here because I stand outside history to an extent and watch it. I knew before Donald Trump got in that the people in America had nobody really to vote for. I mean, who are you going to vote for? The same system that was ongoing that had you involved in a 30-year war across Afghanistan and the Middle East?

Because don't forget, the first one started with Kuwait, 'eh, and then the 10 year no flyovers and buildup of American military across there getting ready for the next phase. 9/11 came along, they were all ready for Afghanistan before it happened. Then Iraq too and all the other countries that are on the list. They're still at it now too using proxy armies and everything else. The people in the West are just fed up with it all. We're fed up with it. Of course, we're fed up with it. We're sick of it.

And you're watching the GDP of the US getting plastered across the world as the folk literally are stagnant in wages and work at home, for years. It wasn't just there, Canada was exactly the same, stagnant wages for years and years. Then when they eventually, like 20 years later they give them an increase, up to a supposed basic income, it's still worth less than 20 years ago in purchasing power, because the dollar has dropped in value so much that you need an awful lot more dollars to get the same basic stuff. We're played like you wouldn't believe. We're played, aren't we?

And nothing changes because the same characters that run the whole financial system will run it after this whole big change, once they call off leaders of the revolutionaries, as they'd call them. They call them off and then you've already come into the next phase, you see, of the system. And you call off the revolutionary leaders, as I say, they disappear and melt off into different areas. Then you see that you're not getting your utopia after all, and the same characters are always in charge of it!

And you're all equally poor as you're all paying now for the basic, the basic necessities. Guaranteed to be paid by you all [Alan chuckles.] that it's taken back off your basic income, as a wage. In Canada, that's what they did, if you get unemployment benefits or even welfare you get taxed on it. [Alan chuckles.] So, it's the same kind of thing, you'll be given a universal basic income, that will get taxed too, and that tax will be just skimmed off to pay for, well everybody can't get the same as you, so we're going to pay for it all for everybody, you see. Yep, there ya go. And guaranteed payments, so they can jack up the price all the time, guaranteed payment, when the government's using your money to pay for it to private corporations. That's what happens.

The whole idea of using ethnic groups to battle it out was done in the early 20th century in the States. They already picked and trained some of the early leaders in the States, that eventually fell out with them. In fact, they turned against the trainers when they realized they were getting used to create a war inside America. Repetition, 'eh, just repetition. And of course, the followers think, this time we'll get it right. Well, really? Really? Hm. What does right mean?

What does right mean, hm? So again, I generally speak to individuals, I've always said that from the time I started. Because people who want to follow groups and so on will do so regardless and fall into the same traps over and over.

What we don't have enough today, it's not group mentality, it's individualistic mentality.

That I can remember the United Nations, again, don't forget too, that has the façade, it's an outward demonstration of being communist, you see, socialist/communist, but in reality, don't forget it was set up by again the richest folk that ran the British Empire. From the Lord Alfred Milner group, the League of Nations, to the Royal Institute for International Affairs, all the same group that gave you the present structure that's all for bringing it in, and also gave you the WEF by the way and the Club of Rome, their think tanks. They are bringing in the next part of their system. The same group, the same people. And it will be to their benefit at the top. Of course it will be. Of course it will be.

Now, the psychological technique too, that the communists use is confusion. Remember that the general population just sit and try to, they try to, they are fed, spoon-fed this stuff by media, what to think or believe or whatever even though it doesn't make much sense to them. And especially when you're saying, there's so much video footage out there, and admissions by members in Antifa and so on how well organized and well financed they are. And how they have gone into cities, you see them going into some towns or cities, they've already selected the streets before they go in and they start burning and looting and so on. That's out there, you can't deny it. It's not actors doing that, I mean hhhch, unless they're paying millions of bucks to millions of actors.

But anyway, you're seeing it, but the general public have been told by the mainstream media, that obviously must be giving clips of this stuff occasionally, and they're still calling it just protests. This is not protests. These are not protests at all. At least the ones you're seeing, the violent ones, definitely. It's the same memes too, destroy the past, it's all communist techniques, destroy the past for a new era. And you begin at the year zero, again, that's what they always give you, year zero, here's the new normal, here's the new beginnings, right. And we're witnessing it all come to pass.

But again, the general public are confused. They can't, because they can't figure out themselves, why would these people with straight faces that they've watch for years, these newscasters, continuously come on and tell them that it's protests? Why do they keep using the same terminology, you know? It's because the richest folk on the planet, again, own the media. [Alan laughing.] That's why they're telling you, they're all part of it. They're all given their marching orders, of course they are. Always.

Because it's a whole new system that's supposed to get brought in from this. I hope you understand what I'm saying here. And it's not what the ones at the bottom think it's going to be. It's going to be a new organized efficient system of technocracy on behalf of the global elites, who will live in their own utopia like a plane above us almost. I can't remember that movie they made; it was some years back. But it wasn't that great really. It was about a time when there would be this kind of artificial satellite space, like a land, and all the elite would go there, back and forth, and you'd have to be awfully good to get to live there where it wasn't cramped and crowded. But on the planet, it was all the working-class living in squalor. I can't remember what it was called. [Elysium.] Again, it wasn't that well done really, they could've done more with that one.

It was to give you the idea of where, of the system that's coming in. Because the elite will live in a different plateau of existence to an extent than the rest of us down below. That's what it's about. And gradually the population will be brought down and down. They even have figures and timelines for it being brought down by X percent, and X percent, and X percent. I remember reading that years ago from the Department of Defense again in one of their big think tanks where every other year they would, with the big projections for the years up to about 2040 and beyond that and so on, and how by 2030 they said, I think it was the population would suddenly decrease. They didn't say why but they just said it would do that and they had different dates for different reduction rates, etc.

So, it's all planned that way, you know. These characters are given incredible data feeds that you'll never see of the facts and figures, of the present real facts and figures, the real ones, not the ones that are getting dished out to the public, on every possible topic and so on. They work with the Futurist Societies, organizations that the big characters employ and pay awfully well for their projections. The same futurists often work with policymakers across the world, when asked to do so, on behalf of the elite, and with the intelligence agencies as well.

There is nothing spontaneous, nothing happens by itself. And the public never catch on. They're kept in this limbo of trying to figure out what's really going on and they can't believe that so many, again, respectable media characters are telling them blatant lies, after they've just shown them footage of burnings and stuff like that, you know. It's quite something, isn't it?

Most folk can't imagine, get their heads around the fact that the media is part of the collusion, to the incredible nth degree of it all. They can't really get their heads around that, as riots, and terrible riots are happening. It's quite a time to be alive and watch this kind of thing happening, occurring, and folk being literally shocked and they can't really figure things out. And still folk hope they can get back to some kind of normality. Even, and the clues are given to you all the time, even without Fauci and others, they give you these statements that are used down through time.

After 9/11 they came out, before the dust settled, of who their target was going to be, right, Osama bin Laden. Hhhhhh, and then it was followed by one of the members of the CFR actually saying, things will never be the same again. Covid breaks out and you hear Fauci, oh things will never go back to normal again, it will never be the same again. Yeah, yep. Never, 'eh? Wasn't that rather an amazing comment to be given over something they were supposedly just starting to understand, they hadn't even understood yet? It will never be the same again, he says. They're telling you they're a part of something much bigger and the whole thing is something, it's a part of something much bigger than what you think it is. It's a big plan.

Of course there's a big plan. And honestly, I don't, ha, I have no confidence at all after reading about the vaccination companies involved in this and the actual alteration of genes in your body, this new type of vaccine, AT ALL. No. Gates has been trying to push this one for years, this particular type of vaccine is completely different from the old kinds. It will all turn the DNA in your body. Well, no thank you, no. Coming from eugenicists like Bill Gates, 'eh, it gives you a lot of faith. He also wants to reduce the population drastically. Well, no thanks. No thanks. No.

And where, where is the anti-fascism about mandatory vaccination? Mandatory payment no matter what. These are not free vaccines across the planet, you're going to be paying for them all. And for everybody else. Where's the anti-fascists, when this is pure fascism, as I've said before, where corporations are going to get governments to mandate, by law, everybody take their product? Hm?

No, no, no. Little clues, little clues like that tell you. I hope the antifascist followers are listening to this kind of thing. They should be listening. Doesn't that give you a little clue who's really behind all this? Because if your leaders aren't protesting that, mandatory vaccinations from corporations that have horrific records, some of them, in some of these companies, 'eh, to give you an experimental thing that's going to change the DNA makeup in your cellular structure and epithelial tissue? Huh? Permanently? But nope, we haven't heard about that. Nope.

I've often been astounded at some of the things that people really believe in. And people I know in fact. I can remember one fella I knew who had fallen for the old Ayn Rand idea, years ago. He had all her books and belonged to a society in the US that kind of were followers for the independent movement for individualism he thought, you know. And I said, you know, because you have to stand outside of things often, I really mean that, most folk can't get out of it if you're emotionally involved in something. But I said, d'you realize that Ayn Rand belonged to a wealthy family, you know, because it was the pseudonym she used and so on. Came from Russia. Had a, she was a mistress to a stack of very, it was only very important folk mind you, you see, because that went along with her idea of special and success and winners, you see, as opposed to the losers. And that's what she had in all the novels that she went on about.

He was working guy, this guy, you know, a working-class guy. American working-class guys generally are better off than working-class guys in Britain, for a long time. But still, I mean, he was still a working-class guy. I said, you know, do you like your system and so on? Yeah, yeah like it. And he liked his own little plot and the shape of things, you know, his little plot of ground I should say, it wasn't much but it was enough and he liked it and he liked his life and his family and all that. Ayn Rand, I says, would do away with you. And that kind of floored him. I says, yeah, she's not talking about you, the likes of your little place and you like your tobacco and you like a drink once in a while and you like your family and your wife and so on. I said, she's talking about the ultra-elite, her books are about folk who broke all the rules of what you would call the general accepted rules of society, the cultural rules, the so-called pioneers that would break free of all and do amazing architecture and stuff like that. Even if they're all twisted buildings that would fall apart, or just dumb and stupid, it didn't make any difference, right, as long as you just broke all the rules to be different, you see, and winners.

That's what she was, and who she mixed with was guys like Rothchild, she was the mistress of one of the Rothschilds for a while, you know. These aren't just average punters. And here's the key to it, I said, there's two sides of everything, there's always the same two sides of it. I said, you've got the characters who bring you communism, with this strange idea that you're all part of a big collective and you'll be treated equally because you're just ordinary folks, that's how they see it. But the ones who own it all are the ones who are not ordinary folk, they are the well-educated, awfully, awfully incredibly rich folk at the top, you see.

Because there's different, getting back to the whole... So anyway, the idea of communism is for the ordinary folk, you see, who are sold on the idea that every, all the ills of the world, including your own personal ills, or whatever your problems are personally too, will be cured by this ideology. Because often there's a lot of unresolved problems in the people themselves, that's life, that's general life, you see, but it will all get fixed when you have a cause and a purpose, you see.

Then you have the Ayan Rand who was on the side of the groups like the WEF and all the international characters that run the financial systems and globalization as they called it, at all their meetings they call the globalization meetings that they held back in the 90s into the early 2020s and so on. That's really what she was standing up for, for the ones who had it all already. Because they didn't follow basic rules, and when they did strokes of a pen it could collapse economies or build other economies up or whatever. You have no input into that at all. These were the captains of industry, the captains of this, the navigators of society and the direction of society. That's who she stood up for and no one had ever explained that part to him before. Because in some of her novels she had nothing but disdain for the ordinary folk [Alan laughing.] when you thought through them, hey, they were primitive and collectivist and you know, even if they weren't really. But the ones she mixed with were the ones who had sunk nations, and often financed wars that were not good for the nations and so on, and profited from them too.

So yeah, you've got to stand outside things and don't fall for them. And don't, hhhhh... It's just as bad falling for the left-wing idea, that again, all your personal ills will be fixed, all those things that make you insecure or there's something missing or whatever, are going to be fixed because you're now involved in left-wing. It's just the same as what you call the far-far right wing, of superior groups of the ultra-elite. [Alan chuckles.] Because you either are really one of them, the ultra-elite, or you're not. You see? There's no in between there. [Alan chuckles.] Class distinction is very self-evident. It's really does exist. Even in the communist countries, the old ex-communist countries, they had class distinction there too. Even the cops had class distinction, they'd treat the peasant differently from the Politburo characters and so on.

So yeah, it's just amazing to watch all this come to pass. And folks think that some big movement is going to fulfill everything that's lacking in their lives, all these, all the things that Bernays talked about. Don't forget Bernays was part of a revolutionary movement too, and with his uncle Sigmund Freud, 'eh. It was a war on society and the Western culture too, that's what Freud said himself when he was coming to America to New York, on the ship he said that. Reporters were there and they said, oh they're going to help America. He says no, he says, I'm coming to help destroy their system, the system. Of course, that developed into other schools, you might say, and they were pushed and put across the world, and everything's wrong inside you, you see, so we just fix you by doing this, this and this.

Then Bernays, his nephew, who was already a big player in advising and American governments, went to work on America. By understanding his uncle’s theories on the subconscious, you know, and how to motivate people using their desires and all these things which they're unaware of themselves, these swirling emotions that they can't really put into words at times, and that's all used against them. It wasn't just for advertising, that was a big part of it. It was also for war, he was instrumental, he was given the task by the Wilson group, President Wilson, of trying to get people involved so they could get them ready psychologically, so they'd be pro-war for the first world war, and get them in at the end.

That was necessary too by the way. Interestingly enough, because the Warburg’s already ran the American Federal Reserve, and another Warburg, the brother that was working in Germany, they wanted to make sure [Alan chuckles.] that all of the countries that were involved in the wars that they didn't want, would be made to pay off the debts. This is astonishing stuff really, but this is history. It's no conspiracy theory. You can read about it yourselves in books put out by them from economists and so on.

But yeah, people as I say at the time never figure out they're getting led up the garden path. Never figure it out. Nope. It's the same too with little bits and pieces, you can always come out with the truth years later, it doesn't matter because folk, it's the immediacy of the emotional upset that causes the problem, at the time, in the present, you know, when it happens. Years later folk just, oh well, you know. They either shut it off because it's bad memories or it's like it's a dream, a different strange dream that they've had in the past, that's how they see things.

People forget that, for instance, in Britain they had the huge miner's strikes. There's no doubt about it, Britain at that time too, in the working-class systems and so on, but the miners were so essential at one time to the whole economy and the military of Britain. Because ships, remember, up until they got the diesel going and then even the nuclear power ones for military, were dependent on coal. That was for all industry, used coal. And coal was the basic energy source for heating every house in the country at one time. So, it was essential. So, they had power, they got power when they had climbed up to achieve it and had their unions.

But always with the unions you get these infiltrators that are for the Communists, you see. And there's a stage you get to where you've got to be careful what you do when you know the coal, coal isn't, there's other alternatives to coal. When that happened, and they kept pushing and pushing... They hated Thatcher of course, Maggie Thatcher. She knew what was going on too. By the way, Maggie Thatcher was the first one who fell for the idea of using climate change and global warming, 'eh. And her advisor to get that at the time was Lord Moncton. [Alan laughing.] Isn't that astonishing, 'eh, [Alan laughing.] how people tend to forget these things. They thought that would be a good tactic to get voters on board with them.

But anyway, yeah, the miners kept pushing and pushing and then eventually went on strikes and strikes and strikes. They had already been closing lots of mines for years, mind you, because they had north sea gas coming in, natural gas they called it and other ways of heating themselves. But anyway, the miners didn't stop. And what you often find with radicalized movements, at the top, radicalized at the top, they keep pushing and they don't know when to draw back a bit or to stop and just think a bit, and they kept pushing until literally they put themselves out of business. They had big massive riots with the miners, who saw, and rightfully so, was an end of an era, a massive era.

I mean, the miners had been digging the coal mines in Britain for, phew, probably a couple of centuries at least, probably longer than that in certain areas. But it's suddenly coming to an end, it was outside of their... And that put lots, it put so many folk out of work. All the other industries that supplied mines, etc., all put out of work, small businesses and medium businesses and bigger businesses, all put out of work, you know. How she did it too, and folk never get their heads around these things, if you were truly in a Cold War, folk would just stop and think once in a while, if you're truly in a Cold War, 'eh, why would you as a conservative government start importing coal to bypass the miners from a communist country? And Poland at the time was communist. And that's what she did. Folk never think it, where's the strange collision that you have that can suddenly bypass all the different ideologies, 'eh? That's what happened. So, Maggie Thatcher colluded with the Communists to put the miners out of business. And the radicalized leaders of the mines lost the whole battle because they were too radicalized, some of them, absolutely. M-hm.

I can remember Scargill, I think it was Scargill, who was the head of one of the big unions in Britain. Arthur Scargill. I think he eventually got knighted, I wouldn't be surprised if he did, you know. Because the communists love to get knighted as well. I think it was in the papers that he [Alan chuckles.] he'd rebuked his daughter because she was engaged to get married to an Australian miner, a young guy, and Arthur thought it was beneath her to marry an ordinary lower-class miner. [Alan laughing.] I tell ya, 'eh. Human nature, indeed. So yeah, you would certainly have snobbery once big money comes in. It's very quick to evolve, you know, the stratas that suddenly emerge, the nouveau rich and the already rich and the old rich and so on. It never really leaves society. It's part of human nature unfortunately.

As I say, the Politburo in the Soviet system had their Dachaus in the country, they got access to these things. Along the Plato idea, you see, of the Republic. They didn't have to own them; they’d have the use of them. They were staffed with servants, because they love servants, Communists love servants, all leaders love servants and so on. As I've said, Bezmenov said the same thing, that he defected and many others like him had defected because, it wasn't because they lacked anything in the West, they had all the same items they could purchase quite easily, and cheaply for them, and all the luxuries that they had were equivalent to all their counterparts in the West in government. But the Dachaus in the country for the Politburo and they'd go hunting and all that stuff. And wonderful trips, they can go abroad and do amazing tours and trips and stuff. It's the general population that couldn't do it, you see. So, there's an immediate strata of superior types and inferior types and ordinary types. And that's how things really work. It never fails, it always comes out to be the same way.

But the followers during revolutionary times always think, like that silly song that the Beatles put out, Paul McCartney put out, those were the days. When they picked what's her name, it's a Welsh singer at the time, young girl... Mary Hopkins to sing, those were the days my friend, we thought they'd never end. It was about revolution. Because they understand perfectly well that's what, that's all they'll remember their entire life is their part in something that was bigger than themselves. Even though it never, it never comes out to be what they had ever expected it to really be, something that would make them happy.

You see, that's what's really people are lacking, is this internal peace and happiness. Yeah, you get all the physical things you're lacking too, but internal peace and happiness is not going to get rectified because you go out and start slaughtering folk. [Alan chuckles.] And expect those that you're following to turnaround and somehow be benevolent towards you. Again, back to Bernays, it always comes back to the techniques of Bernays and those that were going to destroy the system, 'eh. Understand the subconscious desires and motivations of people and then you can manipulate them without them even knowing they're being manipulated. But that means you can be used, very easily, to fill a void that everyone feels. But it doesn't, it doesn't, it never gets rectified, you see. It doesn't get rectified.

I remember looking at the studies that were done years ago on communes, a big, big phase in California and the warmer areas of course of the US was communes in the hippie era. And in the post-hippie era too. How it was peace, love and goodwill and all that kind of thing. That's what they were all taught. Of course the drugs helped a lot. How you would all share and share alike, you know, the flower children. Old idea. Very old in fact. Getting back all the way to Peter the Hermit and the poor children then that really had nothing much to look forward to, most of them, getting used.

But in the hippie era, they were really a regurgitation of the wandering folk of Germany in the 1920s and early 30s. Similar things, you know, they had back to nature and the country, camp wherever you were and try to find food on the trees or in the grass or somewhere on the vegetation. You'd all live happily, you could be nude when you wanted to be nude too and all that. Free love came into it, you see. Old idea. Same things are always pushed by those who rule. Because they know the formula, again, Plato gave you the formula, hm.

Getting back to, before I just finish that last part I was thinking about too with Plato, and of course Plato came into that too, was the idea of Politburo, the difference between ordinary folk and the Politburo, or your commissars. Call it what you want because they're all… Folks can't recognize things when they see the same things happening if they're given a different name. It's so simple, isn't it?

So anyway, you had the Plato idea in The Republic, the book, the writings of Plato where he talked about the perfect society. An idealized fashion, right, how you could breed folk for certain occupations by selective breeding. They'd be selected for, they'd to be mated up by professionals. And this is a long, loong time ago, folks, you know. Right down to breeding the right kind of, like a mathematician married to another mathematician might bring out a mathematician as a child. The same thing for a bureaucrat, 'eh, so you'd mate them together and you'd have generations of the same stock running the country. But also, military, you bring women into the military and then you have them marry and mate, and even marriage wouldn't even be necessary I suppose if the state was taking care of everything. Old ideas, 'eh, all for this perfection of the system that would be more efficient. So you'd always be guaranteed a good stock, once you'd selected the real stock and all the bad ones were weeded out or died off or been killed off, you would have the right stock for each different professional trade or whatever it happened to be.

But he also said, and he always did it in dialogue form, as a kind of imaginary dialogue with whomever he would mention throughout his talks. He'd say that, would you like a big building and a beautiful big home? Oh yeah, yeah, sure, yeah. And then he'd say, then well you know you'd need an awfully good income to pay for all that, for you to pay for the building it and repairs and upkeep. And you want to be wealthy? Oh yeah, I want to be really wealthy. Well, you need a lot of staff and guards and stuff to guard the stuff, because folk want to rob it then, 'eh? Oh yeah, yeah, right there. And then you want to have parties for the established order to come in and visit and so on, and of course it costs money to feed them and cooks and all the rest of it. Yeah, yeah, that's true, that's true.

Why not, rather than you have to earn all this money and then worry about folks stealing stuff and so on, or getting burned down and losing it all, why not have the public pay for it for you. So, you're essential to the state, you're one of the elite, you see, and essential to the function of the state so you need a place to entertain people and to live. You can't live in an ordinary hovel like the peasants, you see, so get the peasants to pay for it all through taxation. Then of course you can have a beautiful big building, you'll never have to sit and worry about repairing anything, it will all be taken care of, even if it's partly burned or destroyed, they'll rebuild it all for you and replace it, it won't cost you a penny. They'll pay for all the staff and servants. Isn’t that a better way to have it?

And here you have it all out there today, folks, 'eh. It's the same kind of thing. Do you understand, don't you understand that everything that's happening now was talked about a long, long time ago? And of course Plato also said that, so you go through a phase like that, he was just talking about different systems of commerce, capitalism, pure capitalism and then democracy that always came in when capitalism had ridden high for a while. Then democracy always led eventually to socialism or communism, which led to anarchy and chaos and deprivation, and inefficient techniques to flow goods and food and everything else. So out of that comes the tyrant, you know, you have to elect a tyrant, put him in charge, the true fascist idea but a real tyrant who will come and save the people. That's what happens, this is the cycle you go through. That’s what happens.

But again, getting back into as I mentioned before with the wandering folk from Germany and so on. They tried it with, in the warmer climates as I said in the States especially, it's kind of hard to go naked at times when it's in the middle of the snow. They brought in gurus from India, that was another big, big part of the plan too to help destroy the idea of, say, a Christian perspective. Because it was part of the culture so get rid of that altogether, bring in a new idea of mysticism where anything and everything is possible, at least on paper or inside your head. And you can certainly agree with it if you're stoned at the time probably and that's about it.

But they had these big experiments, often backed, definitely funded by, again, this strange organization the CIA that runs all the color revolutions. I've got no doubt it's got a big hand in the present one too. And they study us so well. Even Charles Manson, remember, there were cameras installed by the FBI watching his little area, I won't call them compounds, but with the folk would just all bedded down and stuff. He was part of that whole operation as they were spying on all the people using sex and drugs and so on. But anyway, he is one of many.

But what you find with communes is always, this is without exception, you'll all start off as equal. You have a bunch, yes we all agree with this, this, this, and this, you see. Then you'll find that folk will pair off for sex, you see, they'll pair off. But then you always get the same things coming into it, because you're all free and you're all in love and everything's okay man, and yeah, yeah, yeah. So, you get indiscretions here in the sexual areas where the whole idea it's all free and no one will get jealous, doesn't last too long and disputes happen. That's human nature, you see.

But then again you also have another thing happening, it doesn't matter who votes for whom to be leader, or for any span of time, there's always someone wants to take over that position by, again, using the old psychopathic techniques and start to, did you know what he's doing in his spare time? No, I didn't know. He's taking more food than the rest of you and taking more sexual mates than the rest. Oh, I didn't know that. Whatever it is, they'll use all this as an excuse. That's what they use to sow discord, to try to get the mob, again, to rebel against the rulers. The same thing happens over and over again, just like it was happening today.

So, it's a vie for power, a constant vie for power, you see, and challenging those in charge and that's why they all eventually fell apart. Luckily, I mean, some of them have come out, apart from the usual textbooks for the intelligence agencies and so on to use, there is some of them involved in it at the top and some of the bigger movements that have come out and admitted, this is all true, this is what happened, it was impossible to keep the peace for any length of time because of rivalry. And that's human nature.

Again, it's like a wolf pack, you know, and yeah, after they've all fed and they've all had their pecking order, because there's a definite pecking order, but there's also a definite sexual pecking order too in the wolfpack. But occasionally you get someone challenging the chief wolf, you see, that ends in disaster often for the one challenging them. But it's throughout nature it seems. Sad but true.

That's about the only time you get any bit of peace at all is when sometimes after the tyrant comes in, sort it out to an extent, and then regardless of the tyrant's methods or motives or movements even, you'll get a form of democracy coming back again, for a little while, where there is some scrutiny over those that get into power. As long as government is small enough to be watched. Then eventually gets bigger, it gets corrupt and so on. Because it's the same characters behind the scenes are always there, the ones who run the money, understand it and say you need us to help you because you just don't understand it. Because they can count magically too, they have magic accounting tables which you've never seen before.

So, within society, within human nature there's corruption. The same techniques, if you understand these techniques of corruption you can use them, and the elites always use these things, these Bernays methods to take down and remove and destroy and rebuild new types of societies that are planned that way. Using people who were never aware that they're actually being used by outsiders, others outside their group, it never dawns on them. It never dawns on them. Yet, those were the days my friend, we thought they'd never end, 'eh. M-hm. We'd fight and never lose, 'eh.

But there you go, we're perfectly understood. And the general public never ever catch on. If they're simply observers, TV observers, even when they're being gaslighted they just never catch on. They can't figure it out. That's the whole thing of gaslighting, is to convince you that what you're thinking is wrong, there's something wrong with you, it must be in your head. Because you just swore, I saw folk, you know, attacking police and using these little flamethrower, so-called fireworks, it's not a fireworks, these are explosives, big explosives. And no, that's not a peaceful demonstration, but they're telling you it’s peaceful. Yep. And the folk can't figure it out.

There's other ones who go into shock. That's another symptom of society, they going to a shock where they can't imagine their whole system suddenly just going like this, they can't imagine why it's not being stopped by what they think are the authorities that they've all paid for. And the shock is because those who are in authority aren't stopping anything. Really, that's how they see that. And so, they psychologically have to believe that some white knight is going to ride in eventually and fix everything. M-hm.

So you have, again, the psychological warfare operatives working out there to give you different groups, fictitious or otherwise, that are in the background waiting to take over and make it all right. I can remember a woman years ago who had listened to me on the radio and she called me and she said, she was quite right about certain things, very on the ball with certain things that were happening which were wrong at the time, absolutely, with rights getting taken away from the people, etc. And then, but she was an elderly woman and then she went straight into, did you know that Jesus Christ is going to come back, he's living on the planet at blah, blah, blah, with an army of these characters and they're going to ride in and fix all… And she really believes this.

And I thought, where on earth did this one come from, had gone off from the usual idea of the Bible or Revelations, but gone off, Jesus was living on a planet somewhere, and she named the planet. I don't know if it was in the neighborhood or somewhere, or was probably that famous one that's easy, Zeta Reticuli, it was famous for UFOs and everything for a while. But this is what... Where did she get that from? Well, these things come out from agencies that play with us. Regardless of what you're into, you've got agencies involved playing with you. And you'll never know it.

Then I realized, I looked into it and found it, lots of folk had fallen for the same thing that had been put out there, yeah, everything's going to get fixed and rectified. Because folk panic when things are in flux, you see. So you wait for this white rider to come in and fix it all, you know, or Donald Trump at the end is going to pull a rabbit out of his hat, you know, or something like that it is. Because folk see the system apparently collapsing with pretty well no resistance. In fact, what they see is a lot of collusion from the very top, of the financial institutions, from as I say, all the big corporations that are backing all this and financing it all, what's happening. And their minds can't cope and understand this.

The vast majority of the public have always been the peons. I don't care what kind of system it's called, that's what you are. And just like Rockefeller, again, making the omelet once again, 'eh. And the omelet has been prepared, the menu, the ingredients in the recipe has been out there for years by the elite themselves, and you’re living through it. And the chaos is all part of it, to bring in the new.

Remember folks too, I've got to keep reminding myself to let you know you can get the books and discs @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Make a list as well of all my official sites in case anything goes down and hopefully you can still get, if I'm still able to keep talking I will. You'll be able to get on my main site all the other sites. They're all main sites, really. It's been a long slog. The reason I've got so many sites up there is in the early days I used to get hammered all the time. I got slow, they're back to really gouging my speed now. I can't, I get timed out, believe it or not, with XploreNet now when I'm reading news articles at 7 PM at night, around that time they just slow it right down and I get timed out. So, this is going right back to where I was in the beginning years ago, and that's why I got so many sites out. Because at times my sites would freeze. By the providers. So, they’re still up there. Anyway, it's maybe a good thing because at least... because money, mind you… but at least if one goes down hopefully you can get my talks on the other, if I'm still able to talk.

Because things are changing quickly now and what's coming down, and is authorized to come down, is rather horrific. There's no doubt, make no bones about it. A time of anarchy that is managed by the elite themselves, and desirable from their point of view, they are behind it of course or it wouldn't happen too at all, believe you me it wouldn't happen at all if the elite didn't want it. Then during that time they can eradicate a lot of nuisances in their agenda.

They mentioned that too, using the Covid thing too as you know, that during the Event 201 they actually said... By the way, it's no myth and conspiracy theory, you can see it all, I put up the links from their own meetings at Johns Hopkins months ago. They actually said that, there is a stage, like, one, two, three, four, five and so on. Initially they will just tut-tut folk that have any opposing opinions on the whole Covid thing. Then they would step it up by punishing them by again doing things with the Internet. Just like I'm getting right now. Then they'd move on to try to get financial penalties against them, or just stop funding coming in. And then go to the next step, then they'll start arresting folk. Well, that will go along with the antiterrorism thing as well. M-hm.

Yep. Years and years ago I said that telling the truth would be an act of terrorism, because George Orwell already said it, didn't he? Yep. And utopias he was talking about, it's always the utopia you're buying in to by causing chaos, you see. To sort of paraphrase what he said, he said that under such utopias, or such systems basically, telling the truth would be considered a revolutionary act. And it is, isn't it. It certainly is.

That's how intolerant those who rule the system are. It has never changed down through the millennia. That's how the system really is. It's completely intolerant. And those who understand and manage and rule the system, the Machiavellian characters that exist within every generation, and they train them now in universities, and then higher universities, for these specialized tasks on counterintelligence or intelligence, and deception. Awfully important to understand that little part. But if you're a follower, yeah, you're being used. Absolutely.

So go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com and as I say, you can buy the books and discs or donate to me. You'll see how to do it there. You can use PayPal. You can use cash. You can send checks. Hopefully I'll tick along for a bit longer through all of this nonsense. Because it's to get, it's true enough what they say, you see, when they say it's going to get worse before it gets better. That's always the agenda when they're bringing in a new system into austerity. It will get so bad that when you get rationing and electronic digital rationing cards and so on, you'll be grateful for the little bit you get. Oh, thank God that bad part's over, even when you get a fraction of the income or the purchasable items that you had before. You'll get basic sustenance. If you get that you’ll be lucky. Because it's going to be hell. Absolutely.

The whole Covid idea, it's flat. You don't, they shut down a good part of the world economies. And the money, this, I know it's all fake and yes, it is all fake, how it's all managed and it's all digital now. It's all the Wizard of Oz really, isn't it? But regardless, that's always used against you for paying it back, this debt. This round, it must be up to Mars from the earth if you placed all the dollars end to end, hundred-dollar bills mind you, going back to Mars around Mars and around Earth a few times, by now with all these thousands of dollars and millions of dollars and billions and trillions of dollars now in debt, by shutting down the economy.

Because of SARS, you know. That Fauci himself has said at the beginning, he said, it's probably no worse than a bad flu. Well, there's a big agenda riding on this bad flu, isn't there. They shut the economies, increase the debt, I don't know how many times you know, and that's all going to keep you in slavery for centuries. Hhhhhhhhhhhh. Although it's fictitious money, but it's going to keep you in... for centuries, because you'll never pay it back of course. It's not meant to be paid back. As you know. Everything's working along the plan, working well, it’s in the direction of the plan. Absolutely. There's no doubt about it.

So buy the books and discs and help me tick along by donating to me @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. And don't lose your heads. Don't panic. Don't give up. Whatever you do. You should have your little coterie of friends, if you've got them, I don't care what generation they belong to, you need a few around you, at least within distance to you, and all sworn to help each other out. Because you can't count on anybody else these days. You can't count on government. Government is standing back watching riots going on for goodness’ sake, you know. And threats and gunfire and all the rest of it going on too. I think in Seattle recently, just the other day there they, the cops are being pulled out altogether. I'll touch on that article in a little while. But the message to the general public, the citizenry, is to, it's everybody for themselves now, take care of yourselves. Well, that's desirable obviously, on behalf of the elite, or else it would not be happening. It would not be happening, folks. I'm telling ya.

You have to remember too, for those that can still remember, going back into Obama's era, and George Bush Junior's era, 'eh, you had the same neocons behind them all. Don't forget the articles, if they're still up there, I certainly had them all, where the top ones in the neocon outfits were congratulating Obama for continuing the same list of wars they had on their list when they were the PNAC group. So yeah, you're going through agendas, you see, regardless of the changes of the house. Like Jefferson said, know you're under a tyranny when you see the same agendas continue under different changes of the house. So the parties are bogus, aren't they? Like Quigley said, he says, they're all members of the same organization, all the leaders that are selected, that are selected before you ever get their names to vote for. [Alan chuckles.]

So yeah, that's what you're seeing. At the same time, can you imagine it, all this military equipment was getting dumped in the States, all these different police departments were getting armored vehicles and Humvees and heavy gunnery and so on, equipment that the armies have, right down to bayonets for the rifles, etc., you know. And they kept, everybody was saying, what's coming down the pike? …what's happening here? …what's going to happen? Well, you know, always remember, never count on who you think it's going to be used against. Never forget that.

The idea of a soldier is to follow orders. The police is the same as a paramilitary organization, follow orders. Police always, even when countries are invaded, and we saw that in World War II, the police are, they're at work the next morning when the enemy is moved in and taken over, they're right at work. They're at your service. Yep. That's it. That's the nature of it.

So, don't count on you're going to have, again, the white knights just riding out. Because it's all planned that way. If the elite didn't want what's happening to happen, it would never have happened. It isn't just the organization at the bottom levels for the riots and the techniques that are used, practiced and rehearsed in previous times. The organization financial and otherwise way above them is from the elite themselves. That's the key to it all. And nothing happens, everything's headed off at the pass long before anything happens if it's not authorized.

9/11 happened, I can remember 9/11 happened and there was all the accusations that were flung around the next week actually about how did this happen. And of course, the Bush group and the Cheney group and so on were, oh we don't know whether it was a stand-down that day 9/11 happened, didn't know it, we never suspected it. Israel jumped in on the bandwagon and says, we warned you it was going to happen. Britain, the head of GCHQ in Britain jumped in too and I remember reading these things off when it happened, he said the same thing, we warned you and warned you this was going to happen but you didn't listen. And that's where it was all LEFT, you see. It was intended to happen [Alan chuckles.] to get the big changes through. A Pearl Harbor event. Hm? They got their Pearl Harbor event to get the list on the go. And that's how it really works.

Then you had all the, well, nevermind, it's countless, the evidence is countless of the characters involved from Brzezinski and Kissinger talking about the need to take these countries out. How, and they had little differences on the fine points of how to take them down, you know. Kissinger saying, well it would be better now to make it a long-term thing. Then Brzezinski differing on how to do it, and managing Iraq, if they took out Iraq. The points of difference was, one of them wanted to destroy down to the Stone Age level, finance little groups of factions inside it, little differences in religious sects and so on, have them all fighting each other forever, then they could never get back to having a government again. They'd be completely dysfunctional, forever. That's what they settled on.

Then we had the rest of the list too. Because certain countries were saying, don't stop there, go all the way into Syria. They wanted to keep going and going and going and going with Desert Storm. Then into 9/11, Operation Iraqi freedom, 'eh? [Alan chuckles.] And they used American troops. But then they brought in again the mercenary groups, Blackwater. Other ones. Then of course they started to use mercenary groups, again from Middle East, the old ones that had worked with them, the American troops, and then you use them to recruit and so on, and use them to attack Syria. That was part of it as well.

They'd already taken, changed Egypt, and even when they elected their leader they said they weren't secular enough, that was what the West said, and the United Nations too wanted a nonsecular government. So, they overthrew them too with the CIA. Then they tried to do the same thing with Syria. They already took out Libya, the richest most self-sufficient country in Africa, they took out Libya. And also, just disappeared its whole massive gold reserves. As they did of course with Iraq with a massive stack of cash. And there's pension plans and everything in Iraq too, don't forget, it was all dictatorship, you know, all gone. Disappeared. Then of course they start to use these mercenary groups, that the US was funding and Britain was funding, on behalf of the elite, to take down Syria. And they're still at it, still at it today.

There's even Antifa photographs up there of them sending people from the US and elsewhere with their outfits posing for the photographs, training with the groups, the Kurdish groups, the communist groups within the Kurds, in their Antifa outfits. And coming back to America of course, 'eh? What I'm saying is, this isn’t secret. This isn’t secret. Getting back to disclosures after 9/11, the top officials and the top government agencies in the West said there was nothing in this day and age, this is 2001, NOTHING information wise on this kind of level that could be kept secret, the electronic monitoring was PHENOMENAL across the planet.

The States and Britain still own islands that are just massive systems of arrays of detection equipment and so on. Australia has got them across there too. But there's nothing to be said, I don't care if encrypted or otherwise, that can't be broken. The computer systems they have now with the techniques that they're using and the algorithms, they can detect little buzzwords and terms and so on waay beyond the primitive stuff that they printed back in the 90s. But they already had it at 9/11 and says, this could have never been kept secret. People, every agency, if other agencies knew this, then obviously the US knew it too. There's the question, you're always left with the big question. So, if you mentioned that, you're a conspiracy theorist. Even though you haven't declared it was definitely intentional, the fact is, you've just followed the lines of reasoning from the information, and then you'll be classified as a conspiracy theorist just for mentioning it.

So in this day and age, do you really, really think, nevermind of all the programs that the CIA put out there even for the overthrow of countries in the Middle East, including the ones they used in Egypt, oh yeah, this just came out of nowhere, this encrypted program, they're all using this. Do you really think, do you really, really think that anything is happening today is a surprise? Do you really think so? It's not. It's not. N-n. No way at all.

Now I'm going to touch on a few articles and some of them I'll show you the relationship between the articles and the characters involved, even in different countries, they're all literally, they are very well connected together. You always can find the same characters financing them to do with Covid and so on. Remember, monopoly of information is imperative if you want to bring a new system in. And you've been living through the bringing in of a new system for most of your lives in fact.

The old articles I did years ago, to do with the Rockefellers and other institutions that were set up to decide by really intense study, how many newspapers and magazines were needed to control the whole of the US? When Rockefellers’ group did it back in the 1930s, they said about 35 of them, I think it was, would be enough to, the rest of them would follow. Make them big, big issues of news and the public would, all of the rest of the newspapers, the smaller newspapers would follow them and just repeat their stuff. Which is the way it's done.

It's very simple to do, isn't it, to monopolize information. Small newspapers are really advertising papers. They survive on basic advertising so they're quite willing to pay a few pennies extra to have access to the stories from the big ones. Information is very easy to control. Even on the Internet, folk have no idea of the, again, of who's controlling your thoughts, who's giving you your thoughts and your opinions, and your topics as well.

Do you really think it's coincidence that suddenly out of the blue the Pentagon comes out and it's going to, how many times have you heard it's going to disclose information on UFOs? I mean, you've got so many diversions right now, that won't affect you at all as far, with regards of what's happening on the ground here right now. [Alan chuckles.] But it's all planned that way, you see, lots of diversions.

They've even got articles out now from psychologists, that started off with the Covid idea and how to pass your time as you're all locked up, and how to not get on each other's goats as they used to say in Britain, getting on my goat, by upsetting me or whatever or starting to gripe or whatever. All these how-to books suddenly came about how to learn to do this during your time off, blah blah blah. The last thing on your mind is learning a new anything when you don't know if there's going to be work ever coming your way again. You understand that?

This is the rubbish they churn out there, but it's like a machine just churning it out. And all these characters get paid to churn this rubbish out. As Orwell talked about even in his 1984, where music would be churned out and pornography by machines almost like robots. Yep, there ya go. And that's how it's done today. They do have programs now that can actually bring up the lyrics, and terrible lyrics, and the whole bit and terrible music too. But that's what they do. You can make anything popular by financing it that way, with the big machinery of the star making machinery. It's quite easy to do.

Anyway, but I'll tell you what we're talking about. So, next they're moving, they're moving, you see they've already trained you over the last few months, then you're getting trained into the next, because the same characters wrote these articles now say that, yeah, we're psychologists and we're going to, we're getting, we are even aiming at the folk who are getting afraid with all the riots going on, not to panic, you know, and here's how to cope with it if you feel you're going to panic, and all these techniques not to go into a panic state and yada, yada, ya.

It's all continuous, all planned this way, folks, from the first step Covid, right into the next of [Alan chuckles.] a lawless society. That's what folk are getting afraid of in the States, when the police are being withdrawn by the people who have sold them out. [Alan chuckles.] It's quite something to watch. But folk never catch on to it all. But yeah, you get all these professionals, how to cope with your anxiety, etc., yada, yada, ya. Quite amazing to see. And it's all paid for by your tax money, 'eh, as they tell you to succumb to it and just give in. [Alan chuckles.] But here's a way to give in happily and contentedly, and don't panic when you're doing it… as their whole system is turned upside down.

Now, here's an article here to show you that…

UK was 'asleep' to threat of a global pandemic, top expert Sir John Bell says standard.co.uk / 21 July 2020

(Alan: …before the eruption of the ongoing coronavirus crisis. I won't read all this because it's irrelevant. It's a handout. All the papers have these handouts pretty well, you know. They don't really have major journalists in this day and age. Sir John Bell...)

Sir John Bell, Oxford University's regius professor of medicine, told MPs on Tuesday that officials had failed to get Britain on the "front foot" in preparation for a pandemic despite several "close calls" with emerging infectious diseases in recent decades.

"The fact that we were asleep to the concept that we were going to have a pandemic, I think, shame on us," he told the Commons Health and Social Care Committee.

"Since the year 2000 we've had eight close calls of emerging infectious diseases, any one of which could have swept the globe as a pandemic.

"This is not new and I think we should not be proud of the fact that we ended up with a system which had no resilience to pandemics. I think the biggest single failure was not being on the front foot."

(A: Maybe he's got three legs, I don't know. They've got a left and right, you've got one in the middle, right, well maybe that's, oh I'd better not go there.)

Sir Bell went on to compare the UK's handling of the coronavirus pandemic to Singapore, which he said had started "preparing for trouble" at the beginning of January, shortly after the first cases were recorded in Wuhan, China, in December.

Now we know they were recorded before December too of course. So anyway, this whole thing is, we gotta step up and get into the whole idea of managing this, etc. And getting his name in the papers because you'll be hearing a lot more of him in Britain. Sir John Bell, Oxford University, naturally, professor of medicine. There you go. Then you find out too, this article here that…

Coronavirus: Oxford vaccine triggers immune response

bbc.com / 20 July 2020

(A: Well, it's a coincidence that it's the same, you know, Oxford vaccine, you see. It says here now, let me see…)

A coronavirus vaccine developed by the University of Oxford appears safe and triggers an immune response.

(A: Well, they always tell you, you see, it triggers an immune response. I don't care what it is, if they put sterile water in, they'd tell you that, you know. Because that's, it's to get money flooding into the shares that they're dishing out, you see, big money. Remember too, what happened before with them, where folk had responses too in previous infections from the actual vaccine, but when it hit the real virus in the wild as they call it, after getting the vaccine, they had the massive immune response that killed them. Don't forget that. So, the immune response itself is nothing at all, no, and they can fudge that as figures as much as they want anyway, huh. So, it says…)

Trials involving 1,077 people showed the injection led to them making antibodies and T-cells that can fight coronavirus.

(A: Well, you'd find that too if you had natural immunity, the natural herd immunity that's spreading all through society. Remember a couple months ago the article from I think it was Oxford too, it says that this virus is disappearing so quickly we might not have enough of it around to create a vaccine. Hm. Anyway, it says…)

The UK has already ordered 100 million doses of the vaccine.

(A: You see, every country has got its own elite getting in on the action, the taxpayer paying for it all mind you. So it mentions…)

The vaccine is being developed at unprecedented speed.

(A: ...yada, ya. And this is a handout, saying rah-rah, this article. I hope you understand what a rah-rah article is. It says, yaa-da-da-da, da, da, da, it's all happy-happy.)

It is made from a genetically engineered virus

(A: ...so a genetically engineered virus they use…)

that causes the common cold in chimpanzees.

(A: You remember too the polio one with the Simian 40, the simian, the monkey virus, 'eh? Because they couldn't separate the stuff they'd used, it was the kidney cells I think of the monkeys, and there were stacks, over a hundred of them, viruses from, different kinds of viruses came in with the vaccine for polio. And the Simian 40 was the cancer one. Yep. But oops, we shouldn't think of these things, it's negative, it's negative, it's awful negative. So here's...)

...a genetically engineered virus that causes the common cold in chimpanzees.

It has been heavily modified, first so it cannot cause infections in people (A: ...right...) and also to make it "look" (A: ...like pretend it's...) more like coronavirus. (A: It's to fool the body supposedly.)

Scientists did this by transferring the genetic instructions for the coronavirus's "spike protein" - the crucial tool it uses to invade our cells - to the vaccine they were developing.

This means the vaccine resembles the coronavirus and the immune system can learn how to attack it.

Much of the focus on coronavirus so far has been about antibodies, but these are only one part of our immune defence.

Neutralising antibodies can disable the coronavirus.

(A: So, you have a neutralizing antibody, and it's going to try and say, the way they word it is pretty bad actually.)

T-cells, a type of white blood cell, help co-ordinate the immune system and are able to spot which of the body's cells have been infected and destroy them.

Nearly all effective vaccines induce both an antibody and a T-cell response.

Levels of T-cells peaked 14 days after vaccination and antibody levels peaked after 28 days. The study has not run for long enough to understand how long they may last, the study in the Lancet showed.

(A: You see, because they want to already, they've already said it, they want you to have multiple shots of this in you actually. It's great business, isn't it, 'eh?)

Prof Andrew Pollard, from the Oxford research group told the BBC: "We're really pleased with the results ...

(A: They're all saying this, every company, every country is saying the same stuff.)

"But the key question everyone wants to know is does the vaccine work, does it offer protection... and we're in a waiting game."

The study showed 90% of people (A: ...that they tested it on...) developed neutralising antibodies after one dose. Only ten people were given two doses and all of them produced neutralising antibodies.

(A: But how many of them got sick I wonder? Is it going to tell us? Oh...)

There were no dangerous side-effects from taking the vaccine, however, around 17% had fever and more than six-in-10 patients had a headache.

(A: Well, these are symptoms of something that's wrong, fever and headaches, you see. And it could be something that's dangerous, 'eh.)

Prof Sarah Gilbert, from the University of Oxford, UK, says: "There is still much work to be done before we can confirm if our vaccine will help manage the Covid-19 pandemic

Remember I read an article too at the beginning of the whole thing, one of these professors I think worked in the Wuhan lab, one at Oxford, I'm not kidding you, before it all happened, 'eh. A small world. It's a small world, isn't it?

But anyway, the whole thing is a rah-rah for vaccines, remember, even though the vaccine isn't going to give you a better immune response protection than a natural virus, you see. Remember what Fauci said at the very beginning? He says the only way out of this is going to get a vaccine and proof that you've had the vaccine before you get out of your homes. So, it was already decided before they even knew, supposedly knew what was going on. Isn't it? And if most folk are, look, how many folks have gotten over this thing with their natural immune system? D'you really need a vaccine? Hm? But again, facts don't matter, does it?

Now, here's the one I wanted to get to actually. It's…

Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation - Scientific Advisory Committee

gatesfoundation.org

Who We Are

SCIENTIFIC ADVISORY COMMITTEE

(A: Well, is from the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation. Small world, it's always a small world, 'eh. Emergency planning and response, they do family planning too. Global delivery programs, global libraries, maternal newborn and childcare, and so on, nutrition, polio on all this stuff. And HIV. Ahhhhh, wonderful, Bill and Melinda Gates, 'eh. The history of eugenicists. Oops, you know, slip of the tongue again. So, they said, his scientific advisory committee, who are we, it says...)

Our Global Health Program advisory committee comprises a group of esteemed experts (A: It's important, that, when you say esteemed.) from outside of the foundation who offer a wide range of experiences and perspectives. This group plays an important role in strengthening our work by offering independent assessments of our strategies and helping us evaluate results.

(A: Now at the top of them, the scientific advisory committee that's working for Bill and Melinda Gates and all that, it's the same guy from Oxford, John Bell...)

John Bell, G.B.E., F.R.S., FMedSci (Chair of Committee) (A: He's the chairman of that committee. It goes into the same handout too...)

John Bell is the Regius Professor of Medicine at Oxford University. Bell went to Oxford as a Rhodes Scholar to train in medicine (A: Rhodes Scholars by the way, if you want to understand the world agenda, just follow the Rhodes Scholars.) and undertook postgraduate training in London and at Stanford University.

(A: So, it's a small world though. I mean, you just get on that board and he's in charge of Britain and all that for… But there you are, he's just, just happens to be on one of these boards, because it's awfully important and esteemed. And of course, they decide where all the money goes and what kind of things are going to be done to you, by mandate of the government. Yep.)

In 2008, he was made a fellow of the Royal Society

(A: They were the first eugenicists that came out openly by the way. The Royal Society was made up of, it was part occultic, [Alan chuckles.] it really was, of characters who developed, who went into science from the occultism side of things. The Royal Society literally would decide, a very, very secretive organization at the time when they started up, it would decide who would be, who would even be mentioned in history as an important person in science and who would not. Very selective, you know. Of course, they helped sponsor Darwin and his theories of course in evolution and most favored races and stuff like that.)

and a Knight Bachelor for his services to medical science. He was appointed Knight Grand Cross of the Order of the British Empire (GBE) in the 2015 New Year Honours for services to medicine, medical research, and the life science industry.

(A: ...industry, right. [Alan chuckles.] So, there you go.)

Bell has been involved extensively in the development of research programs in genetics and genomics (A: …genomics, 'eh...) and in the development of a clinical research program across the U.K. He sits on a range of advisory panels for public and private sector bodies (A: I wouldn't want him sitting on any of these bodies, would you?) responsible for biomedical research in Canada, Denmark, France, Singapore, Sweden, and the U.K, and he is a founding director of three biotechnology start-up companies.

(A: Well, that's just a coincidence! For goodness’ sake! Then it goes through the other ones…)

Alan Bernstein, O.C., O.Ont., Ph.D,. FRSC

Alan Bernstein is president of the Canadian Institute for Advanced Research (CIFAR), one of Canada's major global research assets.

(A: …and on and on it goes, it's the same kind of stuff, over and over.)

M.K. Bhan, M.B.B.S., M.D. (pediatrics), D.Sc. (honorary)

It goes through a list of them too, the ones who are awfully important, you see, and they have a hand in all these different things that are happening today. Small world. It is a small world, for goodness sakes, 'eh?

Oxford professor warns coronavirus is 'here forever'

metro.co.uk / 22 July 2020

(A: Now let's just add to this professor from Oxford, Professor Sir John Bell, who told politicians in Britain...)

Professor Sir John Bell told MPs: 'The reality is that this pathogen is here forever, (A: ...the Covid 19.) It isn't going anywhere. Look at how much trouble they've had in eliminating, for example, polio, that eradication programme has been going on for 15 years and they're still not there.'

(A: Mind you, they've spread a lot [Alan chuckles.] through some big bloopers you might say, and I've touched on that already. Or I will shortly. But it goes on to say here…)

His intervention came as another top scientist and member of the influential SAGE group poured cold water on the prime minister's claim that life could return to normal by Christmas – suggesting Covid-19 will in fact be around for 'decades to come'.

(A: Remember, Sir John here, Sir John Bell is in with Mr. Bill Gates naturally, everybody else is too, so they all parrot the same stuff, you know, all on the same boards and so on. So, they're not independent. Hhhhhhh, they're all slightly... can you say, slightly contaminated perhaps, with their associations with each other on board with the same agenda basically. But he goes on to say here too, the same thing as Fauci, they all parrot the same stuff. Just like weapons of mass destruction, it came out of the mouths of all of the characters involved, same thing here, same technique.)

Sir John continued: ‘This is going to come and go, and we’re going to get winters where we get a lot of this virus back in action. The vaccine is unlikely to have a durable effect that’ll last for a very long time so we’re going to have to have a continual cycle of vaccinations, and then more disease, and more vaccinations and more disease.

So that's the agenda, you see, for the big, big corporations that are managing all of this. And we are all the… we are part of the product; we are made to purchase their product via the proxy of the government that mandates that you take it. [Alan laughing.] Which is called fascism of course. The very fact that he says that it will come and go and come and go, even though all other viruses come and get weaker and weaker and weaker. Otherwise you'd have the Spanish flu still with you forever. The only version of the Spanish flu apparently is in biowarfare labs and they admit this too, I did the reports years ago that were published by these laboratories.

They got the live virus, or made it live again basically from corpses that were buried in permafrost from the 1917/18 flu pandemic. Of course these ended up in the labs. And they managed, they said, we've actually made them more potent now, more virile, in case it ever came back and jumped to the next stage itself, we've made it more. So again, that's gain of function again, 'eh. That's future big business for them. This is how it all works, and folk never quite catch on to it. But this is again, and I've already mentioned the association with Bill Gates and the Oxford University professor Mr. Bell, or SIR John Bell. So, there you go, it's going to come and go, come and go forever so you have to keep getting vaccinations all the time, maybe a few times a year. That's good business, that.

Of course, even though you'd have your own immune system that would give you immunity to it, well we don't know how long that will last either, you see. Even though generally these things will last you quite a few years. But that's not good enough, because the paid version is always better, right, okay, for profits.

Another one too goes back into July 20…

'I will be not be masked, tested, tracked or poisoned': Hundreds of anti-mask activists march on London's Hyde Park to protest the mandatory use of face coverings in shops from Thursday

dailymail.co.uk / 20 July 2020

One dressed as plague doctor while another had vest saying: 'Save human rights' during Hyde Park gathering

(A: I guess no one's really bothered in that, by the way, save human rights. Not these days.)

Government toughened its stance on wearing of face coverings in public places in England earlier this week

It follows similar rules for wearing face coverings while travelling on public transport, which started in June

Right. Obviously too it's the first time in history this has happened for something, and I'll put up by the way a YouTube, it's a pretty good YouTube where you'll hear Fauci for instance starting off in the early days of the coronavirus telling you he didn't think the Americans needed to worry about it at all pretty well and you didn't need masks and all that. And then completely reversing his stance once the big dollars started flashing everywhere [Alan chuckles.] for vaccine companies and so on, telling you the absolute opposites of everything. Really astonishing, this so-called expert.

Can you imagine so much power being in the hands of one person? in democracies? even in Republican democracies? So much power to one person, who literally would be compromised with his investments in private companies that are going to make billions out of this. You think that would be an out right there. You can't have honest folk that you're going to follow and put their lives into your hands if they're already compromised at such a level financially. Hm?

Wwwwell, that's what's happening anyway so you know, again, facts don't matter. The idea too, locking everybody down so that natural immunity doesn't spread enough, fast enough, herd immunity would have been achieved very quickly if they had not locked the folks down. It would be over and done with. But again, it's not profitable. There is no profit in your own immune system working and allowing it to spread quickly. Most folk have no symptoms at all. Most. We've already seen the padded figures of folk going to hospitals. No matter what's wrong with them you're put down as Covid, if they detect something using that terrible test that even the inventor said should not be used for testing, it's useless, he says. But again, facts don't matter. Even from the inventor, 'eh. I-yiii. Hhhhhhhhhhh.

Anyway, the folk are not happy getting locked down and having to be literally managed with masks on their face. This is conformity. There's all reasons why we're wearing the masks. They knew immediately when you were allowed about a month off for the summer, you see, of mixing again, and less masks being used, folk would go right back to normal behavior very quickly. Because they're not terrified, you forget the terror very quickly. And it's not good for business, you see, because they want you to be terrified. The mask, it's not going to help you, it's not going to keep you spreading something if you've got it. It's not going to stop you from getting it, I've already been through the articles from the CDC explaining the masks and how they're no use for this. Hm? Especially those light things too that literally are, I don't know if it's just a face covering, if that's all it is. But it's nothing to do with that.

Masks are neither effective nor safe: A summary of the science - theirishsentinel.com / 23 July 2020

The reason they're mandating it is because it reminds you of a danger. They want you to be terrified and always remembering this danger. And they want you fighting each other too. Because folk have been petrified into terrifying folk who won’t comply. Oooooooh, you're not, you're not 6 feet, 1 inch close, get away from me. This is what they've, this is all intentionally created, this whole terror and furor that we’re living through right now. Yep. Amazing stuff, 'eh.

But it works to their advantage. It's all psychological warfare, again, managed, very well-managed, again by psy-op operations. Bombarding you through every media that you can read or listen to or watch. On the net or TV or whatever, it doesn't make any difference where it is, you're getting bombarded with the stuff all the time. And compliance is submission, you see, it's submission. First you submit your common sense, and your reason regarding all the facts. The facts are all out there if you want them. But that doesn't matter.

And you're compliant. What's the next thing you must be compliant in? Well, you're going to find out very shortly, folks. This is the end of this system. It was meant to, this is the crashing of the entire system that was planned a long time ago. Starting with the 2007/8 supposed crash. It wasn't a crash; it was a planned event. A reset then, you see, a partial reset and now it's the next part but not just money but for the entire system. On behalf... for the elite! It's their system.

You don't hear any of the elite saying, oh woe is me, we're losing our system. No. [Alan chuckles.] Not at all. Not from Covid or from demonstrations and protests or riots. There's nothing coming from them. They're not losing anything at the top. That's a little clue for you.

This one here again, I've mentioned the, ha, the Gates advisory committee, oh, it's something else, isn't it something, 'eh? And then...

What you need to know about the COVID-19 vaccine - Bill Gates

gatesnotes.com / 30 April 2020

One of the questions I get asked the most these days is when the world will be able to go back to the way things were in December before the coronavirus pandemic. My answer is always the same: when we have an almost perfect drug to treat COVID-19, or when almost every person on the planet has been vaccinated against coronavirus.

(A: Hhhhhhhhhh, you see. This is from specialists, you see. That's from Bill Gates, you can't get a better specialist since he owns most of it then, 'eh. He's not a doctor. Nope. He a philanthropist, you see, a big businessman, that's got a finger in every pie. Including education. He's got reimagining this and reimagining that, reimagining education, 'eh, all done online, through his system. Mmmmmmmm, there's indoctrination and uniform, uniformly done with uniform output. [Alan chuckles.] It's just astonishing. Bricks in the wall, ‘eh?)

What you need to know about the COVID-19 vaccine

Humankind has never had a more urgent task than creating broad immunity for coronavirus.

(A: So, here's a guy who's been trying to push this type of vaccine that alters your DNA, 'eh, but getting into the RNA. It says here…)

The former is unlikely to happen anytime soon. We’d need a miracle treatment that was at least 95 percent effective to stop the outbreak.

(A: No, you wouldn't, just let it go, folks, and the immune system, like every one before, other coronavirus's, has beaten it, no problem.)

Most of the drug candidates right now are nowhere near that powerful. They could save a lot of lives, but they aren’t enough to get us back to normal.

Which leaves us with a vaccine.

Humankind has never had a more urgent task than creating broad immunity for coronavirus.

(A: He's talking about the whole range of them, 'eh.)

Realistically, if we’re going to return to normal, we need to develop a safe, effective vaccine. We need to make billions of doses, we need to get them out to every part of the world, and we need all of this to happen as quickly as possible.

(A: So, emergency, emergency, don't test it, don't look at the long-term effects, no, no, just get it out as quickly as possible. From a eugenicist?! who wants to reduce the population of the planet, openly in his talks. This is not conspiracy; you can get it yourself. I might even try to find the article again and the YouTube if it's still up there where he talks about this quite candidly. I-yi-yi.)

That sounds daunting, because it is. Our foundation is the biggest funder of vaccines in the world, (A: Isn't that a clue, 'eh?) and this effort dwarfs anything we’ve ever worked on before. It’s going to require a global cooperative effort

(A: So, none of this idea of you all do your own thing and then experiment, no, no. You must all go along the same path with his organization, 'eh. He says...)

There’s simply no alternative.

(A: Yeah? Really? This is psychological warfare, there's simply no alternative. So, he's all for it. And of course he praises Fauci...)

Dr. Anthony Fauci has said he thinks it’ll take around eighteen months to develop a coronavirus vaccine. I agree with him, though it could be as little as 9 months or as long as two years.

(A: It's supposed to take quite a few years, folks, to test the long-term effects of it all, never mind the short term.)

Safety and efficacy are the two most important goals for every vaccine. Safety is exactly what it sounds like: is the vaccine safe to give to people?

This is from a guy who's been sued by countries like India for the stuff that went wrong, even the polio vaccine that was the oral type, or the spray type, and the World Health Organization, I did the article at the time, I remember reading it and I remember broadcasting it on the radio show. The WHO had said, had admitted eventually that after his campaign out there with this particular polio vaccine, it had actually created a new wild type of polio that they couldn't treat. It was taking off and superseding the old polio's that were in existence. They don't want to mention these facts, does he? These are very dangerous people. Powerful dangerous people. With unlimited financing. Mind you, they're not doing it all for free, they've got fingers in all the pies too, and governments pay them all eventually as well. M-hm.

So, here's an article here by, again, Robert F Kennedy. I've put this one up before I think. But anyway, it says…

Gates Pushes Gene-Altering Technology on Seven Billion Humans

web.archive.org / 21 July 2020

By Robert F. Kennedy, Jr., Chairman, Children's Health Defense

Pharma has over 170 COVID vaccines in development, but Gates and Fauci pushed Moderna's "Frankenstein jab" to the front of the line.

(A: It was all planned in advance. The same with Gilead by the way, the actual drug, the antiviral drug, they'd already tried it with AIDs and different things, it had not done well at all. But facts don't matter when there's big business there and certain pals, you know, that owns companies.)

The vaccine uses a new, untested, and very controversial experimental RNA technology (A: No kidding, 'eh?) that Gates has backed for over a decade. (A: He tried to get this through before, you see.)

Instead of injecting an antigen and adjuvant as with traditional vaccines, Moderna plugs a small piece of coronavirus genetic code into human cells, altering DNA throughout the human body and reprogramming our cells to produce antibodies to fight the virus. mRNA vaccines are a form of genetic engineering called "germ line gene editing". (A: Most folk would read that and never clue in that's what it meant, germ line gene editing, right.)

Moderna’s genetic alterations are passed down to future generations. (A: D'you understand, you change one and every offspring from then on is going to be altered too, passed down to future generations.)

In January, The Geneva Statement, the world’s leading ethicists and scientists, (A: I don't need them because we're all ethicists and we can use our own heads.) called for an end to this kind of experimentation.

Moderna has never bought... (A: I think it should be ‘brought’, it's missing an 'r' here.)

Moderna has never bought a product to market, proceeded through clinical trials, or had a vaccine approved by FDA. (A: Never had it before you see.)

The company received an astonishing $483 million in federal funds (A: Isn't that amazing? There's fascism, 'eh, for a private company.) from the Biomedical Advanced Research and Development Authority (BARDA), a sister agency to Fauci’s NIAID, to accelerate development. Dr. Joseph Bolen, Moderna’s former Research and Development Chief, expressed shock at Fauci’s “bet” in supporting the company. “I don’t know what their thinking was,” he told CNN. “When I read that, I was pretty amazed.”

Moderna and Fauci launched federally-funded human trials in March in Seattle. Dr. Peter Hotez warns of potentially fatal consequences from skipping animal studies. As he said to CNN, “If there is immune enhancement in animals, that’s a showstopper.” Dr. Suhab Siddiqi, Moderna’s Ex-Director of Chemistry, told CNN, “I would not let the [vaccine] be injected in my body. I would demand: ‘Where is the toxicity data?’”

(A: You see, they won't have it and they're going ahead with it, just skipping all the different trials. This is from the guy, remember...)

...Moderna’s Ex-Director of Chemistry, told CNN, “I would not let the [vaccine] be injected in my body.”

(A: That is quite a statement, isn't it? But again, that will be gone like the wind, most can't retain things very long these days. Especially when you get the other side coming back, oh well, he didn't really mean what he said. And he says…)

... "I would demand: ‘Where is the toxicity data?’”

As precautions, Moderna ordered trial participants to avoid unprotected sex or sperm donations (A: No kidding. This is what they told you, 'eh.) and Gates is promoting that all COVID vaccines be protected by blanket immunity.

(A: ...regardless of what happens to you, you see, you can't… So, they can kill, they could kill millions or whatever, it wouldn't make any difference, nobody can sue them, if there's anybody left alive. But…)

...protected by blanket immunity.

(A: ...from their actions. Isn't that amazing? Bill Gates. Who voted for, I haven't voted for this character, have you? It says…)

He hopes to sell his experimental gene-altering technology to all 7 billion humans and transform our species into GMOs. (A: Genetically modified organisms. It's, that's it, folks.)

Moderna’s former Research and Development Chief, (A: The CHIEF, right...) expressed shock at Fauci’s “bet” in supporting the company. (A: M-hm, and...)

Dr. Peter Hotez warns of potentially fatal consequences from skipping animal studies.

(A: And...)

Dr. Suhab Siddiqi, Moderna’s Ex-Director of Chemistry, told CNN, “I would not let the [vaccine] be injected in my body."

N-n-n. Remember I always put up all these different articles because it's not my opinions, this is put out by the characters themselves.

Boris Johnson, you know, the clown that they put in, he's a showman, he's a showman, that's why they put him in, with a pretended conservative party because there's no conservative party now. Long gone. And he was never conservative before he became prime minister. [Alan chuckles.] Anyway, facts don't matter.

Boris Johnson news – live: Vaccine sceptics called 'nuts' by PM as ministers (A: That’s politicians.) target junk food ads in obesity crackdown independent.co.uk / 24 July 2020

(A: So now they're wanting to cut down, well they're getting you use to less food, because you're going to go into rationing, folks. Yep, big time. Across the world. So…)

Boris Johnson has hit out at anti-vaccination conspiracy theorists, describing them as “nuts”, as he set out his government’s plan for an extra 30 million people to get the flu jab this winter.

(A: Ooooo, really? He's decided, has he, 'eh?)

The prime minister also called on the public to lose weight this summer, saying it was one of the ways “you can reduce your own risks from Covid”.

(A: Really? He's now an expert now in virology, 'eh?)

He is set to propose a ban on TV junk food ads before 9pm in a bid to tackle Britain’s obesity problem.

(A: Weeell, there ya go.)

And in an interview with the BBC, Mr Johnson admitted the UK could have handled the coronavirus pandemic better - saying there were "open questions" over the timing of his decision to send the country into lockdown.

(A: Anyway, this is just a handout too. I mean, this guy is an actor, like they all are, you know. Of course he is. And of course it really just heads off the whole Brexit idea on the pass here, a lockdown and massive protests, with taking down the statues and stuff by… [Alan chuckles.] Come on here. D'you think it's all coincidental it's all happening right now? M-hm. I tell ya. N-n-n.)

Elsewhere in a stinging attack on the nation's readiness to split from Brussels, a former national security advisor claimed ministers (A: …politicians…) are refusing to admit to the threat from terrorists and crime gangs if there is no Brexit deal.

(A: There you are.)

"Without a deal the loss of operational effectiveness for the UK law enforcement agencies – including in Northern Ireland – will be profound, undermining modern intelligence led policing and putting the safety of the public your risk."

(A: Well, when did they ever worry about the public? And then again, the UK again...)

The UK and US defense chiefs have accused Russia (A: [Alan chuckles.]) of launching an anti-satellite space weapon. Defense Secretary Ben Wallace claimed Britain remained "deeply vulnerable" to the "weaponising" of space.

D'you remember, you have to remember those who were alive at the time of Ronald Reagan, the whole idea for the Star Wars project, oh, Star Wars, oh, satellites up there, killer satellites, firing lasers at different ones and knocking them down and shooting them down. Supposedly that was part of the reason that Russia just gave up, that's what they claimed. It was nonsense. It was because they couldn't keep up with the cost of manufacturing of these things to keep it on par with the States. That was the whole stuff at the time of Reagan, Star Wars. And here they're dragging that up here trying to claim that Russia is maybe, the old Cold War nonsense, oh maybe they're getting ahead of us, 'eh. [Alan laughing.] Quite something isn't it? That's from The Independent, that one.

But yeah, so once again if you, in a country that supposedly had its free opinion and really, that was a big thing to have your own opinion in Britain. They had the Hyde Park thing, was it Hyde Park?, and the soapboxes and so on and you'd go up there and proclaim to the world how you saw the world and how it should be fixed and run and the whole thing.

But now of course Boris Johnson, the no wonder man, you know, of brains. Bullingdon boy of course, he's one of the guys that, he still repeats the slogans that they have in speeches, 'eh.

He's never got away from his early days when they, the most elite, you know, snobs had their children coming into the Oxford group into that particular club. They'd wreck, they'd go for a meal and they'd wreck the whole place, long before you had pop stars and stuff, and they'd get away with it, etc. Silver spoon, actually a gold spoon up in Boris's mouth I suppose. Quite amazing, 'eh? He's even got ancestors that were revolutionaries in other countries. Yep. There ya go. But he's telling you, if you got an opinion that's contrary to his opinion, you're a nut, a conspiracy nut. And that's how they're describing everybody who won't go along with their totalitarian agendas.

Coronavirus: New guidance on face masks and coverings released for England

bbc.com / 23 July 2020

(A: That's July 23, so you've got new ones now, you see. They give you a picture and it says…)

Woman wearing a face covering in a shop.

(A: They've got to always give you the pictures of things, so you can't imagine what they look like.)

Full guidance on wearing face coverings in shops in England has been released, less than 12 hours before the new rules come into force.

Coverings will be mandatory in enclosed public spaces including supermarkets, indoor shopping centres, transport hubs, banks and post offices.

They must also be worn when buying takeaway food and drink, although they can be removed in a seating area.

(A: You see, the virus won't go into a seating area, you know that too, some of the restaurants are doing that elsewhere. So you go in that seating area and you can lift that mask a little bit, so’s you can stuff the food into your mouth, and pull your mask down and you can maybe, if you're really paranoid you can pull it down quickly and get, maybe you haven't got the virus yet, you see. Maybe the whole thing is… Maybe they'll have cameras watching to see how fast you can pull it down, and you get analyzed and sent off, the psychological experts all are analyzing this information, 'eh.)

(A: But yeah, if you go to the seating area the virus will stop, you see, before it gets there it'll say, ah, seating area, it's a very intelligent virus, and it won't go there. Just like the 6-foot idea, that was invented by a schoolgirl with her daddy in the military-industrial complex that created a program from a computer. Probably the same computer they gave to Neil Ferguson that came up with drastic figures, you know. Oh, 6 foot, yeah, 6 foot. That's the God, the computer, eh? M-hm.)

(A: So anyway, they must wear this thing all the time and it says here…)

Those who break the rules could face a fine of up to £100.

(A: There's a good, you know, this is how they get you. It's just like, I always think of donkeys getting beaten with sticks when I see this kind of thing. I really do, you know, comply or get beaten. A lot of folk can't afford £100 fine.)

(A: And then the same police forces that were absolutely useless as statues were getting tossed all over the place and so on it says…)

And police will be able to "use force" to remove customers from shops if they do not wear face coverings, as well as prevent them from entering, guidance from the College of Policing says.

Ahhh, pretty sad, isn't it? I-yi-yi-yi-yi. N-n-n. And then…

Maskless protesters pack Utah County Commission meeting set to discuss masks in schools

thehill.com / 16 July 2020

(A: Maskless protesters.)

A crowd of maskless protesters packed into a Utah County Commission meeting on Wednesday to speak out against a state requirement for students to wear masks when school returns.

Dozens of demonstrators came out in Provo, Utah, to protest Gov. Gary Herbert’s (R) mandate on masks in schools, arguing that they should have the right to decide whether their children or students wear face coverings in the three school districts in the county.

“This is the exact opposite of what we need to be doing,” Ainge said, prompting the protesters to boo. “We are supposed to be physically distancing, wearing masks.”

Ainge left the meeting, but the two other members of the commission stayed to listen to more than 30 people who lined up to talk, The Salt Lake Tribune reported.

A crowd of maskless protesters packed into a Utah County Commission meeting on Wednesday to speak out against a state requirement for students to wear masks when school returns.

Dozens of demonstrators came out in Provo, Utah, to protest Gov. Gary Herbert’s (R) mandate on masks in schools, arguing that they should have the right to decide whether their children or students wear face coverings in the three school districts in the county.

Tanner Ainge, the chair of the all-Republican commission, delayed the meeting shortly after it started, citing that the crowd was not following public health guidelines, according to a video.

“This is the exact opposite of what we need to be doing,” Ainge said, prompting the protesters to boo. “We are supposed to be physically distancing, wearing masks.”

Ainge left the meeting, but the two other members of the commission stayed to listen to more than 30 people who lined up to talk, The Salt Lake Tribune reported.

Several parents expressed worries about children with disabilities being required to wear masks and the difficulty of enforcing the rule on playgrounds and in lunchrooms, The Washington Post reported.

But again, you've got to be uniform, so get into that communist idea, all wear masks, you see, a uniform is a kind of submission. And the person who doesn't submit is an individual. The United Nations said that years ago that the biggest threat to society the world over is the individual, individualism. You see. You had to be uniformly socialistic and obedient to your overseers. There ya go. You can’t have that. Submit, submit, submit, you know. Even though they admit it doesn't help you at all, it doesn't save you, etc. etc.

When I mentioned it before too, Fauci hasn't missed a thing, every symptom under the sun, almost anyway. I don't know if he's got that nervous or restless leg syndrome, remember, the one that they added into the psychiatric definitions, same thing. Nervous leg, you know, where it would just... You'd put your foot down, the front part of your foot on the ground, right, the heel raised, and then start, every child knows this, some adults too, and you're sitting at school and that leg starts going, just, you just, like crazy, 'eh. Nervous leg syndrome they call it, a disease now, 'eh. They've got pills for it actually. They actually, I'm not kidding you, they have pills for it. Because if they can get money off any symptom at all, they'll create lots of symptoms and they do. But here you have Fauci and…

Researchers call to make rashes a coronavirus symptom

uk.style.yahoo.com / 15 July 2020

(A: Well you see they missed that one already, 'eh? Rashes are pretty common, 'eh? It says…)

Researchers are calling for skin rashes to be added to the NHS's official list of symptoms for Covid-19 after a study revealed that one in 11 coronavirus patients developed a rash.

(A: No kididng, 'eh?)

The study, conducted by (A: ...everybody's in on the act...) King's College London, was conducted using data on 20,000 Britons who either tested positive for Covid-19 or were suspected to have had the virus.

(A: [Alan laughing.] You see, it's all bogus, folks, you either have signs confirming it or its BOGUS! Suspected, 'eh? But they got their hands out for grants, 'eh.)

The team also used data from the Covid Symptom Study app, (A: Oh, no kidding, I wonder who owns that?) which contained information on 336,837 users who had self-reported their symptoms.

(A: Well, that's completely bogus. You know how many… I could come up with a new disease tomorrow, give it a wee bit of publicity, I'll guarantee you I could get a million folks saying, I've got that. I guarantee you.)

The study (A: Again, I wonder who made this study, who got paid for it?) found 2,021 of the app’s users tested positive for Covid-19, (A: Right.) with 8.8 per cent of them reporting blotchy and itchy skin.

Additionally, out of 17,000 people who were strongly suspected to have had the virus, 8.2 per cent reported a rash.

The study has not been peer-reviewed yet (A: I guess they need another grant.) and was led by Dr Mario Falchi, (A: Not Fauci, but Falchi...) who is now urging for rashes to be officially recognised as a symptom in light of his findings. (A: Hm.)

“Although it is less prevalent than fever, it is more specific of Covid-19 and lasts longer,” Dr Falchi writes in the study.

He added that an “increased awareness” regarding how coronavirus can cause skin changes “will allow more efficient identification of new and earlier clusters of the disease”.

(A: I mean, I don't know, all these rashes and stuff, I, I was reading an article last week in fact, I didn't mention it on the talk. I think it was in Holland where, and they have a big sex trade in Holland, all legal and so on. They have a red-light district in Copenhagen, very popular, very well-known because the models, or the prostitutes, are often in the window, you know, like statues in a sense, and I guess that's the whole idea.)

(A: I can remember too, and it's amazing how your mind works actually, but I was thinking back to years ago when the mayor of Toronto was Mel Lastman. They said that Mel got the job as the mayor because he could sell refrigerators, and they used the word then for the people who lived, indigenous folk who live in the north, they can't use that term anymore now apparently, you know. It was always used but now they don't want to use that, now it's all banned. Or getting banned by the thought police and speech police.)

(A: But anyway, there's other reasons why he was the mayor too, but I won't go into that. But he was smooth talking and fast talking and he was caught in different things too eventually. And he was completely compromised on different levels as well. Oh, that's what he did! He was trying to bash down the police union at that time, that really was getting really, really hard. They had a professional came up from the States to teach the union how to get more rights and power and stop getting blasted by the politicians. And they got the dirt on Lastman. And Lastman had people called under so quickly once they came out with what they'd found on him.)

(A: Anyway, but back to what I'm saying though, he, like all good characters, you know, the mayors that, they took the taxpayers money into a delegation of the Council of Toronto, a lot of them he knew awfully well, and he went over to Amsterdam I think it was, the red light district, and he came back saying, he says, I think we should look at them because it would be a good income for the city, of Toronto. It's amazing how this internationalism works awfully well, isn't it, for certain groups of people that really know how to [Alan chuckles.] manage the business.)

(A: But anyway, getting back to what I was saying earlier at the start of it, yeah, they were talking about last week in the paper about introducing a no kissing rules for the prostitutes that work in the red-light districts in, throughout I guess the whole of Holland, but Copenhagen. It's the last thing you would actually think of I suppose really. But anyway, that's what they were saying there. But here you have it going on here, 'eh, where they're telling you not to have sex even, 'eh, in this article I'm reading here By Dr. Falchi. You think about it, I mean, how many folk come out from these places with rashes, 'eh? It could be, well, maybe other things as well, 'eh? Couldn't it? Oh no, you've got Covid, oh, that's obviously Covid. [Alan chuckles.] M-hm.)

Initially, the only two symptoms for Covid-19 listed on the NHS’s website were a dry cough and a fever.

However, on 18 May, loss of smell and taste have since been added.

(A: No kidding.)

The additional symptoms were added a few weeks after experts first raised concerns that Covid-19 cases could be being missed as a result of them not being officially recognised.

(A: Well, they've got everything underneath it now.) Him

In March, the British Association of Otorhinolaryngology (ENT UK) published a statement outlining that the symptoms had been found among “a number of patients” in the “absence of other symptoms”.

(A: Well, had they been maybe in one of these places I just mentioned, I wonder?)

Professor Claire Hopkins, president of the British Rhinological Society, and Professor Nirmal Kumar, president of ENT UK, said in the joint statement that there had been a sudden rise “in cases of isolated anosmia" — total or partial smell loss — in the UK, US, France and northern Italy.

Well, that's like recycling old stuff. They're running out of symptoms because they've covered everything since the last few months, 'eh. Because they had that out before. So, it's just astonishing what's going on, 'eh? Mind you, if you work in certain places there might be a bonus not to have a sense of smell, like sewage departments and things.

So there ya go, coronavirus, could be a rash is a symptom. Here's everybody in Canada right now scratching away with mosquito bites, if they get outside the cities. I mean, I've donated pints of blood to wildlife this year, you know, already; into the state of anemia almost. But yeah, you get these rashes. These are some amazing mosquitoes. These things attack you viciously, 'eh. They follow you. The old mosquitoes I can remember them being kind of dumb and silly kind of wafting towards you and wafting away. These things literally, you swear they're watching you. And if you put a handout to whack them, they move away from you before the hand gets anywhere near them. And they'll wait a while, very clever, 'eh, and then they'll get around the back of you and they come behind your ears. Ah! That's a nasty spot, that one! Or they come in the house with you, that's even worse, and they wait until you take your shoes off and then they go for your toes and your ankles. Ooohh, I'm telling ya! Well then you get a little rash, you see, and you're scratching away. See, you've got Covid, you see. So, there's going to be an awful lot of tranquilizer sold in Canada right now in the height of summer after all these things, oh, a rash, it could be a coronavirus symptom. Yeah, there ya go.

Nearly three times more people dying of flu and pneumonia than coronavirus

metro.co.uk / 22 July 2020

(A: Hhhhhhh, three times more people. Wow. There ya go. It says...)

Nearly three times as many people are now dying of flu and pneumonia than with coronavirus in England and Wales, new figures have revealed.

Numbers published by the Office For National Statistics (A: ...you know...) show 917 flu and pneumonia deaths were registered for the week ending on July 10.

In comparison, 366 people died that week after testing positive for Covid-19 – the lowest number of deaths involving the virus in the last 16 weeks and a 31.2% decrease compared with the previous week, which saw 532 deaths.

(A: So there ya go, 'eh, 917 died from the flu and pneumonia for that week. And it goes on with the statistics and so on and so on and so on and so on. I'll put this article up again too, for those who want the official stories for things.)

Again, I mentioned too the 77th Brigade because I mentioned it back in April, and somebody send it back to me again [Alan chuckles.] after I put it out there ages ago. It's a good article though it says...

77 Brigade: Is British Military Waging an Information War on Its Own Population?

21stcenturywire.com / 29 April 2020

(A: That was mentioned in the UK Column as well. But I got it from a different source initially I think, 21st-Century Wire possibly. But anyway, it's a good article and it says…)

Last Wednesday, during the daily UK Government Coronavirus livestream, the head of the British Army, General Sir Nick Carter, bragged:

"We've been involved with the Cabinet Office Rapid Response Unit, with our 77th Brigade helping to quash rumours from misinformation, but also to counter disinformation. Between three and four thousand of our people have been involved, with around twenty thousand available the whole time at high readiness."

(A: That was from the head of it. To counter disinformation and quash rumors from misinformation. Yep. 20,000 available, that's these psy-op warriors, at high readiness. All paid for by the taxpayer. To attack you if you say something or defame you or whatever. It says…)

To understand the implications of this statement, we have to go back to 2018, when Carter gave a speech to the Royal United Services Institute.

"In our 77th Brigade," he said, "… we have got some remarkable talent when it comes to social media, production design, and indeed Arabic poetry. Those sorts of skills we can't afford to retain in the Regular component but they are the means of us delivering capability in a much more imaginative way than we might have been able to do in the past."

77th Brigade

Previously known as the ‘Security Assistance Group’, 77th Brigade was stood up in 2015 as part of ‘Army 2020’.

(A: The link is here by the way... https://www.army.mod.uk/who-we-are/future-of-the-army/.)

The Security Assistance Group had been established following the amalgamation of the Media Operations Group, 15 Psychological Operations Group, Security Capacity Building Team, and the Military Stabilisation and Support Group.

77th Brigade is described on their website as being about ‘information and outreach’. But what does that mean? General Carter again:

"We also, though, need to continue to improve our ability to fight on this new battlefield, and I think it’s important that we build on the excellent foundation we’ve created for Information Warfare through our 77th Brigade, which is now giving us the capability to compete in the war of narratives at the tactical level." [Emphasis mine]

(A: A war of narratives, hm? They also have a rapid response unit, just like the special forces do.)

‘Rapid Response Unit’

Carter mentioned working with the Cabinet Office’s (A: That's the government's Cabinet office.) ‘Rapid Response Unit’. Established in April 2018 and also known as the ‘fake news unit’, the Rapid Response Unit was given an initial six months’ funding. It brought together a “team of analysts, data scientists and media and digital experts,” armed with cutting-edge software, to “work round the clock to monitor online breaking news stories and social media discussion.”

The unit’s round the clock monitoring service has identified several stories of concern during the pilot, ranging from the chemical weapons attack in Syria to domestic stories relating to the NHS (A: National Health Service.) and crime.

(A: So it's all propaganda, you know, it's to make sure that the only one authorized source of propaganda ever gets out to the public, everything else is quashed, ridiculed, or like Boris Johnson, you know, folk who speak out against the vaccination are nuts, you see, like fools, crazy, mad. There ya go. But this is 21st-Century Wire it's called.)

Also, also, of course, the whole idea is to get you off meat altogether. Of course, it's to save the planet, you know, because cows and so on, you know, they create methane in their digestive systems and so milk, you get milk and you get protein, you get cheese and you get meat, etc. from them. But that's to go down the memory hole, the whole idea of even remembering that we used to eat meat. Because your owners, the ones that own you, the characters at the World Economic Forum and all the global elite have decided that's where you going to go, into austerity, you see, and using that as a guise to save you and help you, they're going to take away your protein until you start getting sick, yeah, malnourished, all that kind of stuff.

Because they've been on that goal for years, quite openly in fact. Look at all the things that make you, you know, that make you survive. What happens when, I mean, HG Wells talked about it for goodness’ sake, and he was a great propagandist for the eugenicists. Because he was a socialist, Fabian Socialist, and he said, look at the people, he says, what do we do, we give them better food and sanitation, and we even give them vaccinations and make it more, everything more hygienic for them and give them heating in the winter, what do they do, he says, they breed! He said that in his own writings. Most of the stuff he wrote, you know, was nonfiction, for those who don't know that.

Yeah, they breed, you know, these ordinary folks, you see. He hated the peasantry. But then all the top rulers of socialism do. Because they are your elite at the top, you see. The Astor family of course were the founders, or the funders I should say, of the Fabian Society, yeah, some of the richest, one of the richest families on the planet at the time. But that doesn't matter. Facts don't even matter, do they? But there ya go.

It’s just, get rid of the meat. So, they've got these big campaigns on the go, to save the planet as they claim. It says…

Ready For A Low Methane Burger? Burger King Has One

forbes.com / 14 July 2020

Are you ready for a burpless burger? Actually, “burpless” is an oversimplification. Fast food chain Burger King is testing "low methane emission burgers."

(A: M-hm. There ya go.)

They've got ads out too, disgusting ads with children singing countries songs about the flatulence and so on. Another marketing stunt, etc. etc. All the elite are in on it. It reminds me too again of, oh, it was in 1984 where Julia, his girlfriend, his clandestine girlfriend, they had to be very careful in those days, in that book. She worked at the upper level, you know, around the inner party and so she managed to steal some real coffee and real cans of things. Winston her boyfriend, you see, he'd had never seen them in his whole life. He says, my goodness, it smells like real, it is real coffee. And real sugar. And real this and real food and real meat and everything in cans. And she says, yeah, there's nothing those b's, you know, those bar-stewards don't have, she says. And that's how it always is during wonderful socialist communist type tyrannies. That's how it really is. Always will be because the human nature and corruption always sets in very quickly, if it's not even there from the beginning of course. And then the ones who actually plan it all, hhhch, it always is, it's the same folk.

Another article too is…

"Bodies Everywhere": (A: Talking about the chaos in the States right now.)

14 Shot In Chicago Funeral Home During Memorial For Shooting Victim

zerohedge.com / 21 July 2020

While US progressive leaders and the mainstream media hypocritically decided many years ago to avert their eyes from the constant deadly violence in the liberal bastion of Chicago, pretending instead that the daily murders in this "gun free" mecca don't really happen...

(A: And there's links to all of this by the way on this article.)

... tonight's events are just too gruesome to be ignore: as CBS Chicago reports, no less than 14 people have been shot and wounded near a funeral home in the Auburn Gresham community. Ironically, the funeral was a memorial service for a homicide victim.

"All we saw was just bodies laying everywhere," witness Arnita Gerder told NBC Chicago. "Shot up everywhere, all over. Legs, stomach, back, all over the place. We thought it was a war out here."

At least 60 shell casings were located at the scene of the shooting.

It's got links to all the stuff here. Some of them actually, there's even cars taking them, other ones to hospitals. Some of them even managed to walk to hospitals that were minor I should say, you know.

(A: Folk, they said they...)

Spoke with people here who said they were inside a funeral home when the shots started.

Spoke to a woman who had blood on her jeans. She didnt know whose blood it was.

(A: ...because it was splattering all over the place.)

Crime statistics indicated there were 13 murders last month in the area, compared with just three in June 2019.

There's more and more murders because it's a free-for-all between gangs and so on right now, as the gaps literally can't get any backing from the officers who are in charge like mayors and so on, that supposedly employ them. This article here too, it says…

Chicago's violent weekend sees at least 8 killed, 40 others shot, police say

foxnews.com / 19 July 2020

(A: Lots and lots of stories like this. But what d'you expect? It says…)

Chicago on Sunday was reeling from another violent weekend, with nearly 50 shootings – including eight people killed – since Friday, police said.

(A: It's just lots of bloody violence as it says in the article here.)

Another article I'm going to just mention here, getting back to the vaccine caper, it's from 2015

National Geographic Society.

Should we edit the human germline?

web.archive.org / 17 Dec 2018

Genome editing is as consequential as it is controversial. Scientists are exploring the possibility of altering genes that cause specific diseases. But even if we can do it, the question is: should we?

(A: Now, these genes don't cause the diseases by the way, it's badly worded too. It says…)

Genome editing is as consequential as it is controversial. The ability to modify a person's genes to add or remove particular physical traits is moving from science fiction to science fact: already scientists are exploring the possibility of altering genes that cause specific diseases and editing human embryos to eliminate genetic mutations that cause some conditions. But even if we can do it, the question is: should we?

(A: Again, it's like that movie, the one I mentioned years ago, that the people should look into. It was to do with a time when people would be already modified, you'd have two groups of folk, the folk who were modified, literally, before they were born, by altering the sperm and ovum and putting in certain genes and removing others. They would be the new ruling caste they would say in the actual movie. Gattica it was called. It wasn't a bad movie; it was fictional of course. But they did touch on the kind of consequences to an extent of it too and how you'd have a lower class, it would be ordinary folk then who are unaltered, you know.)

It is important to distinguish between two different types of genome editing: somatic and germline. Somatic cells make up most of our bodies, including our skin, hair, blood, and organs. Changes made to somatic cells affect that person's body alone—they are not hereditary. In contrast, germline cells are reproductive cells that can create embryos. This means that any alterations made to them will be passed from parent to child—affecting all future generations.

(A: That's what this vaccine is going to do, that they're going to give you for Covid. N-n-n. Then they give you…)

Five arguments for germline genome editing

Immediacy

Through GGE we can treat some genetic conditions that are beyond the current ability of traditional medicines, such as Alzheimer’s disease, muscular dystrophy, and cystic fibrosis. It may take decades to develop traditional medicines to manage these conditions, while genome editing offers a more immediate solution, as we may soon have the technology to identify and remove the gene mutations that cause diseases.

(A: There's a big jump actually from being able to do it specifically, accurately and so on, 'eh, doesn't it?)

Permanence

GGE could entirely and permanently eradicate some serious conditions that cause suffering for millions of people (A: ... like getting born I suppose, they'll all be sterile...), and will otherwise cause suffering for millions more in the future.

Regulation

As with all areas of medicine, strict policies and regulations will be agreed and enforced to govern the use of GGE. Patient safety remains paramount, and the potential benefits of the treatment must be proven to outweigh the potential dangers before it is used. Almost all pro-GGE scientists agree that much more research and testing is needed to guarantee its safe and effective use.

(A: And it's got...)

Five arguments against germline genome editing

Consent

A crucial element of any clinical procedure is informed consent—ensuring that the patient fully understands the risks of a treatment. GGE is so new, complex, and uncertain that we cannot adequately inform prospective patients of the risks to them or future generations. This raises the deeper question of whether we have the right to deliberately, permanently, and irrevocably change the human genome without universal consensus.

(A: Well, you don't get informed consent with most of the vaccinations, even the flu shots. Have you ever had a doctor say, let me tell you, I'll tell you about all the dangers here that could happen? Have you ever had it? [Alan chuckles.] No. All you get, is this is okay? Yeah, sure. That's that, you've just given your consent and that's it, if they even get that far, generally they won't even ask you. The very fact that you go and you bear your arm is you consenting. But I've never ever seen informed consent for any of this stuff.)

Uncertainty

The human genome is an extremely complex ecosystem that we don’t fully understand, so we cannot absolutely predict the impact editing a gene will have. Sometimes multiple genes interact to perform a function, and it’s possible that a single edit could affect many other genes. Nor can we completely guarantee the accuracy of genome editing, so there is always the risk of making unintended changes with unforeseen consequences.

(A: I tell ya, India's a big player in this. Years ago, I remember reading an article where the wealthier families were having certain genes altered to try and get, for height for the male and so on, for particular looks and stature, etc. And they hope to get intelligence with that too. Naturally, you're not going to stop them going to the next step, you know, and creating different classes. Just like Gattaca. It says, if you change a part of a germline cell, it says, we cannot reverse it. It's permanent. That's from parent then to child and through all generations from then on.)

Permanence

If a change is ade in a germline cell, we cannot reverse it. That change will inexorably pass from parent to child through the generations ...

Eugenics

Once we start altering genes, where do we draw the line? Theoretically, GGE could be used for the enhancement of so-called designer babies by manipulating the genes that control qualities such as eye color, height, athleticism, and memory. Parents may feel pressured to pay for improvements to their children with significant social consequences, even calling into question what it is to be human.

(A: And then social of course comes next with the stratification, basically different classes of people, right. Trans-human indeed.)

Social

The cost of gene editing means...

This is the world that we exist, I don't say living anymore, you're not really living, you're existing in it. And one of the protests that just happened...

Protests Erupt Across Country; Black Militia Member Accidentally Shoots Comrades In Park

zerohedge.com / 26 July 2020

(A: It was a demonstration they were having, or protest I should say. All armed. It says…)

Saturday BLM protests unfolded across the country on Saturday, with tensions flaring in major cities including Portland, Seattle, Chicago and Louisville, Kentucky.

In Seattle, the police department - which on Friday announced that they would effectively not be enforcing the law due to a City Council ban on the use of non-lethal crowd control measures - declared a riot, citing "ongoing damage and public safety risks," according to USA Today. 16 protesters were arrested by Seattle PD for assaulting officers, obstruction and failure to disperse. One officer was hospitalized with a leg injury caused by an explosive, while the crowd launched mortars and rocks at the police.

These aren't, these water bottles too, they're clever, ha, they're so well organized and I'll put up a YouTube by the way for those who think it's just protesters. You'll see it from above, the ones who are trained, in the way they come in like troops actually, with the bicycles at front going back and forth, then they pick up the, and the banners behind them, the banners who've got PVC piping, once they're ready to start their attack on the police, they take off the banner cloth or whatever it is and these PVC pipes are actually sharpened like spears and you see them going at the police with them. You also see, and all the so-called peaceful ones behind them, they know what's going on, they are a cover for the attackers in the front. This is obvious.

You'll see the police chief of one of the cities explain it, what happened, and showing you this particular footage, how well organized it is. It's with military precision of course. You actually see them using umbrellas, they put up umbrellas and then they grab these black outfits and change into the black gear. They are the ones in the front that do the attacking. They're using all kinds of defenses too, like the moms, the Moms for Peace or whatever it is they're calling them.

'Wall of Moms' joins Portland's anti-racism protests

bbc.com / 22 July 2020

But no, you're looking at the same techniques that they claim the Moslems, remember they used to say the Moslems all, oh yeah, Saddam is using, his armies are using all these women in front, like hostages really, so you can't attack them. Well, this is exactly what Black Lives Matter is using, it's the same techniques that they're using there of course. And in reality, you can see it all happening.

Very well done. I mean, this is psychological warfare and tactical rioting. It's all military technique in a sense. So, you can watch it happening. But this particular one, yeah, and the black militia member, after mentioning they’re well-trained and so on, one of them let loose, it said, it must be automatic I guess, fully automatic to blastoff enough to hit in one burst, it must've been surely, to bring down three of their comrades. So anyway, it says…

zerohedge.com / 26 July 2020

Crowd continues to throw/launch mortars and rocks at officers

This is Seattle and the riots there. Quite amazing ’eh. And some of the top leaders too, two of them, they call themselves ‘grandmasters’, etc. Quite interesting everything that's coming out in the open now of course from the lodges that they actually set up for the different groups. Don't forget the lodges, we know some of the lodges were famous in the 19th century for revolutions. For folks who don't know it and think it's peaceful happy little clubs, which they are today most of them, but they were all set up for revolution.

I'll definitely put up the one, you'll see the police chief showing you, there's very good video and you see how the organization works, very, as I say, military precision, no doubt about it. And I guess they bring in, bussed into different cities when they're having their so-called protests, so the folk will, the media will all say, oh it's just protesters. You'll see them stabbing these spears at the cops. And what they're throwing at the cops, these are, you'll see the guys bringing in these big hampers full of frozen water in the water bottles. So, if they get to court they can say, well it's just a bottle of water, you know. No, these are like bricks when they hit you, they're frozen ice!

The media knows all this stuff but they're all on board with it. Because as I said, this is the elites' revolution. This is their next part, from the previous age that they ruled and brought in through revolution, this is the next phase for the elites. The people down below don't know that. They really don't. It's our generation, you know, just like The Who talking about 'my generation', it's all us, we, this is ours, yeah. Sure. [Alan laughing.] Yep.

Yeah, I think it was the Chicago police chief, I'll put that one up. It says...

Rioters use ‘peaceful’ protests as cover for attacks on Chicago police

youtube.com / 20 July 2020

(A: I don’t know how these police could have stood there like that. They can't get the backup and use the techniques that you should have to protect themselves. But you'll see this well-planned and rehearsed, organized, incredibly well-organized attack on the police. This is an attack, yes.)

Chicago police department officers show footage Monday of last weekend's attack on the statue of Christopher Columbus in the city in which rioters armed with projectiles use "peaceful" protests as a cover for attacks on the police.

The footage of the attack revealed to the media by superintendent David Brown showed a peaceful procession marching behind banners suspended from PVC pipe, emblazoned with Black Lives Matter, Defund the Police and other slogans. Upon reaching Grant Park the banners were used to shield a group of rioters who were prepared to ambush police, putting up umbrellas, preparing projectiles, changing into black clothing.

The peaceful protesters appear to move in front of the rioters deliberately to shield them from the view of the police officers guarding the Columbus statue nearby.

The rioters then moved into what police called a platoon like fashion towards the statue using the protest banners as cover. The PVC pipe was then removed from the banners and sharpened into weapons.

(A: They were already pre-sharpened to use against the police officers.)

Rioters distributed weapons, projectiles such as rocks, frozen can, frozen water bottles throughout the crowd. They also restocked the weapons throughout the confrontation, with the police stripping them from shopping carts.

They impaled officers with projectiles and hit them with PVC pipes.

(A: You actually see them getting thrown like spears.)

49 officers suffered injuries in the confrontation, including concussions. One suffered a severe eye injury when he was hit by an incendiary explosive device that detonated near his eyes as he stood near the statue. That officer may eventually require surgery.

Superintendent Brown who formally led the Dallas police project achieve national recognition in 2016 when five police officers in Dallas were assassinated by a sniper during the black lives are protest.

(A: So, it's…)

Now we must assume that there may be mobs working with peaceful protesters to inflict violence, Brown said.

It's the same techniques now, mind you, that were used during the anti-globalist meetings, where you saw the same black clad guys at the time. At the time we knew there were, there was actually found out to be, they'd been trained in another country, a lot of them. And the Antifa group still have got headquarters in another country. They would appear in black outfits with the masks on and started hurling the Molotov cocktails at cop cars and so on. At that time most of the followers then were peaceful, the anti-globalists. Their real protests were getting ruined by these guys that were out for utter violence.

Another incident happened too at that time, remember, at the globalist meetings where in Montréal, one of the meetings there, I think it was Montréal, they actually saw, something gave away a bunch of them that were caught throwing bricks at cop cars and so on. It turns out they were policeman. This is what, it's amazing what goes on, from all sides, during these times. That was way back in the so-called globalist meetings that went on years ago.

But here you have well organized, well-funded organizations with all this. And we used to talk about the socialism, socialism too makes you dependent, you know, rather than fix any problems that are really going on. The governments are socialist now, are doing the typical socialist technique, they keep you in poverty forever. That's how I see it.

Baby Boxes included in Programme for Government following Richmond’s campaign

finegael.ie / 22 June 2020

(A: This is in Ireland and it says...)

Fine Gael TD, Neale Richmond, has welcomed the inclusion in the Programme for Government of a commitment to introduce Baby Boxes for all new parents in Ireland.

Deputy Richmond said: “After campaigning for Baby Boxes for over a year, I am delighted to see that the nationwide roll out of the Baby Box programme is included in the Programme for Government for the very first time.

(A: So, it's for newborn children and the parents to have these boxes, that's got, it's got thermometers and food, and I guess baby mixes and things and blankets. This box can be altered, you just open it up into a cradle I guess, you know. They copied Scotland for the example, which is socialist too.)

“We can now follow the example of Scotland in ensuring that all parents are well equipped when they bring a new member of their family home."

You got to remember, I mean, the first thing they say, how come the folk can't afford this themselves? What's wrong with the system? Because that's what it is, isn't it? Socialism keeps you in the basic, very basic minimum of requirements and necessities. They do. There's always two ways of looking at things, don't just take what's presented to you. Look at the other side of anything and say, wait a minute, why is government, what's wrong with the system that they're handing these things out?... that the folk don't have what they need?... or the money? Hm?

Commentary: Illinois has not been well managed; would a crash-and-burn help?

pjstar.com / 18 July 2020

(A: It goes into a lot of folk moving out, what's left has been shrinking and shrinking in that area.)

“We’re moving to Florida, Jim.” He paused, then: “Illinois is not well managed, you know.”

Illinois’ population has grown only slightly since 1970 – from 11.1 million then to 12.67 million today. The U.S. population, meanwhile, has increased from 205.1 million to 328.2 million during that same time. The population growth in Illinois has been augmented largely by Latinos and Asian-Americans. Illinois’ white population has dropped from 8.9 million in 1970 to 7.5 million today.

(A: As they say, the state has been so badly managed for some time.)

But yeah, big, big changes going on, 'eh? Another article here…

Did 'herd immunity' change the course of the outbreak?

bbc.com / 20 July 2020

(A: Dr Faye Kirkland and the BBC put this out here.)

On Thursday 12 March, everyday life remained relatively normal across the UK. The back pages of the newspapers were dominated by the victory of Atletico Madrid over Liverpool.

Throughout that day shoppers shopped, while millions drove to work or poured out of trains into city centres.

And in the evening, people went out.

But these were not normal times. A new coronavirus was spreading across the globe.

On that day, Italy was shutting all non-essential shops and the Republic of Ireland announced that schools would close.

But looking back, the question that will always be asked is - did the UK go into lockdown too slowly? Should those crowds have been out that day?

The World Health Organization (WHO) (A: ...that's funded by [Alan chuckles.] again by Bill Gates...) had been asking countries to do everything they could to contain the infection since late February.

And some countries were scaling up test and trace to try to suppress the virus.

Testing folk isn't suppressing anything. Folk are getting mixed up now thinking it's like a cure or something. The more folks who actually had it and got over it, the more have got herd immunity. That's normal. I tell ya. And then lumping everybody in with all kinds of signs and symptoms that didn't, and using tests that are just completely inadequate, then getting locked up, and lots and lots of folk have got locked up in their homes because they tested positive. Then later on they found out they were, no, they were wrong, their tests were faulty. [Alan chuckles.] N-n-n. Well, at least they didn't get things put down their tracheas to kill them off on the ventilators, 'eh?

Aaaa, but again it's a necessity, this whole Covid thing is necessary, as is of course obviously on behalf of the elite what appears to be a communist revolution. But in reality, it's all, it's all given the go-ahead by the elite themselves. Another article too is…

Meet the Gun Club Patrolling Seattle’s Leftist Utopia

thedailybeast.com / 14 June 2020

(A: That's from The Daily Beast, it's left-wing so. It goes into some of the gun club, you know…)

Over the past several days of its remarkable existence, the Capitol Hill Autonomous Zone (CHAZ) has captured radical imaginations across the country, and struck fear into the hearts of conservative politicians and right-wing media pundits (A: D'you understand that, hhmph, the tone of the article here, striking fear into the hearts of conservative politicians and right-wing media pundits…) (including the president).

Also known as the Seattle Autonomous Zone, the six blocks surrounding Seattle’s now-abandoned East Precinct have become a virtually cop-free space...

(A: Well of course, they had all the shootings after that, inside of it, including children getting killed and that kind of crumpled there too.)

Members of the Puget Sound John Brown Gun Club (PSJBGC)—a leftist community defense and firearms education organization that gained a spate of notoriety last year when a former member, Willem van Spronsen, set fire to an ICE parking lot—have been a constant presence. The club is often asked to provide security for protests and rallies around the Seattle area, and while their involvement in CHAZ is structured more loosely, the presence of armed civilians has raised a few eyebrows.

There's more to it of course with some of the guys who actually, they don't mention it in here who they are, I know who they are, some of them. Yep. Some of them have long links to [Alan chuckles.] revolutions, and other things too I won't go into. Newsweek…

Turkey Bombs Iraq, Syria, Targeting Kurdish Group It Says Trains Antifa

newsweek.com / 19 June 2020

(A: They got these guys in Antifa and they're putting their photographs up there. It says…)

Turkey bombed Iraq and Syria, striking a Kurdish militia it has accused of training members of the left-wing, international antifa movement involved in protests across the United States.

The Turkish Defense Ministry released footage Friday of an F-16 fighter jet taking off and conducting what it said was an operation in Iraq's northern Great Zab region that "neutralized" four members of the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK).

The PKK is a Communist Party too. But again, the West has used them to attack Syria in the past. They also used them, the Kurds, to attack Saddam Hussein, you know. It's quite interesting too that, it's like Maggie Thatcher's day, she started importing coal from communist Poland at the time to put our own miners out of work and to close down the mines. And the West that has been attacking, for reasons that they'll never tell the public obviously, the Middle Eastern countries including Syria, have used communist groups inside the Kurdish groups, like the Kurdistan Workers Party, the PKK, and many others too to try to get rid of Syria's government.

If you follow and belong to any group, you're getting used. You'll never figure it out until it's way too late, maybe you'll never figure it out or get a chance to live long enough to find out. But this is the kind of system you're living in here. So anyway, yeah, they've training this group, that's been a hero group and given lots of good press and all that by the West, as long as it was attacking the government of Syria. It was a communist group, 'eh. You see, everybody's handy for the big organizations that run the world. So, everybody's useful at times, you see. Once your usefulness is over, then you're labeled a terrorist group. [Alan chuckles.] That's how it's worked out, that's how it really works.

These are the major brands donating to the Black Lives Matter movement

cnet.com / 16 June 2020

(A: Where you think it's just a little, you know, just... So, it's got pretty well all the technology companies. It says…)

Many of the large tech companies in the US have donated substantial sums to the cause. Google has committed $12 million, while both Facebook and Amazon are donating $10 million to various groups that fight against racial injustice. (A: These are the groups.) Apple is pledging a whopping $100 million for a new Racial Equity and Justice Initiative that will "challenge the systemic barriers to opportunity and dignity that exist for communities of color, and particularly for the black community," according to Apple CEO Tim Cook.

(A: And CNET, the computer group to give you all the different programs and so on...)

Check out CNET's guide to learn more about how tech companies are supporting the Black Lives Matter movement.

(A: They give you a list of them.)

Walmart announced that it will contribute $100 million over five years to create a new center for racial equity.

CEO Doug McMillan said the center "will seek to advance economic opportunity and healthier living

(A: Right, as Walmart and all these big groups have eliminated all the smaller stores, that was what they brought them in for. The global elitists run these organizations, I hope you understand this.)

Target announced a $10 million commitment in an effort to advance social justice

(A: Well, this is what all these [unintelligible] citizens of social justice right.)

Home Depot CEO Craig Menear announced a $1 million donation to the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law in a statement released on the company website.

They are all involved in the same, you know, and there's many, many more, I've got a whole list of them here. For anybody that cares to look at them.

Another one too, it says…

Do you still support Black Lives Matter after seeing Ohio's Black Lives Matter representative, Isaiah Jackson crushing a white baby's neck to make a statement? - naturalnews.com / 23 July 2020

...with his knee on it, you see. I think the elite really want as much fear and terror as possible. Because they want to get something going, maybe, and they'll maneuver the outcome of that too, if they can't get what they want the way it's going right now.

Another one to do with the big boys and gals, this is from Business Life News Insider. It's to do with a company called... It's focused on digital transformation, 'eh. Now let's see if I can get down to it, some of these pictures take forever. It says...

Palantir has raised more than $500 million in fresh funding as the secretive and controversial startup works toward a possible IPO

businessinsider.com / 2 July 2020

People protest Palantir's work with US immigration agencies.

Palantir said it sold more than $500 million in stock to private investors and hopes to sell about $400 million more.

The company was said to be preparing for a September IPO, and it's unclear how the new funding affects those plans.

As a data-analytics company cofounded by a Trump confidant that works with US immigration agencies, the startup has also found itself in controversy.

Palantir, the secretive data-analytics company cofounded by Peter Thiel, is raising nearly $1 billion as it works toward a possible public offering.

In a regulatory filing Wednesday, the company said its raised $549.7 million from unnamed investors since early March and hopes to sell up to $411.4 million more for a grand total of $961.1 million worth of stock.

So, it's a massive, it's used by the CIA, this company, for all kinds of things, and the FBI, etc. etc. They're in some big, big heavy stuff. Then the three guys that brought it together, it's quite a story too. But anyway, another article says…

Palantir, The $20 Billion, Peter Thiel-Backed Big Data Giant, Is Providing Coronavirus Monitoring To The CDC forbes.com / 31 March 2020

(A: You see. I always think of what Rothchild said, he wasn't being facetious or whatever, or flippant. He was being honest, you know, when he was asked, when's the best time to invest or make money, meaning the biggest profits? And he said, when blood is flowing in the streets. And that is true, you see, when everybody's panicking and they're terrified and petrified, with fear, fear, fear, that's when you make big money off the public. Look at the money your governments are tossing out to their pals, all these big private corporations. So here you are, this company just ahead of the curve naturally, already, a massive spy program, 'eh, providing coronavirus monitoring to the CDC. Small world though, ‘eh?)

In the last week, staff at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) started logging into a new web app. It promises to help them watch where COVID-19 is spreading and checks how well equipped hospitals are to deal with the spike in cases of the fatal virus, according to two sources familiar with the work. According to those sources, it was built by Palantir, a $20 billion-valued big data company whose data harvesting work for the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement agency has provoked criticism from human rights groups.

(A: All these groups, these particular kinds of groups, mind you, these firms are also into investments big time. Because they can pretty well predict what's going to be big money with investments and shares, etc. Of course, they can predict, you understand, there's management to make things happen the way you want them to happen. That's what a lot of this is about naturally. So anyway, this company has also got the contracts for...)

... U.S. hospitals and healthcare agencies, including lab test results, emergency department statuses, bed capacity and ventilator supply.

(A: Big money, 'eh. And they’re selling shares now, 'eh. M-m-m.)

... using locations from mobile phones to track movements of people him...

(A: I guess the other companies doing the same are Google and Oracle, etc. Big time. Again, when the blood is flowing in the streets, that's when you make the big, big money, 'eh. Isn't it?)

Another article too, this article is…

Socialism and the Fight Against War

wsws.org / 18 Feb 2016

(A: This is 2016, and from their own website, Marxist website, World Socialist WebSite, wsws.org, that's what they call themselves.)

1. Fifteen years after the United States launched the “war on terror,” the entire world is being dragged into an ever-expanding maelstrom of imperialist violence.

(A: This is true.)

The invasions and interventions organized by US imperialism have devastated Afghanistan, Iraq, Libya and Syria.

(A: They were all on the list in the 90s so…)

NATO is engaged in a massive rearmament program in preparation for war with Russia. Africa is the target of relentless US and European neo-colonial machinations.

They never mentioned China being one of the biggest players across Africa. They even had some Chinese military helping with the rationing, etc. in South Africa, and managing the Covid thing, you know. Anyway, it goes into how they'd have to manage it and so on. You do get insight into what the plans are of course.

But as I've said before, I've really come to the conclusion a long time ago that all sides are managed by the same peoples, folks. I really mean that. That's what you find when the agenda continues regardless of who's in power, left wing, right wing, whatever it happens to be. What are names anyway when it comes to agendas? As Jefferson said, when you see the same agendas continue even within changes in the house, but continue, know you are under tyranny.

And it's cronyism. It's crony capitalism or whatever, it's all cronyism. And it will happen under any name you want to label any system. Because those at the top reap the harvest and live awfully well over the public. I was thinking back to Alexander Hamilton, that again, he knew the Rothschilds, he was in correspondence with them too. He was all for the old system of the real capitalist system, those who ruled had the money should rule the world, [Alan chuckles.] that's what he believed. But Hamilton also said something that, there's always bits of truth coming out of the mouth of psychopaths. He also, he used to have tremendous debates and arguments with Jefferson.

Jefferson was at least outwardly coming across as being a man of the people, even though he wasn't all they say he was made up to be. And he was definitely a member of, that's why he didn't get very far, he was all for the French Revolution and he was named as a member of the illuminati at the time, you know. But regardless of that he gave some good quotes, put it that way. [Alan chuckles.]

But Jefferson argued with Hamilton and Hamilton would visit his place, you know. Jefferson had different heroes and drawings and portraits of heroes of what he saw in history as good heroes. Hamilton didn't like any of them, he says, his heroes, Hamilton's heroes were guys who went out to conquer the world. He had Alexander the Great and people like that, you see, and he thought that those with the power should use it, and he was ambitious, audacious and bold, and just conquer, etc. And bringing civilization, that's what they always say when they take over the world. So will communism do the same thing, bringing you civilization, you see. They'll convince you you're living better, as you're borrowing from each other to get a, you know, a pack of beans and peas.

But again, facts don't really matter when it comes to the elite ruling you. And they always know better than you do. But Hamilton did say something that was awfully interesting. He says, well... Because they were debating at the time, and don't forget the US did, or America did send, the founding fathers I should say before they became the founding fathers as such, they did send over an invitation to a man who was the descendent of the Stewart line of Scotland. They invited him, they sent a delegation over and asked him if he would, because at that time they weren't sure if they should have a king or what, you know. And they did offer kingdom to this guy, who didn't want it, before they settled on this Republic idea.

You know, they already had the Republic idea worked out, they thought they could have a sort of monarchy type system, kind of like Britain's but on a Republican basis as opposed to a democracy, this fake democracy thing. But a monarchy at the top that would be like a kind of chairman, that was the idea behind it when they offered it to the guy. Hamilton was for that idea, you see.

As I say, Hamilton liked the Rothschilds idea of running the money their way and so on. What Hamilton did say to Jefferson, he said, do you really want a republic with a government that will expand, with a massive civil service eventually, which would always be inevitable to happen. And he said, and they'll all be living so well off of the public purse. Is it better not just to have a royal family, where you've got a royal family and maybe 50 to 80 of their relatives to support in luxury, rather than thousands and thousands of bureaucrats and civil servants all living in luxury off the public purse? He had a point, 'eh?

Because it always ends up that way, doesn't it? Human nature, it always ends up that way. And that's the truth of it too, human nature always comes across and those who are crooked to start with have no problems accepting bribes and wanting more and wanting the good life. That's how it works. That's the way of the world, folks, I hope you understand.

I hope I haven't bored you tonight either. But you have to look at all sides of everything. As I say, to those who literally think that they're leading a revolution, it's only by the sufferance, meaning the acceptance and promotion, of a very cooperative elite, including all the big media [Alan chuckles.] that this is happening. Because there's a different agenda underway.

Again, the WEF had talked about it with the Covid idea and of course now with they call it social justice, right, [Alan chuckles.] the revolutions that are going on, they think they can, all the things they couldn't achieve using the climate scare, the climate change scare, they said they could probably achieve with this. So here ya go, Covid and the whole thing into austerity, a new system, you'll be all regulated from birth to death and managed by experts. How's that? Hm?

That's how it is. And people who follow, as I say, people who follow always find to their detriment that they're being used, you know. Eventually. And they never manifest their utopias. It doesn't happen. Because those who end up in such systems, you always find are, they are the real butt kissers who will follow the doctrine, whatever doctrine they put out there, and learn to bear it all off just like any politician would do in the right circumstances. And their behavior will show you the complete opposite if you could get a glimpse inside.

I've always mentioned The Lives of Others, very good movie to watch, from Germany about the Stasi system in Germany and everybody was getting spied on. Everybody was getting spied on. Then of course you also have the cultural Revolution, they always go through a cultural revolution. That's once they've achieved their goals. They use a younger group to oust the group that did the revolution. [Alan chuckles.] Because they’re not strict enough, they're not adhering enough to the communist ideals, you see, and so they go after them and they eliminate them, the ones who actually did the revolution. The Soviets did it and then the Chinese did it and so on.

That's how it works, folks. But the big organizations, they know everything about every single one of us, you think they don't know about everybody involved in everything? They've got all your chitchat and all your programs. They know all, there is, no encoding is going to keep you out of it. They know who everybody is. And everybody will get used. And the leaders will just evaporate, won't they, when their mission is accomplished. And lots of other folk carry the can. That's the unfortunate way it happens in real life.

So, as I say, now, many folk too, I'm not telling you to despair of things, but life will still go on in some form for a while. But years ago, they came out at the United Nations talking about the agenda for postindustrial, and then really post-consumer society, into utter austerity. Well, this is the fastest way to bring it all about, isn't it?

Use your meatloaf, as they say, that's your head, and you start to come to the right conclusions eventually. But folk should, make sure you have a few friends. Swear you'll help each other out, don't fall out and the whole bit when times get tough. Because you'll all need each other at times to deliver food or whatever it happens to be, depending on whatever happens to you. And you've got to pull together because it's going to be a long haul now into a completely new system. And it will not be pleasant. It really won't be pleasant at all.

Take care of yourselves and keep in touch. As I say, I'm really enjoying hearing from so many people that listen to the talks and getting their take on how they perceive it in their own lives. Because that's real history. And all the different countries are giving me, I've got from all the different countries I've got people sending me the data on their personal lives, how they see it, how it's affecting them, what's happening where they are, etc. And you can see this global agenda is so obvious, it's not spontaneous.

And it's not a weak movement, even with the rebels or whatever, it's all completely managed. And completely financed. As I say, I'll put up a longer list of the corporations that are funding it all. They're not afraid, the corporations are not afraid of these groups. [Alan chuckles.] They're funding them all. Not because they're getting blackmailed or their terrified, oh, no, no.

The groups, always remember, this is the elites' revolution. They owned the last part of the system and this is the next part of their revolution is this, what's going on in different areas and using different methods, all at the same time. It's theirs. And they boast about accomplishing their mission and their agenda for sustainability as they call it.

So, take care of yourself. I'm Alan Watt from Ontario Canada, it's good night and may your God or your gods go with you.

All Hail CapCom:

Hi folks, I'm Alan Watt and this is Cutting Through The Matrix on August 2, 2020. As usual I hope you're all doing okay [Alan chuckles.] under these incredible times in which we exist. I get lots of feedback from people who email me and tell me about their conditions in their countries and so on. You always get a little taste of what's to come across the whole planet eventually. Because you can't lock down a planet, or good chunk of the planet and literally stop all, almost all commerce pretty well, forbid people to work, and then wonder why you're starting to get a shortage of food, you know. In South Africa, there's some articles there actually were sent to me, where they don't have much to live on anyway to begin with, but they've already had people dying of starvation. Yeah. That's going to happen elsewhere and pretty rapidly.

Because you're living through an amazing time of a planned agenda by a truly global government, that really exists. If you don't understand that, it really does. What you see on television or the clips on your Internet, what you're seeing, they're not the bosses. They's a higher management level above politics, obviously, but they're not the bosses for the whole planet here. But the whole planet is on board with it, you see. Of course they do have these setups, these World Health Organizations as an example, through the United Nations, and the WHO is pretty well three quarters funded, at least three quarters by the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation. So you can scrub that out for anything that's factual or scientific. Gates has an incredible agenda, because his daddy was involved in the same kind of things, in eugenics, etc.

So you know, sinister characters definitely, but they're not the bosses. The old system of having bosses at the very, very top, are the fact that the bosses don't work as such. They comment occasionally… But they don't take the heat for what their decisions cause on the general populations. Ever. Down through time actually.

They have the bee, one of the symbols is the bee of course, the structure of the beehive. That's the Royal Society. The first, the very first thing they brought out at the Royal Society, it was a glass pyramid, inside it was a beehive... To represent the perfect society which they would structure through sciences. Most folk think it's just some kind of independent scientific club just for chit chat and sharing ideas. It's beyond that. They are all selective Masons initially, and powerful people through finance and so on. But they also wanted to direct society and shape the course, the destiny of societies across the world. Very selective in fact for a long time who their members would be. It wasn't something you could just ask to join. That's how the world really is run.

The perfect society was basically modeled on the beehive idea. Napoleon had the same thing too. A very high Mason too. You all know probably if you've read any documentation about him, he went into, when he went into Egypt of course with a big army, which he left behind primarily and left them all to take the heat. But the fact is, he went into the great pyramid in Giza and was in for quite a while and he came out with his, this was a big thing with top Masons at the time, if you just lay in the sarcophagus you get this instant revelation and so on and be a different person. And he got a, he made a cloak, had a cloak made for him and they used some of the golden bees that had been taken out of one of the pyramids, out of some of the graves actually in Egypt, to represent the perfect society again. So, here's a guy who's at war across a good part of Europe and even into Russia, was intended to unify Europe. Interesting, it's always the same kind of thing, unify, isn't it? You unify Europe and people like himself would be the magicians behind it, you see, the real rulers. The natural rulers, with a little help from their friends.

So he had his cloak made with these bees all around the cloak. You keep getting, you live in a world of symbology, and most folk don't quite get it, what they see. And the signs and the gestures that you get on pretty well everything you see from people who work in mid management levels on television representing organizations that claim they run the world. But you're loaded everywhere you look with these signs and their symbols of course. And the folks just don't get it, do they? Because it's so common, it's everyday occurrences. And yet they ooo and aaaa when they look into the Super Bowl and things like that, and they watch these occultic ceremonies, that are not made by the dancers, you know, the dancers literally do what they're told to, well-paid promotions and all that.

But you'll see all the occultic symbology displayed every time you look at the thing, and the trans- basically the transitioning of society and humans themselves into other beings, always under the guise of progressive, progressive science and so on, progressive knowledge and the implementation of progressive knowledge. It's quite something to watch. But it's boring as well to me anyway because you know what it all represents and is meant to represent. And it's really not a high, high messaging for the public. But you'll see all these things all the time. Over and over and over. It does get boring. It really does.

You're living in a world completely different than the one that exists because you've been trained to see it differently, from birth. Jacques Ellul, a really good philosopher, talked about that, that the idea of propaganda and how it truly works. How you have to train a child very early for subsequent propaganda to take effect on them. He said the initial, the initial technique of indoctrinating a child to listen and just accept was so important, if you didn't get that initial indoctrination subsequent indoctrination would not take on them, as they got older it wouldn't work. So that was always understood from a very early time. Because there's nothing new in controlling millions or even billions of people. These are very old sciences indeed.

Again, there's never been a time when all of these sciences are really interconnected now, specialized segments of them, to do with the mind and humanity and sociology, and then anthropology, etc. It's all combined today. So much so that even the military, the military, especially the US, and the Chinese militaries, they take anthropologists along with them when they go into other countries, either to take the countries down, or to help them, which is the same thing. They take them down by big smiling faces, and then they dish out cash and then they manage you. They give you little hospitals and schools, then they get involved in the education and before you know it, they've turned it into another little indoctrination school for themselves to manage the peasantry better. These are well understood. And most folk really don't know. They really haven't a clue.

So many of the big, big, massive charities that you look at are not there for the reasons that you think. They're part of, really, the military-industrial complex, a lot of them. That's why there's no real check on where the cash goes, except the occasional expose of millions disappearing here and there and everywhere, etc. But whenever you hear charity, it's like mum's apple pie, because you've been trained that way, and if you were to complain about mum's apple pie you must be a terribly bad person. You know?

Yet US aid, for instance, in these, again, these helpful humanistic foundations and so on, they're part of the, they dish out the cash and some of the training in some of these countries they want to take over for resources. That's how things are. War is seldom anything to do... We don't go to war to help people. We don't go to war to even free people. We go to war to take over the resources of Nations. And you don't get any of it. You'll do all the fighting, you get handed the bill for it, and you will be given simple propaganda, total lies, as to why you're doing it. But the ones behind you, who already own your country, and I mean OWN, are the ones who get all the profits from all the raw resources and so on that come along. That's the real world. It's vastly, vastly different, as I say, from the one that you're given.

The US for a little while, a short period, had some hope. Newborn countries have some hope when they're still riding on the backs of what they thought was a revolution to give them individual rights and freedoms – very important, individual, you see, and basic rights to property and things like that. Which they really didn't, nothing was safe in Europe if you are lower people and lower levels of the class system. Nothing was safe at all that you had. Even the farming. We saw that even in Russia where small plot farmers, that still kept the country going collectively, when you put them all together and what they produced it kept the country going, they were small independent families and so on, were pretty well wiped out and starved to death when the Bolsheviks took over. They lost everything. Then the state pretended to take it over a run it all.

But that's... There's nothing, as they say, that's presented to you that's exactly as they say it is. With the American idea, yes, you got all the crooks running into the States as soon as they heard, oh, you know, you can exploit this country, there's so little, and it's true, so few laws and regulations at the time in the early days. It's also understood and taught of course in sociology that the reason that the US is sinking now is it caught up and surpassed the bureaucracies, with massive civil services and government agencies and state agencies and so on, who all implement stacks and stacks of rules and regulations until you can't afford to do anything and start to prosper. That was all done intentionally too. So corruption always sets in.

But for a while there was an optimism in the US. It also seeped into the individuals in the US regardless of class. Because they were left alone for a while. You didn't have to pay taxes. I've mentioned that before, that taxes came in really to help, to start off they called it the temporary war tax, or victory tax for America, and that was taxing income. Back in the 90s I gave talks on the history of the income tax in America and elsewhere, and Effie, I had Effie on too. She's an elderly woman who'd lived through the Great Depression and she said how bad it was. They were in a little plot from themselves, like many folk in America. The US at one time, and this is what Jefferson said too, would only remain free if everybody had the ability to feed themselves, even one cow or so and a little field or whatever to grow their food. He said, once that was taken away from people you were under some kind of tyranny. And he was quite right on it too.

So these are basic, these are basic things for life. Now, they can give you the idea of massive profits if you get away from all that and go into the high business and high... all that kind of stuff. But when things crash, you're back to square one again, now, how are you going to feed yourself and so on, you see? And apart from that, as I say, the sharks ran into America like you wouldn't believe. From all over the world. The scam artists, the conologists. I gave talks on conology years ago. At the start of the great con, and how it works, and how you must participate in your own fraud basically. You're getting defrauded or you're getting robbed without knowing it. But you must, it's like that movie The Sting, things like that, you must participate in being fooled, and you go along with it.

That's the same as voting, you know, you actually, most folk who vote really think they're going to change something. As I've said before, if voting was really real, which it would be if you had a real society, and people were real and politicians were real and they meant what they said and they had the best interest of the public at heart, then yeah, it certainly would. But it's been, it was, if it ever was real. It was gone long, long ago.

Again, Carol Quigley mentioned that in Tragedy and Hope, his book. He was a member of, that's the society that at least was a recruiting agency for the management of the US on behalf of those who really ruled it. He said that every president, and even prime ministers across the world in different, certain countries, had been part of, chosen and preselected by the organization, regardless of party, before they get into office. There is one, this one organization with its own tenants and goals and ideals and so on. And he was no conspiracy nut. I mean, he taught at University. He also taught at, it wasn't just Georgetown University. He taught stacks and stacks of bureaucrats and people who would be, work in the foreign office for the US State Department and so on and across the world as diplomats. So he was up there, he knew what he was talking about. That's again, a sideline again too. I could go on forever about him.

But what I'm saying is, the US was taken over pretty quickly. Once you got to World War I, it had already had techniques, little, you had bumps in the road as you're being trained to need something. I've mentioned predictive programming before over the years; it's come into usage now. What they do is they give you events, and entertainment too of course, lots, most of your entertainment is loaded with predictive programming, how you should feel about this, and feel about that, and think about this, etc, and what you should like or what you should condemn. It's all full of that, YOU should be. And you lap it up not realizing you're getting brainwashed. And you wonder where your opinion came from maybe if you get a bit older. Hopefully you will.

But predictive programming also comes out from newspapers, which of course the elite have always owned. You must get uniformity of information, which gives you uniformity of opinion, so then it's easy to control people when they all have the same opinions because you've given it to them. So they always give you a right-wing paper in every place, every area, and a left-wing paper. It's generally a sun or it's a star, you see, one or the other, or a mercury or something. But it was one or the other that they give you. And folk will pick it, well, my dad read that so I'll read this one and I'll vote that way too. Very easy, very simple.

Of course the talks that they gave years ago at the Rockefeller Institute basically when they were taking over all the industry of the US through different sub companies and so on, they decided to, how many newspapers would we need? They, other ones that had spun off from the Rockefellers did the same kind of thing. Initially they said about 30 odd, maybe 32, 33 newspapers across the country, and magazines. I think Quigley touched on that too, he said that for every, even for the civil service they had magazines that would be very flashy glossy magazines, for women and men, you see, in the civil service and that would cater to them and give them their ideas and what they should think about events and so on. Everybody's catered to. Very much so.

So you really don't have true free opinions. And generally when you're not under stress, you never realize that you're getting, it's not forced opinion, it's uniformity of opinion. It's selected and mandated to put across articles that all seem to be from, oh, this author or that author. So, it must be all independent. And it's just coincidence that they're all agreeing about the same things, in everywhere you look, you know, to read. That's how it's done. Of course once movies came in+ that took over and loaded the deck with propaganda.

But with predictive programming you can also get events. Because it's like the vaccine, it's like Covid, the great Plandemic as they say, you know, it's very much like that. In fact, they actually say that. I read the articles before from the SAGE group and so on and the subgroups hired by the UK, of behaviorists and the BIT groups and so on, the nudge experts you might say, who actually gave out handouts to the newspapers to tell them how to present news to the public in this so-called pandemic. And how to, there were different stages of it. How to start it off and put fear into the public. If they found not enough folk were complying and obeying what they were told to do, then they could hype up the fear. In other words, terrify the public. That was the advice given by the government's agencies through these particular behavioral and psychological groups they were using for brainwashing us all. Still on the go yet.

So yeah, terrify the public. Literally cause terror amongst the public to get compliance. Well, again, predictive programming. Back in the 19th century the characters who came in, and we know who some of them were, into the US, were quite open about the fact that they'd love to get a centralized system for the economy. And run it and own it, of course. So it was about three bankers, or, put it this way, some of them were bankers and some of them also LENT money to nations in fact, even back then. They got together, long before Jekyll Island came along, and gave these little predictive programming stunts, you see, to get the public to demand something. So you cause crashes.

So three of them got together and they cause the crashes in the late 1800s, two of them at least. I know that Gould was one of them, and I think J.P. Morgan may have been another. But yeah, they got together, just like a Soros operation, these are old techniques, where Soros boasted in the British newspapers how he'd crashed basically the British economy at one point. He said he called up two of his friends and they arranged it together and they did it and got away with it. And no one arrests them. Because they're way above [Alan chuckles.] any, any, they're up there, they're working for the real owners of the planet, you see. They boasted about it quite happily of how they did it. And as I say, the country had to borrow millions and millions of pounds to try to float the economy again. They screw folk over and over and over, these characters, with impunity, you know, completely. Just like the 2008 crash, complete impunity. It's incredible.

But anyway, back to the late 1800s. So the idea was to get the public to say, oh look, we can't go on like this with different banks having their own cash, and some of them with their own currency even. But, we can't go on, we need a centralized system. So what you must always, just like the vaccine thing, get the public to be terrified and demand it. Get them to demand what you want them to demand and then you say, well it just happens, it just so happens we have a plan, you see.

The same thing happened for, in time for World War I. Where they brought in the income tax to fund, the same guys who under President Wilson, they brought in the Federal Reserve system, and they also brought in the income tax in 1917 or so to fund the money, to pay back the money that would get borrowed by the government for the war when they were going to get involved with it. Part of the reason they got into it in the US was to make sure that the countries that they had been lending to, from the US across Europe, would be able to pay it all back. This is what it's all about, folks. The US didn't go to World War I for altruistic reasons. It was to make sure that all the loans are secured, and with the Treaty of Paris they came out with eventually, after the big conference that they had in 1919, they gave a bunch of the characters who were the moneylenders themselves, or representatives of them, the power to decide who was going to pay what, to pay back all the loans for the war. They dumped a lot on Germany of course, completely unable to pay it all back, so that helped to lead to World War II. Different story again.

But the point is, they always get the public to demand what they want you to demand. And say, what's that you say? We demand you centralized the money system and make it, because it's all corrupt and it keeps folding all the time and we’ll go bankrupt. Really, well, I don't know if we can do that for you. Well maybe, we could set up an institution maybe... So they set up the private banking system called the Federal Reserve. It sounds awfully important, ‘eh? And yet it's really a foreign bank in a sense, or a series of them. Often employing foreigners [Alan chuckles.] to run the system for the American citizenry. It's just astonishing really. It's no different than what ran Britain for centuries, and still does, in the City of London.

So as I say, you know, predictive programming is awfully important to get the public literally to demand what they want you to demand. Save us, save us is the cry, you see, we can't go on like this. And, okay, but there's conditions here, we can help float the economy again, but you have to, a tax system is going to get brought in to pay off the money that you're going to be borrowing from us. And of course that's usury. And usury at one time for labor was completely illegal. That was hashed out in Wilson's time when they tried to bring it in for World War I, the actual paying of an income tax. Because laboring, they're getting paid, taxation of labor was illegal. That had been the way for centuries actually in different countries.

Mind you, they can always get it from 100 different other ways. Through fees, they call it, fees. Your countries are loaded with fees for this and fees for that and licensing for this, and lots of licenses and fees. So it isn't just taxation of course. And if you pay your fee, in other words, it's like a license, for driving license. You get fined and charge, maybe put in prison if you don't have a license to drive. If you pay money and you get your license, then it's okay to do something that's otherwise illegal. That's the difference, you've paid money, now it's, you can legally drive. You know? And many other things that are very similar to that too.

So yeah, the US at one time was vivacious to an extent. That's LIFE, it had a lot of life in it. Canada had that at one time too. I think it was dying off with Pierre Trudeau because he brought in massive international socialism, because it was beyond just socialism. But up until, I'd say about the 1970s, the US and Canada were the places to be. Because even the working class too still have this idea of optimism. But in the late 70s it started to die off as economies are stagnating, and again, the big corporations were putting factories and that across the world in different cheaper labor markets of course. Then of course they start to inflate the currency, and in the process, they devalue the purchasing power, so you need more and more paper to pay for the same amount of goods. Until you're running backwards. And we've been like that for an awful long time. That was all intentional.

Because they've never ever, ever, you understand, the system that runs us all is not for us. It's not for us. It never was.

The conologists who run the banking industry, the true international banking industry at the top, and the World Bank for instance and the IMF, and the Bank for International Settlements were all constructs of what were set up, what were really globalists that were for world enterprise, for real true world federalism, as long as they ruled it all, you see. Again, that goes into, you can go into Carol Quigley again to get your ideas and routes from that one. Empire was the idea, World Empire. It hasn't changed.

You will find out that The Great Reset they're talking about is the culmination for this time in history to bring it all into full worldwide effect, with themselves again at the top running the whole show. With a massive global bureaucracy of civil servants, and many of them are private corporate civil servants, but they're just the same. Some big corporations have more civil servants working for them, for their own corporation, then some governments do. It's not uncommon. You look at the World Economic Forum itself and you look at how many employees they have. Thousands and thousands of them. They have all departments for educating their leaders, future leaders across the world. And really, these are like political social leaders, that will keep you going with the idea that you've got democracy, but in reality, they're trained by those who already rule the world. And the world is ruled.

But yes, as I say, it's an awful shame, you can see it in the old movies too, before they were totally contaminated and loaded, because in the old movies, and some of them were silly comedies and so on, but silly and happy at the same time, there's that optimism, it's all gone now. It's all gone completely. Now it's very, and Canada's even worse because Canada has been, was socialistic long ago. It was taken over long go for socialism. Even when Gouzenko wrote his book on, about the Fall of a Titan, to do with the fact that of the civil servants, the federal civil service in Canada being loaded with communist, card-carrying communists at the time, at the end of World War II. It didn't die off or go away by any means at all. So Canada was heavily, heavily loaded with this whole idea of socialism.

Socialism too means many different things to different people. It's meant to be that way. It's meant, the people at the bottom think socialism is going to be more fair, especially when you're in the middle class, or lower middle class or working classes. You'll think, yeah, I've got some, I've got a safety net there, if you ever need a safety net, this socialism will take care of me. No, it's not. It's a so-called social science of how to run the world, how to run collectivist societies, and how to make them efficient, very efficient. That's the idea. Right down to getting both partners out in the, if they have any partners at all, both out working in the workforce, as a stage to dissolution totally of the family unit of course. And you get a new type of family unit, which will be supplied by the state, which has already happened to an extent, and science pops in and says, oh, we're taking that over too, you see. It all comes together.

However, I mean, socialism had a lot of followers in the 1930s and 40s, and 50s even. Because it still gave the preaching, deceptive preaching, we're here for ordinary folk and to give you safety nets if you get unemployed and things like that. But the science way above it was declared in the early 20th century openly by the Fabian Society, if you care to look into it. George Bernard Shaw, he said, the working man for instance thinks that he is going to get more income to take home to his family, and more guaranteed income where he can look ahead and maybe purchase more items, or even if he could, [Alan chuckles.] ...

The Fabian's didn't want you to own property. They wanted the state to own the property. The state of course, like everything else, farms it out to private corporations, big corporations. So you can bring in the same thing, but you say, well, it can't be socialism because, you know, there's big chains of corporate owners now in real estate, they rent out across the world. And they do have that. But no, it's the same folk that brought you Fabianism so's they could have almost total ownership across big cities of vast swaths of property.

You'll never get your head around it... the folk who manage money, it's almost a genetic with them... They're obsessed, obsessed with how to make more, all the time, and how to get around all the obstacles that are put in their path. With optimism. They're very optimistic. But they're obsessed, obsessed, obsessed with money all the time. But the ones above them, that have all the money, they have all the money, they'll never go bust, the ones above them all. That's the key to it, everyone gets stuck in their own level of indoctrination, and most of them never figure it out their entire lives that they're under this kind of system.

You look at the different gangsters that run cons, big cons on society. They're often, I remember Bernie Madoff when the 2007/8 collapse happened and his massive ponzi scheme came down. There were articles out there how everybody knew in the big city, the Big Apple and all that, and how, you know, doors opened, literally opened for him, like servants almost bowing to the guy. He didn't have to open doors and so on, like he was... And that's how, that's how these characters lived. It was a castle in the air, as long as folk kept coming in to invest money he could keep the con going longer and longer. But not forever. Eventually it fell.

So they love, they love this kind of feeling of supremacy over others. And unfortunately the problem with most folk, the ordinary folk at the bottom too, like the doorman in hotels, they will grovel to characters who have this kind of cash. It's a sad thing, isn't it? People often say, and communists will tell you that, even Antifa groups now, all these people, these people, just kowtowing to people who had statues who had all this cash and power. Well, nobody forced them to kowtow, you see. It's unfortunately in human nature. Just like the Antifa communists would kowtow to a reincarnation of Lenin today, you know, or Trotsky. And they would. Immediately. They'd grovel, here, this is a God on earth, you see.

It's the same with the Rockefellers when old Rockefeller had the military, or the militia turn on the miner strikers in the tent cities at one time. They opened fire on these tents and wiped out a lot of the miners and their families. That's when they brought in the idea of, let's turn him into a do-gooder. He's not a mean terrible robber baron type character. No, he's a, he wants to help society and make it better for you, you see. So they created, very quickly, and it all shows you using the Bernays type characters, who understood human nature awfully well, the idea of propaganda again, and reinvents Rockefeller as a philanthropist. Once they did that, my, they could take over so many massive businesses and big Pharma groups. We're here to help you. We're here to help you.

Remember that it was in a book called The Rockefellers I think, and it mentions right after, not long after the shooting, they very quickly set up this big philanthropy, using public relations experts at that time, in that day and age. It was already well advanced obviously. One of them was called Gates by the way. The other one was Mackenzie King of Canada. He was, they made him a Prime Minister eventually as a reward. So they reinvented Rockefeller as a great philanthropist. They said that, for one big PR stunt they brought him around miners' homes, or their shacks really, and they'd say, they all knew what was going on and all the cameras were there, and yet they all knew it was being done for public relations. But as soon as you open some of the doors of the miners, they took out, you could see them slumping, almost bowing, you know, doffing, literally looking down in the presence of someone of such... Was kind of disgusting and shameful. And sad. Sad statement about humanity. Not long after the guy had literally told militias to wipe out families like that.

But that's how you do it. If you understand human nature, they will react. Again, getting back to Plato, you know the formulas and you can reintroduce the same systems, and if you understand the sequence of introduction and implementation. Sad isn't it. Very sad. I've always said, it's not a good thing to worship people, human living people, it's not a good thing. You always end up in disaster.

But the sad thing is, most folk, and especially in an atheistic society, that's why they had to destroy religions. Because in a totally atheistic society, they do, they worship humans. And they'll create them for you. Oh, so-and-so is a genius, this man is a multibillion-dollar genius. And it's all fake and all that. But you believe it.

Many of them will grovel, absolutely grovel to get near these people, ‘eh, like they're magically, you know, powerful magic. Very similar to kings and queens in the Middle Ages and the later Middle Ages. It wasn't unusual for, in England too, for people to try and touch the cloak of a royalty, even when they're a relative of the high royalties, they try to touch their clothing hoping it would rub off on them, this magic from the bluebloods that had been appointed by God, you see.

So nothing changes. So if you don't have that part of it, then you simply have the person who invented the doctrine or who was a high priest of the doctrine, as in Marxism, etc., and they will worship them. And you always get psychopaths. I don't care what kind of system it is, it’s psychopaths who gravitate around the people who are powerful. Because they want power as well and money for themselves. So that's how it works. So if you start worshiping human beings, you're in trouble because psychopaths will be these particular human beings, and definitely the ones around them, that are going to be managing you. Very sad, isn't it.

It's no different, what I'm talking about here, than... So it's a don't look for instant fixes in society, that's part of what I'm saying too, because you won't get it. Humans that rule over other people, so I don't care what kind of system or democracy or fascism or communism, it's always the same types of people who run you. And if they're rather blatant themselves, blatantly nasty and power-hungry, they simply employ those in academia, worldwide now, whole levels of them in specialized areas, and pay them awfully well, to do the running for them and to advise them. You see, that's how it's done.

And you dress psychopaths up the nice suits. You don't put them into uniforms, military uniforms, that was for the 30s, that era. No, after that you put them in really nice suits and ties, and they’re well groomed. You might even give them basic elocution lessons if they have to give any talks to the public or little quips. As long as they read their scripts they're fine. Most of the things you get today are all through public relations experts, most of the articles that you're given. When you've got an official, like a politician having to say something for a PR shot, he's already given the script. Even for a one-line sentence, it's not spontaneous. That's how fake everything is today.

So getting back to, you know, George Bernard Shaw declaring what socialism was. It was for the, again, a technocratically run society, an expertly run society. Everything would be ruled by experts, for efficiency's sake. Science was to be a big, big part of it. That's what you saw in Things To Come, the movie version of Things To Come by HG Wells. You have the Freemasons of the Air, the scientific elite would come across after this massively destructive war that had destroyed nations as such, until you had little city states, or towns, doing their own things. The Freemasons of the Air in their super advanced military machines would then gas them all and take over the world and unify the world, with themselves at the top running it all, scientifically. And their offspring would be doing exactly the same kind of thing. But under the guise of what they call progressives, or progressive nature of the system, they would always advance science, that would be the pinnacle of everything, and whatever science dictated, those all down below, all the strata beneath them would have to go along with it.

Bernard Shaw was more Bolshevik about it where he said that, he says, we're not here to help you. Meaning the peasantry. He says, you know, because you've got to do what they tell you or you won't get food at all. And you have to work by the way, you know, they weren't in there for charity. In communism you had to work. No work, no food, you know. So you had to work. George Bernard Shaw said the same kind of thing, so was HG Wells for the same kind of system. Shaw was blatant about it and that audio clip is still out there yet, an old video clip actually where he says, you know, you'll have to come to us and explain why we should keep you alive. Because the only reason you would be alive, in communism/socialism is to serve the state, the system. You see, that's your purpose. It never changes.

But they always need lots and lots of people to do the overthrows for them. It's quite fascinating, if you've got time at all... [Alan chuckles.] I'm sure more folk are going to have time now more than ever before, for little while, as you're all locked down and they destroy the economy of the world really. By locking us all down, that's the intention of it. That's the real intention behind it, to bring in the new system.

So you're going through a revolution with science at the top, you see. They're already showing they've got revolutionaries out there for the streets, if you fail to obey them they'll turn them on you, you see. And again, to heighten the fear amongst the general population. It's not by accident at all. None of it's by accident ai all. None of it's independent of the whole big picture either.

So again, you're all being trained to demand help and you know, save us, save us. And you will, you'll get your vaccination. Lots of damage will happen because of it. I have no doubt on that at all. Especially with, I mean, they're all pretty bad actually. Especially when they're rushed through all kinds of, without any testing. Then the fudging of data is bad enough, incredible fudging of data to try and get Covid deaths up, by statistics, so that everybody who dies of anything is put down as Covid. And that's not far-fetched.

And by the way, for everyone that they'll test, with a faulty test to begin with that will come up positive, they tack on about at least 15. It's all computer driven. Well, how many people would the average person meet in a week, you know? Well maybe 15, spits out of the computer. So they just tack that on anyway, you know. It's just completely all bogus.

But the intention, remember, is to bring in a new system. The great reset. The global great reset. From the World Economic Forum. The Masters. And they will, you're going to get rationing. I said that years ago, their intention was eventually to bring in rationing. Over 20 years ago. And here you are, you’re lead up to it. You can't go on and on, and people will wonder where these tin cans come from, or the meat comes from, or their porridge comes from, you see, it's all just magic to most folk who live in... They’re already under the thumb of the system, completely dependent on the system. You see? That's what they want you to be of course.

And it's just starting. This is to last into, at least into all of next year. And maybe for three years. But the effects will never go away. Because it's to be a completely, they said it at the World Economic Forum, and it really does match the stuff from George Bernard Shaw. You wait and see, you know, you wait and see what they introduce. Right down from their climate activism and climate changes to the group of, what do they call themselves, the Council, that meets for the climate change. The same people who run the World Economic Forum at the top, you know. Who admitted that the folk were ignoring all their demands, that you live a different way and come into austerity, etc., post consumerist society. Living on the edge, that's what austerity is. It's just, you know, the poverty line is where they want to take you. Postproduction, ‘eh. Post consumerist, that comes next. And completely dependent on their system for your very, very basic needs, you know. That's what they want to bring in.

It goes along the way of socialism, you see. Including their statements, quite fascinating to read them, of the redistribution of wealth. To make the people at the bottom join the revolution. And it's big, big lie. Here's the richest folk who run and own now the world's wealth and its resources, pretending that they're going to redistribute... No, no. They're going to bring the true technocracy forward in a complete rationing system, with all conditions, everything's got conditions of behavior and compliance for everything we’re told to do and comply with. You'd better do it or you won't get your little rationing, or your universal basic income, etc. etc.

I really mean it. This is not speculation. They wrote about this in the 1940s. Bertrand Russell again was one of them. He worked with all the different groups. He was a member of the Macy group, and he worked even with the Frankfurt school eventually. He worked with, under presidents and prime ministers to design a post-World War II culture for the public. Leading to the changes step-by-step of, again, always the same thing, dissolution of the family unit, population reduction would come from that, and all the other things too which you're pretty well familiar with. Quite fascinating really.We're living through it now, though. It's not things to come. It's here. You're seeing it unrolled.

So yeah, the predictive programming is all around you. Horrific stories, terror stories backed up by just figures and data and statistics, you see, that are all fudged. To terrify you. With behaviorists screaming, oh, 10,000 more cases today. Well, if they just unleashed another 50,000 tests in that area, the day before or the week before, whatever, well, yeah, you'll get more coming up, with a faulty test anyway. But the fact is, these are not folk in hospital or who are sick. If you understood how many viruses go through your system your whole life long, and through the entire populations, some of them can sweep through in a matter of a few weeks, through the entire population, and you'll never know it because no one's sick with them. That's quite normal.

This is the cons, again, back to conology, that's what they're doing. You must participate in the con voluntarily. But you're doing it because they terrify you. So technically, it's involuntarily. You're being petrified into compliance. And that's what they said they'd do, with the SAGE groups and the subgroups that work for them, on behalf of the British government, on how they would step up the hype, to get more and more fear, to get compliance from the public. There you go, demanding that the media lie to you.

The media doesn't need much persuasion, mind you, but they're getting well-paid for it. They're getting more funding now than they've had for years. Because no one was reading newspapers and so on and even looking at their sites for their news because it was all nonsense and celebrities, you see. They were all getting big handouts and funding, and bailouts and funding, you see, as essential services. To brainwash you and to lie to you on behalf of the Masters. To try to get a uniform route of implementation that everyone's going to follow, you see.

Again, isn't it so beautiful all the techniques that they've used? It is, and it is, it is, if you're looking at a movie with evil characters in the movie, you have no problem understanding what I'm talking about. But because you've been, they can't all be so evil. YES, THEY CAN. [Alan chuckles.]   Humanity is very devious. Incredibly devious. And the people who go into certain areas are more devious than anybody else.

The higher up in governmental levels, and Corporation levels, all they do is sit and scheme how to get more and how to manipulate and how to take. And how to demolish competition all the time as well. You talk about the billions of dollars that are going to all your intelligence agencies, every year, billions and billions, multiple billions of dollars, in every country, is to find ways to scheme and to lie and to deceive other nations and their own people by different techniques and so on. Persuasion and lies and so on so that those who own you can take more from you or take more resources from countries. That's why they go to war with countries. It's all economics. Marx was right in that, that wars, the root of all wars was economics. It's materialism. Stealing, you know. Yep. We steal it because we want it.

But for the public you must, you know, demonize the people. They're led by this terrible maniac over there who's nasty to his own people. Very simple propaganda. The simpler the better. If it's too complex you can pick it apart, so keep it simple. And, Saddam Hussein was just a terribly bad man, he was killing thousand of his own people every year, you know. So, to save the people we have to go over, and starve them out initially with total embargo, kill half a million of them, that you're saving, right, through the State Department.

You all know who was in at the time, it was all through the news. I did the talks years ago on the radio on it. But half a million, women and children alone, were starved to death before they had the war start. Madeleine Albright was questioned about that in the TV program, did you think it was worth it, starving all these folks? Oh yes, I think it was worth it, she said. Well, there's a psychopath right there. You honestly can't really fit her into the category of human. I can't.

Really. I can't. There was no trace of emotion or regret or nothing. None. The same with Tony Blair. Asked if he would do anything different, oh no, I wouldn't do anything differently at all. One of the biggest liars that brought Britain into the same kind of war.

Yeah, just totally corrupt, we're living in total corruption. But again, it's conology, we must comply with the corruption to make it work, ‘eh. We supply the troops for the wars. All young guys will believe what they're told. They can't believe that they live in a monster country. Actually, that's changed since the advent of games, you know, video games of all kinds. They have trained a whole generation not to think about rights and wrongs for the reasons you're killing and slaughtering people. You just want to get out there rack up points to an extent.

But before that they had to really give you, you know, this is why you're doing it. And it would make sense to you. During the Cold War lots of young folk would join the military. They'd also go off and fight in different faraway lands, etc. believing, a lot of them believing in what they were told it was all for. Or having faith at least that those above in your country had good reasons for doing it. The sad part is the ones above you did have good reasons for doing it. They profited from it. That was the good reason from it, you see. Sad, isn't it.

But you know, corruption in society is phenomenal. Absolutely phenomenal. And it's shameless. They're shameless at the top, in all the countries. And we do live in more of a psychopathic era. Don't forget psychopaths give you, when they run your country, eventually if they get what they want, with an atheistic population, psychopaths have an awful time fighting, and so did the Communists, call it what you want, totalitarian, tyranny, they have a hard time trying to fight those who are religious. So they have to outlaw, slaughter all the religious, or ban them completely.

Because when the folk have something they believe in, to stand up for, they are far more dedicated and willing and energized to overthrow tyranny, than if they are atheists themselves. If they're atheists they won't do it, so no. So the atheists can be manipulated more easily.

But when psychopaths are in control, you see, and they've eliminated all competition, ah, like the big idea theory, they are terrified of the big idea. In fact, they stole, the big idea, like Bush Senior, he said that too, a big idea, he says, a New World Order. Mao Tse Tung said the same thing, Mao, the big idea was the only thing that made him afraid. At that time he was talking of folk who had a real religious cause. Because they're unstoppable when they get going. And they know this.

So when psychopaths rule you totally in an atheistic society, they have no problem recruiting younsters and paying them well, like mercenaries, to go off and slaughter. It's much easier to do it because they give you a psychopathic culture. That's one of the symptoms of the fact you’re conquered, when they give you a psychopathic culture. So folk who are not necessarily completely psychopaths will follow it too, and follow a lot of the traits of them, but they're not truly psychopaths. That's how we are today.

Most folk who run up to the top worship the psychopathy success stories. They want to get all those things too. But if they're not careful, especially if they get on drugs and so on, on the way, which can blunt your emotions, you can definitely simulate very, very well the psychopathic personality. Because their emotions definitely get blunted.

I should really just mention it as an afterthought too, for those who've been in the military for years, pharma, big pharma work really closely with the experimentations and those with PTSD. You've all read I'm sure the stories over the years of even trying to create a virus that would go into part of the brain to eradicate certain memories. This is what they hoped they could do by also using drugs, you see. And certain drugs they give to the high special forces. They'll give it to them, I think Ativan was one, and some of the lorazepam types too, but Ativan was one of the favorite ones for some years. That literally would dull and flatten the emotional instincts of the person, the troops.

If they got PTSD coming away from the military, when they come out of the military, they put them on that too. To again, try to flatten them. And it would, it would, everything they'd done would recede into a kind of Lala land. But it would also blunt their emotions with relationships and everything, and they would kind of go berserk at times. If they took alcohol, it would have amazing effects at times.

Because the liver that breaks down drugs or alcohol, it breaks it down as you're drinking ‘eh, the liver would start to accept the drug. I'm talking about when they're drinking at the same time as taking the drug, or then they took the drug with the alcohol still in them. The drug would exacerbate the breakdown of the alcohol, and then the liver would accept the drug as a substitute for the alcohol, and it would have its intensification episode, and they go into total blackout. That's what happens with a lot of the PTSD soldiers and so on. So they can't really, they don't know a lot of them, don't take any of the drugs they're prescribed along with alcohol. Absolutely not.

I think even the Prozac group too, that again, Prozac was going to be the world's cure to all problems. Remember? That's how they put it out there, they launched it across the world. Every newspaper ran with it. Coincidentally, isn't it? Massive two-page spreads in all the papers, a wonder drug that would get rid of all the worlds problems and make everybody just content, you know. They had the same thing then too with these particular drugs, which eventually caused parents, mums to even kill their kids. At times they would go berserk. Blackouts. Anyway, this is the world in which we live, ‘eh.

Now of course there's so many drugs in society that are prescribed. A lot of them weren't prescribed but they’re prescription drugs too you can buy on the street corners. Really, really heavy-duty type drugs of all kinds. And cocktails of drugs some of the youngsters will take too.

And drop with them. A lot of the other ones coming in, fentanyl and so on, coming in from China, etc., and elsewhere too, very lethal drugs if you get a combination of the drugs. They're adding, they're padding their heroin with it now too, the sellers, to put less of the product of heroin in their mixes, and their fentanyl product and putting the fentanyl in there too. It's rather sad what's happening, isn't it? But there's no great crisis mentioned about it, really.

Even before the Covid idea was unleashed, and it had been on the books for years. We can go back to at least 2005 in fact, with the exposés that are coming out now about huge test pandemics that they were going to have by the WHO. I'll put that up tonight too, the one to 2005. It's quite interesting how they would put out this plan for massive worldwide exercises, real type exercises. Well, exactly what we're going through now or what, you know.

Because before it, before all this, they knew we were going into a stagnant time where money isn't moving. Who cares about investment companies supposedly soaring? They're completely unrelated to the average person. We're in a jobless recovery, we've heard that, oh, since before Obama [Alan chuckles.] and through Obama's period up to the present time, the jobless recovery. Okay, everything's going fine, but there's no jobs. So the whole pandemic thing was to bring in the next part of the system, the new wave, you might call it, the new wave, the part of the system, the third way, and they sometimes call it the fourth way, the Fourth Industrial Revolution at the WEF. All planned long ago. They knew they'd have to get us to this stage, and that they would get us to this stage, and now it's time to ram it all through, you see.

Most folk will comply unfortunately because they're terrified. Their propaganda works on them. Their indoctrination works on them. Because it took on them. Like vaccination, when they mention if something took, meaning, did it create a response for antibodies in your system against a particular whatever they're vaccinating against, in some folk it doesn't. Because sometimes you often wonder if it had anything to do with it all. But anyway, they'll say, did it take or did it not take. And if it didn't take, well there's no antibody response there, you see.

It's the same with propaganda and indoctrination. The early indoctrination that Ellul talked about was imperative for subsequent lifelong propaganda and indoctrination to take on the person. If the initial few years of properly sequenced indoctrination was absent, then the person would be wiser, they could see through eventual propaganda down through their lifetime. It's just amazing, isn't it?

I'll touch tonight too on the European talk that they had. There's a video up there. It's unfortunate, they only give you a little bit of it for the public. Because they daren't show the public the rest of it. You see the EU commission group at the top with the WHO and the usual culprits taking part in this panel and how they're going to handle Covid and make the folk except all their dictates and so on.

Mozilla, a representative from Mozilla was there to make sure they'd also lead you off into the searches that you're supposed to, the good searches, not the bad ones, meaning the ones they've refuted for advice or fake news. This is a terrible time to really, to be… a terrible time I'd say for all of us. But it's a terrible time for those who know you're being lied to every turn you take, where the Internet in real time is bombarding you with algorithms, for you personally, they know you perfectly well. They'll lead you off into searches that have nothing to do with what you're looking for. But it's what they've decided what they want you to look at, so's you will, that's the only information you'll get, to make you come to the conclusion, I guess that's all the information there is. No, it's not. But they actually had that on the go.

So at this European meeting you'll hear them discuss it. They also had a person from I think it was, was it Facebook there as well, compliance teams and all the rest of it, how they would be ruthless with anybody who's not, who's actually saying anything independent from the authorized propaganda that's out there, how they would hammer them basically or ban them.

This is incredible, an incredible time to live and witness it. Because most folk still won't get it. The first thing they did in the Bolshevik revolution, as I say, you had this group who used all the other factions, and socialistic factions and different parties, all under socialism at the time in Russia. They used all the groups, because they need numbers to overthrow regime, it doesn't matter what kind of regime it is. Then they literally, and in one night, the smaller group, the Bolsheviks jumped over and took the whole system over for themselves. It's the same thing you're watching with Antifa that admits along with Black Lives Matter its leaders are all trained Marxists and organizers for doing what they're doing.

But above them of course there's a faction again who funds it. And who will then supply them with their leaders. Once they've got what they think they wanted, and they'll supply the leaders, you'll find out the ones that you're seeing on the streets will all suddenly go quiet, you see. Then you'll have the same, what you're witnessing is a Bolshevik, I've said it, Bolshevik revolution. I said that months ago that's what you're seeing, is Bolshevik. Using everybody else. Even in the Antifa group they said they're waiting for a spike to jump or piggyback on top of. So they'll always use a group they'll say is victimized, but they jump on it, they take over the movement. No matter how real the cause was to begin with, you see. Very Bolshevik.

I tell you, hhhch, I'll also put up a clip of, or I might not, it's up to yourself if you want to watch it. I've got the whole thing here of the so-called inquiry, where some of those in the U.S. Congress are grilling Barr. It was astonishing to watch from my perspective because I thought, this is awfully familiar. A lot of the women who came on, the far-left women, their faces were grimaced in anger and hatred, you know. Regardless of Barr or anybody else, you couldn't get a word in edgewise, you know. It was the same group really that had tried to overthrow Trump before, I think, during the inquiry, same people, you know. I thought, this is awfully familiar. I said, why is this? What I realized, it was a show trial. This is what you had in the Soviet era [Alan chuckles.] when they had to throw, you know, try to get, to validate what they were doing at the top. Because everyone was so corrupt, very quickly. And the folk all starving and unhappy and so on. So you must throw a few folk to the wolves, as they say, a few sacrifices. But they got some folk, and these are show trials.

That's where George Orwell got his idea from, 1984, where they brainwash you, they torture you and all the rest of it, as a victim, you know, because you're overthrowing the system, you're subversive even if you didn't know it yourself. Eventually they'd have you agreeing with them on everything... I went into the proletariat area, and I had sex with women, and contracted syphilis, and I spread it and blah blah blah. All these incredible admissions. That's where he got all that from for his book 1984.

But they had the real show trials. And these guys were like zombies, admitting to all kinds of ridiculous things they had nothing to do with. Just, just fictitious farcical things. That's what it was like, you know. Except that Barr of course wasn't at that stage yet of thinking, okay, okay, you know. Nope. But that's what you were seeing. Because whatever he said they twisted it. They repeat it back, in their own words, and it was all accusatory. That wasn't any kind of rational debate or discussion or inquiry.

But what you're seeing is shades of things to come. Because the people who are grimacing their faces in anger, meaning hatred and anger, do you want folk who are showing hatred and anger running any kind of legal system in the country? Do you really want that? Do you want that when they end up with death squads? With their new revolution? Do you really want that?

Because you're going to get it... if you don't say, that's enough!

That always happens, you see. So much for your fair inquiry, you know. We shall unleash the nihilists and the atheists, they said ‘eh, long ago.

Now I have to remind everyone again to help me tick along here by donating @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Because I do all this myself, this work, and it takes money, it takes my whole life basically to do it. I depend upon you to keep me going. Because it's expensive, naturally, and I have to live somehow, and definitely way below the standards of most folk. It costs a lot just to keep all these sites going and telephone bills and things like that. So help me tick along and donate and send a few bucks to cuttingthroughthematrix.com. You find out how to donate, etc. Thank you.

Now, I'll get off the topic a little bit. But I guess it's still on the topic. Albert Pike who was the head at one point of the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry, that wasn't Scottish. He was also head at one point, again, of the World Revolutionary Movement, as it was called then. You'll find all the top people who, different factions, again, before the Bolsheviks took over in Russia, all the other revolutionaries and anarchists of the time were all Masons.

Trotsky himself, I've mentioned before, wrote a book, different books. When he died, he was in the middle of and he wrote about that, trying to write one of the biggest, um, collection of Freemasonry and its ideals and so on, and he tried it out, he was writing it at the time. He started that in prison long before that, before the revolution of the Bolsheviks in fact, when he was introduced to it. People have no idea that that's what masonry was involved with. The 20th century Western version is very, very, it was very tepid compared to its real purposes, especially at the working class level.

But really, as I've said before, yeah, Albert Pike trained, or he appointed Mazzini to take over. Mazzini himself took over the World Revolutionary Movement and went over to Europe, etc. But eventually it was changed to be the World Revolutionary Communist Party. Eventually of course Lenin took that over. But then they had the Bolshevik faction which was really the ones who, again, they piggyback on top, and they're put there by the big, richest folk on the planet, even then, to take over the movement, and that's what happened to Russia.

It's interesting again – just as a sideline, because my mind goes this way at times – that Bertrand Russell's wife was affiliated with the revolutionary movement. Don't forget too, the big poets like Shelley, they were all part of the free Masonic revolutionary movement at the time, that coupled up out of the more modern New Agey type ideas in with it, too, and ideals. Because they had to get away from just pure materialism into something that would try and replace the spirit, a kind of fake spiritual side of it too.

Shelley of course married the daughter of the World Revolutionary Movement, or one of the leaders of the World Revolutionary Movement in his day too. But Lord Bertrand Russell, his father married a woman who, her side of the family were deep revolutionaries. It wasn't uncommon for Mazzini to visit them in fact. Quite amazing for them to be involved with British lords. Or, is it? Maybe that's quite the norm in fact.

Shelley of course was a revolutionary. He married one of the guiding lights of socialism in his day too, to bring in this wonderful utopia. Lord Byron was another one as well. Again, those involved in the arts, as they say, of cultural arts and so on, you know, literature and entertainment, as always, are all part of the revolution to always, and getting well-paid for it too even to this present day, to bring in the idea of a utopia. The Soviet system itself worked forever, like 70 years to bring in a utopia. Which could never be reached because utopias are fictitious, you see. That's it there.

Similar to George Carlin talking about, the big club, you know, and he says, a big club at the top and you're not in it. You see. And he said too, but the American dream, he says, of course it's a dream, the only time you can believe in it is when you're asleep because it doesn't exist. It's the same thing as utopia. They'll say, humans are awfully devious, and when you get groups of psychopaths combining together, and giving themselves fancy, very legitimate sounding importing names, to rule you without your permission, they just appoint themselves and there they are, until a generation grows up and they've always been there so they must be normal. No, they're private clubs that are ruling over you.

They're very cunning at the top. Very, very cunning. They have professional liars and persuaders on their payrolls, very well-trained ones now. They can con the public into anything. Again, they go to higher schools of conology and learn how to do it and get well-paid to do it too.

But you must always influence the youth. The youth are awfully important. In all, all old, even in ancient, even in biblical times there's passages in the Old Testament of, very similar to Revelation later on in the New Testament, in the Old Testament about children turning up against their parents and how it can be done. Plato talked about it too. He said that even music might have to be licensed at times for musicians to push because he says they can so easily with the right kind of music and lyrics, with cunning people, can stir up the youth to revolution. And this has always been understood how to do it.

You must always get the youth first and promise them utopias. And that they're going to change the world for the better. And again, you train them too, and they've had a long time at training them in the Western schools and colleges, to hate the older generation and really make them believe that, oh, the world is dying and the planet's dying. And they really believe it. Oh my God, the climate change is man-made and it's all those baby boomers that caused it, those greedy, greedy selfish people. They believe all this indoctrination. Because this is the type of communist indoctrination, train them who their enemy is so's when they turn them loose on the older folk they will quite happily go and kill them. Because it's been done before. Not that long ago too.

I mentioned it before too, in Mao's cultural revolution in China it was the same kind of thing. He authorized his students to turn on those who, and again this is a Trotskyist technique actually, which is perpetual revolution, but Mao used it for the cultural revolution. They would turn against their own teachers and parents. They killed a lot of them too. Drag them through the streets, the older folk. Because even though they were under communism, they still had contaminated ideas, simply because they remembered life before communism. So you eradicate them, this is what… Stalin did the same thing.

The contaminating, very good term actually. There's a lot of truth to the term as well. You can't unlearn something. Especially if you've witnessed other systems in your own lifetime, you can't unlearn the fact you witness them and you thought about them. Because what they want is a totally, totally subservient true believing population. And you might say to them, you know, what was different before communism, we didn't have all this rationing, and we weren't dependent on even foreign countries feeding us at times. You know, that's bad news to put that kind of stuff out, you see.

But the key to this revolution right now you're going through, it is not grassroots. I said before, this revolution is the next phase to the next system that the elites already own. It's their revolutions. And it's against the people who don't understand it yet, that's why it's a revolution. You might object to where they're taking you with their Fourth Industrial Revolution nonsense and Great Global Reset. And redistribution of wealth, to keep the young folk happy, their little revolutionaries happy that this… It's NOT going to be that at all. It's going to go in stages into total poverty. Total austerity. They'll call it austerity to begin with. Well, it's just austere, you know. That means your patches aren't invisible on your clothing yet. Poverty is when your knees are poking through your pants.

It's just, again, it's conology. I hope you understand how it's going to get played to the public. They want to reduce the population of the world. The WEF has already said a few years ago, if they could reduce energy supplies to the public, that's electricity, gasoline, things that bring your food to the stores and all the rest of it, diesel, you name it, yada, yada ya, then eventually, with cold climates, you know, and the rest of it, you'll see folk dying off. Like they already have in Britain, they've had it for years now in Britain. It's acceptable for thousands of elderly to die in their homes because they can't afford their fuel bills. It's the same country that's going to take in thousands of migrants from across the planet and put them up and feed them and so on.

What you're doing with, all of this is accepting worth, life worth and life value. What you're actually accepting is the science called bioethics. I might touch on that if I remember tonight as well. Bioethics is, again, it's the technocratic way of running the world and classifying folk according to importance, and less important, and absolutely useless eaters, as Russell would have said himself, useless eaters. And the Darwinian groups too, and the Lucky Gene Club that Bill Gates and his wife and Oprah and all that attend as well. Or the Margaret Sanger group, you know, where she called the people weeds, the children, weeds. Very much eugenics you see. Or Julian Huxley that also help set up, founder of UNESCO.

Small world hey? The same organizations just keep circling around and coming up in conversation, all the same people over and over and over, ‘eh? And you're not supposed ever catch on to the real agenda behind it. So the richest folk on the planet are bringing in their global reset at the World Economic Forum. They already own all the resources of the world. You'll notice the Antifa groups are not screaming about the big, big top industrials that are bringing on their cell phones and so on, you know. Instead, they're smashing in the small businesses, mom-and-pop stores and so on. I could go on and on about that but I won't.

But the thing is, the WEF have said they're going to bring in literally redistribution of the wealth. Well, who's wealth? Hhhhh. And again, the revolutionaries you'll find eventually, a lot of them will be dealt with too obviously because when they see that they're not getting what they want after the revolution, the ones who have been on the streets before, they're all known who they are, and they start disappearing. That's what happens in communist revolutions over and over again. Hell is repetition, isn't it, ‘eh?.. when you see it all the time.

So yeah, the richest folk on the planet are going to bring you into a state of austerity as they claim they're redistributing wealth. The folk who own, that own nations and islands across the planet, you know, the same people, but they're going to redistribute YOUR wealth, you see. That means the folk at the bottom as well, until you're ALL flat, flat broke. That's where it's supposed to go.

They'll bring down the population and they'll say, we just can't bring in excess people anymore into the world. We've got to, again, with bioethics, again, the Rockefellers put a whole bunch of stuff out recently on bioethics with using laws. Now they've got laws to do with bioethics, who should be treated with this and treated with that and kept alive and not kept alive. We've already got it in Canada before the Covid with euthanasia in hospitals, etc. Now you're all being trained, well, are you really essential to business, to keep the planet going? What's your status, you know, for lockdown? Oh no, you make bicycle wheels, now, we can't have that, we don't need you right now, you're not essential. They're talking eugenics and bioethics to you when they say these things. I hope you start to get the picture here. As you all get categorized.

That will also have to do with redistribution of the wealth. Well, you see, because you're not essential, you will not be getting as much as a healthy person that we might need for the military to go off and fight the foreign wars that are going to bring justice across the world, you see, as we spread the revolution. We have to feed them better than you because you are, why don't you accept you're nonessential and do the right thing, you know? Then they'll say, well, we can help you there to do the right thing. Because they've already passed all the laws, eh. Folk never catch on.

Isn't it, again, a small world, ‘eh? Oh what a wicked web we weave, ‘eh, when first we practice to deceive. And you find there is this Fauci, this career, almost like a private bureaucrat attached to a government-funded agency, but it's still a private agency. It's got its fingers in so many pies. Also, he's well in with Bill Gates and he’s taken funding from him before. He is involved with the vaccine companies, knows them all, yada, yada, ya. And whatever he gives a nod to, to make this, that or the other gets billions of tax money thrown at them immediately. I mean, come on here.

But Fauci's wife, she's into bioethics, you see. She's a professional bioethicist. Which really is a branch of eugenics, folks, who's important, who's not important. What is ethical for us, the ruling technocrats, to do to the public? What's ethical, you see. Don't bring the public in and asked them what they think. No. It's to be done to the public, so we'll make up the decision, the rules of bioethics and what we should do and how we can handle and what we can do TO the public if we need to. This is what it is, who’s going to live and who's going to die.

Astonishing stuff we're getting dished out these days. This is not conspiracy, it's fact. It’s out there, published stuff from the culprits themselves. But it's science, you see. Science is the God now. Anything that's scientific must be good. You know I mean, isn't that what they say? It's science. Yeah. And the science can constantly change its mind. Because it's science. We've got fresh data on this and fresh data on that, and everything that was permitted a few years ago is now banned, and all the things that actually were banned years ago, before that, we’ll actually bring back today even. I mean, we can do what we want because we’re science.

I prefer the religions because religion told you what you could and could not do. And it was fixed pretty well in stone, that was it.

But these scientists, you see, oh, we've learned something new, we have, we've got to bring an extra, an extra, an extra level of austerity to this particular category here because the world is starving. So YOU're nonessential, let's just, why don't we just cut back on YOU, hm?

And you think I'm kidding you. I remember reading the articles a few months ago when the hospitals, I think in Canada they did it too. Oh, if this pandemic it's bad we'll have to decide in advance with the bioethics committees who can live and get treatment and who can't get treatment, and it's going to be those that have got more chance of getting pulled through. It all comes from the WHO and Bill Gates foundation, all this information, it doesn't matter who's parroting it. Eeeh, here we go, you know.

At one time hospitals literally trained people to do their utmost to save everybody. To the bitter end. Even though it was a foregone conclusion at times when people were really, really dying, you'd still do your best to take care of them, best until the bitter end, that's how it used to be.

Getting back to Julian Huxley, he said, we’ll have to train the public, in his big, big speech, you know, we’ll have to train the public he said, and knock them off their pedestal of being the supreme creature on the planet and train them that they're just another animal. Only then we’ll they listen to us and do what they're told basically. That's what he was getting at. And with humanism, hm? You also see this character too, in this video, the link I'll put up from the EU group on the Covid idea. You'll see one of them, a few of them, they're all working at the United Nations, or some of the market the United Nations, some of them are the top medical advisor supposedly for different countries including the US.

In vaccines we trust: stepping up action to increase vaccine confidence - youtube.com / 12 Sept 2019

But you should hear them talking, oh, humanism, humanism, after all humanism is our goal, and by humanistic policies we must run the system, and humanism is here. Humanism is a religion. Do you know it's classified as a religion, folks? You have to go into it. I gave these talks years and years and years ago, secular humanism and its goals and agendas.

You see, the system that runs all of this claim, they'll claim to the public, now that they've atheized most of the public, well you see, we’re humanistic, you see, it's for the good of humanity, so we’re humanists. But then they go in to tell you that you have to do what you’re told by specialists, because as they bring in equality, they tell you that a lot of them are better qualified than the average person to rule the rest in certain areas. Doublespeak, doublethink, ‘eh? [Alan chuckles.] Yeah, we're all equal now. But now, hey, so-and-so's good at so on, you do what he tells you because they're an expert. There you go. What a world, ‘eh?

Most folk never figure it out because they're tuning into the horror station every day, whatever horror station it is for television to get the daily dose of psychologically prepared horror and fear from the SAGE groups, etc. with its handouts to all the media, who have to occasionally exaggerate the problems to scare the people who are not complying into compliance. Oh, let's just terrorize the public. And you… How DARE they use the public funds, purse, to terrorize the public. Aarrgh. M-hm.

And you know what? The same folk will go and vote again, you know. Oh, but, we're living in a free society, yeah. If you have read the books by Zbigniew Brzezinski, and Kissinger, and also read lots of their reports throughout your life that these guys put out constantly. They love the media attention. And they belong to associations, the CFR and Trilateral groups and so on, lots of publications about them giving little talks and lectures. What struck me was initially many of the goals that they wanted and the methods to attain the goals, were the ones that the Communists advanced. Then you find out that at the top level, which they do talk about at times through their higher academia, that whatever is efficient is what they'll take. It doesn't matter who creates it, they'll use it in different times during their agenda. Brzezinski also used to say that every country before it can be accepted as civilized, has to go through its Marxist revolutionary phase. He was adamant on that point.

Now, people here think, and they relate it to themselves according again to the class that you're in. So the working folk will think, well, that's good, you know, maybe we'll get some rights, we’ll have unions. No, he wasn't meaning that at all. What he was meaning was experts ruled the system from the top, high massive bureaucracy, massive government, massive, centralized government runs everybody else during a particular phase. And the public just jump to it, or else. There's no debating it or putting an objection in.

Again, like Justin Trudeau has given talks on how he admired China during this whole Covid thing because they don't have to put up with satisfying the public or following democratic rules that you have. Well, they can't just jump and do that because we've got rights here and public input, at least the public think they do, things like that. Whereas in China, the Politburo just decide, the experts decide, and they push something, and it's immediately obeyed and implemented. So for efficiency's sake they like that, you see.

That's exactly what is to go in with the so-called democratic systems, to be phased in under crisis, into really a technocratic phase, nondemocratic. But again remember, the same agencies and CFR members and so on, not all of them of course, they'll take their turn to who says what in their own articles. But you see it popping through every so often, that efficiency must be maintained, and even increased to make the world run better, with all the problems it's got today, efficiency, efficiency. As all your rights get stripped off you for efficiency's sake, under crisis. And you never get them back of course.

Now, as I've said, it's a small world. I mentioned some of these articles before. It's important to remember them because most folk can't remember very much at all after about a week because they're bombarded with daily data of all kinds, you see. You have to remember and be selective as to what's important to remember. Not to be, you know, conned and pulled out of what you're searching for any particular topic, into all the things, the algorithms that will grab you and take you into, that are completely a waste of time.

Again, Bertrand Russell, I mentioned him a lot because he was so open about it. Most folk didn't read his books when he was alive except those who ruled. You see, that's how they used to do it. That's why you find so much of the truth coming out of their own mouths. And psychopaths like to boast actually how successful they are, especially when it comes to conology and controlling and manipulating the public.

But again, small world as I've said before, that these characters were part of revolutionary movements. Intergenerational. Don't forget that Thomas Paine talked about that in his own memoirs, that he belonged to a family of revolutionaries, international revolutionaries, he said. Folk have no idea how old these things are. Their children end up going into it too, they're trained from an early age.

Bertrand Russell was no exception. They work for the crown, you know, Bertrand Russell, LORD Bertrand Russell. This article said that his father was Lord Amberley and mother was Catherine Louisa Stanley. Very important, as they say, the wife, because you catch on to it too, the revolutionary side of it, often through the wife too, you know. She was a suffragette at one point. And the suffragette movement by the way, was a wealthy class at the top who were also Communists. Many of them left London eventually and went over to live in Russia after the revolution and during the revolution in fact. And they were not just friendly, you know, just chain themselves to railings outside number 10 Downing St. and so on in London. Before that they were involved, some of them in bombings, you know, anarchist bombings. So anyway it says that was his wife Katherine Louisa Stanley, and she was pally, it says, with Mazzini, Viscountess Amberley, daughter of 2nd Baron Stanley of Alderley.

So this is what Russell said in one of his books, scientific societies, because the whole idea was to get a scientific society run in.

Bertrand Russell quotes

“Scientific societies are as yet in their infancy. It may be worthwhile to spend a few moments in speculating as to possible future developments of those that are oligarchies.

It is to be expected that advances in physiology and psychology will give governments much more control over individual mentality than they now have even in totalitarian countries. Fichte laid it down that education should aim at destroying free will, so that, after pupils have left school, they shall be incapable, throughout the rest of their lives, of thinking or acting otherwise than as their schoolmasters would have wished.

(A: This wasn’t a guy who just speculated in some kind of wish fulfillment pastime. He knew all the top scientists of his day in social sciences and psychology and all that. He had his own experimental school. He was given a charter to run an experimental school where what he did with his children, as a so-called ultra progressive school back in the 1920s, would have got anybody else maybe hung [Alan chuckles.] in those days. Because he was trying to do sexual development and sexual interaction with schoolchildren, and get them all, to see if the more they would become promiscuous, and actually give them praise for their behavior, and then follow up to see when they got older if they would even bother getting married or just have multiple partners. Which is all part of the destruction of the family unit. Coming from a British Lord, right? Hm? So yeah, he goes into that, and he said that diet of course, diet, this is the famous part…)

Diet, injections, and injunctions will combine, from a very early age, to produce the sort of character and the sort of beliefs that the authorities consider desirable, and any serious criticism of the powers that be will become psychologically impossible.

Gradually, by selective breeding, (A: ...right.) the congenital differences between rulers and ruled will increase until they become almost different species. A revolt of the plebs (A: …the plebians…) would become as unthinkable as an organized insurrection of sheep against the practice of eating mutton.

In like manner, the scientific rulers will provide one kind of education for ordinary men and women, and another for those who are to become holders of scientific power. Ordinary men and women will be expected to be docile, industrious, punctual, thoughtless, and contented. Of these qualities probably contentment will be considered the most important. In order to produce it, all the researches of psycho-analysis, behaviourism, and biochemistry will be brought into play.”

(A: And of course, what they really brought in was massive entertainment society to keep them docile. And also to program them, because they copy behavior they see in movies and so on, and fashions. He says…)

"All the boys and girls will learn from an early age to be what is called ‘co-operative,’ that is, to do exactly what everybody is doing.”

"Initiative will be discouraged in these children, and insubordination, without being punished, will be scientifically trained out of them."

(A: Well, look what's happening today with all the folk getting banned and getting warned on their Facebook accounts, or their YouTube's, and all the other social media platforms that are out there that they're onto. You're all getting trained again to cooperate, or shut up, or get punished, you see. This didn't suddenly come along. This was planned long ago.)

All the boys and girls will learn from an early age to be what is called ‘co-operative,’

(A: Right. So you will all be doing the same things as everybody else is, to do exactly what everybody is doing.)

"Second, as regards population. If there is not to be a permanent and increasing shortage of food,

(A: Crisis, crisis, crisis, Covid, yuh-duh-duh...)

agriculture must be conducted by methods which are not wasteful of soil, and increase of population must not outrun the increase in food production rendered possible by technical improvements.

To deal with this problem it will be necessary to find ways of preventing an increase in world population. If this is to be done otherwise than by wars, pestilences, and famines, it will demand a powerful international authority.

(A: Hm. A powerful international authority, right. So, pestilences and famines, ‘eh, and wars. What do you have right now as a whole thing about, oh my God, it's just, it's a disease, oh, it's going through the world and you can't, the economy is crashing because no one is allowed to work. That's the key to it, no one is allowed to work. Locked down all the healthy people, hm. It's all by design, you see, this is being fulfilled right now. Nothing to do with Covid. Covid is the excuse. People aren't dying of Covid. They're dying of the response to Covid. Right. There might be a few that may really die, but the fact is, most of them are dying of utter fear and horror. Your immune system plummets sometimes 40% just through continuous fear. Yeah. Then it's got...)

This authority should deal out the world's food to the various nations in proportion to their population at the time of the establishment of the authority.

(A: That's what's going to happen now of course.)

If any nation subsequently increased its population it should not on that account receive any more food. The motive for not increasing population would therefore be very compelling. What method of preventing an increase might be preferred should be left to each State to decide.

(A: Well, they're all going through the United Nations, and they're pretty well aborting the children, aren't they? You know? It's Malthusian eugenics, you know. Of course now they'll call it, well, it's not really, it's really bioethics, you see, and sustainability. And each state, as each country, that was written in the 1950s, that particular book, I think it was The Impact on Science on Society. He also said... If these things come about, these certain circumstances, right…)

What, then, can we do? Apart from certain deep-seated prejudices, the answer would be obvious. The nations which at present increase rapidly should be encouraged to adopt the methods by which, in the West, the increase of population has been checked.

(A: Now, in the 50s, he's telling you the increase of population has, HAS BEEN checked. And they'd have to encourage the other countries, that had not been checked, outside of, say, Europe and Britain, you know, the Americans, to copy the same system. So, it had already been checked, it's population problem had been checked in the West. Hm? Have you heard of sterility, folks, the big plague of sterility? He goes on to say…)

Educational propaganda, with government help, could achieve this result in a generation.

(A: Hm?)

There are, however, two powerful forces opposed to such a policy: one is religion,

(A: It's always the same, right.)

the other is nationalism.

(A: Are you listening, ‘eh?)

I think it is the duty of all who are capable of facing facts to realize, and to proclaim, that opposition to the spread of birth control, if successful, must inflict upon mankind the most appalling depth of misery and degradation, and that within another fifty years or so.

I do not pretend that birth control is the only way in which population can be kept from increasing. There are others, which, one must suppose, opponents of birth control would prefer. War, as I remarked a moment ago, has hitherto been disappointing in this respect,

(A: This is after two world wars, ‘eh. I gave this talk years ago and I says, for the hard of thinking, which is something I always say...)

War, as I remarked a moment ago, has hitherto been disappointing in this respect,

(A: He also said…)

If a Black Death could be spread throughout the world once in every generation survivors could procreate freely without making the world too full.

(A: But what he's telling you there obviously is that, hhhch, if all you do is keep releasing a black death in every generation it would kill off all the excess population that came from procreation, you see. So that's how it's going to be done.)

Really high-minded people

(A: ...which is himself and his class, his own class, and those he serves even above him.)

Really high-minded people are indifferent to happiness, especially other people's.

(A: You see, there's nothing personal in it... if they want to kill you off. It's not a deep-seated hatred, you know, he's telling you, really. It's just, he has to be indifferent to it and that's what it is.)

However, I am wandering from the question of stability, to which I must return. There are three ways of securing a society that shall be stable as regards population. The first is that of birth control, the second that of infanticide or really destructive wars, and the third that of general misery except for a powerful minority.

So, there's nothing new in all the things that are happening now. He belonged to the societies. Everything you're doing right now in fact, and all the changes, and not just in fashion and in behavior, from say the 1950s, actually before that too but through the 50s and 60s up to the present time, with increasing promotion of sexual promiscuity, and increasing interference of the state coming in to deal with the unwanted children problem as they say, which is generally through different guises, abortion, right. That was all, he was part of the planning committees that worked, when they were given the right at the end of World War II by the way, to create a new culture, a postwar culture for the world. He worked with the top groups that were involved in creating the cultural changes that they foresaw would have to happen. They designed the culture, including the fashions, the miniskirt, and the heavy work on a contraception pill, and heavy work too to bring in national health services that would be for the people to begin with but then it would gradually take over and over more and more rights of abortion and implement that, and the public would just accept it as normal eventually. And it is normal now, isn't it?

Also the destruction of religion and destruction of the family unit. In other words, take away all possible opposition. And remember, every family is a small tribe. Folk who live in families have connections to other families, they are a bigger tribe. And they'll stand up when they have something in common, you see, as a huge tribe against government. So if you destroy all that, the family unit, there's nobody to stand up in any numbers against anything that really matters. Those that do standup are authorized armies, that are really employed, the leaders are actually employed and trained by those who own the system.

That's how bad it is, isn't it? And I'm not giving you bad news. This is just fact. If you understand fact, it actually alleviates a lot of the stress that folk feel. Because you start to understand why, WHY things are happening. Then you can start getting, or coming to peace with yourself to an extent because you understand why things are happening. It's not because you've done anything wrong. And it's not because you failed in anything, or if you're rich or you'd have more food or backups or something to get through these terrible times that are coming. No, no, no. You see, the elite take everything off your hands. The whole problem with tyranny, it takes away your right to even sustain yourself eventually. It doesn't matter how much you try to... That's what they're aiming for now, for a society where they will dish out the food across the world. Then as he said, those who haven't reduce their populations will get less until they deal with the problem. Like very quick dealing with the problem. Executions. Of course it is. Of course it is.

You're all getting trained, as I said, right now, what are they training you? Are you essential? Oh, no, I'm not really essential, I'm just little old me, you know. Ah well, maybe you should just join, put your name on this list here, you know, for, tttt, you know, I mean, there's more important folk that have to be kept alive and fed, you know.

This is happening, folks, you know, and if you can't handle it... Understand, folks who can't handle it wouldn't listen to me. There's others out there that just take my material anyway and parrot it in the same week. I do the work for a lot of people who never mentioned me, [Alan chuckles.] but who can put it across more softly or whatever, mainly to get their own ratings or money coming in. But the fact is, I'm doing this not for them. I'm doing it just to help those who NEED to know. That there's people like myself who had to know, even when I was young, I had this hunger to know what was really going on, when things didn't make sense, when I saw even adults and my parents and other people accepting the things they shouldn't accept, unquestioningly.

I remember asking them too, you know, I could hear them. When you're maybe five or six you hear them discussing the problems and money. I already saw the fallouts across my friends' homes and so on and my own to an extent of folk in the misery. Because Britain was still under rationing, you know. For yeears. Even when they stop the rationing cards folk couldn't afford the good food and things like that. They were under fixed incomes and wages freezes and price freezes, supposedly. The prices always went up but they claim they were frozen too.

Where literally a lot of homes, you had meters for your electricity, even to get heat, you didn't have coal or whatever. You put a shilling in and, as they kept, the guys would come in every so often and they'd readjust it. So you'd start off getting maybe an hour of electricity for a shilling, then they'd cut it back and tell you, you had to put in about two shillings or even half a crown eventually to get the same amount of electricity. It was just disgusting as they increased the cost of energy. And here you go, it's all through the system right now. We've got to start increasing all energy. Because then your life, your health, everything goes down, folks. Very quickly. Especially if you get cold climates 'eh? And the hot climates and you can't afford your air conditioning, you wait and see the same thing. That's going to come. That's going to come, folks.

That's where it's all supposed to come down to. We're living through an agenda. As I say, Russell and many others like him were on the boards designing the future that we're still, and it's not all finished yet, the stuff that he worked on, there's still a lot to go yet. Yep. They've got post family, you know, not just the new types of families that we went through a few years back, the post family society, right down to who will be allowed to breed. And right into those who are goody-goody and serve the system might get permission to have a child of their own. They might even clone you, as a child, or clone a child from you, you see. That's where it's all supposed to go.

Most folk haven't got a clue. They think it's all just happening, it's all independent problems and, oh, the wars are separate. You know, he mentioned wars and plagues and famines and pestilences. We're hearing, oh, we're going to go to war with who? Who's next? Is it Eurasia? Who is it? Who is it? Who are we fighting today? Oh, China. Okay, China. Oh, is it Russia? Oh, it's Russia again. Oh.

It's all repetition.

I said back in the 90s on a show that the big bear, the big bad bear, they'll resurrect it if they can't find other enemies eventually. Because it's just too lucrative for them. And you can't keep your population in check without an enemy. Folks start to demand rights when there's nothing else going to kill you. So they got to resurrected enemies occasionally. If they can't do that, just like after the revolutions, the communist revolutions, they look for terrorists within. Well, we're going through all that too. Oh, terrorism, terrorism, since 2001. Counterrevolutionaries or terrorism, you know, we're all terrorists, you see.

Here they have this complete digital ID system that you're all going to get forced to take. Lots of folk are already in it already. The cell phone with your digital ID to start with, you know, that was the initial part of it. Then you had parents buying them for their schoolchildren for snob appeal, you know, when you go to school, they won't look down on you, you've got the best iPhone there to take to school with you. Eeeeeh, it's also obvious, isn't it?
